Sun: Hollywood, with its opportunities for musical numbers and wisecracking, makes an effective background for a song-and-dance show. "Bottoms Up" isn't startlingly different from the run of musicals. It does manage, however, without tiring out the audience wth over-sumptuous spectacles, to be gay and fairly consistently amusing.

"COME ON MARINES"

Paramount prod.; director, Henry Hathaway; writers, Philip Wylie, Joel Sayre, Byron Morgan.

Paramount Theatre

World-Telegram: A reasonably amusing and exciting narrative. The love interest between Ida Lupino and Arlen is pretty thin and unconvincing, but that really doesn't matter. The comedy story, with its adventure interludes, is what holds your interest—and it does.

Times: It is no noteworthy cinematic achievement which is now on exhibition at the Paramount, but nevertheless its boisterous humor evidently found favor with an audience.

Mirror: It is a rowdy action picture, purely. The dialogue is barracks chatter. The situations are crude. Little boys and the men may be entertained by "Come On Marines," but the squeamish sex will deplore its complete lack of glamour.

Herald-Tribune: Most of the time the story has the rather bewildered air of a musical comedy tale without the required musical comedy. It is no better than its story, and it should have been.

News: A film that turns out to be a bit of a razz on the Marines. The dialogue is risque without being funny. The entire picture lacks suspense and is spotted with some pretty dull sequences.

American: "Come On Marines" is rapid-fire fun all the way. Lines, situations, cast, direction and production are all helpful contributions to the general merit of the finished film. Richard Arlen and Roscoe Karns share top honors.

Sun: Scenario writers have outfitted this preposterous little melodrama with a series of wisecracks and comedy situations that only a Hollywood gagman could have suggested. This is one picture that didn't have much chance after it left the script writers' hands. The damage had already been done.

Paring of Extra List Under Way Tonight

The actual business of starting to weed out some 15,000 extra players from the list now registered with the Central Casting Office starts tonight at a meeting of the Code Committee for Extras.

For some time a sub-committee has been working out plans and suggestions which, it is figured, will expedite the gigantic task of deciding who and who has not the right to consider themselves extras and ask for motion picture employment.

This sub-committee will report to the full committee of fifteen, headed by Mrs. Mabel Kinney, tonight, and the re-registration will begin.

It is also expected that the committee this week will start hearing the complaints charging violation of the code, for word has been received that the necessary funds for carrying on the investigations and other expense will be here by the end of the week.

Shelton and Edmunds Bow in Agency Field

A new agency for stage, screen and radio talent has been formed by Barbara Shelton, Gilman Shelton and Paul Edmonds under the firm name of Shelton and Edmonds, Inc. The firm will also furnish talent to clubs. Maurice Kosloff is associated with the company which opened offices in the Hollywood Pantages theatre building.

Menjou Lead for Landi

Charles R. Rogers Saturday signed Adolphe Menjou for the lead opposite Elissa Landi in "I Loved An Actress," which Ralph Murphy will direct. Script is being written by Leonard Praskins and will go into work when Murphy finishes "Private Scandal," which he is now directing.

Two for Bergerman

Stanley Bergerman has taken two new assignments at Universal. He produce "Bread Upon the Water" and "Sin for Cinderella." Latter will have Roger Pryor in the top spot in a screen play which Barry Trivers is writing.

BRITISH PRODUCTION SPURT HITS LOCAL INDIE FILMERS

Quickie Makers May Lose Vital Revenue

Local small-budget indies are facing a crisis more serious than the recent scare over the death of double features in the sudden mushrooming of production in Great Britain, particularly pictures of a type to compete with the Hollywood quickie fare.

And the indies assert, that while they are feeling the pinch now, next season will also find the majors worrying if more pictures of the class of "F.P.1," "Henry the Eighth," and "Catherine the Great" are turned out in England.

But the indie's problem is his own. In many cases his financing is based largely on having a definite deal in advance from England, which in most cases actually runs to one-third of the proposed production cost.

Even these deals have become problematical in the past two seasons because of tightening of the restrictions by British censors who have borne down extra heavy on the indies. The result has been numerous contracts which only assure payment when the picture "has been approved by British censorship."

Indies returning from New York say the past isn't a shadow to the future with the sudden tremendous increase in British production. All budgets and plans for next year are in the tentative stage as a result of the recent development.

Franchot Tone Set For Lead With Jean Harlow

Franchot Tone has been assigned the lead opposite Jean Harlow in "100 Percent Pure," which got under way last week under the direction of Sam Wood and supervision of Bernie Hyman. Hale Hamilton has also been spotted in this production for MGM, which has Lionel Barrymore and Patsy Kelly in supporting roles.

Kelland Yarn Optioned

Joseph I. Schnitzer has taken an option on Clarence Budington Kelland's "The Jealous House," and is figuring on it as the first of the three pictures he is preparing to produce independently. Story is serialized in the Saturday Evening Post.

Daniels-Warner Deal

New York.—J. L. Warner is closing a deal with Bebe Daniels to appear in another picture. She last made "Registered Nurse" for the company and is making a series of personals with Ben Lyon.

Script Hatch Novel

New York.—Moe Wax and Ronald Bank are preparing a script on Richard W. Hatch's novel. "Leave The Salt Earth," by arrangement with Covici-Friede, the publishers.

New Term for Hoffe

Monckton Hoffe was given a new long term writing ticket at MGM Saturday.

Darrow Hearings Are On Again Today

Washington. — The Darrow Board resumes its hearings on the motion picture code at three this afternoon, but it is expected that the real fireworks will not come until tomorrow when the members of the Code Authority and the sales managers of the majors are scheduled for grilling.

Players, Director In New MGM Deals

MGM has gone on a contract signing spree and is handing new deals to many of its writers, directors ad players.

Among the artists who received new long term deals last Saturday are May Robson, whose next assignment will likely be "No More Ladies," the A. E. Thomas play, now running on Broadway; Karen Morley, now on loan to King Vidor for "Our Daily Bread," and who will return for the lead in "The Shining Hour," the Keith Winter play now on Broadway; Mae Clarke, who is idle at the moment; W. S. Van Dyke, who is finishing up on "Manhattan Melodrama" and starts work on the "Thin Man" this week, and Maureen O'Sullivan, who will leave for a vacation in Ireland on completion of her role in "Thin Man."

Rodgers-Hart Winding Up at MGM; Going East

Richard Rodgers and Lorenz Hart are ending a one-year contract at MGM with the completion of work on "The Merry Widow" for the Irving Thalberg unit, and plan to leave for New York in a week to start preparations on a new musical for the stage.

Radio Signs Up Seven For 'Last Yacht' Cast

Radio Saturday signed Marjorie Gateson, Irene Franklin, Sterling Holloway, Maude Truax, Tom Kennedy, Hazel Forbes and Phil Ranken for principal roles in "Down To Their Last Yacht," which Paul Sloane will direct. Sidney Fox and Sidney Blackmer have the leads.

'Deep Night' for Para.

Paramount Saturday announced the purchase of "Deep Night," a novel by Phillip MacDonald, and has assigned Chandler Sprague to write the script. Story is for Carole Lombard. No director or starting date set as yet.

Writers Elect April 5

The election of a new board for the Screen Writers' Guild will take place April 5 at the Writers' Club, and not on April 8, as erroneously announced.

Boost for Friedlander

New York.—Al Friedlander has been promoted to the position of assistant to Harry Thomas, president of the First Division Exchanges.

Agnes Brand Leahy Dies in Sanatorium

Agnes Brand Leahy, noted scenario writer and wife of Fred Leahy, Paramount studio production manager, died Friday in a sanatorium just outside of San Francisco. Her husband was with her.

Mrs. Leahy, a native of Portland, Oregon, studied to be a teacher, but when she married Leahy and they found they were interested in pictures, they moved to Hollywood. She became a stenographer and Fred an assistant cameraman. Their progress in the picture industry was rapid. Mrs. Leahy was a script clerk, reader, assistant director, and then cutter, writer and title writer for B. P. Schulberg.

For five years or more she has been writing scenarios, working for various companies, but most of the time for Paramount.

No arrangements for the funeral have been announced.

Erwin, Loaned to Radio, Has Vacation Held Up

Stuart Erwin is waiting around for Radio's okay for him to leave on a four-weeks vacation in New York.

MGM has approved the loan of Erwin to Radio for a top spot in the Lou Brock production, "Great American Harem," which is off one day and on the next, and in the meantime Erwin has packed his bags and is waiting for Radio to decide.

Beery Prepares to Fly To Wife in Hospital

The "Treasure Island" company has gone to Oakland on location and will remain there for several days.

Wallace Beery, whose wife is at the Cedars of Lebanon hospital under observation, has taken his plane up there to fly down to Hollywood in case her illness is serious.

'U' Completes Two

Production on two pictures finished at Universal Saturday and they are now being edited. They are "Half a Sinner," formerly called "Alias The Deacon," with Berton Churchill, Joel McCrea and Marian Nixon, and "The Humbug," with Nils Asther and Gloria Stuart in the top spots and directed by Max Marcin.

U.A. To Make Shorts

United Artists is preparing to produce a list of its own short subjects to be sold along with the Disney cartoons and the company's new program of features.

Foy Decides on Title

Unable to find another title to satisfy, Foy Productions decided to use "Sterilization" for the recently completed picture.

MGM Sets Butterworth

Charles Butterworth is slated for one of the top spots in the A. E. Thomas play, "No More Ladies," which MGM recently purchased.

Yesterday in NEW YORK with HELEN GWYNNE

There is a picture which we sorely regret not having seen sooner, in order to try to give it added impetus so far as audiences are concerned. Having caught it at a neighborhood house the other night, it surprises us that there was not more editorial comment on it at the time of its metropolitan debut. We refer to Paramount's "Mrs. Fane's Baby Is Stolen." . . . For years now, critics have been bewailing the fact that the cinema has not taken full advantage of its opportunities for doing good and doing it entertainingly. And in the meantime, we have been treated to critical nip-ups over what the Russians have been providing in the way of film fare. Now we have no quarrel with the Russians. To us they long ago definitely proved that the word which is anathema to America, "propaganda," is not a bugaboo but a damned interesting topic of conversation. Still, when our own cinema finally gets around to doing a little good propaganda work on its own, and doing it in a well-made, entertaining picture, none of our critical big-wigs think it worthy of their attention or their special applause not even by way of encouraging more and better along the same lines.

Well, we do and we hereby wish to register our grateful approval to Paramount for having made "Mrs. Fane's Baby Is Stolen." The audience we saw it with thoroughly enjoyed every minute of it and was moved to loud applause at the final plea to the citizenry of the fair United States to see to it that all criminals are brought to justice. It certainly went our better known mystery and murder stories one better by seeing to it that the criminals involved got their just desserts. Usually the hunted ones manage to commit suicide before the law can get at them. But in this instance, a picture actually went to the trouble of showing that law courts serve a good purpose in our scheme of things and made it a point to prove that "crime doesn't pay." Which in itself is a lifetime job to prove in this glorious land of opportunity. Something should really be done to encourage picture companies along these noble lines and we're more than willing to give Paramount a great, big hand and suggest to them that the next time they feel inclined to spread the light, they do it with names that mean more to the box-office than Baby LeRoy, thus encouraging themselves at the same time.

Peggy Fears plans to be on her way to Hollywood some time in early May or just as soon as she straightens out her settlement with A. C. Blumenthal, which is up in the air at the moment over the house in Larchmont. . . . . Dorothy Gish and Merwyn Williams, Bela Blau, (looking for a play to direct,) Betty Dietz, Margalo Gilmore, Marc Connelly, Helen Vinson, (who may be back in Hollywood any moment now and without Lou Holtz,) Miriam Howell, Margaret Fineman, Jeanne Cohen among the lunchers at the Algonquin.

Senate Now Ponders High Movie Salaries

Washington.—Figures on high salaries and bonuses made public about a month ago by the Federal Trade Commission were made a part of the Congressional Record on Saturday when that body filed its report with the United States Senate.

Nothing new to the figures, except that the recapitulation gave the picture industry the headlines, as Winfield Sheehan and Arthur Loew topped the salary list with $250,000 or more each.

H. M. Warner, J. L. Warner, Carl Laemmle and Harry Cohn were others over the $100,000 mark.

Boys Set to Portray Gable-Powell As Kids

Jimmy Butler and Mickey Rooney have been signed by MGM to portray Clark Gable and William Powell as youngsters in the Arthur Caesar story, "Manhattan Melodrama," which is being directed by W. S. Van Dyke.

Acad. Committees Meet

Two special committees from the Producers Branch of the Academy meet tonight with two special committees from the Technicians Branch and the Assistant Directors Section to take up discussions of negotiations pending between their groups.

66½ per cent of the total stock. This block is to be purchased by a group headed by the DuPont faction, but will include Sam Katz and a powerful picture unit, which, until this time, has never entered the production field. The price is understood to be placed somewhere between $2,500,000 and $3,000,000.

The buying group has already had an understanding with Jack Cohn that places him in charge of the sales should the deal go through, but they want no part of Harry, believing that his desires to become a major producer, in the sense of huge production expenditures, will defeat the very purpose of their purchase, and no amount of bargaining will transfer Columbia to that group if Harry Cohn is included.

Of course the chief interest of Du Pont is to get the raw stock sales and the printing in a laboratory they are understood to contemplate building in Hollywood.

Agents Need Stilts

In order to combat the growing habit on the part of agents to stop by his window on the MGM lot and sell him talent over the sill, Ben Piazza, studio's casting chief, is having the building remodeled with the windows raised to eight feet. Piazza claims the agents will have to learn how to walk on stilts before they'll catch him again.

Ted Lewis Sets New Record at Paramount

Ted Lewis, the past week, drew $23,000 at the Paramount Theatre, setting a new high for the theatre since Marco took it. Picture was "Wharf Angel."

FWC, through the William Morris office, has signed Lewis and his unit for appearances at Oakland, Long Beach and San Diego, after which he returns to Marco for three more weeks.

Canada Distribs Elect

Toronto.—Officers elected at a meeting of the Motion Picture Distributors Association of Canada are: Col. John A. Cooper, president (re-elected); G. O. Burnett, treasurer (re-elected). Directors are: N. L. Nathanson, M. A. Milligan, Leo Devaney, M. H. Masters, Clair Hague, Harry Paynter, A. W. Perry, J. P. O'Loughlin.

New Spotlight Play

"Six Months Option," current attraction at the Spotlight Theatre, closes Sunday night, and will be replaced by "Public Opinion," starting April 9. This play is by Max Gabel, who will also direct it.

Para. Must Fight Claim

New York.The claim of American Tri-Ergon and General Talking Pictures against Paramount for $2,000,000 which was disallowed by Referee Davis, is not dead yet. It has been taken to the United States Court of Appeals and will come up for hearing April 4.

MGM Buys Hart Yarn

MGM closed a deal Saturday for an original story by Moss Hart, titled "Miss Pamela Thorndyke." The deal was negotiated by the William Morris agency.

Jules an Agent Now

Jules Schermer, a member of The Reporter staff for some time, enters the agency field today as an associate in the office of Nat Goldstone.

Small Buys Murder Story From Foy

Edward Small has signed a deal with Foy Productions for the purchase of "Murder in the Music Hall," an original screen play by William Jacobs, and schedules it under the title, "Showboat of 1934," on the Reliance program.

Foy planned to make a "third-dimension" picture with the story and is now hunting for a story to replace it. Small is seeking to line up Loretta Young, Gene Raymond, Boris Karloff, Frank McHugh, Jack Benny and Rubinoff for the cast. Leon Gordon is writing the screen play and Ben Stoloff is slated to direct it as his second picture on a two-picture ticket.

Lay Members for NRA

Washington.—Present plans for reorganization of the NRA machinery call for representation, with veto powers, by both labor and the public on the Code Authority. Recommendations are to be made by the Consumers Board and Advisory Board for all industries.

Edmund Goulding East

Edmund Goulding left for New York Saturday by way of Palm Springs, where he will stay a couple of days before continuing East.

Up-to-the-Minute Casting News

Earl Oxford, Florine McKinney and Arthur Jarrett in "Merry Widow" at MGM.

Georgette Rhodes for MGM's French version of "Merry Widow." Set by Menifee I. Johnstone.

Arthur Hoyt for "Sour Grapes" at Radio.

Tully Marshall to "Murder on the Blackboard," Radio.

Edith Fellows for Radio's "Family Man."

Bruce Cabot, Regis Toomey and Edgar Kennedy to "Murder on the Blackboard" at Radio.

May Mayer through Bernard, Meiklejohn and McCall for "The Hell Cat," Columbia.

Maidel Turner and Sara Haden to "Virgie Winters," Radio. Turner deal set by Kingston-Harris.

Henry Stephenson and Margaret Armstrong by Paramount for "She Loves Me Not."

Morgan for 'Widow'

Frank Morgan is slated for the role of the king in the Irving Thalberg production, "Merry Widow," which co-stars Maurice Chevalier and Jeanette MacDonald for MGM.

IATSE ASKS GOV'T ACTION ON PRODUCERS AND CODE

the Attorney General's office. The complaint was filed some six weeks ago, it was revealed, and a quiet investigation of the charges has been under way.

The complaint specifically states that, in violation of the National Recovery Act of June 15, 1933, the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers negotiated with the producers and secured a contract from them on August 4, 1933, during the Hollywood strike, and adds that only fifty sound men were represented by the IBEW. This, it is charged, is a violation of the law which states that labor has the right to choose its own representatives, and that the majority shall rule.

It is further declared that, at the Code hearing in September, the wage scale of Local 695, IATSE, was established under an over-riding provision in Article IV, Section 5, of the Code. Further, it is pointed out that these provisions have not been carried out.

In addition, it is charged that, following the Code orders, an election was held last January 9 and 10 to decide what group would represent the sound men in negotiations with the producers. At that election, held under the supervision of the Regional Labor Board, Local 695 received 448 votes, ASC 93, and IBEW only 9 votes.

The complaint charges that, despite this vote, Pat Casey, representing the producers, and the producers themselves have refused to negotiate with Local 695 in direct violation of the National Industrial Recovery Act, and in violation of President Roosevelt's executive order signed February 1, 1934.

The Local charges that the contract made on August 4, 1933, was a deliberate conspiracy on the part of the producers and the IBEW to evade the NIRA, and the United States Attorney General is asked to prosecute these two groups in Federal Court on the ground of violation of the Federal law.

The Local also asks that the contract of August 4 be restrained and set aside as in violation of the law, and that the IBEW be restrained from further negotiations with the producers.

Those close to the situation here point out that, if this complaint gets into the Federal Courts and if the IATSE wins its case, it will mean that the contract signed between the studios and the IBEW last January will be thrown out and that back pay covering the difference in the wage scale from last August will have to be paid the sound men by the studios. This, it is figured, would run into many thousands of dollars.

Opinion here is that the Attorney General's office has been holding up the complaint, waiting for decisions in the steel and automobile industry. But it is due now, so it is revealed, for an early airing.

Neither Business Representative Harold V. Smith nor members of the Executive Board of Local 695 would discuss the matter in any way when contacted yesterday.

What's a Golf Club To a Rhino Tosser?

As an alibi for his golf game while playing with Bruce Cabot, Johnny Weismuller said: "I just can't get used to these clubs after tossing Mary the Rhino around."

Stars and M.P. Club Will Make Whoopee

New York.—Hollywood stars will join filmland's executives in celebrating the 1934 reunion of the Motion Picture Club of New York at 1560 Broadway on Saturday, April 14. This will bring together practically every prominent official of producing and releasing organizations, as well as leaders of allied enterprises in the talking picture field.

Among those expected to appear are Gloria Swanson, Hope Hampton, George Raft, Fannie Brice, Polly Walker, Norma Terris and Many others. From 4.30 to 7.30 will be the cocktail session, celebrating the club's new bar. At 7.30 the club will hold a 1934 reunion dinner dance, featured with an elaborate entertainment. At midnight there will be the "buffet supper of the stars."

Committee in charge is Jack Cohn, chairman, Boris Morros, William Ferguson, Louis K. Sidney, Major Edward Bowes, Si Seadler, William Brandt, Ed Alperson and Arnold Van Leer.

Cochrane to Bermuda

New York.—R. H. Cochrane is on his way to Bermuda for a brief vacation, having sailed Saturday on the Empress of Britain. This means Cochrane will be represented by an alternate at the Darrow hearings.

Agency in New Office

The Kingston-Harris agency has moved to larger quarters in suite 422 Equitable building. Move is being made to accommodate the three new members added to the firm recently.

Fox has exercised the option on Rosemary Ames' contract for another six-months period.

Hays-Carr Reach Deal

the independent in exchange for an agreement by the Independent Producers Association to abide by the Hays' censorship code.

The rubber-stamp evil is the most offensive practise on the part of the majors now facing the small producers. The method is to stamp all sales contracts with a clause prohibiting the exhibitor from double featuring his product.

Unless the Carr-Hays pact works out, with the majors discarding their rubber stamps, the indie association will take its case into the courts, making an issue of the Sherman anti-trust law as it affects the situation, it was stated by one important independent.

the REFLECTOR

Tomorrow night's the night for Pev and Virginia Marley . . . wotta break for a bride . . . to attend the first big 'preemeer' with your new lord and master (?) when HE'S responsible for the photography of the picture . . . "House of Rothschild" at Grauman's. . . . Kinda swell break for Messrs. Zanuck, Goetz, Griffith and Dover, too. . . . Some producers have never broken that barrier in twenty years. . . . It took The Century crowd considerably LESS than a year. . . .

G'wan—yuh big mind reader—le's hear you guess who's the Star in Hal Rosson's new picture at Emgeeem. . . During the Century summer somnolence Charlie Rosher is loaned to M.G.M. with no definite assignment until the delectable Connie Bennett gets under way there. . . . If you haven't seen Sol Polito's mirror shots in the Jolson picture "Wonder Bar" you can listen to Al say it again—"You ain't seen nothin' yet." . . . Len Smith is back in town fresh from Florida and brown as a berry (Say—whoinell ever saw a BROWN berry?) . . . Tony Gaudio lost his citizenship—because he lost his papers—but he obtained duplicate papers and that makes him (Oh, you figure it out—I gotta see a man about a dog). . . . Incidentally, Mr. Gaudio did not become excited—he was only SPEECHLESS. . . .

The Old Country Gentleman (Nick Musuraca) taking time out to plant the fall sweet corn and summer squash after completing two in a row which are photographic nifties—we mean "Sing and Like It" and "The Dover Road." . . . Roy Hunt standing by for the starting bell at Arkayo—and at the same movie shop they're wondering how long it's going to take ole Cap'n Eddie Cronjager to finish that job of paintin' his boat. . . . At the same spot Henry Gerrard is readying for the fade out on "Of Human Bondage." . . . Winnie Wenstrom—on ihs mark—ready for the gun—starting any second. . . .

Sid Hickox takes on "Dames" at Warners—'sall okay, 'Lizbeth—'at's oney the name of the picture. . . . Bill Rees continues with Dick Barthelmess in "Doll's House." . . . Charlie Stumar on "Practical Joker" at Universal. . . . Joe August completed "Twentieth Century" at Columbia and is off on a musical short same place. . . . Regarding Everybody's Patent

Important money has jingled into attorneys' tills because flock of people 'alleged, asserted and maintained' patent right to varied and various background processes. Claim has been hashed, rehashed, fought, fumbled. Majority of studios go right along with it and—according to our inquisitive reporters—it's the hot-cha-cha of present day advancement in picture making. Says Farciot Edouart (Par.)

"Projection background work at Paramount has increased five hundred per cent since nineteen thirty. Practically all pictures released by us last year carried important sequences in this process. As volume has increased the cost has dropped proportionately. Each individual shot today costs two-thirds less than it did four years ago. We are constantly working on new improvements in this department and have the fullest cooperation of the front office who realize that pictures like "Alice in Wonderland" would simply have been impossible to produce without aid of projection background."

A special negative film has been perfected for this work and is used extensively for the backgrounds and other shots demanding its desirable characteristics.

MacKenzie Steps In

"Try to make every single scene in each picture the best scene of all"—that advice was given to cameramen by a top exec when he addressed the lensers in open meeting about a year ago. Jack MacKenzie was among those who took the advice very seriously. Last week the bosses of Harold Lloyd productions took a squint at "One Man's Journey" wherein Lionel Barrymore found reason to start a rave-campaign for the photographer. . . . Mr. MacKenzie's business address is now General Service Studios, where he's directing the photography of "The Cat's Paw," the Sam Taylor directed feature which brings Harold Lloyd back to the screen after an absence too long to please his millions of fans.

"Allez-Oop"

When Columbia's one-man-unit (Ralph Staub) stepped into directorial shoes for Warner shorts (East) it looked like a tough spot for the Gower Street plant to fill. Assistant Cameraman Bob Tobey asked for a crack at it. He got his chance. He writes 'em—directs 'em—shoots 'em—and (incidentally) Staub is ALSO making good in HIS new job.

Roach Resumes

Easter vacation over, the Roach plant banged open the gates and Art Lloyd, Ken Peach and Frank Corby started the film rolling into the Lab where Charlie Levin is chief worryer.

Polito and Del Rio

Sol Polito clicked so decisively with Dolores Del Rio on her photography in "Wonder Bar" that he automatically drew the assignment as director of photography for "DuBarry," which is Miss Del Rio's first individual starring vehicle for Warners. And it was only yesterday we secretly feared that Sol would be tied in with Buz Berkeley forever and a day . . . his lens lyrics on "Gold Diggers," etc., will live long.

Brown With Bennett

Jim Brown holds his spot as High Mogul of the cameras at the Larry Darmour plant, where Spence Bennett is directing Mayfair's "Badge of Honor." Nice cast topped by Ruth Hall (Mrs. Lee Garmes) and Buster Crabbe.

Backgrounder Flits

Last week we told you about the Warners' pet boy starting on a world jaunt. Our eagle-eyed news hawks now report to an interested camera community that Ed Hammeras (Fox—Movietone City) is stowing his wardrobe trunk in the ship's hold and cramming his camera into his cabin as the ship sails this week for Stockholm and thence to Norway, Germany, England, Spain and Italy. Object of the vacation (pardon us) trip is to garner background plates for forthcoming Fox films. Last excursion of this calibre from Fox carried Charlie Van Enger and Little Joe all over Europe. Charlie's over there now doing himself and Hollywood right proud for British Gaumont. Little Joe's plenty busy on the home lot.

McGill Goes British

Chick McGill, Twentieth Century contracted director of photography, tops many of his brother lensers who've been 'sold down the river.' Bill Dover made it an ocean instead and Chick goes to deah ole Lunnon to join up with British Dominion Pictures for one cadenza. Starts the long jump the very minute he turns final fade out on the George Arliss picture currently in production.

Goodbye Broadway!

L. A. (Charlie) Bonn, who was last Monday night elected to Associate Membership of The American Society of Cinematographers, leaves New York today enroute to Hollywood, where he will join the cameracrafters in their big golf shoot next Sunday and also to be a guest of honor at the annual banquet for installation of new A.S.C. officers the following night. Mr. Bonn is executive assistant to Wm. J. German. He returns to Long Island soon.

Goetz Gets Going

Ben Goetz, executive vice president of Consolidated Film Industries, has been threatening to jump east and now ups and makes good. Took off on "The Chief" with Mrs. Goetz in time to hit the big stem for the Easter Parade, where they'll be joined by their son, Hayes, who's a student at Dartmouth. Back in Hollywood around the tenth of April.

the BUZZER

(NOTE: Each week, sales and service representatives of J. E. Brulatour, Inc. will ask a number of cameramen the same question. The question will be given and then the answers verbatim.)

QUESTION: WITH THE EXCEPTION OF SUPER-SENSITIVE PANCHROMATIC NEGATIVE, WHAT PHOTOGRAPHIC DEVELOPMENT DO YOU CONSIDER MOST VALUABLE TO THE MOTION PICTURE PRODUCER?

JIMMY HOWE (M.G.M.): It is my considered opinion that the introduction and development of the projection background process has been the most valuable contribution of the photographers to the motion picture industry in many years.

CHAS. STUMAR (Universal): I feel that the development of both large and small cranes has made it possible for us to obtain shots which hitherto were impossible to obtain. They enable the director to give a smoother action to many scenes, keeping the action continuous, rather than cutting to the various angles.

RAY JUNE (M.G.M.): From a pictorial, a monetary and a showmanship standpoint I feel sure that most of us will agree on the projection background system as the most important development in the last few years.

IRA JOE MORGAN: The development of incandescent lights. They are easier to handle, lighter equipment and more comfortable for the actors and workers.

ALVIN WYCKOFF: The development of projection background photography as applied to present-day production.

NICK MUSURACA (RKO): Unquestionably projection background is the most important development in recent years. The use of it enables the producer to obtain authentic realism in productions which otherwise entail great expense in sending entire cast and company to actual location.

B'WAY BUSINESS BOOMS

TRADE VIEWS by W. R. WILKERSON

•THE Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer sales organization is yelling "Hail to Irving Thalberg," and the reason is the business that is being done on "Rip Tide" in the 24 spots it has been released to date.

Thalberg's first picture to be played since his year's vacation from picture-making is doing the same tricks at the box office that most of the other Thalberg productions accomplished in previous years. Felix Feist states that twelve out of the 24 houses opening the picture last week did business far beyond any record held on any other attraction for the past year or two, and in the other dozen spots it has run ahead of anything released in recent months.

And that's Thalberg's showmanship. For certainly the story of "Rip Tide" has been done at least ten times in that many years and the majority of them have been pretty bad at the cash window. But the MGM production genius has treated what had been an unimportant yarn with a flair of importance that brings it over the line of excellent entertainment.

All of which stamps the Thalberg comeback with a capital "C" and encourages the entire picture business with a new hope—yes, a certainty—of future Thalberg productions. And how this industry has needed a Thalberg for the past 12 months, needed pictures that have been given that production importance, stories that SELL tickets.

There is that something about Irving's pictures, even the few that have not clicked in a big way, that gives this whole business a lift in the right place. Some studios call their occasional efforts in that direction "prestige pictures."

But what were "prestige pictures" in some other studios were HITS for MGM with Thalberg doing the producing.

Accordingly, we join with the MGM sales crew in its "Hail Thalberg" movement, as does every other individual in the business who is interested in picture progress.

Para. Again Figuring Production in East

New York. — Possibilities of Paramount once again considering production in the East are indicated by the news today that the company will probably renew its lease on the Eastern Service Studios, the present name of the old Paramount-Astoria plant.

Jos. Schenck Blasts Against Dual Bills

New York.—Joseph Schenck, chieftain of United Artists and Twentieth Century, yesterday again expressed his belief that double features are an evil and added the thought that indies who must depend on double features should not be aided or encouraged.

The outspoken expression is especially interesting in view of present Washington developments which are laying stress on protection for the indies to aid a wider spread of work.

L'Estrange in Politics

Richard L'Estrange, member of the Regional Labor Board and labor representative on the NRA Studio Labor Committee, yesterday announced his candidacy for the position of County Supervisor from the third supervisorial district.

Charlie Einfeld Here

S. Charles Einfeld, director of publicity and advertising for Warners, arrived by train yesterday from New York. He will remain about two weeks.

Flu Lays Banton Low

Travis Banton, Paramount style designer, is away from his office with an attack of flu.

With Lent Over New York Sees Most Sensational Day In Long Time For Both Legit And Pics

New York.—The week-end rain was dried up yesterday in the brightest sun and the broadest smiles New York showmen have seen in long time when Gothamites turned out for legit and picture theatres in a way that made veteran showmen think of 1929. Business was more than good; it was sensational. Theatres were really "jammed."

Business that will probably set new records for the house packed the Rialto, where "The Lost Patrol," Radio picture, is being shown. Lines around the corner were on hand before the house opened, and clear through to the evening shows the situation was the same.

Col. and Loew Lead Jump in Pic Stocks

New York.—The boom in business uptown on Broadway was matched in Wall Street yesterday by picture stocks, with Columbia and Loew's both hitting new highs for the year.

Columbia stepped to twenty-nine and a half, with Loew's preferred hitting ninety-two and a half.

Small Signs Hammett

New York.—Eddie Small's Reliance company has signed a contract with Dashiell Hammett to write an original story.

Myles Gibbons Ill

New York.—Myles Gibbons, of the Paramount story staff, is ill with pneumonia at the Mount Vernon Hospital.

Brandt Asks 'How' On Columbia Sale

New York.—Joe Brandt, former president of Columbia and one-third partner with Harry and Jack Cohn, wants to know the "how and why" of the proposed Columbia sale to the DuPonts or anyone else.

When Brandt sold out his interest to Harry Cohn, it was agreed that Columbia was to pay him out at the rate of $100,000 a year for ten years. Thus the ten year trusteeship that exists in Columbia.

Alternates to Take Darrow's Offensive

Washington. — Harold Bareford, Warner attorney and alternate for H. M. Warner on the Code Authority, came to Washington last night for conferences with Lowell Mason, chief counsel for the Darrow committee. He was accompanied to the city by

Universal Planning New $1 Stock Issue

New York.—Universal plans a realignment of its stock procedure. The Universal common has always been a no par value stock. The new plan calls for the issurance of common at $1 a share, to be exchanged for the old stock on a one for one basis.

Agnes Leahy Services

Funeral services for Agnes Brand Leahy were held yesterday at the Little Church of the Flowers at Forest Lawn. Ceremony was private, with only relatives attending.

David Loew, Film Buyer

New York.—David M. Loew is now head film buyer for the entire Loew circuit, with Joe Vogel, previously in the post, assigned to handle house operation.

LINDSEY HEARINGS WITH PRODUCERS STILL ON FENCE

Up to a late hour last night the producers had come to no official decision as to whether or not they will have representatives present at the hearings of code violation complaints slated to come up before Judge Ben Lindsey, NRA Labor Compliance Officer, at ten o'clock this morning.

Judge Lindsey announced last night that he had received notification from all of the complainants stating they will be on hand, but that he had heard

New York REVIEWS

"EVER SINCE EVE"

Fox prod.; director, George Marshall; writers, Henry Johnson, Stuart Anthony.

Mayfair Theatre

Mirror: Pleasant little comedy. The film is produced against attractive settings. It is acted by such reliable character players as Herbert Mundin, Roger Imhof and Russell Simpson.

News: Some of the nonsense which is provided by Herbert Mundin, Roger Imhof and Russell Simpson is more than fairly amusing. If you are responsive to the charms of the two leading players and to the humor that the three comedians bring to the screen, you may overlook the flaws of the story and find diversion in "Ever Since Eve."

Sun: "Ever Since Eve" might be called cute even at the risk of distressing the exceedingly manly Mr. O'Brien. It's a light little comedy, but well done. Mary Brian looks prettier than ever. The dialogue is often clumsy. "Ever Since Eve" is lightweight, but diverting.

Herald-Tribune: I trust that it will not bore you as much as it did me.

Times: There is enough wholesome humor in "Ever Since Eve" to atone for its antiquated plot. Mr. O'Brien does well enough in his part and Miss Brian is pleasing in hers.

American: At one time or another this one must have been funnier than it appears now on the screen of the Mayfair Theatre. For if we mistake not, the vehicle, besides serving as a parent stem for other movies, met with success on the very Broadway to which it now returns.

Journal: The film never quite makes up its mind as to whether it's melodrama, comedy, a problem play or a drama of the rugged West.

Post: Though doubtless at one time a diverting and harmless little comedy, there is very little in the present version that calls for, or could support, extended comment.

"HOLD THAT GIRL"

Fox prod.; director, Hamilton MacFadden; writers, Dudley Nichols, Lamar Trotti.

Roxy Theatre

World-Telegram: Hamilton MacFadden's direction is swift and sure. All in all, if you like romance, mixed with reporting, a dash of police work and a splash of the underworld, you will find "Hold That Girl" pleasantly palatable.

Sun: "Hold That Girl" doesn't make much sense if considered from a realistic viewpoint. It must, for entertainment's sake, be regarded as a piece of melodramatic nonsense; and from that angle it's fairly diverting.

American: Very presentable program entertainment. Of the players, Mr. Dunn is best in a role which, by repetition, has become second nature to him. He is still the soft-hearted hard-guy and gives much the same characterization as in previous endeavors.

Times: A routine romantic comedy, it is broad in its approach and friendly in its intentions. Mr. Dunn and his new partner are pleasant persons to know and they make an agreeable team for modest comedies like this one.

Mirror: Miss Trevor and Mr. Dunn are supported by a competent company. Their dialogue is saucy and amusing. The action is snappy. "Hold That Girl" is an unpretentious, but qite amusing little comedy romance.

News: "Hold That Girl" is filled with plenty of adventure and some exciting action. The picture moves quickly and amusingly from its introductory incident to its satisfactory finish. Hamilton MacFadden, who directed it, never lets it lag for a minute.

Journal: It's a pleasantly entertaining comedy, unpretentiously devised, but engagingly played by the two principals.

Herald-Tribune: It is intended as a fast, up-to-the-moment comedy melodrama. It moves with considerable speed and it offers its share of melodramatic incidents of one kind or another. My impression is that the whole thing is pretty stale stuff, not vastly aided by some of the playing, but if you are a good, sturdy, conservative filmgoer, interested in seeing the same characters engaged in the same plot manipulations, then at least you will see them done vigorously enough.

Blackmer Wins His Income Tax Battle

Sidney Blackmer yesterday won his fight to deduct entertainment expenses from his income tax returns, according to a decision handed down by the U. S. Circuit Court, reversing an earlier decision of the U. S. Bureau of Tax Appeals.

Blackmer, five years ago, claimed entertainment expenses incurred by an actor were legitimate deductions. The Treasury would not allow their inclusion, and Blackmer has been fighting the case in court.

Monogram Likely To Boost Budgets

New York.—Monogram's franchise holders, after one of the most successful years in the company's history, are converging on Atlantic City for the annual convention, with the prospect very strong that they will boost the ante still higher next year and aim at the stiffest competition.

The Mono men feel their organization is in the spot where Columbia was just before it went over the hill to green pastures. It has delivered the full program sold, has exhibitor confidence in its standards, and Hollywood confidence in the production execs. And its finance is solid. What more, they ask, is needed?

'Villa' on Air Again

The "Viva Villa" broadcast goes on the air again from New York Thursday. Al Jolson heads the program, which goes over the NBC system.

"Rip Tide" drew them in such droves that despite the rainy Saturday it is certain to check in a week's figure up to the house top, phenomenal after allowing for the rained-out business and a Good Friday opening.

"Rothschild" has been selling out so consistently that the condition there was nothing unusual, but the general reflex of bringing theatre ticket buyers from their hide-outs was evidenced here in another jump in the advance sale.

But up and down the White Way the story was the same, for both picture theatres and legit shows. The veterans are keeping their fingers crossed—there was something about the spontaneous outpouring today that makes them think maybe some sort of turning point has been reached.

Photography .....Benjamin Kline
Cast: Jack Holt, Jean Arthur, Donald Cook, Allen Jenkins, Lila Lee, Rita LaRoy, John Miljan, Oscar Apfel, Willard Robertson, Ward Bond.

Once more "Enoch Arden" hits the screen. This time it is called "Whirlpool." There are enough new twists in the tale, which always has enjoyed a strangle-hold on the public fancy, to make it a good bet where Jack Holt is a favorite.

At the start of the film he is seen as a grifter who sells his show when he marries Lila Lee. On the night the deal is to be completed a riot breaks out over a shady shell game. A man is killed. Holt gets twenty years.

Rather than let his wife wait for his release, he takes advantage of his position in the warden's office and sends a faked notice of his death.

On his release, he goes in for big time racketeering. His wife has married a judge. His daughter is working as a reporter. Assigned to lure confidences out of him, she recognizes her father. And they spend every possible minute together. No one knows of their relationship, a swarm of jealousies and speculations arise. Climax comes with Holt ending his life rather than allow his real identity to bring disaster to his wife and daughter.

Holt gives a steadily sympathetic portrayal of an upright hard guy. Particularly touching and well done are his scenes with his daughter. He is given splendid assistance by Jean Arthur and by the director, Roy William Neill. Without overplaying or mawkish sentimentality, these scenes have a natural, human quality that counts.

Allen Jenkins as a tough mug, with a heart of gold and stomach trouble, handles a running gag for plenty of laughs. Donald Cook takes good care of the part of the jealous young lover. Rita La Roy gives a sullen fire to the role of the suspicious moll. Lila Lee is sympathetic as the wife. John Miljan does another of those excellent villains of his. Oscar Apfel, Willard Robertson and Ward Bond are well cast in smaller roles.

Screen play by Dorothy Howell and Ethel Hill from the Howard Emmett Rogers story does much to make new the old situation.

Good bet if your audience likes Holt.

Academy Committee Studies Sound Costs

A subcommittee of the Academy's Research Council yesterday started an industry survey of studio methods of slating and cueing scenes, with a view to bringing about a standard system that will cut sound recording costs in all studios.

Move Started To Cut 17,000 Extras Down to Only 1500

The Code Committee for Extras last night definitely decided on the first move for cutting down the present list of motion picture extras, and decided at the same time that the existing list of approximately 17,000 registered extras will be pared to only 1500.

This list shall then be gradually increased, but to an extent not over 20 per cent the first year, and not over five per cent each year thereafter. At no time shall it ever exceed a total of 2000 names.

Today letters will be mailed to all casting agencies, casting directors, Central Casting, Extra Players' Associations, the Motion Picture Relief Fund and other welfare agencies asking them to send the committee a list of people they feel should be retained in the final list. No agency can send more than 3000 names. From the combined lists the final 1500 names will be chosen as the only people to be registered as eligible for extra work.

In order to determine the correct ratio of men and women to be chosen, the placement records of Central casting will be examined over the past five years. Final approval of the list will be asked of the Code Authority.

'U' Convention in New York, June 1

Carl Laemmle Sr. and J. R. Grainger yesterday agreed to hold one big convention of the Universal sales organization and picked New York as the spot and June 1 as the date.

Grainger announced that Universal will have completed the current program by June 1. The exchanges have already received twenty-three pictures, two are on the way, five are now in work and six more are to be made.

Laemmle Jr. states that he will have six of the new year's program by September 1.

Para. Force Warned Against Garnishees

The flood of garnishments at virtually all the studios has prompted Emanuel Cohen to issue a special notice to Paramount's employees, instructing them to avoid getting the company involved in such troubles.

Studio chief hinted at drastic action and pointed out that other industries dismiss employees whose salaries have been plastered.

Ford and Director Win First Honors

"I HATE WOMEN"
(Goldsmith)

Direction.....Aubrey H. Scotto
Author.....Mary E. McCarthy
Photography .....Ernest Miller
Cast: Wallace Ford, June Clyde, Fuzzy Knight, Bradley Page, Barbara Rogers, Alexander Carr, Bobby Watson, Eleanor Hunt, Douglas Fowley, Cecilia Parker, Margaret Mann, Shirley Lee.

Goldsmith Productions has taken a tried and true formula, treated it with a good deal of respect and turned out a reliable program picture.

"I Hate Women" isn't going to send any metropolitan audiences into raves, but it will satisfy the small houses. The oldness and triteness of the story are counteracted by an engaging characterization by Wallace Ford and occasional fine comedy by Fuzzy Knight.

Ford is a newspaper man who has been tricked once too often by a woman. And so he hates 'em. And so coming home one night from a spree all by himelf, a girl (June Clyde) jumps into his cab and he finds himself involved again in the biggest story of the year and unable to give it to his paper until he clears the girl of the suspicion of murdering her mean old husband.

To do this, he hides out with her in an apartment and, as he fumes and fusses around at the trouble she is causing him, and runs down clue after clue to find out who really killed her husband, he falls in love with her.

Ford gives all he has to this part and it's plenty—one of the best things he has done. Miss Clyde is appealing as the girl, and Bradley Page is strongly cast as a tricky rival reporter. Fuzzy Knight's comedy is a highlight. Alexander Carr is noticeably good in a small role, and Margaret Mann makes a two-line part shine.

Aubrey H. Scotto's direction gives the picture a nice tempo; Mary E. McCarthy wrote the story and Ernest Miller photographed it.

It's a nice job of production and, if your audiences aren't overly critical, it's a pretty safe bet.

Praskins Switches

Handing in his screen play on "Here Comes the Groom" to Charles R. Rogers at Paramount, Leonard Praskins today swings over to the Sam Goldwyn organization at United Artists on a one-picture ticket.

Bren on Long Lay-Off

J. R. Bren yesterday turned in the script on his original story, "High Voltage," to Twentieth Century and checked out on a three-months lay-off period, during which he will do outside work.

George Sidney to MGM

George Sidney signed a contract with MGM yesterday to take a featured comedy assignment in "Manhattan Melodrama." Ticket went through the Small-Landau office.

Yesterday in NEW YORK with HELEN GWYNNE

Every once in a while you ask a question and find out something really interesting. In response to a request for some statistics on Censor Boards throughout the country, it was discovered that there is a law on the Florida statute books providing for a Board of Censors, but no one has remembered to appoint anyone to it for years. Which is one way of satisfying all of the people all of the time and it's probably a nice thing to have around just in case something needs censoring. . . . Then again, up in Massachusetts, they have censors too, but they're only allowed to function on Sunday shows. And heaven knows what's good enough for Sundays (holiday prices) should be good enough for the rest of the week.

Tonia Selwart, who expects he'll go to London with "Pursuit of Happiness," was practicing up on his diction, using a stray remark of Mrs. DeMille's for inspiration, and finally had everybody in the place saying "fuschia, flowering gooseberries." . . . Mr. and Mrs. Delos Chappelle, Nicholas Roosevelt (that tribe is a race, not a family), Humphrey Bogart, Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Warren, Edward Johnson, Raymond Massey and Adrianne Allen, the Lloyd Nolans, the Morrie Ryskinds, the Strooks and Ken MacKenna among those present.

TREM CARR
VICE-PRESIDENT
IN CHARGE of PRODUCTION

We of the Monogram organization wish to thank all the stars, directors, producers and writers who helped us with their services during the past year. They enabled us to turn out a product that has made the name of Monogram grow steadily in importance with each new program.

For 1934-35 we are planning to sponsor a line-up of pictures that will, we hope, command the respect and attention of the trade, the press and the public. We trust it will be our pleasure to have you identified with us once again to our mutual advantage and growth.

Men, women and children of Hollywood, once again, we THANK YOU!

Sincerely,

TREM CARR

OPEN FORUM

April 2, 1934.

Dear Mr. Wilkerson:

The nice mention of Bob Shannon's name and mine in your "Lowdown" column this morning was appreciated by us. It so happens that the item is one hundred per cent right with a few exceptions and these exceptions would list as follows:

1. We never knew that Fox wanted an auctioneer story for Rogers.
2. They never called upon us to submit anything.
3. The auction story was entirely our own brainchild.
4. It was written definitely for a "fast-talking promoter" character, such as Pat O'Brien and was one that would never fit Will Rogers.
5. The story was never written up in a few pages; the only draft of it consists of exactly seventy-nine typewritten pages.

Both Mr. Shannon and myself thank you again for your well meaning, but we would like just a little credit for thinking of something original once in a while.

With best wishes, I am

Sincerely yours,

ALBERT J. COHEN.

Role for Judith Allen

Judith Allen yesterday replaced Gertrude Michael in "She Loves Me Not" because the latter is still working in "Cleopatra" at Paramount. Vince Barnett was signed for a featured spot in this Bing Crosby-Miriam Hopkins vehicle, which Elliott Nugent directs.

Agency Changes

Inloes and France have given up their own agency and have become associated with the Bernard, Meiklejohn and McCall agency. They will handle the story department for the organization.

New Goldstone Hook-Up

Nat Goldstone yesterday closed a deal started in New York and becomes Coast representative for Max Hart, New York theatrical agent. Hart represents Goldstone in the East.

Carroll Graham on Way

Carroll Graham gets in by train tomorrow from New York. Writer went there two months ago to adapt his novel, "Queer People," to the stage.

Lindsey Hearings

nothing from the producers. Notices calling upon them to have representatives at the hearing were mailed last week.

Rumors were current yesterday that the producers were in communication with official Washington in an attempt to contact Sol A. Rosenblatt and get some ruling that would nullify the hearings before Judge Lindsey.

Asked what his procedure would be if the producers refused to appear, or have representation at the hearing, Judge Lindsey stated that he will go on with the hearings just the same, and will "do my best to fairly render my decision on the basis of the evidence presented by the complainants."

300 Booking Days Offered By Indies

New York.—A group of independent exhibitors, in their effort to offset the bulk booking time granted the big circuits for pictures, have combined and state that "we will be able to offer distributors over 300 booking days when the new season sets in."

This is a throwback to similar efforts in the past that have been "thumbed" for the reason that the distributors have asked then, as they do now, "where is the money," and none of the exhibs has been ready and willing to back up his ideas with the dough.

It is understood that this new thought will have money back of it, and that each exhibitor will post a certain amount to guarantee the distributors in the event they take the product away from the big circuits and turn it over to the indies.

Baum and Cohen Now Producers for Levine

Lou Baum, one-time Sterling Pictures executive, and Marty Cohen, lately with Majestic, have joined Nat Levine, of Mascot, as associate producesr

Former will handle specials, while the latter oversees the melodramas on the program of twenty pictures which Levine announces for his new program.

Ward-Waggner Songs For Universal Picture

Eddie Ward and George Waggner have sold two songs to Stanley Bergerman at Universal to be used in the Chester Morris picture, "Embarrassing Moments." They are "What a Fool I Am" and "I Won't Think About Tomorrow." Edward Laemmle wound up the picture yesterday.

Job for Princetonian

Paramount has signed Charles Arnst, Princeton graduate of 1929, to act as technical advisor on "She Loves Me Not," which Elliott Nugent directs. Picture is set in a Princeton locale.

Small Back from Try-Out

Morris Small yesterday returned from a flying trip to San Diego, where he caught the opening try-out of "Biography," which stars Alice Brady. Small is the star's manager.

Adolph Mayers Dies

New York.—Adolph Mayers, father of Archie Mayers of DuWorld Pictures, and Bertram Mayers, film attorney, died yesterday. Funeral services today.

J. Robert Rubin, alternate for Nicholas Schenck.

It now looks as though the picture executives couldn't "take it," but have decided that their alternates on the Code Authority would have to be the recipients of the Darrow questionings. Warner and Schenck have their alternates here already, and R. H. Cochrane is on his way to Bermuda, so presumably his alternate will act.

Gargan Stooges

Bill Gargan—just to be a friend to a pal—did a lot of reciting for Eddy Eckels and "Hollywood on the Air" rehearsals yesterday and he doesn't know yet whether he was appreciated. And probably doesn't care.

Schulberg Will Hold at Least 3 Wampas Babies

According to the contract between the Wampas and Ben Schulberg at Paramount for the use of the thirteen Baby Stars selected by that organization, the Paramount producer agrees to give at least three of the thirteen contracts and give the majority of them speaking parts in "Kiss and Make Up."

The Wampas goes to court this morning to have its contract with the young ladies verified, where such ladies are under age.

Warners are doing a burn, due to their understanding with one of the Wampas members that they would get first crack at the girls.

Plans M. P. School

New York—Bud Pollard, indie producer, says he has an arrangement working out with the New York State Education Department to get a charter for a motion picture school that will be dignified by the use of the word "Academy."

'Private Scandal' Done

Ralph Murphy brought in "Private Scandal" for Charles R. Rogers at Paramount Sunday night, three days ahead of schedule. Zasu Pitts, Mary Brian, Phillips Holmes, June Brewster and Ned Sparks headed the cast.

Gropper Books Soon

New York.—Milton Herbert Gropper's play, "Sing and Whistle," is to be published in book form by Longmans Green Company. His "Three Queens Full" will be published by the same concern in May.

Caster To Play Sec.

Marcia Remy, assistant to Dave Werner, Universal casting head, was selected yesterday to play the role of a secretary in "Affairs of a Gentleman." Script called for a secretary and Werner thought she looked the part.

Arnold Heads ASC For Fourth Term

John Arnold was re-elected president of the American Society of Cinematographers last night, this being his fourth term in that office. Victor Milner and Elmer Dyer were re-elected first and third vice-presidents respectively, and John Boyle was chosen for second. George Schneiderman was re-elected treasurer, also his fourth term, and Frank Good is the new secretary.

Under the new system, only five new Governors were elected to the Board, ten holding over. The new members are Dan Clark, Vernon Walker, Arthur Edeson, George Folsey Jr. and Frank Good. The hold-overs are Messrs. Arnold, Boyle, Dyer, Milner and Schneiderman, and Al Gilks, Fred Jackman, Charles Lang Jr., James Van Trees Sr. and Ray June.

Sound Men Discuss Complaint to Cummings

The Board of Executives of the sound men's local met last night.

While no announcement was made, it was learned that the principal subject of discussion was the complaint filed with United States Attorney General Cummings, asking that the producers and the IBEW be prosecuted for violation of the National Industrial Recovery Act, the news of which was revealed exclusively in yesterday's Reporter.

Miss Dunckley Returns

Dorothy Dunckley, of Cine Sound Production, Sydney, Australia, returns to the homeland tomorrow, after an extensive visit in Hollywood studying American production methods.

Miss Dunckley, who will also act as Hollywood Reporter correspondent for Australia, expects to do considerable radio broadcasting on the Hollywood topic on her arrival.

Acad. Meetings Delayed

The meeting between a special committee from the Producers Branch of the Academy and committees from the Technicians Branch and the Assistant Directors Section scheduled for last night was postponed.

Wynne Ages Again

Wynne Gibson is scheduled to pass from youth to old age again in a picture, and Karl Freund and the star were busily at work yesterday on make-up tests for the role. The picture is "I Give My Love," from a story by Vicki Baum.

'COL. NOT FOR SALE'-COHN

TRADE VIEWS by W. R. WILKERSON

•MY, oh my, what a panning some of the New York critics gave "Rip Tide," and for what reason is beyond us. It's entertainment, it's a good show, It is attracting plenty of customers; and they must like it, for they are going out and sending others back to see the MGM production.

One producer told us last night: "Any time you stick under the nose of the New York reviewers ads telling them, and the public, how the 'Hollywood critics' raved about a picture, you can be certain of as nice a panning as you will ever get, regardless of the quality of your picture. I know, because it happened to me, not once, but twice."

That's one answer. You may have another. But the fact remains that producers make pictures to attract the public and give them amusement after the patrons get into the theatre, and "Rip Tide" must do both from the box-office reports sent to this desk during the past week. It did more business in ONE day at Loew's State here than the preceding program of two pictures did an entire week.

So what?

The metropolitan reviewers do a lot of writing for each other. They have that "public be damned" attitude, they do not know that the majority of the people of this nation go to bed with a copy of True Story in their hands, that they have no interest in the classics nor the higher arts. They little realize that the perfect screen entertainment is one of the True Story variety, maybe with another cover on it.

However, those critics are paid to give their impressions, to tell in print what they think of a picture and, if they go nuts at times and pan a "winner," who suffers? Certainly not the producer who made the picture, nor the theatre that ran it, nor the public who paid to see it. And not even the critic who panned it.

But sensitive producers, stars, writers and directors should come around to the thought that there is only one critic whose word means anything and that's the man or woman who lays dough down at the ticket window.

But What Happened To Marie Antoinette?

The extremes to which Marlene Dietrich is carrying the "Studio Queen" attitude at Paramount took a new jump yesterday when it was learned that the studio's press department, in order to obtain an interview with her, must make an appointment through her agents, Edington and Vincent.

Col. Profits for Six Mos. Over $400,000

New York—Columbia continues in its stride, the financial report for six months ended Dec. 30th showing a net profit of $404,562.93 after all charges, including the placing of $25,-891 for preferred dividends.

Net earnings of the company before deductions for taxes, interest and amortization of film were $2,888,790. Cash on hand totalled, $653,423. There are 26,636 shares of common reserved to the management at $29 per share up to June 30. The stock closed yesterday at 30.

Warners Get Stuart

Warners closed a deal yesterday with Universal for the loan of Gloria Stuart to play a lead opposite James Cagney in "Hey Sailor." She is vacationing at Morro Bay, and was called home yesterday by telephone.

Ruben Starts in London

Lonodn—J. Walter Ruben yesterday started filming "Java Head" for Associated Talking pictures at the Ealing studios. He was borrowed from Radio to direct this English production.

Columbia Head States There Is No Deal On For The Sale Of His Company And None In View

"Columbia is not for sale. There has been no deal discussed, nor one contemplated so far as I know, and I should know as the deal would have to be made with me as I am the owner of the controlling shares of the company."

Thus did Harry Cohn come out of his silence to deny the yarn that has been hot in this business for the past two weeks, a yarn that has been transferring the control of Columbia to the lap of the DuPonts and others.

"It's all bunk," says Cohn, "there is no truth to the rumor, no foundation for the talk. Through the pur-

New Pictures on B'way This Week

New York.—Five new pictures come into the big houses this week. "Lazy River" opened yesterday at the Mayfair. Today "Gambling Lady" goes into the Strand.

"This Man Is Mine" comes to the Music Hall on Thursady. Friday we see "The Contsant Nymph" at the Roxy and "You're Telling Me," with Roxy and his gang, at the Paramount. "Rip Tide" holds over at the Capitol, with Paul Whiteman stage show.

Roy Mack to Meg Here

New York—Roy Mack, who has been at the Brooklyn Vitaphone plant for the past two seasons left for Hollywood yesterday and will probably be assigned to a number of the Technicolor shorts the company plans for next season.

Hecht-MacArthur Pics for Para Release

New York—The three independently produced pictures planned by Ben Hecht and Charles MacArthur are likely to see release through Paramount if present deals are carried through.

The writers are now negotiating with the distributor and with Erpi, production being planned for the Eastern Service Studios.

Quartette to Produce New Musical at MGM

Allen Rivkin, P. J. Wolfson, Nacio Herb Brown and Arthur Freed take on the responsibilities of associate producers on "Broadway Melody of 1934" at MGM. Rivkin and Wolfson contribute the original story, while Brown and Freed write the music and lyrics.

Astaire and Rogers in 'Ringstrasse' at Radio

Radio has set "Ringstrasse" as the second picture teaming Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers. It is a German play by Adler Laszlo, which is being scripted by Allan Scott, and will follow "The Gay Divorcee."

Hayes Due in June

New York—"Mary of Scotland" closes its successful run on June 2, with Helen Hayes planning to leave for the Coast and picture work at MGM shortly after that date.

Korda Signs Pidgeon

Alexander Korda has signed Walter Pidgeon for two pictures and the player leaves April 18 for London. Pidgeon worked with Korda when the latter was here a number of years ago.

Jack Warner on Way

New York—Jack Warner gets under way for the Coast today, leaving on the Century.

MAJORS IGNORE LINDSEY BUT HE HEARS COMPLAINTS

One lone Independent producing organization was the only motion picture company yesterday that obeyed the summons of Judge Ben B. Lindsey, special NRA Labor Compliance Director, to appear before him for hearings on complaints charging nine major studios and one independent with violations of the NRA film code. Not one major company appeared nor sent any explanation.

Despite the failure of the majors to send representatives, Judge Lindsey

New York REVIEWS

"ONCE TO EVERY WOMAN"

Columbia prod.; director, Lambert Hillyer; writers, A. J. Cronin, Jo Swerling.

Rialto Theatre

News: "Once to Every Woman" is an engaging, faithful and enjoyable photoplay. You'll like it.

Times: The slightly less than cerebral title of the new Rialto film has at least the minor virtue of summing up all that is unfortunate in the work. Here is a story which might have become a screen "Men in White," an absorbing and thrilling drama.

Mirror: It is very well made, skilfully written and brilliantly acted. But it is grim. Persons who are frightened by hospitals will find "Once to Every Woman" confirms their worst fancies. It deals with incompetence, dangerous institutional politics, and wilful neglect of responsibility. It is made with dignity, however, with restraint and taste. It is an admirable example of how fine acting, writing and direction can be wasted on an unentertaining plot.

Herald-Tribune: Its story and treatment are adult and, with the exception of a few customary cinema moments, manage to hold attention and be informative at the same time. The dialogue is less banal than usual, and the performance is authoritative.

American: Average program entertainment. It is well cast, nicely produced. The honors of the piece are shared by Messrs. Connolly and Bellamy, with mention for Miss Carlisle and J. Farrell MacDonald, Leila Bennett and a dozen more. The atmosphere is well established and maintained, and both players and director contribute a sincere, forthright job of it.

Sun: The Rialto's new picture is fortunate enough to have a story somewhat more credible and interesting than the usual run of medical talkies. The plot itself isn't particularly important, but "Once to Every Woman" is the most interesting film this week-end anyway.

World-Telegram: Here, in "Once to Every Woman," is a hospital film so simple, so genuine, so tense and thrilling at times, that it is easily the best and most entertaining the screen has yet given us. Unlike the many hospital films we have had, and probably always will have with us, this "Once to Every Woman," in spite of its silly title, is free from the usual hokum. Its grimness is the very grimness of the subject with which it deals, and this and not its love element is sufficiently exciting to hold your attention.

Journal: The picture is satisfactorily acted and developed. But it's pretty grim, with plenty of sickroom atmosphere and a prolonged operating room sequence that becomes intensely harrowing.

EASTERN PRODUCTION DUE FOR BOOM NEXT SEASON

New York.—Eastern production is in for a boom next year, and this time there are definite contracts to prove that it will not be another mirage.

Captain Baynes, of the Eastern Service Studios, says that contracts already closed cover twelve productions, practically all set for major release, to be produced at the Astoria plant.

And up at the Biograph plant in the Bronx, with the backing of Herb Yates, of Consolidated, definite plans are under way that will insure practically continuous operation on productions for independent release, with a few majors dropped in.

Back to His Old Love

Pat O'Brien, who was in the navy for a year and a half during the war, had to wait until yesterday to do picture work on a battleship. He will be on the Arizona for 12 days, filming "Hey Sailor." O'Brien was stationed on the Great Lakes during the war.

Geo. Brown Honored

New York.—George Brown, advertising manager of Columbia Pictures, has been appointed member of a new committee named by General Johnson, of the NRA, for a coming propaganda drive.

Schofield to Do Screen Play for Brice Picture

Monte Brice has signed Paul Schofield to do the screen play of "Benefit Performance," his first production since the dissolution of the Rowland-Brice partnership.

Plans are being perfected for the filming of this picture at the Eastern Service Studios in New York. As soon as Schofield completes the screen play, Brice plans to leave for New York to start production.

Lombardo to Frisco

Guy Lombardo and his orchestra, finishing in Paramount's "Many Happy Returns," move off to San Francisco, April 11, to broadcast on the White Owl Hour and put in a week at the Orpheum Theatre. Unit jumps to Galveston, Texas, for its next broadcast, April 25. The Music Corporation of America books the unit.

'Rothschild' Gets Away to Big Start

"The House of Rothschild" opened last night in a blaze of glory at Grauman's Chinese to a complete sell-out, many prominent picture people who sought to get tickets in the early afternoon finding it an impossible task.

The reception given the picture was little short of a sensation, and wiseacres are predicting that the Chinese is in for a run that will bring back memories of the good old days at this house. Fredric March acted as master of ceremonies, following the showing, while Laurence Grant officiated at the forecourt microphone previous to the show.

Fox to Remake Silent

Fox will do a talkie remake of one of its last silents, "Ladies Must Dress," which was released in December, 1927. Picture is scheduled for next year's production plans and will be handled by Sol Wurtzel. No writer has been signed.

Tim McCoy Starts One

With D. Ross Lederman directing, Columbia today puts the seventh Tim McCoy action picture into work, Ward Bond, set by Kingston-Harris, is only player cast. Story has been scripted by Harold Shumate.

Short for Catlett

Walter Catlett was signed by Radio yesterday for the top spot in the next Headliner short which Lee Marcus is producing.

Shirley Grey with Dix

Shirley Grey once again plays opposite Richard Dix, this time in "Family Man" at Radio. John Robertson directs.

'SISTERS UNDER SKIN' FINE PIECE OF ENTERTAINMENT

Director, Writing, Cast All Splendid

"SISTERS UNDER THE SKIN"
(Columbia)

Direction .....David Burton
Author .....Jo Swerling
Photography .....Joseph August
Cast: Elissa Landi, Frank Morgan, Joseph Schildkraut, Doris Lloyd, Clara Blandick, Shirley Grey.

The Columbia picture, "Sisters Under the Skin," is important for three reasons: First, because it gives Elissa Landi a chance at last to prove that she is an ACTRESS; second, because it is a completely honest and dramatic diagram of real, human manners and emotions, and, third, because it's darn good entertainment.

Frank Morgan isn't mentioned in the above, because he has had other chances to show what he can do, and the superb performance he gives in this picture is not a matter of news. It's just taken for granted.

David Burton, the director, modeled this picture into a sculptured, balanced and dramatic whole. But he had marvelous clay with which to work in Jo Swerling's story. There's not a line of dialogue that doesn't ring true and not a sequence or a single scene that couldn't stand up under the microscope of human experience. And, while bouquets are being tossed out, let a large one be thrown to Joseph August, whose photography is a thing of beauty.

Frank Morgan plays the part of an industrial magnate who reaches the age of fifty with millions in the bank, a great desire to play Beethoven's "Moonlight Sonata," and an unquenchable yearning to enjoy life. His wife, Doris Lloyd, has allowed the years to rob her of gaiety and, when he wants to kick up his heels and roam over the world, she suggests seeing his doctor.

And so when, under particularly romantic circumstances, he meets Elissa Landi, an actress, he attempts to journey with her back into his youth and recapture some of that wild, young fervor.

But she meets a fiery, impetuous, young composer, Joseph Schildkraut. And Morgan finds that he puffs up the stairs as the two youngsters run laughingly up to the composer's attic; and that his futile pickings on the piano at the "Moonlight Sonata" are pretty feeble compared with Schildkraut's sweeping, grand, new symphony.

And so, with a fine gallantry, he relinquishes the girl to the composer and goes home to his wife.

The story is too slyly intricate and emotionally tricky to be hedged about by an outline. It is fundamentally true and honest, and entirely entertaining.

Schildkraut is happily cast and he brings a fine spirit to his part. Doris Lloyd is flawless as the wife. Clara Blandick is good as Morgan's secretary, and Shirley Grey is seen briefly.

Do your audiences a favor and show them this picture—and let them see what Landi really can do.

'Henry VIII' Showing In 30 Berlin Houses

Berlin.—The German dubbed version of "Henry VIII" is drawing tremendous crowds here. The picture is being distributed by Universal and is showing in a total of thirty Berlin houses at the same time.

MGM Going Limit On 'Villa' in N. Y.

New York—MGM is gong the limit for the "Viva Villa" New York debut at the Criterion, and Broadway picture goers will not know the famous house when it reopens for the David Selznick production.

A new front is to be installed on the house, commanding Times Square, new sound and projection systems are being put in, and from drapes to lobby the dress will be new.

MGM has the house on sub-lease from J. P. Goring, for an initial ten week period. It reverts to the Farmers Loan and Trust Company on July 1, with the expectation here that Paramount will make a new deal to hold the theater after that date.

Two Indie Producers Closing Up Schedules

Chesterfield Pictures has two more productions to complete on its schedule of nine, according to George R. Batchellor. These will be "City Park," a romantic story, and "Green Eyes," a murder mystery. Both will be directed by Richard Thorpe.

Invincible Pictures, Maury Cohen, producer, has three more to complete its schedule of nine pictures. The first is "Fifteen Wives," written by Charles S. Belden. Frank Strayer will direct.

MGM After Colyumists For 'Pamela Thorndyke'

MGM is offering propositions to New York columnists to take the three top spots in the Moss Hart story, "Pamela Thorndyke." Studio is talking to Mark Hellinger, Louis Sobol, Edward Sullivan, Walter Winchell and Sidney Skolsky, it is reported, with a view to getting three of the group.

Ed Marin Leaving 'U'; Moving Over to Radio

Edwin L. Marin and Universal will split when the director cleans up "Affairs of a Gentleman." They were unable to get together on a new deal after the director's long term ticket expired.

He is due to move over to Radio on a one-picture ticket which has been set by the William Stephens office.

Lukas in Baum Story

Universal yesterday assigned Paul Lukas for the lead opposite Wynne Gibson in the Vicki Baum story, "I Give My Love." Milton Krims has written the screen play and Doris Anderson is now on the continuity. Karl Freund will direct and B. F. Zeidman will produce.

Writers Nominate For Guild Election

The thirty members nominated for consideration in Thursday's election of the Writers' Guild Board of Governors were made known last night. From these thirty and any additional nominations made from the floor the Guild will choose fifteen members, the latter group later voting for president, vice-president, etc.

The thirty names announced follow: Ralph Block, John Howard Lawson, Ernest Pascal, Wells Root, Frances Marion, Oliver H. P. Garrett, Dudley Nichols, Courtenay Terrett, Brian Marlow, Tristram Tupper, Arthur Ripley, Rupert Hughes, Wilfred MacDonald, Raymond Schrock, Allen Rivkin, Gladys Lehman, John Natteford, Jo Swerling, Samuel Ornitz, Seton I. Miller, Arthur Richman, Robert Riskin, Zelda Sears, John Emerson, James K. McGuinness, Edwin Justus Mayer, Waldemar Young, James Creelman, Sonya Levien and Arthur Caesar.

Before the election can proceed, fifty more votes are needed to ratify the recent amendment to the by-laws allowing the increase in the board from eleven to fifteen.

Wampas Will Install Officers at Caliente

The installation of the new officers of the Wampas will be held at Agua Caliente next Saturday and Sunday. Two bus loads of the publicity gang will leave the Writers Club at 1:30 o'clock Saturday and a banquet will be thrown that night.

The boys will double up at the hotel—it's a stag party—and will leave for home at 4:30 o'clock Sunday. The committee announces—and this is the best news of all—there will be no charge for the trip.

Bob MacGowan to MGM

Bob MacGowan, director of the Roach "Our Gang" comedies, was signed by MGM yesterday to direct the first Shaw and Lee short subject which Jack Cummings is producing. The Beyer-MacArthur office has placed the director under a managerial contract and negotiated the deal.

Three for Holloway

Sterling Holloway will be working in three pictures during the balance of this month. He is to play in Radio's "Down to Their Last Yacht," MGM's "Merry Widow," and in a short for Warren Doane at Universal. Ralph Farnum placed him.

Warner Salesmen Due

Gradwell Sears, Warner sales manager for the South and West, and Andy W. Smith, handling sales in the East and Canada, will arrive Saturday for the MPTOA convention. They will be here a week.

Cormack at La Quinta

Bartlett Cormack is at La Quinta working on "One Woman," yarn planned by Paramount for Miriam Hopkins.

Yesterday in NEW YORK with HELEN GWYNNE

Here's an exhibitor angle that only an exhibitor could possibly have thought out. We were complaining the other day about how awful Broadway looks and how terrible Forty-second Street looks with all the cheap movie houses with their ten and fifteen cent admission prices doing nothing to help matters. Unfortunately, an exhibitor overheard us and forthwith went off into a long harangue about how, when the whole truth of the depression years is written up, cheap movie houses will be given their place in history. The way he figures it out, they are swell places for cold, depressed, unemployed members of society, and they went into the theatres glum and aching for a fight, but for a dime they could stay in a theatre and laugh all day and, when the masses laugh, society is in no danger of being disturbed. So the slogan seems to be "Stop revolutions with a ten, twenty, thirty house."

And speaking of ten, twenty, thirty. Not so long ago an actor was being interviewed by Jack Warner about whether or not he should or could get a salary tilt. Mr. Warner was of the opinion that he shouldn't, and proceeded to try to talk him out of it with arguments about things not being what they used to be and ending up with a statement to the effect that movies were back to a ten, twenty, thirty basis. Did the actor know what that meant? Whereupon the actor said yes, he knew all about that. He had just been reading the papers with particular reference to the publication by the government of salaries, bonuses, etc., in the picture industry. And he saw that Jack Warner got ten thousand . . . that was ten, and Harry Warner got ten thousand . . . that was twenty, and Albert Warner got ten thousand . . . . that made thirty.

With the announcement by Arch Selwyn that he had acquired the play rights to that best seller of last year, "Cora Fitts," and intends to produce it in the Fall, there is matter for speculation. We wonder whether there will be any offers for it from the picture companies. Not that it wouldn't make an elegant picture and one that cries aloud for Mae West with some of the rougher sequences crossed out of the story. BUT it's material that's been available for months now. Maybe a picture company is backing the play to see what it looks like before they take a chance.

Add: Oddities in the newsprints. In one column of the theatrical page is a routine announcement of new pictures on Broadway with the "Lost Patrol" listed as a picture without a woman in the cast, and directly opposite in the ad it says first and foremost: "WOMEN! . . . WOMEN . . . perfumed—with starry eyes and red lips! WOMEN—warm and alluring—danced through the skulls of these men . . . who grinned tight-lipped at death!" Which is not exactly misleading, but one of the neatest tricks of the week.

ONE LONE INDIE ANSWERS CALL FROM JUDGE LINDSEY

began his hearings, listening to the complaints and testimony of sound men, cameramen, drapers and upholsterers, grips, property men and electricians. He announced that he will render his decisions on the cases after he has had sufficient time to study them, and will send his findings on to Washington to the Chief Labor Compliance Officer.

Albert E. Levoy appeared for Mascot Pictures Corporation. But Columbia, Fox, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, Paramount, Hal Roach, Radio, Universal, United Artists and Warner Brothers-First National failed to appear. While no official announcement was given either by Judge Lindsey or the producers, it was generally rumored that the majors refused to appear on the grounds that Judge Lindsey does not have jurisdiction over the complaints.

When the doors of the headquarters of Judge Lindsey opened at ten o'clock yesterday morning it looked like a complete producer walkout, but there was a considerable number of labor representatives on hand, some with counsel. Judge Lindsey gave until eleven o'clock for producers to appear, then he called the first group, the sound men. Their delegation was headed by Harold V. Smith, business representative of Local 695.

Charges by Sound Men

Among other complaints, the sound men charged violation of the code by all the major studios in that they refuse to negotiate with the local, although the sound men in an election under the supervision of the Regional Labor Board named it, under NRA rules, as the body representing the sound technicians. They declared that the producers are violating the code in the matter of wage scale and hours, and a number of witnesses testified, and evidence was presented showing the studios have not spread employment as called for in the code.

Considerable testimony was also introduced by the sound men to support the charge that the studios are using coercion to force sound men to join the IBEW. Testimony was given that some studios have discharged sound men when they refused to join the IBEW. Testimony was also given showing that the IBEW scale for first sound men is $72 per week on a three-weeks basis, while the IATSE scale is $140 a week.

Mascot Man Shows Up

At two o'clock Levoy appeared for Mascot Pictures Corporation and told Judge Lindsey that his company recognized his authority and that, if it had done anything wrong, it was unintentional and he wished to get it straightened out, for his company wishes to live up to the letter of the code. He said he did not want legal counsel and was ready for the hearing.

Judge Lindsey then heard the complaint against Mascot and heard the defense of Levoy, who, at the conclusion of the hearing, left to investigate a couple of points and will report again today to Judge Lindsey.

"The attitude of Mr. Levoy was admirable," said Judge Lindsey, "and showed what can be done expeditiously if the proper co-operation is shown. There is no doubt the difficulties between his organization and the complainants can be easily adjusted."

Producers Nix Walk

Other groups heard yesterday included the cameramen represented by Herbert Aller; the upholsterers and drapers, represented by Walter Hopman, president of the labor group, and W. C. Wolfer, vice-president; and Local 37, IATSE, represented by Lew Blix, business representative.

Local 37 had a list of complaints, charging that one studio grips were used as extras with no additional pay. The upholsterers had a kick on wage scale and hours.

Effort to secure a official statement on the attitude of the major producers in regard to the hearing were without result, Casey saying he had nothing to do with the matter, and producers refusing to talk.

Come Early and Avoid the Rush

At 1.30 yesterday afternoon fourteen persons, eleven women and three men, had lined up on their camp chairs in front of Grauman's Chinese in order to have front row spots to look at the celebrities attending the opening of "The House of Rothschild."

'Rothschild' Boston Debut Gala Affair

Boston—The Hub City made the opening of the "House of Rothschild" here Monday evening one of the social events of the season, besides gladdening the hearts of the picture makers with a complete sell-out. It was a brilliant event, with all the big names of the city in attendance

Al Selig handled the advance campaign.

Warners Plan Dinner For 750 of the MPTOA

Warners will entertain the more than 750 members of the MPTOA at a dinner the first day of the convention, April 10. Studio will convert one of its stages into a dining room and will have every star on the payroll prepare a special act for the etertainment of the guests

New Songwriters Here

Charles Tobias and Murray Muncher, song writing team signed by Sam Goldwyn on a six weeks contract, arrived from the East yesterday. They will write the music and lyrics for the next Eddie Cantor picture, which gets under way around June 1.

Navy Yarn for Warners

Warners have purchased "Miss Pacific Fleet," a short story by Frederick Hazlitt Brennan which ran in Collier's a short time ago. No director or writer set as yet.

Calhern Bound East

Louis Calhern returned to New York yesterday after finishing his role in "Dark Towers" at Warners.

DARROW BOARD ROARS DIE AWAY TO MURMURS

Washington.—The trumpeted Darrow hearings came to a close last night with something of the effect of a bubble bursting, in the opinion of observers here.

In the first place, the members of the Code Authority and the major sales managers were not spanked for failing to appear, but apparently were successful in having their case presented in written form by H. Bareford, Warner attorney.

In the second place, other members of the committee besides Mr. Darrow started asking questions yesterday, and the trend of their queries indicated that they are willing to admit now that there are two sides to every question, even in the picture industry.

It is probable that the Darrow committee will recommend some minor changes in the code, and even some substitutions on the Code Authority that will give a better break to independents. Rabid indies here still say that Deputy Administrator Rosenblatt is in for a spanking, and his removal will be suggested, but this is discounted by most observers.

Governor Olson, of Minnesota, appearing "on behalf of the public," was the first witness of the day, airing his objections to block booking. He was followed by Al Steffes, rebel exhibitor from the same State, who repeated the castigation of block booking, and added a description of what he claimed were "kangaroo court" methods of the Boards of Trade, which he asserted are merely kept alive through the Code Authority's Grievance and Zone Boards.

Alfred Weiss, former indie producer and a vice-president of the original Goldwyn Pictures, put all the blame on sound pictures and the strangle-hold given the electrics. At this point one of the board members asked why the "13,000 independent exhibitors" had never tested the A. T. & T. monopoly in the courts, while another ventured the remark that patent rights were a matter entirely outside the range of the Darrow board.

Robert Robins, indie sound manufacturer and active in a campaign against the electrics, was the final witness, he also blaming A. T. & T. for all the industry's ills and charging that six out of the eight majors are now controlled by the phone monopoly. Robins also charged that practically all the Code Authority appointments had been dictated by A. T. & T. pressure. He concluded with the startling suggestion of Government control for the picture business by including it under the provisions of the "communications" bill now before Congress, which puts radio, telephone and telegraph under a new commission.

The highlight of the day really was a question from one of the board members, addressed to Steffes, asking: "If the business of the majors is so profitable, why are all the companies bankrupt?" Steffes blamed it on overseating.

Tear Jerker

They were doing a rave down at MGM yesterday over an eight-minute death scene shot by Clarence Brown for "Sadie McKee," with Joan Crawford and Gene Raymond doing the trouping.

MGM to Give Stock Players Stage Work

MGM has decided to establish a local experimental theatre for its stock players and has placed Maurice Revnes in charge of the project, with Oliver Hinsdale and Samuel Kayser as associate executives.

Plan is to use the forty stock players under contract to the company in a group of plays to be put on at a theatre yet to be selected. Plays will be revivals and the players will work between studio assignments, getting stage experience. Except for the start, the project is expected to pay its own way.

Warners Plan to Put Dvorak in 'Hey Sailor'

If the studio is able to rearrange the schedules on "Old Doll's House" and "Hey Sailor," Ann Dvorak will replace Margaret Lindsay in the latter picture, which is now shooting aboard the U. S. warship Arizona. Miss Lindsay has not yet fully recovered from her recent appendectomy.

She was scheduled to go into "Old Doll's House," but at the last minute the studio switched the assignment and gave it to Dvorak. Now, with "Hey Sailor" already in work with Miss Lindsay set opposite James Cagney and Pat O'Brien, studio is planning on following the same replacement procedure.

Major Prods. Starting

Major Productions puts the first of its six features, "Broadway Virgin," into work today at the Talisman studio, with Lou Collins directing. Dorothy Grainger, Betty Bronson, William Bakewell and George Meeker head the cast. Story has been scripted by F. McGrew Willis, with additional dialogue by Joseph O'Donnell.

Davis for 'Housewife'

Completing her work in "Of Human Bondage" at Radio, Bette Davis has returned to Warners, her home lot, and has been assigned one of the two leads in "Housewife." Al Green directs from the screen play by Manuel Seff and Lillie Hayward. Robert Lord supervises.

Barbier-Horton Set

Irving Thalberg yesterday borrowed George Barbier from Paramount and signed Edward Everett Horton for "The Merry Widow."

Reviewing the FAN MAGS

MODERN SCREEN
132 pages and cover
COVER DISPLAY.....Greta Garbo
(MGM)

Modern Screen for April is like the little girl who, when she was good was very, very good, and when she was bad she was horrid.

However, there's lots more good than bad in the mag. The story that is especially irritating, because of its glaring bad taste, is "I'm a Terrible Person," says Joan Crawford to Katherine Albert. The fault lies with Miss Albert, who probably didn't realize that things in print sometimes are much worse than the same things said.

Beatrice Macdonald concludes her life story of Hepburn, "The Career of an Ugly Duckling"; Walter Ramsey writes one of the best all-round, graphically told yarns yet, "The Life and Loves of Lyle Talbot"; Carter Bruce is a little vague, but sincere, in "So You Won't Talk, Connie"; Helen Hayes tells Nanette Kutner "How I'm Teaching My Daughter to Face Life," which is an extraordinary story after Miss Hayes' frequent declarations that she won't talk about her daughter.

Martha Kerr asks "Please, Mr. De Mille, What Is Glamour?" and gets an interesting answer; Walter Ramsey has "What's Happened, Gable?" and the star answers frankly and to the point; Robert Fender has a good idea in "Guardian Angels of Hollywood"; Dena Reed goes to a lot of trouble in "He Went Up to See Her One Time" to add another chapter to the virtues of Mae West; Jim Kahn writes of Mrs. March in "Who Is Freddie's Boss?" and Jack Jamison recounts some amusing practical jokes in "Tickling Hollywood's Ribs."

Lynn Farnol has nothing new in "Anna Sten—'Passionate Peasant,'" except the title, and Gladys Hall has a new angle on Lewis Stone in a swell story, "The Husband Who Never Goes Home."

NEW MOVIE

Frank Buck still has to fail an interviewer. He gives another vivid tale of adventure in far places to Edwin C. Hill in the April New Movie.

There is good writing and good reporting in Barbara Barondess' "I Act with Garbo." There should be. She was a New York newspaper woman after she left the stage and before she appeared on the screen in "Queen Christina." Dorothy Manners asks "Will Garbo Marry Mamoulian?" without finding the answer.

Wallace Beery tells "My Life Until Now" to Eric L. Ergenbright. It is an unusually well done autobiography, and makes fascinating reading.

Della Mason discusses Marlene Dietrich's sudden addiction to skirts and ruffles in "The New Marlene." Irene Thirer covers a lot of territory in her interview with Dolores Del Rio, questioning her on such subjects as Garbo, Hepburn, her love life, past and present, and her plans for children. David Ewen tells how generous Paul Muni is to old friends among the unemployed in "I Know Muni." Dixie Dunbar does a vivid, gossipy article on her career, "Confessions of a Scandals Beauty." Beth Burton tells how Otto Kruger faced death and yearned for it—which should just about mop up that story cycle which has been hung on practically every player in the movies.

Barbara Barry does an amusing tale, all in Lupe's fantastic accent, about the Mexican hot spot's feelings for Jimmy Durante. It's called "Rougher Than Tarzan." Madge Evans discusses her reactions to her first film test with Ann Boyd. Grace Kingsley goes to lots of parties, and then, of course, there is Herb Howe's always excellent column.

SILVER SCREEN

COVER DISPLAY....Constance Bennett
(Twentieth Century)

Silver Screen sparkles with a generous number of unusually good stories this month. Elizabeth Wilson leads off with a sprightly and humorous tale, "That Funny Divorce," about Carole Lombard and Bill Powell.

Harry Lang's "Anything for a Laugh" is a neat, good-natured blast at the nutty things stars do for publicity. Adela Rogers St. Johns has a vivid description of what happens in Hollywood to football stars. It's advice for Cliff Montgomery, and is called "What Happens Then?"

"Fighting for Their Rights," by Ruth Biery, and "The Last of the Temperaments," by Bert Allen, are interesting discussions of how they behave in the movies.

For the rest S. R. Mook worried and worried until Constance Bennett assured him that she is not leaving the screen; Jack Jamison tells some interesting anecdotes about Eddie Cantor in "It's That Man Again!" Helen Louise Walker's tale on Jean Harlow is somewhat sensationally called "I'm That Way"; Patricia Keats does an amusing story on Una Merkel; Lenore Samuels talks intelligently about Paul Muni in "That's My Business"; Ben Maddox talks to Gene Raymond, mainly about the star's love life, in "All Figured Out."

A high percentage of sensible stories.

SCREEN BOOK

COVER DISPLAY.....Heather Angel
(Fox)

There's a good story in the April Screen Book that should do quite a bit for pictures. It is Dr. Louis E. Bisch's "Movies Are Good Medicine," in which he tells how he prescribes for his patients.

Another swell, fast yarn is Red Rutledge's interview with Max Baer, "Me and Mae West!" J. Brien Chapman has two stories, "Hollywood's Million Dollar Scraps of Paper," reviewing some contracts, and "Bing Says a Mouthful."

Mono. Meet Starts At Atlantic City

Atlantic City.—More than fifty executives of Monogram Pictures, headed by President W. Ray Johnston and Vice-President Trem Carr, arrived here yesterday for the company's convention, which opens today. Mayor Harry Bacharach will start the proceedings with an address of welcome, being introduced by President Johnston.

Among those in attendance are Arthur Bromberg of Atlanta, Howard Stubbins of Los Angeles, Harry H. Thomas of First Division, Claude Ezell and Underwood of Dallas, Flax Brothers of Washington, R. F. Withers of Kansas City, J. S. Jossey and Lefton of Cleveland, Nat Steinberg of St. Louis, Herman Rifkin of Boston, Sam Berkowitz of Buffalo, and also exchange managers from Seattle, San Francisco, Chicago, Albany and other cities.

Home office and studio delegates include Lou Ostrow, Eddie Golden, Ed Finney, J. Harrington, J. P. Friedhof and Norton Ritchey.

Geo. Nicholls to Direct 'A Hat, a Coat, a Glove'

As a result of John Barrymore's going to bat for him after expressing satisfaction with the director's work in handling a color test, George Nicholls breaks away from Wanda Tuchock on his next assignment and will direct "A Hat, a Coat, a Glove" alone.

Picture stars Barrymore and has Kenneth Macgowan producing it for Radio. Francis Faragoh is writing the screen play.

Sauber Story Sold

Warners yesterday closed a deal for the purchase of "Window Panes," an original by Harry Sauber, the writer joining the staff to write the screen play. Max Shagrin set the deal.

Gene Solow to 'U'

Gene Solow, having completed his Warner contract last week, swings over to Universal Monday on a term ticket. Writer has not been given an assignment as yet.

Eric L. Ergenbright writes two stories, also, "Hollywood's Alimony Racket Exposed," and "Secrets That Torture the Stars." Don Harris is among the million writers who are wondering "Is Garbo Married?" Everetta Love interviewed Mrs. Roosevelt in "What About Censorship?" Alice Faye says "I Am Not Jane Doe" in an interview with Lew Garvey; Grace Mack has "Putting Hepburn on the Spot"; Al Sherman tells about "When Mae West Went to Jail!"; Dorothy Spensley writes a good yarn about Rosemary Ames in "Don't Write Anything About My Baby"; B. F. Wilson asks "Is Mary Still in Love?" and Lew Ayres talks about love in "You Can't Marry Me Off," by Frank Walsh.

Wellford Dickson reviews the Claire Windsor trial in "Too Beautiful"; Marcella Burke has "Love Is the Bunk," (about Adolphe Menjou), and Jewel Smith writes about the sisters Wing, Toby and Pat, in "Two Angel Wings for Hollywood."

Mae West Causes Censors in Austria

Vienna.—Due principally to the flood of public protest against the Mae West picture, "She Done Him Wrong," censorship is slated to be introduced in Austria, it is reliably reported. Official announcement has not yet been made.

'Nana' Breaks Records In Second Run Houses

The $7,000 advertising campaign which Sam Goldwyn gave to the United Artists opening of "Nana" downtown is begining to return a profit, with the picture breaking house records on its second runs in Fox West Coast houses. Picture, playing a double bill with MGM's "Mystery of Mr. X" at the Westwood Village smashed all existing records for Sunday and Monday business and the bill has been held for an additional day, the first time in the history of the theatre.

Other second run houses report sensational business on the Sam Goldwyn picture.

Edward Cahn to Direct Picture in London

Edward Cahn leaves New York on the Berengaria next week to direct a picture for A. & B. Pictures, releasing through British-Gaumont. Picture is "Black Shirt" and goes into work April 25. The Edington and Vincent office swung the deal from here.

Taylor Holmes in 'Herbert'

Madelyn Holmes, daughter of Taylor Holmes, received a long distance phone from her father yesterday that caused her to board the Chief last night on the way to New York. Taylor goes into the Nugent part in "Big Hearted Herbert" on the Broadway stage Monday and his daughter also is in the play.

Mildred Smith East

Midred K. Smith, MGM writer, left last night for New York to confer with S. N. Behrman on the screen play of "Lola Montez" before the playwright sails for England Saturday. Behrman will work on the script while abroad. Miss Smith returns in two weeks.

Agency Strong on Kids

Joy and Polimer, agents, have established a special department for the handling of children. Harry Willson is in charge. This week he placed 5-year-old Barbara Pepper in King Vidor's "Our Daily Bread."

Geo. Stevens for 'Harem'

George Stevens breaks out of the short subjects class with his next directorial assignment. He was set yesterday by Lou Brock at Radio to direct "Great American Harem."

Madge Evans to Lasky

Madge Evans was borrowed yesterday from MGM by Jesse Lasky for a role in "Grand Canary," which will get under way next week.

Colleen with Levee

Colleen Moore signed a managerial ticket with M. C. Levee yesterday.

Genevieve Tobin Gets Lead in Schulberg Pic

Paramount yesterday signed Genevieve Tobin for the Carole Lombard spot opposite Cary Grant in B. P. Schulberg's "Kiss and Make Up," which went into production yesterday. Lombard was needed for another assignment. In the cast are Lucien Littlefield, Toby Wing, Mona Maris, Milton Wallace, Rafael Storm, Doris Lloyd, Rita Gould and the 13 Wampas Baby Stars. Harlan Thompson and Jean Negulesco direct.

Houston Sells Story

Norman Houston yesterday sold an untitled original story to Mascot Pictures and joins the writing staff to write the screen play. Harry Spingler, of the Small-Landau office, negotiated.

Vigilante Archie

A scenario writer at Warners ordered a bottle of imported German beer the other day and then wondered why he got a bottle without a label. Explanations later: The waitress had seen Archie Mayo arrive at the table and she wanted to avoid another anti-Hitler argument, so she had removed the label.

Cameramen's Local Starts Retrenching

The Cameramen's Union yesterday inaugurated its previously announced economic retrenchment policy and, when the doors opened yesterday morning, they opened on only three offices instead of the ten which the local has occupied for years.

No settlement having been reached between Howard Hurd, business representative, and the special committee that is negotiating with him for a settlement of his contract, he appeared at his office for a time. However, Herbert Aller, who has been Hurd's assistant for some time, acted as buffer and contact man with those who came to conduct routine business.

Vinson Here Today

Helen Vinson arrives by plane from New York this morning. Player reports to Radio for a featured role in "Virgie Winters" on a contract set by the Schulberg, Feldman and Gurney office.

chase of the stock of Joe Brandt, bought with my money and now reposing in my vault at the bank, I have control of the company and intend holding that control; for whatever may be the value of Columbia now, we, who are interested in the company, believe it will be tenfold a few years from now.

"Joe Brandt has not one dime coming to him from the sale of his stock. He has been paid in full and the story printed that he was getting $100,000, or any such sum, each year for a term of years is more bunk. He is paid in full."

Asked for the reason why such a rumor seemed to have reached the "certain" stage during the past two weeks, Cohn acknowledged it was a mystery to him.

"I tell you there has not even been a suggestion of a deal," he said. "Three years ago there was plenty of talk of sale and the transfer of control, but since the Brandt deal there has been no such talk nor any suggestions made within my hearing of any possible sale, and for a very good reason, the company is NOT for sale."

Monogram Doubled Its 1933 Earnings in Year Just Ended

Atlantic City.—Monogram's convention opened here yesterday with enthusiasm as the keynote, and the enthusiasm mounted when President W. Ray Johnston reported a net profit of the company from March 1, 1933, to February 28, 1934, of more than double the previous year's earnings.

President Johnston also stated that current billings of the corporation exceeded the previous twelve months by $577,021, and the combined film releases of 37 affiliated exchanges during the fiscal year of 1933 were in excess of $4,000,000.

Mr. Johnston was re-elected president. The other election results

Mother of Hal and Minna Wallis Dies

Mrs. Eva Wallis, mother of Hal Wallis, production chief at Warner Brithers-First National studios, died yesterday noon at the Cedars of Lebanon Hospital.

Mrs. Wallis had been ill for some time. Three weeks ago she was removed to the hospital, but her condition grew steadily worse. She was 63 years old and is survived by one son, Hal; and two daughters, Minna, of the agency firm of Collier & Wallis, and Juel.

Funeral services will be held this afternoon with burial at Forest Lawn. The services will be strictly private.

Majestic Owners Meet

New York.—Majestic Pictures is calling a meeting of all franchise holders in New York April 9 to set production policy and budgets before Harry Glucksman leaves for the Coast to make arrangements for completion of the year's program.

John F. Dillon Dies

John Francis Dillon, well-known director, died last night of heart failure. Dillon had most recently been with Fox, and for many years was an ace director with First National during that organization's big years.

Para. Sales Chiefs Meet in Chicago

Chicago.—Preceding the convention of the entire Paramount sales organization, starting in Los Angeles on June 18, the district managers will meet here at the Edgewater Beach Hotel on April 21 and 22 to discuss sales policies for the coming season.

George J. Schaefer, Neil Agnew, J. J. Unger, Stanley Waite and J. B. G. Frawley will attend from the home office and also go to the Los Angeles gathering.

New Agency Rules Put Into Effect Yesterday

Official approval by State Labor Commissioner Joseph G. Creem, wired yesterday to Deputies Lowy and Barker, placed the new rules and regulations controlling agents into effect.

New licenses, due at this time, will be issued under the ordinances, which establish a code of ethics for the agency field.

Lombard-Marshall Set For Para's 'Sophie Lang'

Carole Lombard and Herbert Marshall have been set in the top spots of "The Notorious Sophie Lang," which William Cameron Menzies directs when it goes into work at Paramount the last of the month. Anthony Veiller is collaborating on the script with Frederick I. Anderson, author of the original story.

New York Indie Exhibitors Ask Code Revision And New Line-up On Authority Board

Washington.—Harry Brandt, president of the Independent Theatre Owners Association of New York, today made a flat demand before the NRA Board of Review for the ouster of Deputy Administrator Sol A. Rosenblatt, a shake-up in the membership of the industry's Code Authority, and a complete revision of the code as now written.

Declaring that the 375 theatres he represented constitute an investment of over $150,000,000, Brandt declared that the code and the machinery as now set up could not be more in favor of the "Big Eight" if the

The unit, headed by George Hill, is now shooting full blast, with the director leaving there in about two weeks. The Hill unit will stay on the ground for other pickup shots that may become necessary after Hill shows his film to Irving Thalberg here.

Tough Censor Bill Up in Delaware

Wilmington—A censor bill is to be introduced here that will give the broadest powers to a board of three to ban any picture "disrespectful of race, creed, or class of persons or professions, and all films which have any controversial point of view."

The American Civil Liberties Union is waging a campaign against the bill.

'Wild Cargo' Hits

New York—With "Wild Cargo" likely to hit close to $90,000—a lifesaver for the Music Hall which has been suffering $65,000 averages—the picture will be held over for a second week. Remarkable part is the way the picture built toward the end of the week.

PAN BERMAN HAS RADIO STUDIO GOING FULL BLAST

With six pictures in work yesterday, and four more scheduled to get under way within two weeks, Pan Berman, in charge of Radio production, expects to have thirty-eight of the forty pictures on this year's list clear of the decks before June 1.

In addition, preparatory work on other stories is sufficiently advanced to make it certain that ten pictures of the next season's program will be on the way to the exchanges by September 1.

The pictures now in work include Wheeler and Woolsey in "Cock-Eyed Cavaliers," directed by Mark Sandrich; "Sour Grapes," with Clive Brook and Diana Wynyard, Worthington Minor directing; "Family Man," in which John Robertson is directing Richard Dix; "Virgie Winters," with Ann Harding and John Boles, under Al Santell's direction; "Down to Their Last Yacht," Paul Sloane directing; and "Murder on the Blackboard," in which George Archainbaud is directing the Edna May Oliver-James Gleason team.

The four scheduled to go into the works within the next two weeks are: "Green Mansions," under Ernest B. Schoedsack's direction; "American Harem," George Stevens directing; "Arabella," temporary title, William Seiter directing, and "A Hat, a Coat, a Glove," from the New York play, with John Barrymore starred, under George Nicholls' direction.

White and McCollom Head Columbia Shorts

Columbia has promoted Jules White, short director, and Hugh McCollom, formerly assistant to Sam Briskin, to heads of the short department, replacing Zion Myers, who leaves Saturday to join Radio. First for the new producers will be a Murray and Sidney short which starts April 10.

Cortez to Columbia For Milestone Pix

Warners have agreed to loan Ricardo Cortez for the lead in the Columbia picture, "The Captain Hates the Sea," written by Wallace Smith and to be directed by Lewis Milestone.

Lasky Signs Warner

Jesse Lasky yesterday signed H. B. Warner for a principal spot in "Grand Canary," which Irving Cummings directs with Warner Baxter and Madge Evans in the leads. Deal was set by Bernard, Mieklejohn and McCall.

Maurice Opens Agency

Jack Maurice, well known in picture circles, has announced the formation of Jack Maurice, Inc., and the opening of offices at 9000 Sunset Boulevard for the representation of picture talent.

Latimer Now Lorimer

Universal has changed Louise Latimer's name to Louise Lorimer. Player arrived here Saturday to start her term deal with the studio. She goes into "I Give My Love," the Wynne Gibson-Paul Lukas vehicle, as her first.

Foxing the NRA

To get around the $25 tap for extras who speak lines, some of the major studios hand the extras slips to sign before they are given the work and the slip states that their pay ($10.00 or $7.50) goes whether they speak lines or not.

'Crooked Circle' To Go Through Amity Offices

New York—Bill Sistrom's "Crooked Circle" picture, originally made for World Wide, and later transferred to Fox when Educational merged, is going to get another break at life.

The picture, which was on the way to a real gross when caught in the jam of mergers, has been secured from Fox by Amity Films, which will release it in its twenty-eight exchanges. The firm of Fittleson and Mayers succeeded in effecting the release of the film from Fox .

Producers Decide Today

do not come under the jurisdiction of Judge Lindsey, and early last week they so notified him through Pat Casey. When he sent notices for them to appear at the hearings which started Tuesday morning they neither sent representatives nor an explanation of their absence.

Judge Lindsey ignored their failure to appear and opened his hearings. He heard cases all day Tuesday, and resumed yesterday, hearing the evidence and testimony of the complainants.

Yesterday the Judge announced that he had received a letter from George Creel, reiterating Creel's former order for the Judge to go ahead with the hearings, and stating that Sol A. Rosenblatt was behind him in his instructions to the Judge.

While no official statement could be obtained from the producers as to their attitude on the matter, it was reported that they have been burning the wires to Washington in efforts to get a ruling that would settle the controversy. Today's meeting of legal counsel is expected to result in some definite action.

Meanwhile Judge Lindsey says he will resume his hearings today. With the exception of the case involving Mascot, which sent a representative to the hearings, all of the complaints now before the Judge will be finished today. Decisions are expected to be handed down early next week.

document had been written "by Will Hays himself."

He brought into the record the statements regarding Rosenblatt's previous legal connection with Nathan Burkan, the latter, according to Brandt, having been a director of two of the "Big Eight," and even having represented them in hearings before Rosenblatt.

Brandt made a strong point of the claim that the indie exhibitors in the New York zone will have no representation on the Grievance and Clearing Boards being set up, and that they were refused permission to have a representative present at the original meetings which framed the code.

"Four thousand independent theatres in the country are closed now," he declared, "and many more will be forced to close if present code provisions and machinery continue in force."

Abram Myers, counsel for Allied Exhibitors and a former Federal Trade Commissioner, summed up for the indie exhibitors in cool, legal fashion. Contrary to Brandt's demand for an entire revision of the code, Myers pointed out the features deemed objectionable and requested that the Board recommend to the President an executive order that would clarify these points.

He declared that the inclusion of Columbia and Universal on various film boards as "independent," in reality resulted in those bodies being "packed juries." Block booking, the fixing of minimum admission prices, unreasonable protection to circuits, and the indie's right to buy, were the points on which he asked the Board's recommendations.

Harold Bareford's brief on behalf of the producers created comment right at the start when it was found it was on plain paper and in a plain envelope. The Warner attorney defended the producers' right to sell to best advantage, and declared that if it were not for the large revenue from circuits, producers would not be warranted in their big production investments. He dodged any direct menton of block booking, as well as the composition of the Code Authority, or the Grievance and Clearance Boards.

PRODUCER REPS. ON CODE BOARD KEEP EXTRAS QUIET

Fear Blacklisting If They Complain

Washington. — Another headache was handed the film code officials this week when a protest was received in Sol A. Rosenblatt's office from a Hollywood extra player, who declares that the make-up of the Code Committee for Extras, set up in Hollywood to settle extras' troubles, is a violation of the code itself.

The player declared that he and hundreds of other motion picture extras are afraid to file complaints of code violations with the committee because of the fact that Pat Casey, producers' labor representative, as well as casting directors, are on the committee.

"With casting directors from motion picture studios sitting in on the committee and watching the complaints," he said in his letter, "you can figure out very easily how they, as representatives of the employers, can dash to the telephone and call up the casting directors of all the other studios, tell them the names of the complainants and thus put them on the spot."

The player declared in no uncertain terms that he and hundreds of his fellows feel that this is just what will be done, with the result that, if they squawk, they will find themselves nailed to the cross on the studio blacklists.

He pointed out in his protest that the code stipulates that the names of all complainants shall be kept secret from the employers. Thus, he declares, the make-up of the committee, with the producers' labor man and casting directors on it, violates that provision of the code and defeats the end aimed at because fear of this group keeps extras from filing complaints.

Eddie Golden reported on sales and Advertising Chief Finney gave a report on his department.

It was announced that fifteen Monogram managers and district managers are on various code boards.

Schenck's Opinion

New York—Joe Schenck, of United Artists, believes bizarre characters are failing to hold interest of the public, and the trend now is towards unsophisticated stories, with sympathetic characters.

Schenck Outlines U.A. List for '34-'35

New York — Joe Schenck, talking with newspaper men today gave the following as the prospective United Artists line-up for next year:

Twelve from Darryl Zanuck's Twentieth Century Company, two from Reliance, four from Samuel Goldwyn, and three or four split between Alexander Korda's London Films and British and Dominion.

Equity Rule on Clive Stops 'Journey's End'

E. E. Clive, who was planning to open "Journey's End" next week at the Hollywood Playhouse, cancelled the production yesterday when he was notified by Equity that Colin Clive, British actor, would not be permitted to play the starring role.

Equity ruled that Clive had played in two stage plays within six months in the United States, against the Equity stipulation that an alien actor shall not appear in more than one in that time. He was given exemption in New York to play in the Hepburn play, "The Lake."

New Term for Sandrich

Radio yesterday took up the tenth option on Mark Sandrich, though the contract does not come up for renewal for another month. Sandrich is now directing the Wheeler and Woolsey vehicle, "Cock-Eyed Cavaliers."

Powell-Keeler Team

Warners is talking of teaming Dick Powell and Ruby Keeler in the top brackets in "Window Panes," the Harry Sauber story purchased yesterday. Sam Bischoff has taken over the supervision.

All Thalberg Units Hitting on High

With "Rip Tide" a hit and back of him, Irving Thalberg has all his other production units hitting on high, with the result that there will be at least 12 Thalberg pictures made and released by January 1.

Three of the Thalberg pictures are in production now — "Barretts of Wimpole Street," "Merry Widow" and "Good Earth"; two others will be on the stages in about two weeks —"Green Hat" and "China Seas"; and two others will be in work by the first of June—"Biography" and "Mutiny on the Bounty."

No Westerns on Coming Schedule of Universal

Universal drops westerns in its plans for the new schedule and is the last of the major studios to eliminate the cowboy pictures.

Studio closed a deal with Buck Jones to star in a serial and six adventure melodramas, replacing the westerns with this group. Serial will be in fifteen chapters. Henry MacRae produces and Louis Friedlander directs

ENTERTAINMENT GALORE FOR MPTOA DELEGATES

Hollywood's studios are planning to dish up a million dollars worth of entertainment next week for the delegates to the MPTOA convention, which gets under way Tuesday Practically every important star in the industry will play a part in making the visitors feel at home.

Tuesday afternoon Warner Bros.-First National will be hosts at a luncheon at the studios in Burbank One of the sound stages is being converted into a dining room, and every star on the lot is preparing a special act.

Tuesday evening Universal will entertain the delegates at an informal dance at the Universal City Club. All the Universal stars will be present.

Wednesday afternoon Radio will give a luncheon at the studio and the delegates will be taken through the plant, see pictures in the making, and will be provided with special entertainment by the Radio stars.

Wednesday evening Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer has tentative plans to entertain them at a dinner at the studio, with star acts featured.

Thursday afternoon Paramount will be host and will serve a luncheon on one of the C. B. DeMille sets. A stage is being constructed on which the Paramount stars will strut their stuff. Mae West, Bing Crosby and others are on the program.

Yesterday in NEW YORK with HELEN GWYNNE

Long ago the English found out what to do with old, abandoned stone quarries by using them as the scenes for murders in murder-mystery stories. And lately it has been discovered what to do with old, abandoned razor blades. . . . There's a fellow who makes a habit of eating them. But it remained for Harry Bannister to find a good use for old, abandoned churches. He's turned the one on East Fifty-fifth street into the American Music Hall and there he presents nightly "The Drunkard," with free beer, pretzels, coffee and sandwiches and community singing all thrown in for the price of a ticket. And it's become the thing to do to go to see "The Drunkard," particularly on Sunday nights. . . . The other night saw Bob Benchley singing away in great form and solemn John Mason Brown paying his third or fourth visit, and Montagu Love, who hasn't been seen around much since he hid behind a beard for the role of a Jewish patriarch, and Jeanne Cohen and a man by the name of Moffet, who had written and proceeded to sing "That Old Sweetheart of Mine"—at least it sounded like that through the beer fumes.

There's a very attractive man named Jordan, who plays Bill in the show, who's causing some comment, and our second favorite name of the year plays the heroine's role—Dortha Duckworth —and the name alone is worth something to a revival. . . . A very amusing piece of showmanship took place up at the Capitol the week before Durante, Polly Moran and Lou Holtz took over the place. They had a trailer announcing the impending laugh cataclysm, and the picture they used of Durante was the Steig caricature that showed him munching a bunch of grapes. Which was okay for its purpose, but the feature picture that week happened to be "Queen Christina," and when Garbo's grape-eating sequence flashed on the screen, the audience went into hysterics.

Arthur Schwartz has completed the score for the "Three Cornered Hat" and is now looking for a story to go with it. . . . Blanche Sweet and Raymond Hackett are about to play Newark in "The Party's Over. . . . There's a legit producer around town whose bluff is about to be called any minute now. . . . He's got plenty of big schemes and used to make good on them, but the collectors are about to catch up with him. . . . The popular-priced opera in this town is going in for movie exploitation. . . . What we thought was a circus parade, with elephants, chariots, camels, ponies, etc., turned out to be an ad for "Aida." . . . Which reminds us that the publicity man for that ciggie company that sponsors opera broadcasts compiled a brilliant set of statistics on the opera, including information on what each libretto weighs. Probably to give the customers a rough idea of relativity by comparison with the weight of opera singers.

PATHE SET FOR ACTION

TRADEVIEWS by ROBERT WELSH

•LET'S all stop and take a breath, boys and girls of Hollywood.

The buying power of this industry, the exhibitor, appears on our threshold next week.

Of course, we've got to give him a good time. And we will. If we have to take our guide from the script of "Convention City."

But behind this convention there are more serious questions.

Let's say there are two, three, or five hundred exhibitors present from points east of San Berdoo.

Then, let us put it right down in the book that those exhibitors have been fed on an Eastern editorial propaganda which paints producers as fellows who live at Palm Springs; writers as chaps who spend their days waiting for the ticket back to New York, and directors as stubborn animals who won't do anything the way it ought to be done.

That's the picture most of these boys have.

And it is the picture most of these visitors will still retain while you are entertaining them. Because the more lavish the entertainment, the more certain they are that producers don't know what money means.

So what to do?

Let's all stop and take a breath.

Most of the good writers and directors in this town come from east of the Hudson River—some as far east as the Danube—most of the good producers grew up under the same home conditions that the exhibitor visitors experienced

We will be meeting these exhibitors in hotel lobby corners, and behind sets. They are regular fellows; we try to be. So, mixed with all the good fellowship, let's hope that we can incidentally give them something of the real production picture.

They buy the pictures—and in turn sell them to the public. But even though they are the buyers, they are limited pretty well to a choice of what this town makes.

So let's hope they go back home with an appreciation of the serious side of this picture-making. A game where you're wrong if you're right, and right—only by accident.

Let's tell 'em, boys!

John Cohen, N.Y. Sun Critic, Quits Post

New York.—John S. Cohen has resigned as motion picture critic of the New York Sun, with no successor named. Eileen Creelman, editor of the paper's picture department, has turned down the critic's post, but remains as editor. Cohen has for more than ten years been considered the "highbrow" critic of the New York dailies.

Operator Row First Before NRA Judges

Washington.—A case now coming up to the National Labor Board is likely to set a precedent in the dealing with union labor by picture theatres and even studios. It is the first case actually to reach this body since the adoption of the code.

The matter concerns an Elkhart, Indiana, theatre, and the allegation

President Webb Reporting To Stockholders, Asks New Set-up To Allow Pic Financing

New York.—All the conjecture about the position of Pathe Exchange, Inc. in the production picture next year neared its climax yesterday when Stuart Webb, president of Pathe, made his annual report and recommendations to the stockholders. Webb started off with the flat statement that the present capitalization of the company involved such complications that they limited its ability to finance an expansion plan or to take advantage of the opportunities opening up to the company in the cooperative financing of producers who would do their labora-

Gable and Harlow For 'China Seas'

Irving Thalberg will co-star Clark Gable and Jean Harlow in "China Seas," which gets into work at MGM as soon as the players have finished their roles in "Manhattan Melodrama" and "100 Percent Pure," respectively.

Tay Garnett, who will direct, is collaborating with Jules Furthman on the screen play and the rewrite of the lead to fit Harlow.

Doug Fairbanks Starts

London. — Douglas Fairbanks Sr. started rehearsals yesterday for "The Private Life of Don Juan," the picture he is making for London Films, with Alexander Korda directing. Production starts Monday.

Arliss to New York

George Arliss left last night for New York, where he will do some radio broadcasting before hopping off for London. He is not due back here until the end of October.

Columbia Renews Briskin Contract

Three weeks before it was due, Columbia informed Irving Briskin the company was exercising his option. He is the only associate producer on the lot with a ticket.

Beside handling the action unit, he has taken on the production of a series of eight short subjects, the Minute Mystery one-reelers.

Barthelmess Winds Up Warner Contract

With the completion of "Old Doll's House" yesterday, Richard Barthelmess has washed up his 13 years as a Warner player. For nine years Barthelmess was a Warner star and for four more he released through the concern.

Alan Crosland, the director, brought in "Old Doll's House" two days under schedule.

Cowan Plans to Produce

Lester Cowan will come back into the picture swim on a production venture of his own. He is lining up plans to swing a major release on a group of pictures he will produce, he said yesterday.

Doc Riesenfeld Ill

Dr. Hugo Riesenfeld, free lance musical director, underwent a tonsilectomy at the Hollywood Hospital yesterday. His condition was very good at a late hour last night, according to his physician, Dr. Benjamin Katz.

Mayos Hop East

Archie Mayo and his wife leave by train tonight for a short vacation in New York. Warner director brought in "The Dark Tower" Wednesday.

Bill McGuire Better

William Anthony McGuire returned to Universal yesterday after being sick for about a week.

New York REVIEWS

"JIMMY THE GENT"

Warner Brothers prod.; director, Michael Curtiz; writers, Laird Doyle, Ray Nazarro, Bertram Millhauser.

Strand Theatre

Times: It is a brisk, slangy piece of work in which Mr. Cagney is as much of a pepper-pot as ever. He tackles the barbed argot of his lines with speed and force. Bette Davis is attractive and capable, and Alice White is laughable as an empty-headed blonde.

World-Telegram: The electric and always entertaining James Cagney is again available in a gusty and explosive, though only tolerably entertaining extravaganza at the Strand, called "Jimmy the Gent." I suppose that so long as Mr. Cagney is his own tornado self, screen authors and adapters feel they may forget all about the rules of story-telling.

Sun: "Jimmy the Gent," in addition to its lively, wisecracking melodrama, has plenty of story padding. Some is rather funny. It is, as far as the star's performance is concerned, still far from his best.

American: Fast and flip, rough and rowdy, peppered with a running fire of slang-spiced dialogue, the new Jimmy Cagney picture swaps laughs for every dime deposited at the Strand box-office.

Journal: It is not one of Cagney's best story vehicles, but Cagney makes it amusing by sheer force of personality and an expert comedy performance. Jenkins is grand as his slow-thinking assistant, Miss Davis displays her latest coiffure, and Alice White plays one of her customary gold-digging roles.

Post: The galvanic Mr. Jimmy Cagney, in one of the liveliest roles he has had since "The Public Enemy," comes forward with some valiant rescue work in his latest picture, "Jimmy the Gent." It is largely Cagney's performance that gives the picture its enterfainment value, for, though the story is equipped with a perfectly valid idea, the author has not always succeeded in making it clear. The trouble seems to be in the failure of the continuity to explain the relationship of the various characters and the precise purpose which lies behind their exigent behavior.

Herald-Tribune: The reprehensible Mr. Cagney, who is sometimes alleged to be one of the cinema's subversive moral influences, is in top form at the Strand Theatre this week in a rough and rowdy screen farce of dubious ethical value. As a carefully plotted narrative, "Jimmy the Gent" is perhaps lacking in the necessary deftness. On the other hand, it has the great virtue of some of the most vigorous and racily entertaining dialogue since the days when the Messrs. Glasmon and Bright wrote screen speeches for Mr. Cagney.

ASC Enters the Agency Business

The American Society of Cinematographers actively entered the agency field this week when final operating permits were received for the organization's subsidiary corporation, the A.S.C. Agency.

The agency is designed solely for the management of cameramen, and is headed by John Arnold as president, and Allen M. Watt as executive manager.

According to a statement by Watt, the new agency will not charge the ten per cent that is customary among motion picture agencies, but will cut that price scale considerably, although no figure was announced. In addition to handling the professional business of the clients, the ASC agency also provides a service for the handling of the personal business affairs. The agency is available to all ASC members, but, according to the announcement, no member is required to contract with it.

John Mitchell East

Johnny Mitchell, Western editor of New Movie magazine, leaves by plane tonight for New York. He received a call to attend a conference brought about by the death of Hugh Weir, editorial director of the Tower magazines, and expects to be gone a week.

'Earth Turns' Set in N. Y.

New York.—Warners' picture, "As the Earth Turns," which has been delayed on its New York break, has been finally set into the Strand to open next Wednesday night.

Gloria Swanson Ill

New York.—Gloria Swanson, who came East for a vacation and possibly some personal appearances, arrived with a heavy cold and was sent to bed by her physician.

RALPH BLOCK UNANIMOUSLY CHOSEN WRITER GUILD HEAD

Fireworks Sizzle But Don't Explode

Ralph Block was unanimously elected president of the Screen Writers' Guild last night after he had received the highest vote of any of the fifteen members elected to the Board of Directors. He received 107 votes out of a possible 109 in the Board election.

Wells Root was unanimously chosen vice-president; Tristram Tupper, leader of the free lance writers, secretary; Ernest Pascal unanimously re-elected treasurer.

In addition to the above-named officers, the following were elected members of the Executive Board: Oliver H. P. Garrett, Rupert Hughes, John Howard Lawson, Frances Marion, Wilfred MacDonald, Brian Marlow, Seton I. Miller, Dudley Nichols, Arthur Ripley, Raymond Schrock and Courtenay Terrett.

Oliver H. P. Garrett was nominated for vice-president, but asked that his name be withdrawn, explaining that he felt the meeting was one called to try to achieve a solidarity that had not existed for some time. He further said that he felt that he was a bone of contention and, in the interest of unity in the Guild, withdrew.

The meeting started out with verbal fireworks immediately after a telegraphic report of the year's activities had been read from the outgoing president, John Howard Lawson, in which he briefly outlined the accomplishments of the year.

The treasurer read his report, showing income for the year of $28,317.70 and expenses of $23,617.67. He stated that he recommended to the incoming board that a small tax be placed upon each member's income to provide a steady source of revenue. This started the argument, and James K. McGuinness loudly opposed the acceptance of the report, but was voted down.

Leading the "liberal" group, Allen Rivkin declared that they objected to the "radicals" because they feared the "radicals" would bring about a strike.

Mary McCarthy heatedly replied that the "radicals" were merely "pro-writer" and were not "anti-producer," but were belligerent enough to stand up for the writers' rights.

McGuinness then presented a resolution calling upon Dudley Nichols, O. H. P. Garrett, Courtenay Terrett and Sam Ornitz to withdraw their names from the ballot in the interest of the organization. But the excitement died down when this failed to pass, and the voting was started.

Petty personalities were hurled back and forth for a time while ballots were being counted, but Chairman Block stopped this and the meeting ended almost like a love feast. Block announced that the "liberal" group had asked to meet with the new Board and work out the differences between the two factions, and had declared they were whole-heartedly for a unified Guild.

Police Called To 'Treasure Island'

Oakland.—Victor Fleming, directing the unit of MGM's "Treasure Island" at work in East Bay, was forced to call on the police yesterday to restrain the curious crowds that flocked about the troupe. The kibitzers made so much noise it interfered with the sound recording.

Cochran, Coward Reported in Split

New York.—In connection with the sailing of Harold Franklin and Arch Selwyn for Europe today to confer on stage producing plans with Charles B. Cochran, it has become known that Cochran has split with Noel Coward, and the latter's play will not be in the new group's plans.

Coward has a London play of the current season, "Conversational Piece," which it had been thought would be one to be staged by the Franklin-Selwyn-Cochran group.

Veiller Supervising 'A Son Comes Home'

Bayard Veiller has taken over the production reins on "A Son Comes Home." This is the story on which the writing team of William Slavens McNutt and Grover Jones relinquished associate producer responsibilities.

Majestic Pictures to Handle 'Itchy-Scratchy'

Walter Futter yesterday closed a deal with Majestic Pictures to handle the distribution of his short, "Itchy-Scratchy," the subject which ran second for the Academy award in its class.

Lowe-Martin Switch

Sherman Lowe and Al Martin complete their script on an untitled original for Mascot Saturday and move over to the unit preparing the next serial, "Burn 'Em Up Barnes." Dave Howard, who has been working on the serial, takes over the original story for finishing touches before he starts directing it, April 30.

Mrs. Slosser Funeral

The funeral of Mrs. Johanna Slosser, mother of Ralph Slosser, assistant to King Vidor on "Our Daily Bread," will be held today at the Scovern Mortuary in Glendale, with interment at Forest Lawn. Mrs. Slosser died Wednesday of heart failure.

that operators were discharged for union activity. A previous case, concerning a St. Louis circuit's trouble with the operator unions was settled in Rosenblatt's office by a compromise, and without actually calling in the machinery of the code. In that case the operators won.

Mono. Declares 6% Dividend on Stock

Atlantic City, N. J.—Monogram closed its sessions here with a blaze of activity. First was the declaration of a six per cent dividend on the total capitalization, payable May 1; second, authorization to Trem Carr to boost production budgets next year; and third, the definite laying out of the program for next year.

There will be twenty Monogram pictures and eight Lone Star Westerns to be handled by the same exchanges. John Wayne will star in the Westerns. Four of the twenty regular pictures will be given additional money to rank as specials.

W. Ray Johnston was tendered a surprise banquet by the franchise holders at the Ambassador last night.

'Rothschild' Hits At Grauman's Chinese

Getting off to a $5,800 opening and breaking $2,900 for the second day, the Twentieth Century production of "Rothschild" took a jump to $3,100 yesterday, indicating better than $25,000 for the week.

In New York at the Astor the picture did $19,700 for the third week, comparing with $19,200 the opening week and $20,800 the second week. In each of the three weeks the capacity of the house was oversold, as all the seat checks add up to a little over $18,000.

Producer Counsel Discuss Judge Lindsey

The question of how the legal counsel of the producers will advise the major studios as regards the Judge Ben Lindsey hearings came up yesterday at a meeting of the studio attorneys.

"It was only mentioned casually towards the end of the meeting, after which we adjourned. There was no decision made and we meet again next week," Henry Herzbrun, of Paramount, declared last night.

Arthur Caesar at Radio

Arthur Caesar joins the Radio staff today to write the screen play for the Albert Hackett play, "Afterwards," under Cliff Reid's supervision. Writer has also signed a managerial ticket with the Edington and Vincent office, which set the deal.

Compton in 'Canary'

Juliette Compton's return trip to pictures after a year's absence starts with "Grand Canary," the Jesse L. Lasky-Fox picture, in which she gets a featured role. Ticket was set through the Small-Landau office.

Lou Golder East

Lou Golder left for New York by plane last night to close the deal for the distribution of Bryan Foy's latest picture, "Sterilization." He will be away about ten days.

Yesterday in NEW YORK with HELEN GWYNNE

Of course, every time you mention Hollywood in the East, you're bound to be deluged with hard luck stories and tales of ingratitude in Cinemaland, but the following story, which is absolutely true, really deserves publicity because publicity is its raison d'etre. Back in about 1925 or thereabouts, a young actor was trying to make his way in Hollywood without getting any of the well-known breaks. In fact, he was practically starving and only kept alive through the good graces of a struggling director and writer, both of whom had small jobs at a studio and managed to get the unknown actor into the commissary and feed him free of charge. They also managed to give him lodging. . . . Well, this actor finally landed a contract with the Shuberts to go East and appear in plays for them. At the end of his contract with the Shuberts, Hollywood "discovered" him and he was brought back to the land of sunshine and fabulous contracts as a "newcomer" fresh (oh, very) to Hollywood. And this "ham" was so impressed by the publicity given him on his arrival in Hollywood that he decided it would be best for him NOT to recognize anyone he had formerly known in Hollywood—not even those who had been near-sighted enough to keep him alive. . . . And the really funny part of it all is that he never did get a favorable notice from a New York critic while he was on the stage and, even though he's a star today, nobody can think of a good reason for it.

When Lionel Barrymore was in New York on his personal appearance tour he went to a party at Victor Emmanuel's house one night and Irving Caesar there outlined for him the main idea of a movie he had in mind for Barrymore. Barrymore was so impressed that he told him to write it down and send it to him. Caesar called in Aben Kandel and between them they turned out a full-fledged script that now has several companies making bids for it. Caesar, incidentally, has written a scenario called "Big Business Presents," along the lines of "Convention City," that Groucho Marx thinks would be swell for a play for the Marx Brothers. Caesar also wants it known that he is losing money in six different businesses.

A fellow who worked with a Broadway producer on his first screen production is not at all sorry over the fact that it isn't a hit. In fact, all during the filming of the picture he had one fight after another with the producer, who learned about picture-making in twenty-four hours. So when he saw the finished product and read the notices the following day, all he figured was that the fights he had had with the producer in filming the revue in the first place, entitled him to the Pulitzer prize for the year's best critical work.

Hervey Leaving Radio

Harry Hervey has completed his screen play on "Family Man" at Radio and turned in his closing notice.

Up-to-the-Minute Casting News

Cora Sue Collins by Columbia for "Black Moon.' Small-Landau negotiated.

Charles William by Bernard, Meiklejohn and McCall in Warners' "Dames." Berton Churchill in the same picture by Kingston-Harris.

Charles Wilson by Kingston-Harris in "Merry Andrew," Fox.

Matt McHugh for two pictures—"She Loves Me Not" at Paramount, and a Warren Doane short at Universal.

C. Aubrey Smith and Emile Chautard for "By Royal Command," at Fox. Tickets were landed by the Small-Landau office.

Herman Bing by Menifee I. Johnstone in "One Night of Love," Columbia.

Lona Andre for "Merry Widow," MGM. Negotiated by Bernard, Meiklejohn and McCall agency.

Dorothy Christie to "Kiss and Make Up," Paramount.

Ramsey Hill through Freddie Fralick in Radio's "Down to Their Last Yacht."

Johnny Arthur to cast of "Dames" at Warners.

Billy Gilbert borrowed by Radio from Hal Roach for "Cock-Eyed Cavaliers."

Col. Assigns Lauren to 'Orchids and Onions'

Having completed his work on "One Night of Love," S. K. Lauren was yesterday assigned by Columbia to write the script on "Orchids and Onions," a Dwight Taylor story recently purchased by the studio.

Lauren was the author of "Sisters Under the Skin," which was erroneously credited to Jo Swerling, who should have been given screen play credit.

Ludwig Will Direct Bart Play for 'U'

Universal yesterday assigned Edward Ludwig to direct "The Man Who Reclaimed His Head," the Jean Bart play which has been scripted by George O'Neill. Studio will bring Claude Rains back from the East for the lead when the picture goes into work in a month.

Cukor on Van Dyke Unit

George Cukor yesterday took over the W. S. Van Dyke unit on "Manhattan Melodrama" so the latter could get started on "The Thin Man." Jack Conway is handling another unit on the picture, which should wind up by the middle of next week.

Joe O'Neill at MGM

Joseph Jefferson O'Neill, veteran newspaper man, has been signed by MGM as technical advisor on "Manhattan Melodrama," which David Selznick is producing.

Detroit Writer Here

Grace Wilcox, of the Detroit Free Press, has checked into Hollywood on an assignment to write a group of player interviews for her newspaper.

Pathe Set For Action

tory and print work through them.

Webb's belief in the production and financing plans he has in mind for the company is evidenced by the plan he put before the stockholders. He proposed that:

In order to simplify the capital, structure and to adjust dividends so that all stockholders may benefit from the future growth of the company, a reorganization plan should be worked out this year;

Second, that all the stockholders should be given the privilege at the meeting on April 24 of passing on a special stock proposition devised for President Webb.

And this proposition is that Stuart Webb, in addition to his salary rights, be given the right to purchase 12,500 shares of common at $2 per share over a four year period, together with an option on 3000 shares of the class A preferred at $12 a share, to be purchased over a three year period.

The common is now selling at $3.25 and the preferred at $19.75 a share.

Insiders believe that the whole story can be summed up in the statement that the Pathe Exchange stock has suddenly become worth something, that the control of the common and the Class A preferred controls the company, but that nothing can be done with it until the holders of the eight per cent preferred issue and the bondholders are taken care of, and finally, that Pathe Exchange wants to go into the backing of picture production, but cannot until someone untangles its complicated financial structure.

Incidentally, at today's stockholders meeting it was shown that of the company's $6,000,000 bonded debt, only a little over two millions is still outstanding. And, in addition, Webb declared his belief that there was a srong possibility of recovery on the $1,696,550 of RKO bonds on which that company had defaulted.

MGM Scouts Off On Amazon Trip

George Seitz, the director; Harold Noice, the author, and Joe Cook, unit manager, leave next week on a 7,000-mile air trip to the head waters of the Amazon to make plans for MGM's exploration special, "Jungle Red Man." They will be away for more than two months, returning here to pick up equipment and to complete preparations before leaving to shoot the picture.

Present plans call for the subject to be made with an all-native cast in the actual locale of the story. After preparations are completed, expedition will shoot the picture on a nine-months schedule.

Towne and Baker Go On RKO-NBC Pic Review

Gene Towne and Graham Baker have moved over to Radio from the Fox lot, both on loan from Twentieth Century.

The writing team will do the screen play on the "RKO-NBC Review" that is to go into production there in June.

MGM GRABS POLI CHAIN

TRADE VIEWS by W. R. WILKERSON

•FOR the first time in the history of the business, the London press is praising Hollywood; not for any production accomplishment, but because the creators here saw fit to give recognition to "Cavalcade," "Henry VIII" and Charles Laughton in the balloting conducted by the Academy and this publication. And these awards have put a stop to all the propaganda that has been going on for years in England, directed against our American industry and in an effort to sell the British product.

There should never be any serious argument between Great Britain and America with regard to their motion picture efforts. Both have too much to lose by such arguments. These countries should work hand in hand, help each other, contribute to each other's progress.

The English press, and some British producers, have always yelled that America would not open its doors to British product. All bunk, but there were a lot of Englishmen who believed it until our release here of "Henry VIII." Now, that same press and those identical producers are singing our praises, and they should, for the simple reason that there was never any basis for their complaints; the theatres of this country have ALWAYS been wide open for screen entertainment, regardless of the country of origin.

But now that this terrific prejudice has been broken—and it would be difficult for the press or others to sell Englishmen the idea that we are unwilling to recognize real accomplishment—why wouldn't it be a smart move for some of our major studios to send a complete production unit to England for the making of a picture; with an all English cast if necessary? Such action would further cement this present good feeling in addition to being a good business move on the part of our producers.

May we suggest that Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer start the ball rolling with the production of "David Copperfield" on English soil? How much more do you think the picture (if good) would gross in the theatres of Great Britain? How much more interest do you think it would have over here? Maybe one or more of the British producers would come over here to do a picture with an American cast.

Harry Cohn Stands Pat

New York wires yesterday renewed discussion of the possible Columbia sale, and mentioned meetings held in that city with the Cohn brothers, Nathan Burkan and N. I. Steers, of DuPont. In response to a wire from the Hollywood Reporter, Harry Cohn minced no words. He said: "Gave you my word the story is ridiculous. That still goes."

42d Street Going 100% Honky-Tonk

New York.—The famous spot of the United States — Forty-second Street, in New York—is going completely honky-tonk. A deal was closed yesterday by Max Wilner to put the Apollo Theatre in burlesque, while the Brandts have taken over the Times Square adjoining for a continuous picture program.

This makes three burlesque houses on the same street and four picture houses—all of which have in the past been dignified representatives of the legit.

Mary Pickford Breaks All Records in Detroit

Detroit.—Mary Pickford opened here at the Michigan yesterday, playing to the largest number of people in the history of the theatre for any one day.

House was forced to open its doors one and a half hours earlier than usual and indications point to the smashing of all attendance records for the week run.

Clarence Browns East

Clarence Brown and Alice Joyce left by plane yesterday for New York to see Frank Joyce, who is ill there. Brown finished his work on "Sadie McKee" at MGM Wednesday.

Leo The Lion Entrenches Self In New England Territory; Nick Schenck Heads Set-up

New York.—The MGM lion is not sitting on its haunches, but is still ready to grab up good morsels. As witness the fact that control of the important Poli New England chain yesterday passed to Loew's Inc. The new set of officers elected for the circuit includes: Nicholas Schenck, president; A. C. Blumenthal and David Bernstein, vice-presidents; S. Z. Poli, treasurer; Leopold Friedman, secretary, and Louis M. Segal, assistant treasurer.

Except for Poli, the founder, and Lewis Segal, long identified with the circuit, this is entirely an MGM-Loew set-up, if you want to throw the lone

British Company Plans to Sue RCA

New York.—Prospects of one of the biggest patent suits since the early picture days looms out of the claim made today in New York by Britishers that a court action would be started against RCA on its "High Fidelity Sound" by British Acoustics, Ltd.

The latter company, which manufactures studio recording equipment, is controlled by British Gaumont. It claims prior rights to the developments that in this country have become trademarked by RCA as "High Fidelity Sound."

Mae West in 'Angel' Wows Great Britain

London.—The Paramount picture, "I'm No Angel," is doing a terrific business throughout the key cities of Great Britain, even greater than was done at its first run in London. The English like Mae West.

Joel McCrea Asks Release from Radio

Joel McCrea yesterday walked up to the office of B. B. Kahane and asked for his release from the Radio contract.

The player, who was originally groomed for stardom by Radio, and who made a spot for himself in "Bird of Paradise" with Dolores Del Rio, considers that he hasn't been given the right break in recent stories and parts.

McCrea says, "I have been with Radio for four years and am far from satisfied with the parts given me. I recently signed a new five-year contract, but am asking for my release at once."

Rowland Will Handle Two Radio Pix in East

New York.—The recent announcement that Richard A. Rowland had been named an associate producer for Radio is fully explained by the news that the company plans the production of at least two pictures in the East for next year's program.

Rowland will handle these pictures. Arrangements have already been concluded to shoot at the Biograph studios.

B'WAY SMILES AS PICTURE GROSSES START BOOMING

New York.—Broadway feels happy over the current box-office figures. "Rip Tide" got the biggest attention from the film folk, with a gross of $80,500 at the Capitol, something to cheer about.

The final check-up on "Wild Cargo" at the Music Hall showed the figure at $93,000. "Melody in Spring" at the Paramount, with George Raft in a personal appearance, did a healthy $64,000; "Lost Patrol" brought $30,000 to the Rialto, great for this spot; "Countess of Monte Cristo" hit $25,000 at the Seventh Avenue Roxy; and the third week of "Catherine the Great" at the Rivoli was good for $18,000.

New York REVIEWS

"RIP TIDE"

MGM prod.; director, Edmund Goulding; writer, Edmund Goulding.

Capitol Theatre

World-Telegram: Returning to the screen after an absence of eighteen months, Norma Shearer struggles valiantly, but unsuccessfully, with a nickel-weekly cliche characterization, and such admirable performers as Herbert Marshall, Robert Montgomery, Ralph Forbes and Mrs. Patrick Campbell are similarly wasted.

Herald-Tribune: Miss Shearer is beautiful and frequently expert as the straying heroine, and the Messrs. Montgomery and Marshall battle their way through seas of whimsicality ably. But I fear that "Rip Tide" is too lengthy and commonplace an effort to be gayly disillusioned to prove satisfying.

Mirror: Norma Shearer plays with refreshing spirit and makes her role entirely lovable. Herbert Marshall is fine as the betrayed husband. And Robert Montgomery has some manly scenes to compensate for the kittenish ones which follow the pattern scenarists invariably draft for him.

Times: As a narrative, "Rip Tide," which was written and directed by Edmund Goulding, maintains a certain interest because it holds out promise of being a triangle mix-up with an original denouement. But, as though the author had weakened in his intentions in this respect, the bickering and recrimination eventually wind up in a routine fashion. Thus it is a picture which depends for its entertainment very much upon its able performers, its glamorous scenic effects and periodical bright bits of dialogue.

Post: It doesn't take mature reflection to spot the redeeming features of "Rip Tide." There is Herbert Marshall's excellent playing, and Robert Montgomery's genuinely amusing antics. Mrs. Patrick Campbell is likewise joyously entertaining. But these contributions, worthy as they are, weigh little against an awkward, overwritten and puerile story.

News: Norma Shearer's return to the screen after an absence of eighteen months is, unfortunately, in a vehicle that is unworthy of her talents and that presents her and her two leading men, Robert Montgomery and Herbert Marshall, in unsympathetic roles. There are a lot of attractive people in the picture, but they all seem to be wasted on their respective roles.

American: "Rip Tide" is excellent adult entertainment, suavely written, skilfully directed by the sophisticate Edmund Goulding, warmly played by an understanding cast and richly endowed with quality production. Miss Shearer, her glamour accentuated by ravishing gowns and romantic background, is a joy to behold in a stunning, subtle characterization.

Sun: "Rip Tide" is entirely custom-made, devised and fashioned for the Shearer public, which likes what Hollywood sometimes calls Continental and sometimes sophisticated drama. Mr. Goulding, author and director, has followed up his usual custom of piling up still more sympathy anyway. It is decidedly of the best-seller type, lightly written, played for its every scrap of wit and emotion by an excellent cast. Herbert Marshall is certainly at his best. Miss Shearer gives another of her sure performances. Robert Montgomery handles a difficult role with charm and conviction.

Journal: The picture was handsomely mounted and produced. In addition to the attractive principals, the cast includes Mrs. Patrick Campbell, Ralph Forbes, George Arthur and Skeets Gallagher.

Summerville and Pitts In Picture at Radio

Radio is closing a loan-out deal on Slim Summerville from Universal and is lining up production plans to restore for at least one more picture the old Summerville-Zasu Pitts comedy team.

They will be bracketed in "Afterward," which Mark Sandrich was yesterday assigned to direct under Cliff Reid's supervision. Marion Dix goes from the script of "Down to Their Last Yacht" to this picture to work with Arthur Caesar.

Anderson Out of Para.

Frederick Irving Anderson has completed his work on "The Notorious Sophie Lang" and has checked off the Paramount writing staff. The studio brought the author of the magazine stories here to tie up some loose ends in the series.

Craven in Role at 'U'

Frank Craven was signed by Universal yesterday for one of the important roles in "Loves of a Sailor," which the B. F. Zeidman unit is handling.

Personals for Powell

Dick Powell will leave on a four-weeks personal appearance tour as soon as he finishes his work in "Dames" at Warners. At the completion of the tour he hops for a short vacation in Europe. Powell still has three weeks work on the picture.

Chic Sale for 'Island'

Chic Sale was ticketed yesterday by MGM to join the"Treasure Island" company on location in Oakland. Sale plays one of the principal roles in the Wallace Beery-Jackie Cooper vehicle which Victor Fleming directs.

Dunn with Farnum

James Dunn, who is under contract to Fox, has signed Ralph G. Farnum to act as his exclusive agent and business manager. Dunn's contract with Fox has two more years to run.

Hill on 'Blind Date'

Ethel Hill was scheduled by Columbia yesterday to write the screen play of "Blind Date." No production plans have been decided for the picture as yet.

Liz Allen Set For Dean's 'Java Head'

London.—Elizabeth Allen has been loaned to Sir Basil Dean by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer for his production of "Java Head."

Miss Allen will complete this production before starting work in "David Copperfield" for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer in Hollywood.

Jean Bart at Universal

Jean Bart, who wrote the stage play, "Man Who Reclaimed His Head," joins the Universal writing staff today to fashion the screen play for the production. The deal was set by the Edington and Vincent office.

Lawler for 'Sailor'

Anderson Lawler gets his first break in pictures, after a long career on the Broadway stage, with a featured role in "Loves of a Sailor" at Universal. Ralph Farnum has signed to manage the player.

MGM Buys Poli Chain

wolf, A. C. Blumenthal, in with the big company.

The Poli chain, long considered by sales managers one of the key buys of the country, ran into the usual depression trouble and several months ago, by a bank sale of assets, presumably passed into the control of N. L. Nathanson, Canadian magnate, also powerful in Paramount affairs. The price quoted for the circuit at the time of the bank sale of assets was placed at $13,000,000. Though Nathanson took nominal control, he allowed Segal to continue as actual operating head.

At the time of the Nathanson purchase, A. C. Blumenthal was reported to have a part in the deal, but he has never been on record with the new company until today's action throwing control of the circuit to Loew.

NEW 'TARZAN', PACKED WITH SHOWMANSHIP, NEEDS CUTS

Plenty of Thrills, But Shocks in Spots

"TARZAN AND HIS MATE"
(MGM)

Direction .....Cedric Gibbons
Story based upon the characters created by.....Edgar Rice Burroughs
Screen Play.....James K. McGuinness
Adaptation .....Leon Gordon and Howard Emmett Rogers
Art Director.....Arnold Gillespie
Photography.....Charles Clarke and Clyde DeVinna

Cast: Johnny Weismuller, Maureen O'Sullivan, Neil Hamilton, Paul Cavanagh, Forrester Harvey, William Stack, Desmond Roberts, Nathan Curry.

The cry of Tarzan will soon be heard again through the land when "Tarzan and His Mate" is released. But the cry will be much less enthusiastic this time, unless Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer does a lot of very drastic cutting.

Encouraged by the success of the first "Tarzan," the studio went wild on the second, with the result that about half the picture is utterly delightful, and the other half just a gruesome, harrowing, nerve-wracking, noisy, bloody, unpleasant experience.

Nobody likes to see animals or men, either, for that matter, killed, tortured, maimed, or writhing in their death agonies. The latter half of the picture literally drips with blood—and it's all so unnecessary, inasmuch as the film is reels over-long, with several nice stopping places before all the carnage starts.

However, against this very real fault are miraculous scenes with monkeys; the exciting acrobatics of Tarzan; the green mystery of the jungle; spectacular elephant scenes, and one of the most beautiful sequences ever filmed —where Johnny Weismuller and Maureen O'Sullivan swim under water, their swift white bodies carving intricate and lovely designs in the dark depths. This sequence, and the one with the monkeys, make the picture worth seeing even in its present horrible state.

Weismuller is even better this time as Tarzan, and Miss O'Sullivan brings a fine spirit to her difficult role. Neil Hamilton and Paul Cavanagh are strongly cast as the two white men whose search for the elephant tusks brings all the disaster to Tarzan's peaceful forest. Nathan Curry, as Saidi, the leader of the safari, does a swell piece of work throughout.

Cedric Gibbons, art director at MGM, turned out a workmanlike job on his first directorial assignment. James K. McGuinness didn't miss a trick with his screen story, based, of course, on the Edgar Rice Burroughs yarn. Leon Gordon and Howard Emmett Rogers adapted, and Arnold Gillespie's art direction is outstanding. Charles Clarke and Clyde DeVinna carried off the terrific job of photographing the picture with honors. Bernie Hyman produced, and deserves his share of credit for much that is good in the picture, though he must also see to the cutting that is needed.

If the picture is not cut—or, rather, sliced off very neatly toward the end—parents all over the country will appreciate warnings to keep their children away from it. If it is cut, the parents will probably insist on taking the kids to the show themselves.

Frances Dee Sick; 300 Extras Lose Out

Three hundred extra players were deprived of their coffee and cakes yesterday because of the illness of Frances Dee. They had been called for work in "Of Human Bondage" at Radio, but the call was cancelled when Miss Dee could not work.

Picture Possibilities Show on N.Y. Stage

New York.—There were some picture possibilities in last week's New York plays, something unusual as they have been coming.

Of the list, the report follows: "House of Remsen," a possibility; "One More Honeymoon," possible; "Brain Sweat," very good.

There are four legit premieres slated for next week: "Furnished Rooms," Monday; a revival of "Pirates of Penzance," at the Majestic, Monday; "Wife Insurance," Thursday, at the Ethel Barrymore; and "Are You Decent?" the same night.

Zion Myers to Radio As Aide to Pan Berman

Zion Myers joins Pan Berman at Radio to act as associate producer on all the pictures for the Berman unit. William Sistrom will handle the business end, removing a large part of the studio burden from the executive's shoulders.

Stan Laurel Marries Ruth Rogers in Mexico

Stan Laurel married Ruth Rogers Tuesday at Ensenada, Mexico, it was learned yesterday. Laurel's divorce does not become final until September. His marriage, however, is recognized in all other states except California.

Fields-LeRoy Make Up

W. C. Fields and Baby LeRoy are smoking the pipe of peace after their recent feud and have consented to appear together in Paramount's "The Old-Fashioned Way." William Beaudine will direct the picture, which is slated to go before the cameras Monday.

Castings for 'Widow'

MGM yesterday signed Barbara Leonard and Sterling Holloway, and assigned Joan Gale, Sheila Manora, Caryl Lincoln, Leona Walters and Edna Waldes, stock players, to "The Merry Widow," which Irving Thalberg puts into work Monday.

Chaplin's Two Year Program Set

Although he will not acknowledge it for publication, Charles Chaplin has about got his picture plans set for the next two years.

His first picture will star himself, with Paulette Goddard playing opposite in the "Street Waif" yarn he has been working on, some atmospheric and process shots having already been completed.

On the completion of the above comedy, he will do "The Woman of Paris," with Goddard as the star, to be followed by a starring picture of his own from a story written around Napoleon.

Group Theatre To Take New Chance on Lawson

New York.—The Group Theatre shows that it can take it. After having a very recent flop with a John Howard Lawson play, it yesterday signed contracts to produce the same playwright's "Marching Son" this Fall.

Selznick, Estabrook And Cukor Going East

George Cukor, Howard Estabrook and David Selznick leave for New York as soon as "Manhattan Melodrama" is completed and previewed. Cukor and Estabrook hop from there to London.

Para. Shelves 'Rip'

Paramount has shelved "Rip Van Winkle" until late Fall, owing to Lyda Roberti's run-of-play contract in the New York play, "Roberta." Studio has also been unable to develop a satisfactory screen play to warrant production with another player other than Miss Roberti.

Goodee Montgomery Set

Goodee Montgomery, New York stage actress and daughter of Dave Montgomery, gets her first picture break in a featured spot of "Loves of a Sailor," which Kurt Neumann directs for Universal. Montgomery deal negotiated by Hoffman-Schlager.

Parker No Go to England

Austin Parker yesterday turned down an offer from British Gaumont to do the adaptation on "Sons of Guns," the British refusing to meet his terms. He is working on the final stages of a new book now which he hopes to finish shortly.

Harvey Gates at Col.

Harvey Gates yesterday swung over to Columbia from MGM to collaborate with Herbert Asbury on the screen play of "I'll Fix It," the Leonard Spigelgass story which is scheduled to have Fay Wray in the top spot.

Sears-Green Teamed

MGM has assigned Zelda Sears and Eve Green to write the screen play on the George Auerbach original, "My Brother's Wife." It is planned as a Jean Harlow vehicle. Laurence Weingarten produces.

Yesterday in NEW YORK with HELEN GWYNN

We think we've discovered the thing that annoys critics most; pretensions on the part of a picture. We'll explain. Whenever a picture appears that is frankly "hooey," or sentimental like "Tarzan" or "Lady for a Day," or frankly romantic like "It Happened One Night," provided they're as well made as the above-mentioned, no picture producer need fear for the reviews he'll get from the critics. BUT the minute they try to gloss "hooey" over with what passes with the masses for sophistication, then let the producer beware, because right then and there the "intellectual" critic will take down the pants of that picture and give it a sound, if not good walloping. And the critics on the "mass papers," who, by their ratings of pictures, have never given the public credit for anything approaching an adult mind, will shy from it with cracks about it's not being for the kiddies and something about lack of action.

So far as the intellectual critics are concerned, they not only refuse to be "taken in" by cultured trash, but they're also afraid they might be and their fears extend to the public whom they pretend to despise but for whom they do everything in their power to make producers respect that public's better tastes. Honesty of purpose seems to be the most important thing to critics, and the minute the producer's wares cease to be frank and aboveboard, they let them have it with a flow of rhetoric that is space-filling if not altogether amusing. A western will always be fairly appraised as a western, but let it try feebly to disguise itself as an epic or a social problem and there will be no usable quotes for the newspaper ads.

Spring is here and it seems to have affected the advertising boys first. Si Seadler ran an ad on "Viva Villa," inspired by a telephone conversation with Red Kann of Motion Picture Daily, and the following day Seadler got a wire from Hal Horne, of U. A., which read: "Please advise where can see Red Kann in 'Viva Villa.'" . . . New type of social classification as sent out by a bright p. a.: "Mr. Charles Beahan, soon to be Sidney Fox's ex-husband, has arrived at the Hotel Warwick." That's working your way up from being a picture exec. . . . Lotsa chorus pretties around town have already signed for E. Cantor's next picture. . . . A playwright who hasn't had a play on Broadway in years was asked by a sweet thing what he was doing to help the starving actors . . . "Starving," he answered, quick as a flash.

Brent in 'Housewife'; William as Philo Vance

George Brent's first assignment since his return to the Warner fold will be opposite Bette Davis in "Housewife," which Al Green will pilot.

This decision puts it up to Warren William to take the Philo Vance role n "Dragon Murder Case."

Viva Villa!

A METRO-GOLDWYN-MAYER TRIUMPH

The screen which has waited ten years for a picture to equal the thrill, the epic humanity of "The Big Parade" now welcomes "VIVA VILLA." Because in its 1001 nights of amazing, romantic adventure... in its story of riotous revolution and revelry...in its blood-tingling heroism is entertainment that will pack the theatres of the nation!

"VIVA VILLA!"

An all-star cast with thousands of others in METRO-GOLDWYN-MAYER'S Giant of Screen Triumphs!

Produced by DAVID O. SELZNICK

Directed by JACK CONWAY

THIS M-G-M AD is telling 27,000,000 motion picture fans about it!

REELING around LONDON

Tee-hee! One company over here saw "Continuity by SoandSo" on the screen and they, not honestly knowing much about this racket, said, "Ha! They give the continuity girl a credit in American pictures, do they"—and there and then they started giving credit titles to their SCRIPT CLERKS! Honest . . . which reminds us that Triumph Pictures publish photographs of their assistant directors on their trade show synopsis . . . all of which brings us round to the old, old question; isn't it time someone in British studios realized that it's the story and the screen writers who matter in addition to the director and a few others? . . . by the by, one company here actually made some scenes in England recently; it is rumored that they will probably slip a title into the picture ahead of these scenes explaining that it is English scenery—the audience won't recognize it; they've never seen any yet!!!

Bob Ritchie in town on Jeanette MacDonald business; or should it be THE MacDonald business? . . . Boy-ohboy! the press certainly went for Rowland Brown in a big way and Rowlie, when asked for a list of the pictures he had made, merely replied "Quick Millions"!!! . . . incidentally said Mister Brown turned down "Java Head" here; no likee story. . . . Bob Flaherty, A. P. Herbert, Molly Castle, Sidney Bernstein, Cecil Landau and Stephen Watts among the movieites at the Cafe Royal. . . . Donald Calthrop has had a haircut. . . . Bernard Vorhaus threw a Sukiakie (we can't spell it and we're telling you!) party the other night and the guests included Gordon Wellesley, Mike Hamlinson, Eric Mount and Chris Mann. . . . "Lullaby Land" gets this week's cup of veddy Briddish tea; thanks Mister Disney and his gang! . . . Maurice Elvey trying to find a spare seat at the premiere of "Emperor Jones," which was crowded with the psuedo elite of Mayfair mideah!

Clifford (Uke Ike) Edwards rated a couple of paras in the papers here in a recent court case in which film companies were ivolved. . . . When asked why she did not get her crowd work through a certain agency, a movie gal replied: "The gentleman there prefers blondes"!! Ah yes, it's the same the film world over, Shanghai, Joinville or Hollywood. . . . Paul Perez moving from his apartment and getting himself a house; looks as if he'll stay. . . . The Richard Arlens press receptioned by Paramount. . . . Roy Simmonds back from California and kinda pleased about his spiel to the Fox salesmen; so much so that it's being printed in trade sheets this side. . . . Connery Chappell is taking a subscription to this paper purely because he wants his name spelled right, he says. . . . John Hicks in and out of town before you can snap "retake." . . . Kenneth "Era" Green says he never sees Tony Nelson Keys' name in this column; well, here it is, Ken!

Capra, Riskin and Jo Walker—step right up and take a bow; we've just seen "It Happened One Night." . . . It's a boy at the Maurice Ostrers—congratulations! . . . This week's Bad Smell is the so-called big movie shot from Wardour Street who takes the film girls out to dinner and tells them they had better be nice or else he'll see that they don't work in flicks again—yeah, you guessed who we mean! . . . Georgie Ayre insisting that Ralph Ince show up at the preview of a B.I.P. flicker that he was in here. . . . Ralph now megging for Irving Asher. . . . Herman Fellner, A. E. Jympson Harman, Arthur Dent, Horace Williams and Joe Grossman glimpsed at trade shows. . . . Quote from a British picture in which the hero alibis why there is a piano near the bed (of course, it's for a song he is about to put over): "I get most of my ideas at night—AND I DON'T WANT TO LOSE THEM!" . . . When a group of tough fishermen winding a windlass was shot from above in a travelogue here, Val (Fan Scribbler) Guest ups and says: "Aha! Dances arranged by Busby Berkeley."

Gledhill Goes Poet

With the arrival of Spring, Donold Gledhill, executive secretary of the Academy, has gone poetical. One of his verses appears in Rob Wagner's Script of April 7.

American Films Still Tops in Paris Houses

Paris—More than half the films in the 30 leading picture houses of this city this week are American product. There are 17 American pictures, seven French, two German and one German-French.

Sullavan Takes London by Storm

London.—The British movie-goers have a new star. They have tasted of Margaret Sullavan in "Only Yesterday" and that gal is firmly planted on this side.

Norwegian Tax Doomed

Oslo—Norway film men are feeling happier, for they are practically certain the government tax on picture shows is to be abolished shortly. The government has been appealed to in behalf of the Norwegian producers, who are trying to build up the local business.

Asher Sets Writers

London.—John Hastings Turner and Mary Murillo have joined Irving Asher's Warner British concern on one picture deals. Turner will do the screen play of "Murder at Monte Cristo," and Murillo is scripting a 'Varsity story as yet untitled.

Big French Deal On

Paris.—It is authoritatively reported in local film circles that Comite des Forges (iron industry) is trying to get control of the biggest film concerns in France.

FRENCH FILM TRADE TO BLAME FOR POOR STATE

Paris.—Louis Aubert, president of the Chambre Syndicale and one of the highest authorities in the film trade in France, said during an address at a meeting of French distributors:

"After tremendous efforts during 25 years the invention of Lumiere was practically realized when people had to start from the beginning again at the appearance of the talkies. Sound film studios had to be created, copying installations secured, silent artists substituted by talking actors and singing artists.

"Three hundred million francs were invested in the sound film equipment of the theatres. And most of these expenses had to be done in a period of extreme depression, from which the trade has been suffering for five years. In 1933, 108 firms in the film trade were ruined."

He attributed these collapses to the fact that 60 per cent of the French theatre owners had not met their engagements. For this, however, distributors and producers themselves are partly responsible, having repeatedly sold films which never were shown and which at the moment of delivery were refused by the buyers.

Aubert hopes that the reorganization of the French industry, which is now taking place, will promote the further development of the French trade in a sounder way.

Office for French Firm

Paris.—President Andre Chalus, of Union Films, reveals that his recent trip to America was for the perfecting of plans for the opening of a distribution office for French films in New York, with Valdemar D. Bell slated to head the office.

Rosen May Stay Abroad

London.—Progress Pictures is talking to Phil Rosen to extend his stay here for another picture which will go through British Gaumont. Director is finishing "Forbidden Territory."

Jannings to England

Berlin.—Emil Jannings has been engaged by British & Continental Productions for the lead in "The Gentleman," to be made in England under direction of Jacques Feyder.

Hume with Fairbanks

London.—The Selznick-Joyce local office announces the placing of Benita Hume in "Exit Don Juan," with Doug Fairbanks.

Ratoff in British Pic

London.—Gregory Ratoff is here in "Forbidden Territory," which Phil Rosen is directing for R. J. Wainwright. Tamara Desni has female lead.

Turner Play for B. and D.

London.—British and Dominions will make a talkie version of the John Hastings Turner show, "Lilies of the Field." Norman Walker will direct.

London's Smartest Address—

GROSVENOR HOUSE

is also London's most modern hotel. An apartment at Grosvenor House provides an actual "home from home," replete with every modern aid to greater comfort.

The location of Grosvenor House is a happy blend of convenience and charm; in and around the hotel London's social life moves; near by are the best shops and the theatres; just across the way is London's great garden, Hyde Park.

USHER FIGHT BEFORE LABOR BOARD MAY HIT ALL EXHIBS

Elkhart, Ind., Case Will Set Precedents

Washington. — The comparatively middle-sized city of Elkhart, Indiana, may go down in picture history despite its size. For a deadlock between an Elkhart exhibitor and his ushers that has been brought up to the NRA chieftains here is likely to furnish the basis for consideration of all theatre help in the clerical and usher categories.

The case before the National Labor Board concerns the following facts:

Theatre Service Employees Local 19,110, of Elkhart, Indiana, claims that the Elkhart Amusement Company discharged nine of its ushers for union activities and replaced them with usherettes.

Al Manta, president of the company, asserts that the real question is whether the management is to run the theatre or whether it is to be turned over to the employees. Manta claims that everybody was happy until a few high school boys conceived the idea of starting a union.

The case is being closely watched because of its possible widespread effect on the unionizing of all theatre help. A peculiar feature of the case is that the NRA scale for ushers of 25 cents an hour is less than the scale that has been paid by the house—35 cents an hour.

Gordon Will Produce 'Piker' at Playhouse

Leon Gordon, who tonight completes a run in his stage play, "White Cargo," at the Hollywood Playhouse, will direct another of his plays, "The Piker," for a limited engagement at the same theatre, starting May 14.

Gordon is currently at United Artists studio adapting "The Musical Mystery" for Edward Small.

Lewis Stone to Cruise

Lewis Stone takes his lay-off period on his straight two-year ticket with MGM in one lump, getting a six-months vacation to sail his yacht, the Aurora, into southern waters. He gets away in August.

New Warner Title

Warners yesterday set "Side Street" as the release label for the Aline MacMahon vehicle, which was previewed two weeks ago as "A Woman in Her Thirties." Picture was in work as "Fur Coats."

Inspiration in Desert

Producer Edward Small, Director Ben Stoloff and Writer Leon Gordon left for the desert last night to work on the story of the coming Reliance production, "Showboat of 1934."

Hershon in Agency

Robert (Red) Hershon has been signed as an associate with the Hoffman-Schlager agency. Hershon was recently on the staff of Carl Laemmle Jr. at Universal.

Warning

With the Universal laboratory open again, C. King Charney is back in circulation—with the old broad smile, and a new line of funny stories. King has been under a cloud for many moons.

Human Treasures for MGM 'Treasure Island'

Billy Elmer, claimed to be filmdom's first heavy, got the role of a pirate in "Treasure Island," at MGM yesterday. He first appeared in "Squaw Man." Also signed was Scott Mattraw, one-time professional fat man. He lost his drag when he reduced from 310 pounds to 280.

Marcin Plans Long Trip

Max Marcin is figuring on a South American jaunt, but is awaiting the outcome of negotiations with Universal for another picture before taking off. Triple threat man's efforts to get away this week failed when he couldn't book passage.

Fussy Music Chief

Herbert Stothart, MGM's music chief, has tested nineteen orchestras and is scheduled to test still more before selecting three for Thalberg's "Merry Widow."

Three Cartoons in Work

UB Iwerks of Animated Pictures has three animated cartoons in production. They are "Puss in Boots" and "Queen of Hearts," two ComiColor cartoons, and "Reducing Creme," a Willie Whopper.

Woolf for 'Barretts'

Ian Woolf gets the role in MGM's "Barretts of Wimpole Street," which he created on the stage. Player, signed yesterday, is en route to the Coast from New York.

New Board Named By Code Authority

New York.—The Code Authority yesterday named Philadelphia Grievance and Clearance and Zoning Boards.

On the Grievance Board are F. L. McNamee, M. S. Landow, M. B. Comerford, Lewen Pizor. On the Clearance and Zoning Board are Percy Bloch of Paramount, Harry Wiener of Columbia, Leonard Schlesinger of Warner Brothers, and Lou Linker, Charles Segal and Milton Rogasner.

Other appointments of the Code Authority were L. E. Thompson as permanent alternate for M. H. Aylesworth, T. B. Noble instead of H. E. Huffman to the Denver Clearance and Zoning Board, Huffman having failed to sign the Code Assent. The make-up of the New York Boards is still delayed.

New Job for Segall

Harry Segall yesterday was assigned by MGM to script the Anne Austin story, "The Wicked Woman." Charles Brabin will direct and Harry Rapf produces.

Howard Rogers Term

Howard Emmett Rogers was yesterday handed a new ticket by MGM. Writer is now scripting "Evelyn Prentice," which is slated for Myrna Loy. Deal was negotiated by Nat Goldstone.

Lawrence Out of Para.

Vincent Lawrence handed in his script on "Honor Bright" to Louis Lighton yesterday and closed out of Paramount.

Radio-Pabst Dicker

Radio is understood hot on a deal with G. W. Pabst, director, who recently obtained his release from Warners.

MONOGRAM'S PRODUCTION BUDGET SET AT $2,500,000

Atlantic City.—Trem Carr, vice-president in charge of Monogram production, yesterday asked the franchise holders at the convention here for a budget of $2,500,000 for the coming season—and got it. This is two and one-half times the company's budget for its first year.

Announcing that this budget would take care of the employment of 200 additional people in his department, Carr said that the company's program comprised sixteen pictures, in addition to two specials for which extra appropriations were made. One of these will be "Jane Eyre." The program will also include eight "Lone Star" westerns, starring John Wayne.

The stories and writers of the sixteen pictures are: "Redhead," a novel by Vera Brown; "The Healer," a Robert Herrick novel; "Million Dollar Baby," a Joseph Santley production; "Girl of My Dreams," a college yarn with track meet atmosphere; "The Big Top," a story of circus and sideshow life; "We're in the Army Now," based on "Ten Minute Eggs," by Tay Garnett and Brewster Morse; "The Fashion Parade," which is tied in with a newspaper contest covering 200 cities; "Sinners in Sing Sing," by Harry Stephen Keeler; "Plunder," a story of the receivership racket, by Albert Meserow and Elynore Dalkhart; "Dancing Feet," by Tristram Tupper; "Honeymoon Ltd." a Vida Hurst novel; "Ice Carnival," an ice hockey yarn by George Waggner; "Tomorrow's Youth," by Harry Sauber; "Mystery Man," from Albert Payson Terhune's Saturday Evening Post story, probably with Bela Lugosi; "Successful Failure," by Michael Kane; "Woman Against Woman," by the Hattons.

President W. Ray Johnston stated that, when the acting and directorial talent is announced, exhibitors will be convinced that Monogram is offering big time product.

LINDSEY STILL IN RING

TRADE VIEWS by W. R. WILKERSON

•SINCE the very inception of this publication we have been accused of carrying a banner for the writer, of having used every effort to build up "that ungrateful herd," of having sided with one branch of the creators to the detriment of the others. Part of the finger-pointing is true, and we take full responsibility for it, while the other sections are claptrap nonsense.

The success or failure of any picture is based on the success or failure of its story material. Writers are employed to furnish that story material, are paid princely sums to contribute such material, AND, if the majority of them were given the proper recognition of their talents, if they were permitted to WRITE FOR THE PUBLIC, we would have a lot more hit pictures.

But the writers are not permitted to put their thoughts down on paper. They are not permitted to write stories they believe will interest the public. They are COMPELLED to write for their supervisor, who, in the majority of instances, not only has little idea of story values, but has little or no conception of what the public will like, or how their taste may have changed for the moment, or any understanding of a new advancement in story thought.

We have writers making anywhere from $3,000 a week down to $150 for the same period, writers who have catered to the public's fancy for years, men and women who are abreast of the times and know what is going on in the world and have the ability to capitalize on those values for screen entertainment. We have writers, but THEY ARE NOT PERMITTED TO WRITE. Not only are they forced to write what their supervisor tells them, but they are tossed around, given little importance in the conception of pictures, referred to as "that ungrateful herd."

Our writers are paid so much money they are content to report to the studio, check their brains at the front entrance, and put down, in their best English, what the supervisor wants. It's a bitter pill at times, but sweet-

Wilmington. — The plans for Delaware censorship have been abandoned—but in their place a bill taxing films ten cents for each hundred feet released in the State is now being drawn for early introduction.

Universal Chiefs in Huddle Thursday

Universal's production heads are slated to leave Thursday for a week-end at the Santa Barbara Biltmore where they will go into a huddle and map out the new season's program.

Those set to make the trip are the Carl Laemmles, Senior and Junior, Jimmy Grainger, Stanley Bergerman, Edmund Grainger, Leonard Spiegelgass, B. F. Ziedman, Henry Henigson, Eph Asher, Frank Mastroly and Julius Bernheim.

Premiere for Atlanta

Atlanta.—MGM has chosen this city for the world premiere and trial engagement of "Hollywood Party." The picture will unfold on April 20 at the Grand Theatre.

Name Code Watchers

B. Bernard Kreiselman and William C. Mathes have been named impartial government representatives on the motion picture Grievance and Clearance Boards for Southern California.

Bob Gillham on Way

New York.—Bob Gillham left for Hollywood Sunday for conferences at the Paramount plant on the advertising angles of next year's line-up.

Spencer Tracy Assigned

Spencer Tracy has been set by Fox for the top spot in "Marie Gallant" which Henry King directs.

New Labor Body Of Pat Casey And Ed Smith Does Not Change NRA Board Reviewing Status

Judge Ben B. Lindsey's hat is still in the NRA code ring, despite published reports yesterday to the effect that the appointment of a new Studio Labor Committee for the handling of studio labor problems would probably result in his being ousted. According to Charles Cunningham, head of the local NRA Compliance Office, and executive assistant to George Creel, State NRA Director, the Judge will not be ousted, as he has to hear the complaints of more than 100 other industry codes in this section, and the picture code is just a minor detail in the work of his office.

Cunningham also revealed the fact

Barrage Against A.T.&T. Heavier

New York.—Observers here feel that with A. T. & T. under fire from so many angles, the organization may soon be forced to divorce its picture interests in some manner.

The last blast is from Dr. W. M. Splawn, economist, who finished a three-year intensive study of the A. T. & T. set-up and ramifications, with the recommendation that the Federal Communications Bill supervise the phone monopoly.

Kane Suit Up Today

New York.—Helen Kane's $250,000 suit against Paramount and Fleischer cartoons, and her request for an injunction prohibiting further release of "Betty Boop" cartoons, comes up for hearing today in the New York Supreme Court.

Swanson Comeback In 'Barbary Coast'

Gloria Swanson will return to the screen in "Barbary Coast," which means that she will make this Goldwyn picture prior to "Three Weeks," in which she had been scheduled to star for MGM.

Irving Thalberg agreed to the arrangement because he feels that Miss Swanson's role in "Barbary Coast" is an ideal one for her return appearance and he will put "Three Weeks"

Laemmle Sends Letter Of Cheer to Holders

New York.—Carl Laemmle, president of Universal, is sending a letter to the stockholders today, in which he says:

"Our domestic sales contracts for the current selling season are about $1,800,000 above the previous season, and, in reality, represent a gain of $2,800,000 because the company did not benefit fully from last year's sales through being forced to curtail production."

Loretta Young Loaned to MGM by 20 Century

MGM has concluded negotiations with 20th Century for the loan of Loretta Young and will star her in "Professional Corespondent" which is based on the Beth Brown novel, "Man and Wife." Harry Beaumont will direct. Florence Ryerson scripting.

Hector Turnbull Dies

Hector Turnbull, long prominent in the industry as a Paramount executive, and who has been ill for some time, passed away yesterday in New Hope, Pennsylvania.

Turnbull, who was a brother-in-law of Jesse L. Lasky, entered the picture business from the old New York Tribune as a writer, later graduating to an executive post.

M. P. T. O. A. DELEGATES SWARMING INTO TOWN

Headed by a special trainload of delegates steaming in this morning over the Southern Pacific from Chicago, New York, Memphis, St. Louis and New Orleans, hundreds of theatre men from all parts of the United States today began to jam Los Angeles hotels for the annual MPTOA convention, which starts today and winds up Thursday.

The influx actually started last

THE LOW DOWN

That "title and name" game spread to larger proportions at the David Selznicks' party Saturday night, with hilarious results, when the host and hostess had flashed upon a screen cartoon-slides of many of the guests, as the orchestra played "appropriate" songs simultaneously. The guest who took the most ribbing was Harry Joe Brown, whose caricature appeared several times during the show, each time with a different song-title—and very funny, too. The huge and gay Selznick party started with cocktails on the second floor of the Beverly Wilshire, and ended in a grill-room all to itself in another part of the hotel.

Outstanding among the smartly-clad were Veree Teasdale, Gwili Andre, Frances Goldwyn, Norma Shearer, Elizabeth Young, Jessica Barthelmess, Corinne Griffith and the hostess herself. There was a Rhumba band, too, and while all the Americanos were shaking themselves silly to its music, Dolores Del Rio and Tony Moreno just fox-trotted around! Connie Bennett, Gilbert Roland, the Clark Gables, the Freddie Marches, L. B. Mayer (in a dancing mood!), Irving Thalberg (ditto), the Sam Jaffes, Mary Brian, Phillips Holmes, the H. Mankiewiczes, the Don Stewarts, Adolphe Menjou, the Bill Howards, the Wes Ruggles, Bob Riskin (looking naked without Glenda Farrell), the Eddie Mannixes, the Dick Rodgers, Jeanette MacDonald, Jeanne Howard, the Neil Hamiltons, Eddie Sutherland, Virginia Pine, Gene Markey and Joan Bennett (first party since!) among the great gobs of guests!

Y'know—they were looking for days and days for a "wide-eyed" ingenue to play the part of Iris, the wide-eyed Virgin, in "Cleopatra." After many were tested and none had been chosen, the search finally reached a certain young blonde under contract these many months at Paramount. When told she was to have the role, she said: "Oh—Mr. DeMille, I just can't play that part!"

"Why not?" asked C.B.—"can't you look wide-eyed?"

New York REVIEWS

"LOST PATROL"

Radio prod.; director, John Ford; writers, Phillip McDonald, Garrett Fort, Dudley Nichols.

Rialto Theatre

Herald-Tribune: The new picture at the Rialto Theatre is a grim, romantic and genuinely stirring military melodrama. Never is the viewpoint obtrusive nor does the romanticism fall off into saccharinity as the film views the doom of its heroes. "The Lost Patrol" is too direct and striking for any such defect. Certainly it is the finest of the recent crop of motion pictures. Admirably directed by John Ford.

American: Stark, vivid, gripping, fairly dripping with drama, an excellent picture of men without women is presented in thrilling fashion on the screen of the Rialto Theatre. It is the most exciting film seen at this playhouse in many a long week of movie-going. Indeed, it is as tense an offering as the season may boast.

World-Telegram: "The Lost Patrol" is almost a great film and certainly one of the finest that have come out of Hollywood. It has depth, remarkably complete characterizations, moments of strong animal excitement, picturesque figures of enlisted men, banded but helpless against death, and excitement that will cause you to hold your breath. A vigorous, gripping, heart-tearing film.

Journal: It's one of the most stirring war pictures to have come out of Hollywood. There are no women in the cast and there is no compromise with conventional movie treatment. John Ford's direction is brilliant as he develops the absorbing document with a chokingly mounting suspense. It's grim and disturbing. But you'll find it absorbingly impressive.

News: The realism of "The Lost Patrol" makes it the most effective horror film I've ever seen. There is nothing artificial about it. It is easy to believe that the strange adventures pictured here might have happened. The picture is masterfully directed by John Ford.

Sun: The Rialto's new talkie is a drama of death, violent death, and the way men meet it. There is force in "The Lost Patrol," the force of tragedy and terror. It is a powerful picture, splendidly directed, acted and photographed; and it offers about as gruesome an hour as you can find in the current theatre.

Times: The present production is highly effective from a photographic standpoint, but the incidents are often strained. It is a pity that the dialogue is too forced and often far from natural in the circumstances, even granted that several of the men desired to set an example by showing their coolness.

Berman Grabs 'Girl' Story From MGM

Outbidding MGM by $4,000, Pandro Berman has closed a deal with the Bren-Orsatti-Marx office for the purchase of an original screen play, "Richest Girl In the World," by Norman Krasma. Radio got it for $14,000.

It is said to be a possible vehicle for Ann Harding, pending her approval of the story.

Partos-Kummer Collab

Paramount on Saturday assigned Frank Partos to collaborate with Clare Kummer on the latter's play, "Her Master's Voice," which B. P. Schulberg will produce. Marion Gering is set to direct. Lanny Ross, Charlie Ruggles and Mary Boland are in the leads.

Corle Joins MGM Staff

Edwin Corle, whose novel, "Mojave," appeared on the stands last week, on Saturday was signed to a term writing deal by MGM. He will write an original based on the locale of his book. Deal was set by the Sackin agency.

Lambert in Town

Glen Lambert arrived by train from New York Saturday. Lambert was on the Warner writing staff at the Vitaphone studio in Brooklyn for the past three and a half years

Universal "On and Off" on Plans for Westerns

The report last week that Universal was off westerns has been slightly modified. While the company, on its deal with Buck Jones, will not produce features of the cowboy class, Henry MacRae is figuring on making the serial a western.

Studio has purchased the W. C. Tuttle story, "The Redhead From Sun Dog" and will work it up into serial shape. Louis Friedlander will direct.

'U' Drops Plans For Lowe-Raffles Pic

Two weeks of negotiations with E. W. Hornung for the rights to one of the series of "Raffles" stories by the writer were dropped yesterday by Universal when the studio could not match terms.

Story was to star Edmund Lowe. Edmund Grainger is on a story hunt for another idea suitable to the player.

Writers Board Gets Down To Business Right Away

The first meeting of the newly elected Executive Board of the Screen Writers' Guild will be held tonight at the Guild offices.

Members of the "liberal" group are expected to be on hand to discuss vital differences of opinion with the Board in an effort to bring about a unified front in the Guild.

Boland and Ruggles Set For Hinds Air Hour

Mary Boland and Charles Ruggles will feature the Hinds Hour via KHJ next Sunday, the Selznick-Joyce radio department setting the deal. Same sponsors are dickering to team Slim Summerville and Zasu Pitts on a future broadcast.

Better pictures will be made when the writers are given more recognition. They are paid to write, to create ideas for good pictures. They should be permitted to do that unhampered, for the most part, by a stupid supervision by men who have little or no qualification for the positions they hold.

'MOOR BORN' GOOD THEATRE; 'HOUSE OF REMSEN' SLOW

Vital Drama Aided By Cast, Direction

George Bushar and John Tuerk present "Moor Born" by Dan Totheroh; staged by Melvyn Douglas, with Edith Barrett, Helen Gahagan, Frances Starr, Glenn Anders, Beverly Sitgreaves, Thomas Findlay, Grace Francis and Arling Alcine. At the Playhouse Theatre.

New York.—A fine, dramatic and sensitive study and appreciation of the Bronte sisters that can, first of all, be recommended as a play and good theatre; that has in it, in the roles of the Bronte sisters, three beautiful and moving performances, and that brings Melvyn Douglas very much to the fore in the capacity of director.

Primarily, the review must be devoted to Mr. Totheroh for the way in which he has condensed his material and for the dramatic intensity he has given it. The moors of Yorkshire are more than just background for the tragic story of the Bronte family. Mr. Totheroh has used them as a vital part of the play, not only to emphasize the utter loneliness and desolation of the world the Brontes lived in, but for the fact that their fierce beauty was a part of the Brontes, a compelling force in their lives.

Furthermore, Mr. Totheroh has used the winds on the moors in much the same manner as O'Neill used the drum beats in "Emperor Jones," and the effect is hair-raising. Thus the story of Ann Bronte, the gentle, Charlotte Bronte, the ambitious, and Emily Bronte, the brooding genius whose love for her weak brother was an all-consuming flame, and led her to make a pitiful and futile gesture to justify his mis-spent life, results in some pretty grand theatre.

Helen Gahagan as Emily Bronte gives a beautiful portrayal of that victim of an unholy love, and her death scene is one of the most stirring things to be seen on the stage. Her whole performance is so rightly keyed that it never strays into the field of hysteria. Frances Starr as Charlotte gives an excellent performance, and Edith Barrett as Ann lends the necessary balance of sweetness and light that the play needed. Glenn Anders as Bramwell Bronte, in a role that any actor would sell his soul to play, finally works into a good scene after he discards his mannerisms, and dies with great acting honors. Thomas Findlay, as the father of this neurotic family, misses the significance of his part. Instead of treating his lines with the fanatic belief that he had in himself and his son's genius, he delivers most of them as though he were the standing joke of the family.

Melvyn Douglas has done right well by this play script, particularly in his groupings of the actors on the stage and in the timing of the climaxes. His work as a director was quite a revelation and its looks as though Mr. Douglas need never worry about a career.

Hal Didn't Hear

Joseph M. Schenck stated the other day that the public taste in pictures has turned to "unsophisticated Cinderella themes." Probably Hal Roach wasn't listening, for he has started preparations to film "Lysistrata."

'Doomed to Die' Poor Maynard Pic

"DOOMED TO DIE"
(Universal)

Direction ..... Alan James
Author ..... Ken Maynard
Adaptation ..... Nate Gatzert
Art Direction ..... Ralph Berger
Photography ..... Ted McCord
Cast: Ken Maynard, Gloria Shea, Walter Miller, Harold Goodwin, William Gould, Bob Kortman, Jack Rockwell, Ed Coxen, Slim Whitaker, Martin Turner, Etta McDaniels.

Ken Maynard's latest western, "Doomed to Die," almost lives up to its title. It is far below the usual Maynard opus. The story is unusually complicated and too far-fetched to retain much interest; the acting throughout could have been less self-conscious, and Maynard's make-up in the beginning of the picture is fantastic. He appears first in a startling disguise that suggests Methuselah, but when he shaves later he emerges as a very young, very blond boy. The transition, miraculously unconvincing, gets the picture off to a bad start.

Maynard's horse, Tarzan, is not given enough to do. He is a great drawing card, and could have helped the film considerably.

Gloria Shea is nice as the girl, and Harold Goodwin is well cast as the villain. Walter Miller plays the ranger sent to get Ken; William Gould does a swell piece of acting as Ken's old father; and Martin Turner has a good comedy role as Cinders. Alan James directed as well as he could, hampered by the story.

The picture's only recommendation is that it is a Ken Maynard film, but his fans will be disappointed.

MGM Gets Its 'Thin Man'

MGM Saturday succeeded in signing a thin man for the screen version of Dashiell Hammett novel which W. S. Van Dyke puts into work today. He is Edward Ellis, six feet two inches tall, thin, around 50, and fits all other specifications stated in the novel.

Katharine Brown Here

Katharine Brown, eastern story head for Radio, arrived last night on the Chief. Editor will confer with the studio executives on production material before leaving on the return hop.

Dvorak in Brent Pic

Ann Dvorak was set by Warners Saturday for the title spot in "Housewife," sharing billing with Bette Davis and George Brent. Alfred E. Green pilots.

Soussanin Play Good Picture Idea

New York.—Here is a play with a really good plot that, with the exception of one scene, is so lethargic in pace and so flatly written that the net impression is that of a record played without the victrola having been wound. There is also a lot of time wasted in explanatory scenes that could just as well have been omitted in order to get to the real action and importance of the play. The object in taking all this trouble to find the reason why the play doesn't jell is because it seems to us that the whole idea would make a good picture, with an excellent star part for the character of the father and opportunities galore for a good supporting cast.

Arthur Remsen's wife is killed in an automobile accident with her lover, and Remsen discovers, through a letter found in his wife's effects, that one of their two children was not fathered by him. Remsen goes to the hospital where the lover lies, supposedly dying, and forces him to confess which child is his. The lover tells Remsen that it is the son. And from that time on, Remsen cannot bear the sight of the child and manages to keep him away from home as much as possible.

Unfortunately, the son gets himself into a jam with a blackmailing, under-age wench, is kicked out of Harvard and Remsen forces the boy to stand trial through his unwillingness to stand by the boy he thinks is the son of another man. The dead wife's lover comes back, however, to advise Remsen of the fact that the boy is really his child and that it is the daughter who belongs to him, and at the time Remsen wrung a confession from him he had lied because he had feared that Remsen's reaction would blight the innocent victim's life.

As was said before, there is one really great scene—that between the father and son when the son is expelled from college. And Ben Starkie as that son does a fine piece of acting. Francesca Bruning, too, manages to give the play some life, but the rest of the cast seemed to be magnificently unconcerned, with Kirkwood still relying on close-ups to show emotion for him.

Foy Starts Another

Having wound up "Sterilization" last week, Bryan Foy Saturday assigned Wallace Thurmond and Crane Wilbur to write an original screen play, "High School Girl," for the concern's next production. Thurmond scripted the last subject and Wilbur directed.

Yesterday in New York with Helen Gwynn

Some day we would like to dedicate a particularly fine specimen of a hymn of hate to lisping child actors on stage or screen and to heroines who are all sweetness and light and take it all very tremulously, bravely and starry-eyed and go tripping across the stage with tiny, birdlike movements of the head, fluttering hands and little mincing steps. Even though it's all in (the) play, we can't help getting the jitters every time we see one of these sunshine girls, because we keep thinking how awful it must be to have anything like that around the house, and our vote for the Pulitzer prize would go to any play that killed one of them off under the heading of justifiable murder. . . . Heroines like that are distinctly un-American, anyway. Our women are taught to "dish it out," not to "take it," and the stage this season has been particularly offensive in the number of sweet characters it has given audiences to coo over. Especially when it comes to costume dramas or comedies. Give a gal a hoop-skirt and pantaloons and, ipso facto, she thinks her feet have been bound, Chinese fashion, and so she'll hop, skip and jump or run all over the stage, but walk to the nearest exit? Never.

The stage has been pretty offensive lately anyway in what it has produced. So much so that one critic was moved to remark that all producers should be made as responsible to audiences for their product as any salesmen is for the worth of the commodity he sells. If you get ptomaine poisoning from eating canned goods, or just from eating, you can sue and collect, but there's absolutely no compensation for the physical disability engendered by bad plays. And more and more are we willing to bet that proportionately there are far more bad plays than pictures, even though most of the plays eventually become pictures.

Falling out of bathtubs is the current popular sport around town, with Paul Streger and Hobe Erwin both walking around with their arms in slings. . . . Erwin is about to join a union so's he can take advantage of the offers he's had to do stage settings. . . . Tallulah Bankhead finally got off to Lunnon in a mess of old brandy and champagne bottles. . . . The movies have helped a hard-working policeman to win his "S." Patrolman Lawrence Barry was snapped by the newsreels as he broke up a strike demonstration and, on the strength of the pictures, was promoted to sergeant. . . . Moss Hart hot-footed it over to the Music Box as soon as he got off the train to count the number of standees, his favorite indoor sport. . . . Peggy Fears had to go see "Melody in Spring" to find out milk comes from cows. She thought they made it by adding water to a powder. . . . A reporter interviewing a picture exec, who wouldn't talk, innocently inquired who had tied the exec's hands!

Code Group Wields Ax on List Tonight

The Code Committee for Extras meets tonight to resume deliberations on how to weed out all but 1500 of the registered Hollywood film extra players.

Last week requests were sent to all casting agencies, studios, Motion Picture Relief Fund and others for lists of extras they feel should be retained. A sub-committee has been huddling over a method to do the cutting. Tonight the entire committee will try to get it started.

Also, providing promised funds have arrived, the committee will lay the plans for the start of hearings of a flock of complaints of alleged code violations on the part of the producers.

Burns and Allen Wind Up Pic Work Saturday

Burns and Allen are due to clear in "Many Happy Returns" by Saturday, moving off immediately to New York where they will complete their series of radio broadcasts and take a six week jaunt to Europe. Paramount has an option on their services for a group of pictures for next year.

Tannura on Way Here

New York.—After a five-year absence from the Coast, Philip Tannura, lighting expert from Gaumont British, departed from New York Sunday for Hollywood, on the second lap of his vacation trip from the London plant.

Delegates Arriving

night when the first delegates began arriving in driblets by automobile ad train. By tonight all are expected to be on hand, and this afternoon the first business of the convention gets under way with the annual meeting of the Board of Directors, at which the election of officers is slated to take place.

At the Ambassador Hotel, scene of the convention, a registration and information office has been established on the main floor. All delegates and guests have been requested to register there and receive the credentials and official badges which will entitle them to the various studio trips, theatre admissions and other convention functions.

Except for the directors' meeting, the only business of the convention today will be that of registering. A big program of entertainment has been mapped out, starting tomorrow. The convention program has been arranged so that each afternoon will be devoted to the studio functions. The convention will officially open tomorrow morning at 10:30 o'clock.

Among the advance guard checking in last night at the Ambassador were: George Mann and Morgan Walsh, of San Francisco; Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Hunter and Mr. and Mrs. Phil Isley, of Tulsa; Mr. and Mrs. W. P. Moran, of Oklahoma City; Mr. and Mrs. Sol Gordon, of Beaumont, Texas; Gradwell Sears and A. W. Smith, of the Warner home office; Herman Robbins, of National Screen Service; Sam Dembow Jr., of Publix, and David Palfreyman, of the Hays office.

ACADEMY MEN ON TRAIL OF REALLY SILENT CAMERA

The Academy Research Council today started actual work on the problem of developing a silent motion picture camera when a comprehensive camera questionnaire was mailed out to more than 1000 cameramen, sound engineers and camera, projection and sound maintenance engineers.

This questionnaire was prepared by the Silent Camera Sub-committee of the Council, and is designed for the securing of a correlation of the ideas of the studio technicians working on production who are familiar with silent camera requirements. It is hoped that specifications may be set up from these which will perhaps solve the problem that has been wrestled with ever since sound recording made necessary a quiet camera.

Members of the committee in charge of this development are: Virgil Miller, chairman; John Arnold, John Boyle, J. L. Cass, William Eglinton, Bert Glennon, L. D. Grignon, Ray June, Kenneth Lambert, Lewis Mellor, Grover Laube, K. F. Morgan, Emil Oster, William Rudolph, Theodore Soderberg, Al Tondreau, A. G. Wise, R. C. Willman and Gordon S. Mitchell, manager of the Research Council.

Mae West Has Cold

Leo McCarey called off production on "It Ain't No Sin" at Paramount Saturday when Mae West's cold started to interfere with her work. If Miss West has recovered sufficiently, picture will go back into work today.

Buell Short Showing

Jed Buell's production, "Thar's Gold," a novelty one-reeler, is showing at the United Artists Theatre. Photographed by Mack Stengler and dialogued by Gayne Whitman, the short subject is Buell's first production.

Ed Marin Under the Wire

Edwin Marin brought in "Affairs of a Gentleman" at Universal Saturday night. Assignment clears the director on his Universal term deal. Edmund Grainger supervised the picture.

Irving Asks $110,126

New York.—Irving Trust Company, as receiver for Publix Enterprises, has submitted a bill to the courts for $110,126. It is expected this amount will be pared down.

'Borneo' Pic for DuWorld

New York.—Du World Pictures has taken over for distribution and road showing "Beast of Borneo," produced by Far Eastern Productions.

Swanson Comeback

into production immediately afterwards.

Gary Cooper has the male lead, thus providing an interesting two-star combination to head the cast.

Leonard Praskins is now working with Dwight Taylor on the script and William Wellman will direct. Filming is set to start June 1.

Is He Mortified?

New York.—An actor named Weber has filed suit for $75,000 against the Shuberts because he was billed in one of their productions as a Eunuch. He alleges that it was done to humiliate him and injure his professional reputation.

Expedition Pictures Popular Once More

The majority of major producers have gone in for the "expedition" type of production, Fox yesterday adding its name to the present list by commissioning Henry King to take a unit to South and Central America to film, "Marie Gallant."

Other studios with expeditions on their hands are MGM, with the "Good Earth" company in China, Warners, with Robert Florey en route to the same locale for a location shot for a trio of pictures, and Universal, indirectly through B. F. Ziedman's Stacey Woodard expedition to Australia. MGM will have two companies out when the George Seitz-Harold Noice unit flies off for the Amazon in Brazil.

Mack Reports at Burbank

Roy Mack arrived by train Friday from New York to start work on two Technicolor shorts at the local Warner plant. First goes into production April 16. Mack has been connected with the Vitaphone plant in New York for some time.

Elsner to Open House

Edward Elsner, former dramatic coach for Fox, has announced that he will open the Wilshire Dramatic Theatre about the middle of April. The theatre is now being remodeled and a 25 by 40 foot stage is being built. He plans to make it one of the most attractive little theatres in town.

Song for 'Glamour'

Leo Feist will publish "Heaven on Earth," a song by Roy Turk and Harry Axst, which Universal bought for "Glamour." Picture opens in the Radio City Music Hall the latter part of the month.

Cavanagh Tagged by Para

Paramount on Saturday signed Paul Cavanagh for a featured role in "Thank Your Stars" which Wesley Ruggles is directing. Jack Oakie, Dorothy Dell, Roscoe Karns, Arline Judge and Ben Bernie have the leads.

Set Louis King's Next

Louis King's next directorial assignment is scheduled to be "Painted Lady" for Fox. Claire Trevor will rate top-billing in the picture which Sol Wurtzel's unit will produce.

Perez Clicks in London

London.—Paul Perez is writing for British International, and has signed to do an original for the company later in the year.

Anna Sten, March Big Hits in London

London.—Fredric March in "Death Takes a Holiday" and Anna Sten in "Lady of the Boulevards," the renamed "Nana," have hit the Londoners hard, both pictures being held over. March is always a great favorite here and his picture is well liked also, but the Sten hit is a personal one, the English audiences not going for the story. Other hold-overs are "Only Yesterday" and "The World Changes."

The outstanding newcomers for the week are "Should Ladies Behave?" at the Empire, and "Good Dame," called "Good Girl" over here, at the Plaza.

Martha Sleeper and Hardie Albright Wed

Martha Sleeper, screen actress and niece of J. J. Murdock, and Hardie Albright were married yesterday at Riverside, in St. Francis Chapel. Ethel Murdock, cousin, attended the bride.

An extended honeymoon will have to wait on Albright's completion of the "Biography" engagement. Families of both bride and groom were in attendance yesterday.

that his office, in which Judge Lindsey is Labor Compliance Officer, will act in the nature of a checking and reviewing board in connection with the labor cases turned over to the Studio Labor Committee.

Cunningham stated that he will turn over all the complaints now in his office to the new board and that, at the end of ten days, a check-up will be made to see if the labor committee has taken care of them; if not, an explanation must be given. Also, he stated, the function of his office is to take up cases in which it is charged the labor committee has been unfair.

"The whole thing," explained Cunningham, "is merely a routine matter in which Washington is now trying to carry out the original intent of the code. That is to have a committee within the picture industry settle its own troubles. We should never have had to step in and handle the cases which Judge Lindsey heard last week. But the labor committee was not functioning, so it was up to us to take action. If the new committee functions properly, we won't have to handle any more of the cases.

"As to the cases already heard by Judge Lindsey, I cannot say until after a conference with the Judge what we will do with them. If the Judge feels he has heard sufficient evidence, we will have him decide on them and forward his decisions to Washington. Otherwise, we will turn them over to the new labor committee. There is nothing to get excited about. It seems like a tempest in a teapot. It is simply a move to carry out the business in the way it was originally intended. But I do want you to make it clear Judge Lindsey is not out."

The new committee contains to date only the names of Pat Casey and Ed Smith, both of whom were on the first studio labor committee. Other names will be added shortly.

BRULATOUR BULLETIN

WHO'S WHO

the REFLECTOR

Being an alumnus of a correspondence school—there's plenty I don't know. . . . I've always wondered about the words on coat of arms of The Prince of Wales—"Ich Dien." . . . I just found out that it means "I serve" . . . swell and elegant! . . . I'm going to find out if it's copyrighted—I'd like to pass it along to Johnny Arnold—John Boyle—Elmer Dyer—Frank Good—Jimmy Van Trees—Vic Milner—George Schneiderman—Ray June—Charlie Lang and a few other great guys who serve (WITHOUT PAY) as officers of the A.S.C. . . . What these men are doing for the entire industry is known to only a few and appreciated by about the same number. . . . They never talk about it—that's why I'm doing it.

Speaking of Columbia—Joe Walker continues with Grace Moore on the Schertzinger picture. . . . Al Siegler returns to turn out another one for Irving Briskin. . . . Roy Davidson and Andre Barlatier are at Catalina shooting backgrounds which will be used in "Black Moon" to be photographed by Joe August.

Norb Brodine reigns at Universal in solitary grandeur—he's the only one shooting there this day. . . . At Paramount tests are being shot by Milt Krasner with Landi in front of his lens for the Charles Rogers opus "I Loved an Actress." . . . Vic Milner still playing with Cleo. . . . Henry Sharp photographing "Many Happy Returns" and Charles Lang at the cameras for Bing Crosby in "She Loves Me Not." Ernie Haller and Tony Gaudio spent last week rehearsing for Sunday's golf tussle—(See official scores for results). . . . Arthur Todd, Ira Joe Morgan and George Barnes sleeping late these mornings—but it won't be long now.

Ray June with Ray Ramsey and Eli Fredericks trailing him on location in Oakland for "Treasure Island." . . . Ollie Marsh starting "The Merry Widow" at Emgeeem—Lubitsch directing—grand team. . . . Harry Jackson starting at Fox and at the same plant Louiewilliamo'connell shooting for Harry Lachman. . . . And by the time you've read this I'll know more about the fish stories of Pyramid Lake.

THE PERFECT "LIE"

Yesterday the A.S.C. held its first annual golf tournament at the Hollywood Country Club. Golfers descended on the course as the sun ascended, and as the last rays of Old Sol died behind the hills, the last weary foursome plodded up to the score keeper—who totaled up and found that more than 200 players had done their best—or worst.

The great sight was Mescal's 20-yard tee shot. Cecil Meyers, of First National, was low with a 77—Johnny Fulton, Bert Six, Al Lebowitz tied at 78. C. L. Lewis, Len Smith, Sherman Clark, E. Kronenwenth, Bert Glennon, Gordon Jennings totaled in the eighties for low gross honors. We may have missed a few eighty scores. The ninety scores were too numerous to mention. The hundred scores were greater, but everyone had a swell time. The trophies will be awarded tonight at an open meeting for all members and golfers at the Hollywood Chamber of Commerce.

Arkayo Rolling

Several pages have been torn from the old family almanac since the boys at R.K.O. have experienced the fast action launched in the production department there this week. Roy Hunt gets going with his focus-eye set on dainty Diana Wynyard and her first American leading man, Clive Brook. Story is ticketed "Sour Grapes."

Nick Musuraca plays spooky shadows again in "Murder on the Blackboard."

Teddy Tetzlaff, who made a swell name for himself (while photographing some of Columbia's outstanding hits during the past five years) now sets up for ole Bill Eglinton to photograph Richard Dix in "Family Man."

Dave Abel clocking out laughs by the gross with Wheeler and Woolsey in "Cavaliers."

Henry Gerrard puts the finishing touches to "Of Human Bondage," while Winnie Wenstrom shoots the tests for his next production which gets under way about mid-week.

Sex Question Again

Red Crawford, who is Pev Marley's assistant, apparently very much ashamed of himself for leaving the set so often to run to the telephone, finally inveigled Harry Davis, Pev's operative cameraman, to make a call for him. Davis rushed back out of breath and excited. "It's here! . . . Everything's Jake! . . . Boy, are you lucky?" "What—" whatted Red, "is it, a boy or a girl?" "Omigosh!" gargled Harry, "I forgot to ask." (Our reporter also forgot the same important question).

M. G. M. At Tops

Heaviest production scheduled in more than a year is buzzing along at the Culver City plant. Cameramen in actual production: Clyde De Vinna, Oliver Marsh, Charles Rosher, Ray June, James Van Trees, Hal Rosson, Len Smith, Jack Rose and James Wong Howe. Dan Clark is locationing in Honolulu. Chet Lyons continues to struggle along with "Malibou," and Charlie Clarke postcards from China that, popular belief to the contrary, tea is not the national drink.

More Recognition

Our fight (yes sir, we said fight) for more recognition of the cameraman hasn't been exactly in vain. We've carried our point in important spots during the past year or two and we popped the buttons right off our vest at a happy happening Tuesday night when "House of Rothschild" opened at the Chinese.

Entering the forecourt of the theatre—through the mob of several thousand tourist and native spectators—we observed boss Darryl Zanuck standing at the head of the camera and microphone battery line. We were with Pev and Virginia Marley. A signal from Mr. Zanuck and Pev and his bride were being photographed by twenty cameras and also led before the "mikes" for a "Hello, everybody." It's never happened before to ANY cameraman in Hollywood.

Seitz South

Headed to Panama, Johnny Seitz is assigned to Henry King's newest picture, "Marie Gallant," sailing April eighth for Panama. Seitz will select locations and photograph preliminary scenes for the production before being joined by the troupe, who plan to arrive on location about a week later. Seitz is accompanied by Joe McDonald, his operative cameraman.

Foxy Glennon

You never know where to find him next. Now Bert Glennon bobs up with Fox, where he will direct the photography on the Irving Cummings production, "Grand Canary," starring Warner Baxter. Glennon's fine achievement on the most recent Von Sternberg-Marlene Dietrich (Paramount) picture is creating plenty of pre-release comment. Glennon has had an unusually active and successful year.

Similar Letters

A short time ago we were plenty thrilled when advised of our election to honorary membership of A. S. C.

Charlie Lang, Academy award winner for best photography, was last week elected to honorary membership in Chapter Theta-Psi, U. S. C., a local, which on Friday, April sixth, went national, Chi-Phi. Lang formerly studied law at the college which made football famous—out here.

the BUZZER

(NOTE: Each week, sales and service representatives of J. E. Brulatour, Inc. will ask a number of cameramen the same question. The question will be given and then the answers verbatim.)

QUESTION: WHERE AND WHEN IS DIFFUSION USED TO GREATEST ADVANTAGE?

JOHNNY STUMAR (Columbia): The matter of diffusion is solely dependent on the mood of the scene. I use a certain amount in every scene I photograph because it takes some rawness out of the scene. My preference is gauzes and the various diffusion discs.

BILL REES (Warner Bros.): In addition to the regular close-up day scenes, I like to use diffusion discs on exterior night effects and fog effects, because it softens shadows and tends to deepen the illusion of night and its attendant invisibility.

MILT KRASNER (Paramount): For diffusion in my pictures I do not depend solely on discs or gauze. I utilize lights as much as possible in conjunction with my diffusion.

JOE WALKER (Columbia): I think the best use of diffusion is to create atmosphere and to subordinate unnecessary detail so that to some extent each member of the audience can create his own mental picture of the scene.

ERNIE PALMER (Fox): I find that with the exception of extreme long shots, practically all scenes need some diffusion. This, of course, runs from very light to rather heavy, according to the subject. Generally close-up work demands the heaviest we now use.

KENNETH PEACH (Roach): In comedy work, which constitutes most of the subjects made at my studio, very little diffusion is ever used. It does, however, come in handy on some of the effect shots used in musicals made by this studio.

HAL ROSSON (M.G.M.): Though the star I am at present photographing needs very little diffusion, I find that practically all close-ups and medium shots need diffusion of some degree.

MPTOA ASKS CLEAN PICS

TRADE VIEWS by W. R. WILKERSON

•MEMBERS of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, Hollywood welcomes you, this publication greets you. All of us here in the production industry hope that your convention is a great success and that your hours away from the meeting rooms will be most entertaining.

There are a hundred and one, or more questions to be discussed by your membership during your present meeting; all of them of some importance, but not one of them as necessary for the welfare and advancement of this industry as is the question of DOUBLE FEATURES. And we have not seen or heard the slightest hint that this matter will even be brought up before your body.

Gentlemen, Hollywood or six Hollywoods, can not supply the number of pictures that are required to fill in your double bills. By pictures, we mean GOOD PICTURES. It can't be done. And speaking of Hollywood, we include all sources of motion picture supply—the majors, the independents and the quickie makers. Hollywood never was nor ever will be able to make 365 pictures a year, of even fair quality. The combined producers of this industry have not been able to turn out even ONE HUNDRED MONEY MAKERS during a 12-month period, and by no stretch of the imagination could you gentlemen figure on FIFTY GOOD PICTURES and certainly not half that number of HITS.

As a consequence, why must you encourage the making of bad pictures? Why must you insist that the studios turn out groups of pictures that drive people out of your theatres and away from your box-offices? Why are you taxing this industry with more than it can deliver? And you are doing it by your play of dual programs.

Talking pictures are tough to make. They require time, plenty of time, for preparation. They can not be made as easily as the old silent pictures of yesterday. There are not enough ideas, there are not sufficient stories to make them at a pace that will permit you to play two on one program. It's not in the cards. And just as long as you will book them for double features, just so long will they be made — BAD PICTURES. Anything that you could do here at your con-

Exhibs Must Pay

New York.—Estimates issued today are that the annual cost of operating the Motion Picture Code Authority will be $320,000—which is to be split, with half being met by producers and distributors, and the other half by exhibitors. This is just an estimate. The final budget will be set Friday of this week.

MGM Plans to Try 'Postman' on Stage

MGM is considering a way out on its "Postman Always Rings Twice" property, which the Hays office banned. Studio will produce it as a play, owning the dramatic rights, and put it on Broadway.

If sufficient interest is aroused by such a production, the company will then go to bat in an effort to revamp it for approval in pictures. Company has had offers from Sam Harris and Thomas Mitchell for the dramatic rights.

Reliance Gets Landi For 'Monte Cristo'

Elissa Landi signed with Edward Small yesterday for the top spot in "Count of Monte Cristo," Robert Donat playing opposite her under Rowland V. Lee's direction. Pat de Cicco, of the Small-Landau office, set the ticket.

Lanfields Start East

Sidney Lanfield and his wife left by train last night for New York on the first leg of a trip to England, where Lanfield will direct "Sons o' Guns" for British and Dominions. Director will not sail until a writer is signed here to accompany him to prepare the story en route.

Ed Kuykendall Is Re-Elected President In First Business Transacted By Convention

The Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America swooped down on Los Angeles yesterday, captured the Ambassador Hotel and invaded the studios during the afternoon, following the meeting of the Board of Directors at which officers for the ensuing year were elected. A few more than 200 delegates arrived yesterday.

The results of the balloting were the re-election of President Ed Kuykendall, M. E. Comerford and A. J. Brylawski as first and fifth vice-presidents, Fred S. Meyer as secretary, Walter Vincent as treasurer, and Fred Wehrenberg as chairman of the Board. Edward G. Levy remains as counsel.

London Films All British Finance

London.—With the resignation of the Italian banker, Toeplitz, from the board of London Films Productions, the company now goes 100 per cent British finance, with Alexander Korda elevated to the seat of Managing Director.

There are two pictures currently in production for this company: the new Douglas Fairbanks Sr., production and the picture that is being made in Morocco.

New Stage at Universal

Universal started construction yesterday on a new stage which will convert the oldest stage on the lot into a modern sound unit. New building will contain 25,000 square feet of working space and will cost $75,000.

IATSE Head Fails To Face Darrow

Washington. — William Elliott, president of the IATSE, did not appear before the Darrow board yesterday, nor did he file a brief as scheduled.

He, with all others in the industry, were given 48 hours to appear, as after that time the board will hear no more picture troubles. It plans to begin serious consideration of all it has heard and attempt to reach some unanimous agreement for Darrow to report to the President.

MGM Sets Dupont for 'My Brother's Wife'

E. A. Dupont has been assigned to direct "My Brother's Wife," which Lawrence Weingarten will produce for MGM.

Story is an original by George Auerbach, Weingarten's assistant, and is being scripted by Zelda Sears and Eve Greene for a Jean Harlow and Clark Gable vehicle.

Blumenthal Denied Greenfield Suit Review

Washington.—The U. S. Supreme Court yesterday denied A. C. Blumenthal's application for a review of his pending suit to recover a share of $300,000 which Albert M. Greenfield received as part of a stock option agreement obtained on Fox Film stock.

MGM After Hopkins

MGM is talking to Paramount with a view to getting the loan of Miriam Hopkins for the leading role in "Forsaking All Others." Frank Davis and Irving Rapper are slated to co-direct.

Services for Turnbull

New Hope, Pa.—Funeral services for Hector Turnbull, well known picture executive, will be held here Wednesday afternoon.

B. S. MOSS PLANS RE-ENTRY WITH NABORHOOD HOUSES

New York.—B. S. Moss, veteran of the New York theater field, who began to withdraw his touches just about the time the depression hit the United States, has finally decided to reenter the picture business, and again as a theater man, despite the many rumors about his hankering for production.

Moss' first plans will involve the struction of a half dozen modern

Ed Sedgwick Gets His First Para. Assignment

Charles R. Rogers yesterday signed Edward Sedgwick to direct Jack Haley and Mary Boland in "Here Comes the Groom," which goes into work April 16.

Though Sedgwick has directed pictures for 21 years at all other major plants, this is his first assignment at Paramount.

PARA 'WE'RE NOT DRESSING' FORMULA PLOT MUSICAL

N.Y. Indies Still Talk of Code Suit

New York.—Despite the fact that two of their members are appointed on local Grievance and Clearance Boards, the local independent theatre organization men are still considering court action against the code on the ground that it is unconstitutional. Decision will be reached this week.

Henry Shiffman and Lawrence Bolognino are the two indies placed on the boards. The latter is expected to decline because of ill health.

Seff-Bartlett Team

Manny Seff has been teamed with Sy Bartlett on the screen play of "Blondie of Kansas City" at Warners. It will star Joan Blondell.

Wood Picture Held Up

MGM's "100 Per Cent Pure," Sam Wood director, is being held up by Franchot Tone, who is still busy in "Sadie McKee."

How Did He Know?

A major studio writer lost his temper in a story conference the other day, grabbed his script, threw it out of the window and walked out. The next day the supervisor sent for him and said, gently: "You won't mind if we take you off this story, will you? We really think you're not in sympathy with it."

Lee Phelps Heads Jr. Actors' Guild

After plenty of wrangling and some hot electioneering, Lee Phelps was elected president of the Junior Actors' Guild (extras) at its meeting last night. Carmel Grady was set in as first vice-president, and Florence Wix as the second. Edwin Baker was elected treasurer.

The voting was so close for the secretarial job that the tellers' committee is to meet again tomorrow for a recounting, and members of board of directors will be announced also.

Cast Names Are A Cinch Big Draw

"WE'RE NOT DRESSING"
(Paramount)

Direction .....Norman Taurog
Story .....Benjamin Glazer
Screen Play: George Marion Jr., Horace Jackson, Francis Martin.
Music and Lyrics....Gordon and Revel
Photography .....Charles Lang
Cast: Bing Crosby, Carole Lombard, George Burns, Gracie Allen, Ethel Merman, Leon Errol, Jay Henry, Ray Milland, John Irwin, Charles Morris, Ben Hendricks, Ted Oliver.

The word was spread around Hollywood and Westwood yesterday that the new Bing Crosby picture was going to be previewed at the Fox-Westwood The answer was that all the seats, other than those reserved in the preview section, were sold out and occupied by 7 o'clock and a complete house sellout, standing room and otherwise, by 7.30. When the picture went on each of the side aisles was packed with standees and the center aisles were littered with boys and girls sitting on the floor. It was one of the largest turnouts we have ever seen for a preview.

And this, Mr. Exhibitor, will probably happen when you put out the Crosby banner for this latest Paramount "We're Not Dressing," for that boy has one of the largest sales of any star in this business right at this point, but a picture or two or the quality of "We're Not Dressing" will kill off that draw.

"We're Not Dressing" is from Formula 666 further catalogued under the heading of the "Shipwreck—Deserted Isle Idea." It is no different in plot construction or story-telling than the hundreds of others that have gone before You know all the answers after five hundred feet of the film has been unravelled. Only this one has Crosby, Carole Lombard, Ethel Merman and Burns and Allen and that's something.

Mack Gordon and Harry Revel have written some catchy tunes, all beautifully sung by Crosby, with the exception of the one done by Ethel Merman and Leon Errol, and it was swell.

Photography was excellent.

Double Feature Exponent Stretches Out in N. Y.

Photography .....Nick Musuraca
Cast: Diana Wynyard, Clive Brook, Billie Burke, Reginald Owen, Alan Mowbray, Gilbert Emery, Phyllis Barry, Walter Armitage, Katherine Williams, Robert Adair, Vernon Steele.

"Where Sinners Meet," based on "The Dover Road," is A. A. Milne at his Milne-ist. Which is to say that is too utterly, utterly whimsy.

It is the meringue without the lemon pie—whipped cream without any cake. It is a fairy tale without the gusty humor and fantastic comedy that usually accompany a fairy tale.

And whether its lightness of mood, its skimming sparrow of a plot, its little chirping dialogue will prove too effervescent for the theatre-going palate, accustomed as it is to more lusty and muscled entertainment, is a question that will worry many an exhibitor.

However, the picture is, in its own peculiar way, rather amusing. The story at least has the advantage of being different.

Clive Brook plays Mr. Latimer, an eccentric millionaire who lives on the Dover Road, over which most English couples elope because it connects with the boat to France. By means of a "spy" system, Mr. Latimer is informed of the plans of these couples, made usually in the unthinking romance of the moment, and he abducts them to his house where he forces them to remain for a week of consideration.

Alan Mowbray, eloping with Billie Burke, Reginald Owen's wife, finds that her continual fussing and cooing over him become deadly even in the short space of a week. Diana Wynyard, eloping with Reginald Owen, finds that he is unbearable when he has a cold in the head. While Owen, hurt because his sneezes don't arouse sympathy in Miss Wynyard, welcomes back the worried, fluttering attentions of his own wife.

Clive Brook plays his role with a more ease and naturalness than usual; Billie Burke gives a perfectly delightful performance as the woman who must always be fussing over somebody; Miss Wynyard is charming and expert, giving a good deal of warmth to a rather colorless role; Alan Mowbray is excellent as always, and Reginald Owen's characterization of the dull, stupid, sneezing Romeo is completely amusing. Gilbert Emery, as the butler, is outstandingly effective.

J. Walter Ruben directed with the light touch the story demands; H. W. Hanemann adapted the Milne play; Nick Musuraca's photography is intriguingly stunning.

Grauman Happy

Sid Grauman is happy. The advance seat sale on "Rothschild" has caused the old maestro to put a fresh coat of paint on the side of the Chinese, announcing that the picture is there for a season, with seats eight weeks in adaance.

This is the first time the building has been used for a painted sign for the past two years.

Mono-Division Trouble Fixed Up

Atlantic City.—The rift that developed between Monogram Pictures and First Division Pictures, and Ray Johnston and Harry Thomas has been fixed up and First Division continues to distribute Monogram attractions in the Greater New York territory.

The cause of the rift was the rumor that First Division, with its series of exchanges throughout the country, had decided to go into production on its own and form a competing production-distributing organization to Monogram.

Although there is a clause in the Monogram contract that cancels it only by mutual consent of both parties, it evidently meant nothing in this breach between the two companies.

But Harry Thomas, of First Division, and Ray Johnston, of Monogram, got together here at the convention and everything is now hunky-dory.

Vince Barnett Saved from Fire by LaRue

Vince Barnett was knocked out by smoke and rescued by Jack LaRue when Eddie Brandstatter's house near Barstow burned down Sunday. Flames, caused by a defective flue, swept the house before its source could be found.

Party, hunting over the week-end, included Mattie Brooks, Irving Pilson and Mort Mandel.

Staub on Way Here For Warner Color Shorts

New York.—Ralph Staub has left for the coast to continue his direction of Warner shorts that was interupted here by the temporary shutdown of the Warner Brooklyn studio.

He will direct two musical shorts that are to be done in Technicolor.

Lawyers Plague Para.

New York.—Though there is still some doubt as to whether the Root, Clark, Buckner law firm will get the $125,000 fees it asked in the Paramount receivership case, the firm yesterday put in an additional bill of $18,266. The referee has the new bill under consideration.

Cast Could Not Overcome Story

"WILD GOLD"
(Fox)

Direction .....George Marshall
Screen Play.....Lester Cole and Henry Johnson
Photography .....Joseph Valentine
Cast: John Boles, Claire Trevor, Harry Green, Monroe Owsley, Roger Imhof, Ruth Gillette, Edward Gargan, Suzanne Kaaren, Wini Shaw, Elsie Larson, Blanca Vischer, Gloria Roy, Myra Bratton.

It seems doubtful that there was ever an actual script for this picture. It has all the earmarks of something that was made up as they went along.

Against a topical background, that of the modern-day gold fields where armies of unemployed pan a meager living from abandoned '49 claims, there has been patterned a tale that passes belief and very nearly passes understanding. It has all of the familiar elements of a score of good mellers, strung together so inexpertly that the result will confuse any audience. As the picture doesn't know itself where it is going, how can anyone else tell?

Roger Imhof contributes the only sustained characterization in his role of a desert prospector and he is killed before the plot has run half its course. His death, by the way, is twice regrettable, first, because of the hole left in the cast, and secondly, because it offers an excuse for a musical show, perhaps the worst motivated excuse yet devised.

For the rest of the story or rather several half-developed stories, there is John Boles as a drunken construction engineer who never succeeds in winning back sympathy after his childish behavior with the girl (who could?); Claire Trevor as the dance-hall singer married to Monroe Owsley, an even dirtier dog than usual; and Harry Green, proprietor of a stranded musical troupe, who becomes proprietor of nearly every other business. Second honors, such as they are, belong to Green. With Imhof, he stages a barroom cracker race that is the one highlight of the evening.

The story had Director George Marshall, in common with the cast, stymied before it started. That he was able to get anything at all out of it is an achievement. Joe Valentine's camera work is very good and the miniatures for the dam break are splendid.

Cutting can do but little to remedy such an obvious flop, but it is respectfully suggested that the musical scoring, which suddenly breaks out after Claire Trevor has knocked Boles cold, could be eliminated. And not missed.

The locale of California's gold fields for the unemployed offers numerous sales angles. A picture should be made about it sometime.

Karloff Losing 'Em

Boris Karloff goes to the Good Samaritan Hospital tomorrow for a tonsilectomy.

Yesterday in NEW YORK with HELEN GWYNN

For years now, everyone has expressed himself at one time or another on the subject of the opera and what could be done about it. Leopold Stokowski was supposed to be experimenting with the idea of having all the singers in the orchestra pit, while attractive looking actors engaged in drama on the stage, and rumor had even gone so far as to state that Mr. Stokowski was considering opera through the medium of the screen. But that was all talk. However, while we were all talking, William deMille got to work on the idea and sold it to some entrepreneurs (backers to you), and has just finished a sample in one reel of what opera will be like in the talkies. This sample will be released by Educational Pictures in the Treasure Chest series and is worth serious consideration.

DeMille chose to start off with a couple of scenes from "Pagliacci" and in the title role is Henry Hull. Clara Beranger has done the scenario and John Erskine has written an English libretto for it. Alexander Smallens, of the Philadelphia Symphony, is the director of the orchestral accompaniment, and the singers were all drafted from the operatic stage. And while capable actors visually work out the drama for you, excellent singers interpret the actions musically, and the result is decidedly pleasant and entertaining. The only objection we could find was in the use of sub-titles, but it seems to us that the sub-titles were necessary due to the fact that the entire opera was not performed, because surely, with the text in English, there is no necessity for adding an English libretto in the form of written titles and explaining the obvious.

Outside of that, however, the experiment is all to the good and we're anxious to see an entire opera done in the same manner. John Erskine's translation is not only good, but sings well and can certainly be better understood than most operas written in English. We have yet to be able to understand more than a stray word or two of Edna St. Vincent Millay's script of the "King's Henchman." And despite the fact that Henry Hull goes in for plenty of emoting as the clown with the breaking heart, it's still a hundred percent better than watching a tenor, and oh, the joy of not having to peer down dark and empty throats while somebody warbles away or grips a high note very much sostenuto.

Leo Bulgakov, who produced and directed the highly successful "One Sunday Afternoon," will be on his way to the Coast any minute now and probably for Columbia. . . . Capt. Jefferson Davis Cohen is still a house guest of A. C. Blumenthal, and Blumey gets first hand accounts of the President's fishing ability from Willie Stewart, who is a guest on the Nourmahal. . . . WOMEN'S PICTURES CLUBS FIND 16% OF TOO BAD TO SHOW

Warner Brothers Worst Offenders

The group of organizations of women which makes a practice of reviewing motion pictures, looked over 343 features during the past year and decided that 55 of them were not suitable for public consumption because of "objectionable themes or unsavory treatment."

There were several others which were passed by the group in spite of the fact that they were found to contain some objectionable features which could easily have been omitted without affecting the entertainment value.

Of the 55 disapproved, the largest number from any one studio came from Warner-First National, which had fifteen in the objectionable category. Paramount had 13, Fox had seven, MGM had seven, Radio had six, Universal three, Columbia two.

In view of the industry's continuous fight against censorship, such figures are dangerous, according to reports made to the Hays office by Dr. James Wingate. His report takes some of the Warner pictures as examples of what should not be made, and he states that the censors in several places cut some of the product of this studio to ribbons.

The most deeply cut picture on the list is "Convention City," which stung the various censorship boards into putting it through the wringer. As high as three pages of cuts were ordered in such territories as Chicago and Ohio. British Columbia banned it entirely on the grounds that "depiction of a 'convention of lecherous salesmen,' as described by one of the actresses in dialogue, seems fitting and would make this orgy of drunkenness and sensuality unsuitable for family theatres. Sufficient eliminations would make the picture useless from entertainment angle."

Warner's "Heat Lightning" even got a rise out of the Hays stronghold, New York, where eleven deletions were compelled before the picture got through to the exhibitors.

Pennsylvania ripped into "The Big Shakedown," slicing it with two pages of ordered eliminations. Ohio treated "Heat Lightning" in the same manner, extending itself in the case of "I've Got Your Number," on which three pages of deletions were slapped on before it got by

Some of the other pictures and the criticisms were:—

Baby Face:—"Sex angle decidedly offensive."

Bedside:—"Unwholesome theme."

Easy to Love:—"Unwholesome."

Ex-Lady:—"Sex emphasis — unwholesome."

Goodbye Again:—"Offensive lines and situations."

Havana Widows: — "Offensive theme and dialog.

Lily Turner:—"Unwholesome sex treatment."

She Had to Say Yes:—"Risque—suggestive."

The women's groups which concurred in these opinions are D. A. R.; National Society of New England Women; General Federation of Women's Clubs, west coast committee; California Congress of Parents and Teachers;; National Council of Jewish Women, Los Angeles section; Women's University Club of Los Angeles; United Church Brotherhood, representing California and Los Angeles federations; National Catholic Council of Women, California committee; American Library Association. These organizations see these pictures under the guidance of Mrs. Thomas G. Winter.

Mary Hears from Doug

New York.—Mary Pickford celebrated her forty first birthday here today—and not the least pleasant part of the day was the fact that she had received flowers and cables from Douglas Fairbanks. The fact was made known to the papers without comment.

Turnbull Play on H. B. Franklin List

New York.—The plans of H. B. Franklin, former picture theater executive, and Arch Selwyn, for stage productions have reached the point of signing Harry Wagstaff Gribble to direct two plays for them next season.

The vehicles at present on the list are "The Lady Is Tired" by Frances Marion, screen writer, and a dramatization of the book "Cora Potts," by Hector Turnbull, well known picture producer who died Sunday.

'Wild Cargo' Held Over In Several Cities

New York.—"Wild Cargo" is being held over for second week at the Music Hall, here and also in Keith's in Washington and the Golden Gate in San Francisco.

Frank Buck will make six weeks' personal appearances at the Palace Theatre in Chicago, San Antonio, Fort Worth and Los Angeles.

Segall Dialogues MGM's 'Corespondent'

Harry Segall has just completed the dialogue writing job on "Professional Corespondent," which will be directed by Harry Beaumont, with Loretta Young, May Robson, Franchot Tone, Ted Healey, Patsy Kelly and C. Henry Gordon in the cast.

Cohen Signs Brown

Maury Cohen, producer of Invincible Pictures, has signed Karl Brown to write an original story to follow "Fifteen Wives," which is scheduled to go before the cameras shortly. Brown's story is entitled "Anything Once."

Mrs. Belmont at A.M.P.A.

New York.—Mrs. August Belmont will speak to more than 1,000 people of the motion picture industry, including executives and leading producers, at the annual dinner of the AMPA in Hotel Astor, April 21.

Pulpits Selling 'Rothschild' Pic

New York.—Rabbi Stephen Wise used as his sermon here Sunday, "The House of Rothschild," dwelling on the merits of the picture and suggesting that every person in the synagogue go to see the picture at the Astor and cause others to see it.

Los Angeles.—Rev. G. A. Briegleb, rector of St. Paul's Presbyterian Church, not only used "The House of Rothschild" as a topic for his sermon Sunday, but questioned his congregation on the historical characters on which the picture was based and handed out three pairs of seats to those giving the best answers. He also ran an ad in Saturday's papers, announcing his intended discussion of the picture.

Universal Trying to Sign Louis Heyward

London.—Louis Heyward, currently in Noel Coward's "Conversation Piece" here, has been approached by Dave Bader of Universal to sign a five-year contract, with the young actor shrugging his shoulders at the deal.

Curiously enough, Paramount's scout this side tried to interest the coast in Heyward with Marathon Street turning down the idea.

'Rip Tide' Grabs Frisco Records

San Francisco.—The MGM production of "Rip Tide" sort of ripped the Warfield records for the past 14 months during its first three-day showing.

The picture opened to $3800 Friday, jumped to $5,000 Saturday and did a Sunday gross of $4,700.

New York.—"Rip Tide," going into the second week at the Capitol, did $23,000 on Saturday and Sunday, just a little over $1,000 short of the first Saturday and Sunday.

Tacoma. — The Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer production of "Rip Tide" knocked off one of the best weeks for this spot in a long time. The audience went for the picture in a big way and its run is a cinch to stimulate picture-going for some time.

ESSANESS THEATRES CORPORATION

April 5, 1934.

Dear Mr. Wilkerson:

I wonder if you realize how important and potent the subject, and the manner in which you describe it, contained in your trade news of March 30th, really is.

Your paper, to which I have subscribed for a long time, is informative and valuable. On an average you do, without exception, give us the best reports on pictures, but when you attack the double-feature situation you are attacking one of the twin cancers of the business, the other being ridiculously cheap admission prices which prevail in some territories.

Two bad pictures do definitely more harm than does one bad picture. This policy has a two-bladed effect, because it drives people away from theatres and it gives the opportunity to the producer of an inferior picture to get revenue which would otherwise not be available. As long as they can salvage production cost and make a profit at the same time producers are not going to worry as much about an inferior quality as they would if they were penalized for a poor picture by losing money with it. The independent producer-distributor expects to be protected against an anti-double-feature plan, so that he can dispose of pictures which cannot receive playing time otherwise. After all, a good picture will always be booked and independents would, undoubtedly, be better off making one good picture than twelve mediocre productons, which build no stars, develop very little talent in any other respect, and cannot do any particular good for the industry. It is true that the double-feature advocate will cite New England, where this policy has been in vogue for years, but I cannot help but feel that the only reason it is still in existence there is because the exhibitors, as a whole, in that territory have been sticking to the line of least resistance and have been afraid to take a definite stand and give their public a chance to prove to them that they would rather have a well-balanced program of one feature and shorts than their present policy.

There are any number of pictures coming through from major companies this year which, undoubtedly, would have been shelved if there were not so much double-feature time available.

Other industries are trying to elevate the quality of their product and the plane of their merchandising, but in this business far too many are still sticking to double-features and when that fails to pull they, in some territories, are resorting to 10 cent admission prices and the giving away of every conceivable kind of gifts from chinaware and crockery to clothing. Such procedure is the worst kind of merchandising and is bound to act as a steady drain on the appeal of the motion picture to the public.

I would suggest that when the M.P.T.O.A. convenes in your city next week you get in touch with Mr. Jack Miller of Chicago, at the Ambassador, who can give you definite information regarding the situation in Chicago, where major product is not double-featured and motion picture exhibition is on a more intelligent plane than any other large city in the United States. Furthermore, nothing is done unless the majority of the exhibitors in this city concur.

This is the first letter that I have ever written to a trade journal and it is prompted because of my pride in and respect for the business and disgust with practices going on in certain parts of the country.

Yours very truly,
Essaness Theatres Corporation,
EDWIN SILVERMAN, President

Quittner Anti-Trust Suit Is Still Alive

New York.—After the majors had figured they won a complete victory in the Quittner anti-trust suit a new angle has cropped up. Quittner has resorted to the pauper privileges on appeals and his case will step further for another hearing in the United States Circuit Court of Appeals.

By using the "pauper" basis for appeal the complainants will save about $10,000 in legal fees. It is expected that the argument on appeal will come up about June or July.

Four Carroll Girls Stay

Anyo Faranda, one of the eleven Earl Carroll beauties brought out here for Paramount's "Murder at the Vanities," is sick in her apartment with flu and consequently was unable to leave when seven of the girls returned home. Miss Faranda and three other girls will remain here in the hopes of getting picture breaks.

Zelda Sears Abroad

Zelda Sears has been granted a leave of absence from her MGM writing ticket and is set to take a trip with her husband to Great Britain. They leave in three weeks.

Spence Goes to MGM

Ralph Spence yesterday checked in at MGM to handle the dialogue job on the screen play of "Student Tour," which Monta Bell is producing.

Wead-Reyher on 'Ace'

Frank Wead and Ferdinand Reyher check in at Fox today to write the screen play for "The Ace," which Al Rockett is producing. The Edington and Vincent office set the ticket.

Delmars on Vacation

Lionel Barrymore 25 Years in Pics

Lionel Barrymore today celebrates the 25th anniversary of his first appearance in pictures. His first film was "The New York Hat" and Mary Pickford was in the cast. His current one is "100 Percent Pure," with Jean Harlow.

Two British Pictures On Double Bill in N.E.

Springfield, Mass.—Probably for the first time, two British pictures were shown on a double bill at the Broadway Theatre here. They were "The Ghoul" and "Orders Is Orders," both made by British Gaumont.

Kelton Extends Tour

Radio has given Pert Kelton permission to extend her personal appearances another week, the player hopping from Chicago to Buffalo, for an extra week on a deal booked by Beyer-MacArthur. She returns April 23 to go into "Great American Harem."

vention and follow up after you get back home will be of little benefit unless you get BETTER PICTURES, and that won't be done if you force the producers to turn out more than they are able to make.

One bad picture on a program is pretty tough, but when you have two bad ones, it's more than twice as bad. And you know and we know that you can't get two good pictures for any one program without robbing yourself of a good attraction later. Assuming you have one good picture and you double it up with a bad one, what is the effect? The same as if you had a couple of palookas instead of one.

Any of you, all of you, are kidding yourselves when you argue that you can make more money with a program of two features and an assemblage of shorts, even if they are all GOOD, than you could with a single feature of QUALITY and a surrounding program of short reels. And the funny part of it all is that you can't run a double feature policy and get satisfying entertainment.

You are also kidding yourself with the chatter that you have to run double bills to compete with your opposition. That's bunk! If you could get one good picture a week, or an engagement, your competitor with his double bills would have to close his theatre or meet your competition with GOOD ENTERTAINMENT.

Nothing matters in this business but GOOD PICTURES. All your codes, your clearances, your labor problems, block booking and everything that goes with them, mean nothing if you can't get good pictures, and the longer you pursue the policy of running two pictures on the same program, just so long will you keep people, who are seeking entertainment, out of your theatre.

KILL THAT DOUBLE FEATURE EVIL!

'Rothschild' Gets $24,131 in Its First Week at Chinese

The Twentieth Century Production of "The House of Rothschild," released through United Artists, restored prosperity to Grauman's Chinese Theatre here last week with a take of $24,131 for the first seven days. This is more than $7,000 better than the first week of the previous attraction and $3,000 better than any picture that has played the house during the past 14 months.

Weekend business in New York, Boston and Cleveland, the three other key spots now running the picture, topped the business of last weekend, according to reports from U. A. home office.

The picture opens at San Francisco, April 17.

Paul Kohner, producer of "S.O.S.," makes appointment with friends from foreign countries for opening—but Mrs. can't miss him in St. Moritz—so here you are. . . . Friedland, Keller, Perez, Chalmandier and all the misses and Mrs. from the "U" office looking like a million just for the fun of it. . . . Albert Marx brings us regards from Dave Bader. . . . And do they go hard for Paramount's old stuff; you should hear them scream at "Studio 28" when the tragedeee of Uncle Tom (edition 1905!!) passes on the white sheet. . . . With "Duck Soup" on the bill, program is a real wow. . . . Edouard Gross (why wasn't he born in Greenwich Village!) doesn't know a word of English, but understands films. . . . That's why he delivers always genuine entertainment; now, boys, give the Paris showman a real hand.

(RKO) Leasin off on a trip AGAIN. It's FLYING DOWN TO—Austria this time—and (Columbia) Zama back from London instead with Juan Berrone under his arm. . . . Speaking of Berrone, remember he's a great sculptor and a bigger film man yet. . . . Here in Paris he's producing; in Italy and Switzerland distributing, and in Belgium he's going to DO big things. . . . My goodness, Hollywood has come to life in Paris at the American Hospital gala of "Roman Scandals" with bunch of cutest looking nurses selling programs. . . . Richard Arlen and his Mrs. strolling down Blvd. des Italiens —almost like love birds. . . . Harry Blue and Bob Robson are crazy about Paris even before leaving the station. . . . Everybody would—having a well signed up job in Europe's show window. . . . Tarara, Tarara! Max Friedland is here again—and didn't speak to press since visit to Pa Laemmle. There must be big things brewed on the fourth floor of the Trudaine building with Friedland holding key of decisions.

The Bal des Petits Luts Blanc was an immense affair. . . . Leave it to Bailby, me boys. . . . A big friend of the films and film people, he always gets the cream of creams among artists and performers. . . . Cameramen just raving of marvelous shooting conditions given to them with lights enough to flood three Hollywood premieres. . . . Just take a peek at those newsreel sequels made by Fox, Paramount, etc., and you will attend to good two-reelers of genuine attractions.

Better let's drink another glass of champagne—and live in new expectation of the next year's affair. . . . And Herve Lauwick should pilot us—to all the nice debutantes.

Nazis Censor Selves But Not Abroad

Berlin.—The German government isn't doing any worrying about foreign morals, judging from the new film law.

One section makes allowance for the difference in moral views in various countries and permits the office of the censor to approve for release abroad pictures not considered suitable for home moral consumption.

Big Scandal Due on French Censorship

Paris.—The French republic lives under the sign of cleaning up. The Stavisky affair has called the public attention to the fact that certain infuences could always be bought through politcians.

This awakening having spread over the film industry, a big scandal is on the point of breaking out, due to the accusations which are going to be launched by certain companies against unfair methods within the French censorship board.

Mendes Has Finished 'Jew Suss' for Gaumont

London.—Lothar Mendes has completed "Jew Suss" for British Gaumont at a cost of $500,000. Conrad Veidt has the lead. As a token of appreciation, Cameraman Bernie Knowles gave Mendes a gold fountain pen on the day the last shot was made.

New Danish Company

Copenhagen.—A new Danish company, the Film and Emulsion Factory, has been organized here for the purpose of manufacturing and trading in photographic film, emulsion and allied articles.

GOVT. IN FULL CHARGE OF GERMAN PRODUCTION

Berlin.—The new German film law, which became effective on March 1, 1934, gives the Government complete control of every phase of motion picture production in Germany.

The Government is said to consider itself responsible to a great extent for the welfare of the moving picture industry, since motion pictures are considered a good medium for advancing national aims and ideas, as well as an instrument of culture.

Until the effective date of the new law, film production was completed before the picture was shown to the censors. In case of total rejection of a film the entire amount of time, work and capital invested in production was lost. The new law provides for a Federal Film Critic who will work under the orders of the Federal Ministry for propaganda and Public Enlightenment. The work of the Film Critic will consist of assisting the film industry in all dramatic questions; providing advice regarding manuscripts and arrangement of film subjects; examining manuscripts and scenarios submitted by the industry to determine if they are in accordance with the new law; advising producers of objectionable films as to necessary changes and preventing the production of objectionable pictures.

The responsibility for permission of a film rests entirely with the president of the Berlin censor office. This official will be in a position to rely on the assistance and cooperation of four experienced persons from the film trade, art, and literature, on whom he can call for this purpose. While these men formerly had a voice in the approval or rejection of films, their activity will now become merely advisory.

Flaherty to Launch His Picture in New York

London.—With the intention of being on the spot for the New York preview of his new pic, "Man of Aran," and to give it a personal exploitation boost, Bob Flaherty will go to New York after the British preview here.

Flaherty is said to have another winner in his "Man of Aran" following the same style of subject as his "Moana."

Big Italian Loss

Rome—Statistics now being compiled indicate that the Italian film industry took a loss of more than 72 million lire during the year 1933. This is more than double the loss of 1932 and is 72 times as great as that of 1931 when only one million lire was chalked in the red.

Welch to Expand

London.—Howard Welch, recently making quotas here for Columbia, has laid plans for the making of more expensive features during the coming year. He plans to spend approximately $100,000 on each production.

Million Francs a Day For French Theatres

Paris.—In the course of 1933 the total receipts of French film theatres amounted to 360 million francs or about one million francs a day. The Olympia Theatre figures in these statistics with the sum of nineteen millions, Gaumont-Palace twenty millions and Paramount twenty-seven millions.

Out of the 570 films produced to screen in France in 1933, only 150 were French-made pictures. America supplied 230 films, Germany 113, England 34 and Italy 17. These figures refer to features. Cartoons and other shorts are not included.

Trophies Presented To Camera Golfers

C. Myers and Bert Six, of First National; J. Fulton, of Universal, and Al Lebowitz, of Fox, carried away the trophies in the American Society of Cinematographers golf tournament, held Sunday at the Hollywood Country Club. Lowest score of 77 was shot by Myers. Highest score, 191, was turned in by W. Vogel.

Prizes valued at $2,500 were given to participants, ranging from the Mae West diamond ring to a toy camera.

Talbot Jennings Here

Talbot Jennings, New York playwright, arrived yesterday to take up a term writing ticket with MGM.

Serial Cameramen Get Pay Increase

According to a revision in the Cinematographer-Producer contract, serial cinematographers go on the same wage scale as feature production cameramen when serials are made in one consecutive working period. This clarifies the bone of contention in the present contract with the producers. Serial men claim they work harder than feature men and were on "short subject" cameraman pay.

Revision also starts Sunday overtime at 6 a.m. Sunday instead of midnight Saturday.

"Golden Hour" penalty time applies to all classes according to recent interpretation.

Six regular holidays will prevail in each year: New Year's Day, Decoration Day, Fourth of July, Labor Day, Thanksgiving and Christmas. When the holiday falls on Sunday, Monday will be considered as holiday with double time paid if work is done on that day.

Doyle-Warners Make Up

Warners and Laird Doyle finally got together on a long-term writing ticket yesterday, both parties patching terms after a falling out last week which had Doyle checking off the lot. His new ticket was negotiated through the Small-Landau office.

Big Musical for Ross

Paramount is planning big musical production, starring Lanny Ross. It will be a story of the old South and the tentative title is "Mississippi."

KUYKENDALL RE-ELECTED PRESIDENT OF THE MPTOA

The new officers elected are W. S. Butterfield, second vice-president; M. A. Lightman, third vice-president; B. N. Berinstein, fourth vice-president. Berinstein is a member of the MPTOA, although the Independent Theatre Owners of Southern California, of which he is president, is not affiliated with the national body.

Jules Michaels was appointed chairman of the Grievance Commttee in place of Lewen Pizor, who was unable to make the trip here because of illness. Michaels has been chosen by New York and New England as their representative on the executive board, although the other five zones will not announce their choices until tomorrow.

The executive board adopted a resolution praising the work of Michael O'Toole for the exhibitors and regretting his inability to attend the convention. In contradiction of some of the reports that have been spread about the organizaton, Secretary Meyer said last night:—

"Certain sources have spread propaganda that we have made this trip simply to play around with the producers. The MPTOA is working for the good of the industry, and if by mingling with local people we can get better pictures, pictures free from filth, cleaner pictures for the whole family, we will accept the accusation."

The convention gets down to serious business this morning. The wives and daughters will go sight-seeing while the delegates work. Mayor Shaw and a representative of Governor Rolph will welcome the members to the city and state, and M. A. Lightman will respond for the organization. Vice-President Comerford will preside while President Kuykendall makes his report, which will be followed by reports of Secretary Meyer and Chairman Berinstein, of the Convention Committee.

All standing committees will be appointed before lunch. The session will adjourn at 12:30 o'clock and the afternoon will be spent visiting various studios, after luncheon at Warner-First National. Entertainment will be provided by the Warner stars and players, and the guests will watch the shooting of "Dames," as well as being permitted to see a screening of "Twenty Million Sweethearts."

This evening, Universal will be host. Universal City Club and Whiteman Hall have been converted into ballrooms where dancing will be enjoyed after a dinner.

The speech of welcome for the industry will be made by Louis B. Mayer tomorrow night at a grand banquet at the MGM studios, where a host of entertainers will strut their stuff, with Pete Smith as master of ceremonies.

Dan Kelly Back at Col.

Dan Kelly is back in the old saddle as casting chief at Columbia. He is substituting for William Perlberg during the latter's New York trip.

Writers Plan for Harmony in Guild

Frankly anxious to solidify the Screen Writers' Guild ranks and eliminate factionalism, the new board of governors of the organization held its first official meeting last night and issued a blanket invitation to all groups within the Guild, opposing the governors, to meet Monday night and iron out their differences.

The board also set in motion a plan to form an Advisory Council. The purpose of the council will be to look into all writer problems and seek ways of improving certain conditions.

MPTOA AGAINST DUALS

TRADE VIEWS by W. R. WILKERSON

•WITH the demands set forth by theatre owners throughout the country for more pictures than the studios here can SUCCESSFULY make, the theatre owner must accept the responsibility for so many bad pictures and the resulting bad business.

No community is so small that it could not run a good picture twice and three times as long as the junk now being served in daily doses. And those daily doses are being passed up as bad medicine. There are too few to patronize them. But just as long as the exhibitor will buy that type of picture, just so long will producers make them.

The men behind the guns here, that is, those who are turning out from 36 to 60 pictures a year, grinding them out at a price and as best they can, acknowledge that a GOOD PICTURE will earn their company five and ten times the amount that will come through on a programmer. Their logic is that it's too dangerous to put in the time and the money on those IMPORTANT PICTURES because, if they flop, the flop goes into big money, whereas if the programmer flops, they can always get their cost back, WITH A PROFIT, no matter how bad it is.

There are 1000 people who want to go to the theatre and have the money to buy a ticket, providing they can get ENTERTAINMENT, where there is only one who goes day after day and takes the licking with those in-and-out quickies. And that's what makes this business so remarkable, to think it pays off even with that small audience, together with the knowledge of so much greater profit in GOOD PICTURES.

Columbia will do FIVE TIMES AS MUCH with "It Happened One Night" as it will do on its average programmer, and the cost of the Capra picture was, at most, twice that of the program attraction. And if Columbia will turn in that profit with that attraction, how much do you think the theatres that play it will grab? And the same goes for a picture like "The House of Rothschild." Both of those pictures required time and care in their preparation, time and care that cost a little more money than the rush work done on the quickies. But balance the two and see the difference.

Double features must go if this industry is to progress.

Exhibitor's Tip

A tip to the stars was officially handed down by MPTOA President Ed Kuykendall when he said: "We, as an organization, sincerely hope that the number of picture stars who allow themselves to become involved in scandals and sensational episodes will become less and less as time goes on. Scandal helps create censorship."

'Winnie' Airs 'Lew' In Credit Battle

New York.—"Winnie" Sheehan has given Lew Brown the air and behind it is a swell story.

Of the three musicals made by Fox, the only one having any appearance of a success is "Stand Up and Cheer," which was produced by Brown. "White's Scandals" checked in a flop at a $650,000 production cost, and the Buddy DeSylva yarn, "Bottoms

G. W. Pabst will direct the next Francis Lederer vehicle, "The Life of Joaquin Murietta," if the negotiations with Radio which have been on for the past week are concluded. Edgcumb Pinchon is now writing the original screen play.

Clarence Brown Back

Clarence Brown returned to town by plane from New York yesterday and immediately started preparations for pick-up shots for "Sadie McKee." MGM director accompanied his wife, Alice Joyce, to New York Thursday to be at the bedside of the latter's brother, Frank Joyce, who is sick there.

Double Features And Smutty Pictures Condemned At First Business Meet Of Convention

The double-feature evil came in for a heavy condemnation at the first business session of the MPTOA convention at the Hotel Ambassador yesterday. Ed Kuykendall, president of the exhibitor body, brought the issue up in his opening speech. Exhibitor feeling against smut in pictures was also aired, Fred Meyer, convention secretary, again hitting this all-important topic in his report.

The session, late in getting started, opened with the invocation by Rev. Dr. Gustav Briegleb, Ben Berinstein then calling the convention to order and turning it over to Kuykendall.

Personal Corps. Get Income Tax K. O.

Washington. — The "incorporated pocketbook," otherwise the personal holding company so common in the picture industry, was punched right in the nose yesterday when the Senate voted an income tax amendment which will take 30 per cent of the first $100,000 of such income and 40 per cent of all over that.

This was done to counter-balance the Senate action in defeating the additional 10 per cent of the income tax for everyone next year.

Warners Buy Play

New York.—Warner Brothers have bought the Dowling play, "Big-Hearted Herbert," now on Broadway, for $35,000. It is intended for Guy Kibbee.

Dupont Believed Ready To Lower Negative Price

New York.—In its effort to get a stronger hold on the raw stock field in the picture business, it is being rumored around the streets here that Dupont, starting May 1, will drop the price of its negative by thirty points, bringing it in at 3 7/10.

The standard negative rate of Eastman, Dupont and Agfa is 4 cents a foot, and should Dupont drop its price, it is a cinch the other manufacturers will do the same thing and maybe go lower, developing a raw stock war.

Extras Committee to Start Hearings Tonight

Mrs. Mabel Kinney, chairman of the Code Committee for Extras, announced last night that her committee will begin tonight to hear complaints from extra players.

A special sub-committee has been selected to handle the complaints and will meet one night each week from now on. Mrs. Kinney announced that all complaints will have to be made in writing by the individuals themselves in order to be considered.

'U' Stockholders Will Meet April 19

Wilmington.—The annual stockholders' meeting of Universal Pictures Corporation will be held here April 19.

Linden Back with 'U'

Eric Linden returns to the screen after many months in "I Give My Love" for Universal. In addition to Linden, Reginald Denny, Tad Alexander and Johnny Darrow also signed.

JUDGE LINDSEY TO DEFY SOL ROSENBLATT ORDER

Judge Ben B. Lindsey is not afraid of the "big, bad wolf" of the film code, Sol A. Rosenblatt. In no uncertain terms last night the Judge declared that Rosenblatt has no right to order him to turn over complaints now in his hands to the newly appointed Studio Labor Committee, especially as that committee has on it as a member a paid representative of the Producers' Association.

"The Code specifically provides," said the Judge, "that the names of

THE LOW DOWN

A certain singing-actor is getting an awful blow to his ego these days from a gal he's been courting sub rosa. He has to do it sub rosa because he's been married these many years, but the gal not only doesn't want him—she won't even accept a job in pictures through him! She wants to go in pictures, however, and the lassie's Momma is so anxious for her to succeed that she has been encouraging the visits of the male star to their house, even though, every time the doorbell rings, he leaps out a back door or window—just in case! The actor told Momma that he positively can get the daughter a contract—but it's a cinch he'll never get the daughter!

Federico Salazar, big newspaper and theatrical man of Buenos Aires who has been in Hollywood for about a month, left last night. He took with him Lita Santos, who has been appearing in Spanish versions of pictures here, and will star her on the stage in South America. It seems the lady not only acts, but sings and dances. Salazar, we also hear, had a few conferences with Doris Kenyon while here, and it's possible that she too may trek southward for a concert tour.

Eddie Sutherland, while seated at the Vendome the other day, was handed the following wire from Robert Benchley: "WHEN LUNG IS FULLY EXPANDED FILL WITH EQUAL PARTS OF GIN COMMA BACARDI AND ABSINTHE COMMA AND THEN INHALE DEEPLY STOP LOVE TO THE OTHER LUNG AND MONTE BRICE."

M.P.T.O.A. COMMITTEES FOR ENSUING YEAR ARE NAMED

Mayor Frank L. Shaw and Carlos Huntington, latter representing Gov. Rolph, welcomed the delegates. M. A. Lightman made the response for his fellow exhibitors. M. E. Comerford and Walter Vincent spoke briefly and were followed by President Kuykendall, whose keynote speech will be found on page 8.

Secretary Meyer submitted a resolution pledging the exhibitors to the principles of President Roosevelt's NRA, getting a unanimous endorsement of a wire to the President informing him of their support.

The small-town exhibitor was selected for special attention by both Kuykendall and Meyer. The latter said: "Ours is not only the right but the solemn duty to regulate trade practices, and we've got to start at the top. There is no such thing as 'the king can do no wrong.' The little fellow who may only have $2500 invested has as much at stake as the million dollar first-run structure, whether independently operated or producer-controlled. MPTOA has taken the leadership in advocating a Code of Fair Competition for our business."

Meyer's report brought up the campaign by the Catholic Church against indecent pictures. "There is a pronounced antagonistic feeling against our industry," he added, "which is now growing by leaps and bounds because of the unnecessary smut and filth which is constantly injected into all too many scenes of all types of pictures."

Meyer introduced John LeRoy Johnston, Universal's publicity director, who brought the gathering the message that Carl Laemmle Sr. was compelled to leave last night for San Francisco and was unable to put in his scheduled appearance.

Johnston, having heard several statements regarding eliminating publicity unfavorable to the industry, took the opportunity as chairman of the Hays office Publicity Committee to offer the exhibitors the co-operation of his group.

Before adjourning shortly after noon, Kuykendall named the standing committees as follows:

Resolutions Committee: Edward J. Levy, chairman; O. C. Lam, California; E. M. Fay, Rhode Island; Harry Hicks, California; M. A. Lightman, Tennessee; A. C. Gutenberg, Wisconsin; Walter Griffith, North Carolina; E. O. Kadane, Oklahoma.

Credentials and Rules Committee: M. E. Comerford, chairman; J. J. McGuinness, Massachusetts; Benjamin Pitts, Virginia; Charles E. Williams, Nebraska; A. F. Baker, Kansas.

Grievances Committee: Jules H. Michael, chairman; Nat M. Williams, Georgia; H. W. Harvey, California; Sidney Lust, Washington, D. C.; C. Walsh, Oklahoma; William Benton, N. Trampe, Wisconsin.

NRA Code-Trade Practices Committee: Fred S. Meyer, chairman; R. M. Clark, Oklahoma; Morgan A. New York; Wales Imneiman, Illinois; Roy L. Walker, Texas; A. E. Lichtman, Washington, D. C.

NRA Code-Labor Practices Committee: Jack Miller, chairman; A. D. Kvool, Wisconsin; Love B. Harrell, Georgia; Oscar C. Lehr, Misouri; Walter Vincent, New York; L. S. Harmon, California.

Following an afternoon sight-seeing tour at the Warner studio, Universal played host to the showmen last night, tendering them a buffet dinner and an old-fashioned dance at the studio clubhouse. The studio's entire executive personnel turned out, with the Universal player list putting on their best for the event.

In store for the exhibitors tonight is a huge banquet on twin stages at MGM. All the majors are combining to make it an all-star "Night In Hollywood," an impressive list of entertainers having been corralled from every studio player list for the occasion

League of Nations Recommends 'Mickey'

New York. — The Associated Press reports that the League of Nations has recommended Mickey Mouse for children instead of gangster and Hollywood love films. As usual the League is ten years behind in its recommendations.

Monogram Getting Definite Play Dates

New York.—It is understood here that Ray Johnston, head of Monogram Pictures, has already made deals with quite a few exhibitors whereby the product of that organization will be given definite playing time during the next season.

This new arrangement was made possible through Johnston's promise that Monogram is going ahead this year, will spend more money on its pictures, will gather more and better name draws, and for this effort the company would have to have guaranteed playing time, not sandwiched in here or there as has been the case in some of the best spots.

Harris Flying Back for 'U' Production Meeting

New York.—Robert Harris, Eastern production manager for Universal, is flying back to the Coast to attend the production conference of company officials at Santa Barbara.

Universal has signed Eugene and Ralph Berton, authors of "Roman Holiday," to write originals and adapt, and they are due in Hollywood next week.

Allen in N. Y. with Print

'WITCHING HOUR' A THRILLER; 'HALF A SINNER' PLEASING

Cast and Director Get Fine Results

"THE WITCHING HOUR"
(Paramount)

Direction .....Henry Hathaway
Author .....Augustus Thomas
Screen Play.....Anthony Veiller
Adaptation .....Salisbury Field
Photography .....Ben Reynolds
Cast: Sir Guy Standing, John Halliday, William Frawley, Judith Allen, Tom Brown, Olive Tell, Richard Carle, Purnell Pratt.

One of the most beautifully photographed, most expertly produced and most deftly acted films of the season is Paramount's "The Witching Hour."

When you come right down to it, it's a lot of hokum, but while you're in the theatre your hands are clammy.

Using a fundamental principle of psychology as a peg upon which to hang its drama, the picture mounts to a firm seat on the theory of hypnotism and offers some rare and exquisite moments of suspense.

The title is peculiarly inappropriate—as is the scene that probably suggested it (which should be cut, by the way)—where the ghost of Sir Guy Standing's old sweetheart wafts through the room and implores him to come out of his retirement and defend her grandson. The scene, while better done than most scenes of this type, weakens belief in the otherwise splendidly built-up story.

John Halliday, owner of an elaborate gambling house in Louisville, Ky., has, unknown to himself, the power of hypnotism. He accidentally hypnotizes Tom Brown, suitor for his daughter's hand, the same night he tells a cheap grafter that "some day someone is going to come into your office with a gun in his hands and blow your brains out." The next morning, after Brown has dressed to go downtown to meet his mother, he looks at the cat's-eye ring he had been holding the night before when Halliday hypnotized him.

Immediately the power of Halliday's thought takes possession of him, and he kills the grafter. The rest of the picture is the courtroom scene, wherein old Judge Prentiss (Sir Guy Standing) by a dramatic trick convinces the jury of the fact of hypnotism.

The film is beautifully acted. Sir Guy Standing plays with complete sincerity and strength; John Halliday's performance is flawless, and Tom Brown is surprisingly effective as the boy. Judith Allen as his fiancee and Olive Tell as his mother are both well cast. That splendid actor, William Frawley, does a lot with a small role; Richard Carle is excellent as usual, and Purnell Pratt makes the district attorney particularly disagreeable.

Henry Hathaway directed for suspense and got it. Anthony Veiller wrote the screen play based on the old Augustus Thomas play and Salisbury Field adapted. Ben Reynolds' photography is a work of art, no less.

The costuming of the film might have been more definitely done. One is never quite sure whether it is laid in the present day or fifty years ago. The women's clothes, and certain atmospheric touches—like the policemen in the old patrol wagon—indicate the past, while the men's clothing seems quite modern.

You've got great acting and production values here. And the faults of the film can very easily be eliminated.

Increase in Theatre Licenses Up in N. Y.

New York—Alderman Baum has introduced an ordinance increasing the license fees of motion picture theatres from $150 flat to a scale running from $300 to $2000 annually, according to capacity.

Erpi To Continue Picture Financing

New York. — Electrical Research Products announced yesterday that J. E. Otterson is authority for the statement that "Erpi will continue to finance independent producers, but will not go into production on its own." This is due to the fact that contracts with producers will not permit Erpi to enter the production field.

Erpi is understood to have vouched for the money to make 26 independent pictures for the new season. This amount will probably be doubled by the time the season is well on its way.

Erpi would rather have its producers do all production in the Eastern studio, but will not fight the making of pictures in the Hollywood plant.

N. Y. Audience Goes Big for 'Viva Villa'

New York.—"Viva Villa," the MGM picture, had a most enthusiastic welcome from a packed house at the Criterion Theatre last night. The patrons were extremely generous with applause and obviously enjoyed the picture.

There was one marvelous reaction. Ben Hecht broke his record and said it was a good picture.

Coslow-Johnston East

Sam Coslow and Arthur Johnston, having completed the music and lyrics for "Many Happy Returns" at Paramount, leave Saturday for an extended vacation. Coslow plans to go to London, while Johnston will go to New York.

Gable-Beery Teamed

Clark Gable and Wallace Beery will have the top brackets in "Hell Hole," the new title for "Ghost City," which Edwin Corle is scripting for MGM. Story is an original by Sam Marx and George Auerbach.

Waggner Back to Col.

George Waggner, who recently finished an original story for M. H. Hoffman, has gone back to Columbia to work with Sid Rogell on an untitled original.

Berton Churchill Steals the Picture

"HALF A SINNER"
(Universal)

Direction .....Kurt Neumann
Original Play.....John B. Hymer and Leroy Clemen
Screen Play.....Earl Snell and Clarence Marks
Add. Dialogue.....Ralph Spence
Photography .....George Robinson
Cast: Joel McCrea, Sally Blane, Berton Churchill, Russell Hopton, Spencer Charters, Alexandra Carlisle, Mickey Rooney, Gay Seabrook, Big Boy Williams.

Completely satisfying entertainment from start to finish, "Alias the Deacon," renamed "Half a Sinner," cannot fail to please. Viewed in preview at eighty-odd minutes running time, judicious cutting will doubtless cure its one fault, a slowness in comedy tempo.

In cutting, it would be wise to remember the history of the original Hymer-Clemen play. When first presented in try-out, the role of the Deacon was little more than a bit. Berton Churchill, playing the part, stole the show. A rewrite added to his opportunities and, when he again scored heavily, the piece was entirely rewritten to make him the star.

Churchill repeats his delightful characterization in the current version, making premier honors wholely his. All the other action is supplementary to his charming rascal, a card-sharp masquerading in Deacon's clothing. Not a single scene in which he appears fails to register. You cannot help but wish he had more scenes.

The story makes use of many characters in a small town, all played with distinction. The only major change introduces a wrestling match in which the boy attempts to win money for an engagement ring. Even this does not intrude upon the homey spirit of the cheating-cheaters theme. With the Deacon practicing his chicanery, all wrongs are righted.

Sally Blane contributes a very lovely heroine and Joel McCrea a stalwart hero. Russell Hopton as the wrestler's manager, Big Boy Williams as the wrestler, Spencer Charters as the small-town big-shot, Alexandra Carlisle is the bridge-playing hotel proprietor, Mickey Rooney as her son, —in fact, every member of the large cast is excellent.

Kurt Neumann's direction is noteworthy for development of individual characters. Dialogue, for which Ralph Spence is credited, keeps the audience smiling. Photography by George Robinson is above average.

Promise your patrons their money's worth in entertainment, assured that the picture will deliver.

Gaynor Free Again

The County Clerk's office advised Janet Gaynor that she was free of all marital relations as of yesterday. This due to an interlocutory decree the actress secured from Lydell Peck a year ago.

Yesterday in NEW YORK with HELEN GWYNN

Apropos of our article on original stories, a kind friend sent us the following letter, and, if any producer would like to take advantage of it, just give us a ring:

"Dear———

"I am a newsboy and keep up with the Motion picture Articles which you write. To this wonderful business which I average weekly $4, I am a canvasser of coffee in the afternoon. In the evening I have some time so I started to write stories so I wouldn't waste it. I submitted them to agents who wanted money to copyright them. After telling them about the wages I earn I couldn't get anywhere.

"I was where I started! I then went to a Editor of a paper and he advised me to send them to the story dept. of each studio. Neither I or the story received an answer. It is nearly eight months and I feel it is gone. It is very hard to get in if you haven't any red tape or plenty dough for the producers to take it away.

"In the last year I have written several stories, two of which I have turned into plays. Each one is important and I'm positive that it will be a Great Hit on Broadway. I also wrote the Words to the Pieces which I intend to publish and copyright it as soon as this story can get into the producers eyes. In the meatime I am working on the melodies on a friends piano. The first story which I am most stuck on is called 'American Children.' I'm sure that this will be a hit. The second which will be a greater hit than any picture that has ever reached the stage or screen for the last 10 or 15 years. Not a story on the shelf that has more thrills, drama, of torture, love, romance, the drama of starvation. Bloodshed, Adventure and exploring. No author or group of authors would or has ever written a plot so interesting as this one.

"I am only 18 years of age and I feel that it is possible for me to be a sensational actor or writer. Although my English is slum, but I cannot spend any time at the present to study.

"These stories, one which contains 14 and the other 10 chapters, is not easy to distribute to the different studios in Hollywood or N. Y. Each story contains about 150 pages. It isn't easy and I know that if I send it they might copy it and I wouldn't have any protection against Plaguerism. I am sending this letter with one hope. Either you can help me get in touch a Motion Picture Agent who have contacts with producers or a method of which I would be able to do it myself. Thanking you I remain."

Follows the signature and underneath it, "A True Blue Writer." This letter as printed here is absolutely bona fide, although it is funny, believe us, it's no joke. The boy may never be an author, but with a little toning down what an advertising man he'd make!

KUYKENDALL RAPS DUALS, SMUT AND OTHER EVILS

The necessity for clean pictures to forestall censorship, percentage bookings, score charges, the separation of production and exhibition, and the double-feature evil were the hightlights touched upon by President Ed. Kuykendall, of the MPTOA, in his speech at the first business session of the convention yesterday.

"Double and triple features, two-for-ones, give-aways and various premium plans are cheapening and tend to promote indifference on the part of our patrons," he declared. "A poll of the various organizations, such as women's clubs, proves that these women do not appreciate double bills; they prefer quality rather than quantity.

"If we can give two or three features for 25 cents the public wonders why we should get over a nickel for one feature."

Of the producer-exhibitor relations, he said: "The two do not go together. They unconsciously influence each other to the detriment of both if allowed to operate together under one guiding influence. Separation will improve the quality of pictures and enable us to make constructive progress."

Percentage deals are becoming the practice, he said, and threaten to ruin the showmen if percentages continue to mount.

"The distributor must not be unreasonable as to the amount of the percentage," he offered. "After all, it is a partnership between exhibitor and distributor and it must be on a live and let live basis or both will fail. I know of many instances where the percentage has been 35 per cent; the shorts, because of poor business, amounted to another 10 per cent, and the score another 5 per cent, making the cost of film 50 per cent. This on an ordinary picture. I am not referring to the ones they make us pay 50 per cent for, plus the shorts and score. This is manifestly unfair.

"I say in all sincerity the distributor should furnish the entire program, shorts, score and all when he plays percentage. The average exhibitor cannot stay in business and pay as film rental 50 per cent of the gross."

The showmen resent the score charge most, he said, cataloguing it as an unfair trade practice and "a racket in every sense of the word." A film is valueless minus the score, he pointed out.

At the same time, he urged the exhibitors to maintain closest relations with the nation's newspapers. "The editor of your paper can do you more good or harm than any one man in the community. Both of you are in the same kind of business, both have something to sell that must be sold today, yet I have found instances where, because of some little differences, the theatre manager and the editor of the paper are not friends. This is destructive to both. Theatremen and newspapers have a tremendous community influence.

"The exhibitor must keep himself informed as to what is going on in the moving picture industry at all times. The only way this can be done is by continually reading the trade papers. They carry the story, day by day, week by week. They were particularly helpful at the Washington Code hearings; they kept the contact between all phases of this industry. Read the trade papers."

The MPTOA president insisted the showmen maintain good sound and screen conditions, pointing out how millions of production money is wasted if the motion picture is not reproduced properly.

Mr. Kuykendall was most emphatic on the subject of indecent pictures. Speaking of the "many little indecencies that are allowed to creep into pictures in increasing numbers of late," he said:—

"Most of them have nothing to do with the continuity and are in many instances plain, crude, ordinary vulgarity. They are doing us tremendous damage with the sane thinking, decent men and women who patronize our theaters.

"It is not so much the regular so-called sex pictures that do us damage; it is the vulgar sayings and scenes that are injected into what the public has reason to believe is wholesome entertainment. It is not the function of the screen to moralize, but we must adhere to the fundamentals of common decency.

"Injecting obscenities into what would otherwise be a clean picture must be stopped. We owe it to our patrons and to this industry to use every possible means to bring it about."

Radio Options Play at Hollytown Theatre

Radio yesterday took an option on "Thirty Thousand To Go," a play by Kurt Ames, now playing at Lela E. Rogers' Hollytown Theatre. This is the fourth play produced by Mrs. Rogers to be sold for pictures.

"Thirty Thousand To Go" is a comedy about a young promoter who induces his father-in-law to sell the family hardware store and produce a motion picture in Hollywood.

the complainants be kept secret from their employers. To turn these complaints over to this committee would be breaking faith with the workers and be a violation of the Code. Unless the complainants themselves come to me and tell me they are willing to have their complaints passed on to this committee, I shall never turn them over. I am for justice for the workers and no one can force me to do what I feel is not right. And it would not be right to turn these complaints over to the new committee."

Salesman Sells Self Instead of His Client

Thomas To Produce For Own Exchanges

New York.—The agreement that was reached in Atlantic City between Monogram Pictures and First Division Pictures does not prevent the latter from going into production on the coast to take care of the demands of its exchanges for product.

Harry Thomas said: "We will have to go out and make some pictures for our own organization. Our progress demands it. We expect to make at least twelve during the next year."

Roxy Confirmed As Head of the Roxy

New York.—Confirming the exclusive story printed in this publication weeks ago, the trustees of the Roxy Theatre announced that Samuel Rothafel will take over the operation of that theatre July 1. He will be assisted in the management by Herbert Lubin.

Big Stock Deal on If Duponts Get Col.

New York.—There are still plenty of rumblings on the Columbia-Duponts deal, despite denials on both sides.

From an authoritative source it became known yesterday that, should the deal go through and Duponts and the partners get control of Columbia, the group will go gunning for another major outfit. Then, the plan is to combine the two and cause a big stock issue to be floated through the Atlas Corporation, one of the largest investment houses in the country.

Charles R. Rogers yesterday borrowed Ann Sothern from Columbia for the romantic lead opposite Jack Haley in "Here Comes the Groom," which Edward Sedgwick puts into production at Paramount Monday.

After the Brown picture was previewed, Sheehan started talking more pictures with Lew, but Lew was considerably burned by Sheehan demanding all the credit for the picture. Accordingly, the "other picture" question was left until after the release of "Stand Up and Cheer," and that's cold now, as Sheehan is supposed to have heard that Brown was doing a lot of talking around New York, telling listeners how little he (Sheehan) had to do with the picture.

Children Dislike 'Namby - Pamby' Pix, Says Kersey

(Reprinted from L. A. Examiner, April 10)

Sacramento.—California school children prefer healthy motion pictures—not the "namby pamby" kind.

This was the conclusion reached today by Vierling Kersey, superintendent of public instruction, after a preliminary survey of motion picture reactions of 20,000 school children in selected urban and rural districts.

"The rank and file of California school children prefer healthy but not the namby pamby pictures, and with intelligent guidance and cooperation will avoid films of unwholesome nature," Kersey reported in pointing out the lack of any reliable source of information available to children by which they or their parents may make a selection of a suitable picture.

The school chief's report showed that thus far in California schools no program is available by which the child may be advised about the more important phases of his out-of-school learning and experience.

"A surprisingly large number of children today are expressing a real desire to know what kind of pictures they will see when they attend motion pictures depicting crime and cruelty. They know enough to discriminate against improper pictures, but lack active guidance in selection of this kind of entertainment."

Kersey also discovered in his film school survey that "many of these children, too, recognize that much of the so-called criticism and review of pictures is nothing more than thinly veiled publicity."

"Children reveal that the most powerful factor in their motion picture selection is the home," Kersey said. "The public school and home working together have an opportunity to improve this situation and to secure the cooperation of the motion picture industry in the interests of youth."

New York REVIEWS

"MELODY IN SPRING"

Paramount prod.; director, Norman McLeod; writers, Frank Leon Smith, Benn W. Levy.

Paramount Theatre

Post: The story is an attempt, and sometimes a quite successful one, to combine a mildly farcical fantasy with regulation screen operetta. It isn't quite as funny as it might be, but at that it is a good deal better than the backstage story.

Herald-Tribune: The work is a musical romance called "Melody in Spring." Mr. Ross' voice is attractive, but he is more of a radio than a screen personality. The script is lightweight. The songs are melodious and, except for the Ruggles-Boland comedy, were the best things in the piece.

World-Telegram: It begins rather well, with a fine vein of satire which pokes fun not only at radio but at "hobbyists," and, as long as this vein of satire predominates, the film is thoroughly amusing, thanks to the pricelessly insane antics of the incomparable Mary Boland and Charles Ruggles. However, the story suddenly turns on itself and goes romantic, and with this turn go all the amiable and promising qualities it gave evidence of possessing.

Mirror: A supremely funny trifle which is distinguished by a unique setting, a rollicking spirit, a light directorial touch. It is exhilarating nonsense. The characters are exquisitely drawn and are consistent in all their absurdities. The songs are catchy. The settings are romantic. The dialogue is inspired. The situations are absurdly plausible.

Times: The Paramount's new picture is a joy about half the time and unsteadily pleasant the other half. Charles Ruggles and Mary Boland inspire affection as well as amusement.

News: With what they have to work, Ruggles and Miss Boland turn in capable performances. "Melody in Spring" will doubtless prove interesting to those who want to see Lanny Ross as well as hear him.

American: Light, gaily amusing comedy. There is a laugh in every line of dialogue and a snicker in every situation, so Mr. Ross is fortunate. First honors must go to Mr. Ruggles, with Miss Boland a close second.

Sun: A light-hearted little musical comedy, "Melody in Spring" is tuneful, romantic, sometimes funny and sometimes just plain silly. Mr. Ross, with two or three catchy songs, does well by the music. His acting is pretty bad. He came up against difficult competition when he played, in his first picture with such deft comedians as Mr. Ruggles and Miss Boland.

Journal: Lanny Ross sings several songs and has a good voice, but is as yet so unaccustomed to the camera that judgment on his acting ability will have to be withheld until his next film. It's Charlie Ruggles and Mary Boland who walk off with all the honors. Their scenes are delightfully goofy.

"WILD CARGO"

RKO-Frank Buck prod.; director, Frank Buck; writers, Frank Buck and Edward Anthony; narative, Courtney Ryley Cooper.

Music Hall

World-Telegram: It is not only a fascinating record of an exciting journey into the Asiatic jungles, but is also a valuable educational document.

Herald-Tribune: One thing which distinguishes Mr. Buck's animal pictures from those of his rivals is the care with which they are photographed and edited, and their authenticity. Mr. Buck accompanies his pictures with a running dialogue, carefully edited and pruned.

Mirror: "Wild Cargo" wears the mark of careful staging. The photography is dazzingly beautiful, particularly a dark blue sequence representing the jungle at night.

Times: Although it may seem as though several incidents in the screen work were pre-arranged, they are nevertheless quite thrilling. If Mr. Buck's lecture is occasionally melodramatic, it does not detract from the general interest.

Post: Though not sanguinary as Mr. Buck's previous "Bring 'em Back Alive," it is every bit as entertaining and a shade more instructive. Though "Wild Cargo" lacks the rousing climax of certain other wild animal pictures, its interest is kept alive by the wealth and variety of the material.

News: The picture is packed with much suspense and many thrills. It is as exciting an adventure as the first film, but because there have been so many wild pictures exhibited on the Broadway theatre screens within the last two years the novelty has worn off, and "Wild Cargo" just misses our highest star rating.

American: There have, of course, been other animal pictures, but this one merits the distinction of being different. The picture is beautifully photographed, and while Mr. Buck's running fire of explanation and comment accompanies the action, the film is far from silent. The film is thrilling entertainment and a liberal education in natural history and the capturing of "Wild Cargo."

Sun: "Wild Cargo" turns out to be a well photographed, ably directed travelogue through a jungle. The settings are often beautiful, and many of the animal shots have a real quality.

Journal: It's a thrilling narrative. Mr. Buck's pleasant voice comments on his adventures through-out the film. You'll find "Wild Cargo" exciting, interesting and informative.

Many Stars on Air With George Arliss

Constance Bennett, Ronald Colman, Jackie Cooper and Alfred Newman's 20th Century radio orchestra have been added to the radio program, of which George Arliss will be the principal star, that will be broadcast from WEAF and 59 other stations Saturday evening, April 14, to celebrate the first birthday anniversary of the 20th Century Pictures Company.

This program, marking the first appearance over the air-waves of Mr. Arliss, will last a full hour, beginning at 7 p. m. eastern standard time. The appearance of Mr. Arliss is of special interest at this time, just as "The House of Rothschild" is being shown in principal cities.

Record Interior Set For 'Little Man' at 'U'

Frank Borzage used the largest inside set ever constructed at Universal yesterday shooting the Berlin arrival sequence for "Little Man, What Now?", the Margaret Sullavan and Douglass Montgomery vehicle.

Set filled the entire new process stage, is 360 feet long, and required 400 extras for one scene.

Lasky Buys Original

MGM yesterday bid on the Rian James-Jesse Lasky Jr. original, "Young Ladies in White," but was too late, since Jesse Lasky purchased the story for Fox last week. James and Lasky Jr. are making a novel of the story for early publication.

Stephenson in Demand

Warners is seeking to work out its production slate on "British Agent" in order to get Henry Stephenson into a featured role between "She Loves Me Not" at Paramount and Universal's "One More River," for which the player is already set.

Gertrude Purcell Set

Gertrude Purcell registers at Fox today to work under Al Rockett's supervision on "Lottery Lover" the next Lilian Harvey starring picture. Schulberg, Feldman and Gurney negotiated the deal.

Sparks for 'Gallante'

Ned Sparks signed a Fox contract yesterday to take a featured role in "Marie Gallante," moving over this week after finishing at Radio in "Down to Their Last Yacht." The Beyer-MacArthur office set the contract.

Insull Picture Out

Four studios which announced and registered stories based on the Insull exploits have released the idea as being too susceptible to libel suits. MGM, Universal, Paramount and Fox each had the idea in preparation.

Solow on Yarn for Hull

Universal has signed Gene Solow to do a treatment on an untitled original idea which will be Henry Hull's first vehicle. Rian James produces as the second subject under his new deal with the studio.

Rush of New Plays After Easter Lull

New York.—With the pre-Easter doldrums out of the way, Broadway is getting a rush of new plays this week, eight being scheduled. The openings slated for last night were "Races" at the Ethel Barrymore Theatre, "The House of Remsen" at Henry Miller's, and a revival of "The Mikado" at the Majestic.

The program for the rest of the week is: Tonight, "Moor Born" at the Playhouse; tomorrow, "Wife Insurance" at the Longacre; Saturday, "Furnished Rooms," "Brain Sweat" and "Are You Decent?" the houses for these not having been announced as yet.

John Loder Goes Back To A.T.P. for 3 Pictures

London.—On completion of his work in "Warn London" for British Lion, John Loder returns to Associated Talking Pictures, the Basil Dean company, for three in a row.

He will appear in "Java Head," the new Gracie Fields picture and opposite Victoria Hopper in "Lorna Doone." Chis Mann fixed the deal.

Globe Goes First Run

New York.—"The Unknown Blonde" a Majestic picture, will have its Broadway premiere at the Globe Theatre on April 16. For this picture the Globe is turned into a first run house and the admission prices will be the same as other first run theatres on Broadway.

New Act for Comedians

New York.—Clark and McCullough, who have been together for over 30 years, are appearing in person at the RKO Albee Theatre with a brand new version of their famous characterizations of "The Senators" and "Three Cheers for the Red, White and Blue." "Wild Cargo" is the picture.

Boost for 'Palooka'

Edward Small is using a full coverage of 24-sheet boards in the Wilshire to Hollywood district for the first neighborhood run of "Palooka" at the Fox Wilshire. First time in a number of months that 24 sheets have been used to exploit a second run.

Col. Signs Walter Lang

Walter Lang has been signed by Columbia to handle the first Walter Connolly starring vehicle, "Whom the Gods Destroy," which goes before the cameras Thursday. Sidney Buchman has scripted and Felix Young is the associate producer.

Break for Director

Edgar Ulmer, Universal director, learned yesterday that his uncle, Jacques Eisenstein, had died in Budapest and willed him a library valued at $150,000. Eisenstein was a book publisher in Hungary.

Orry-Kelly East

Orry-Kelly, Warner fashion designer, leaves the end of this month or the first of May for New York. He will be away about a month, getting a line on current fashion trends.

SCREEN BOOK
82 pages and cover
COVER DISPLAY.....Greta Garbo (MGM)

The May Screen Book has a cover line, "Ann Harding's Love Affair with Her Ex-Husband," but Welford Dickson's story is not quite so tactless as the title, although it takes some sort of prize for vagueness.

Whitney Williams has two stories, "Hollywood's Most Shocking Woman," in which he nominates Carole Lombard, and "Don't Call Them Up!" a story of the telephonic difficulties of the stars.

One of the nicest things about Screen Book is that it introduces some new names—John Peere Miles, J. P. McEvoy, Henry Albert Phillips and Irene Thirer. Miles' story is "Why Stars Shy at Motherhood"; McEvoy writes an amusing letter to a popular youngster, "Shame on You, Baby Le Roy"; Phillips has "Hollywood Debunked," in which Clark Gable says a few pertinent things; and Miss Thirer wonders and wanders around in "Will the Jungle Jinx Doom This Romance?" all about Marion Burns, Kane Richmond and Bruce McFarlane.

There seems to be always something to write about Katharine Hepburn, and this time Lionel Pape, who played her father in "The Lake," tells all about it to Josephine Sauer. Don Harris has a not unusual story on Sam Goldwyn's discovery in "What Hollywood Did to Anna Sten"; Val Lewton offers "An Emotional Check-up on Joan Crawford," and Ned Williams writes about "Marie Dressler and the Roosevelts."

Al Sherman went out a few nights in New York gathering material for "Looking Over Beauties the Movies Overlook"; George White emphasizes smiles in "Do You Want to Be a Chorus Girl?" Creighton Chaney is briefly inarticulate in "My Father—Lon Chaney," and Ann Dvorak gives an interview to Fred Rutledge in which she says "I'm a beautiful girl—not an actress."

PHOTOPLAY

COVER DISPLAY..Katharine Hepburn (Radio)

Adolphe Menjou does a bit toward setting impressionable girls on the right sartorial track in an interview with Kirtley Basquette, "Ladies As Mr. Menjou Likes Them," in the April Photoplay. Illustrations of what he considers bad taste seem to be clipped from portraits of very famous feminine stars. More fun guessing who!

In "Is Walt Disney a Menace to Our Children?" David Frederick McCord writes in a psychological strain—and strain is the right word. It's all about how the Big Bad Wolf gives children nightmares. Too, too bad about the little darlings who go for a nice quiet evening with the latest sex melodrama or gangster opus and have the horrors over Pluto the Pup.

Sara Hamilton does another of her silly and inspired pieces, "Spring! 'Tis Forgiving Time in Hollywood." Jean Harlow denies to Ruth Rankin that she is going to have a divorce or a baby; Virginia Bruce tells Virginia Maxwell "I Had to Leave John Gilbert" without rancor, and Dolores Del Rio "Extols Passive Love" to Katharine Franklin.

Another story, interesting but without news, is "Clark Gable Cuts the Apron Strings," by William F. French. "The Jungle Is No Place for a Woman" is an excellent, colorful interview by Virginia Maxwell with Mrs. Frank Buck, who just returned from a trip on which her husband filmed "Wild Cargo." Hilary Lynn does "Anna Sten, the Million Dollar Gamble," pointing out the unHollywood-like qualities of the Russian star.

Sylvia contributes another of her always vivid stories. This time, finding nothing wrong physically, for a change, she tells Mae Clarke how to gain energy—same old grapefruit juice.

Rudy Vallee is still giving out that same interview about how he looks and looks but can't find his dream girl, with Nina Remen writing it down this time. Particularly interesting is a tale by Beauregard Brown on a director, Wesley Ruggles, "His Third Time on Top."

"Polly with a Future," by William P. Gaines, is an amusing biography of Polly Walters. The same author has another story, "Hollywood Snubs Paris," starring Travis Banton.

Australia Still Wrangling Over Censor Question

Sydney.—Since the Australian State premiers turned down the idea of a Commonwealth film control at their conference in February, all parts of Australia are battling for some kind of censorship that will hold good in each State.

South Australia is fighting with West Australia, New South Wales and Queensland can't and won't get together. Magistrates in separate divisions are over-riding bans placed on pictures by the Federal film censor.

Minister of Customs White announced that the Federal Government will endeavor to secure some uniformity in censorship through a bill that will soon be submitted to the six States.

Writers Turn Radio Job

Gene Towne and Graham Baker were unable to accept the Radio assignment to write the "RKO-NBC Revue" because of a previous commitment to Fox where they are now working. Team is scripting an untitled special which will be directed by Raoul Walsh.

Music for Foy Pic

Bryon Foy is planning on a musical score for his latest picture, "Sterilization." It will first be tried at a preview, silent. If the score is added, it will be first Foy picture with musical score.

CREEL OVER-RULES 'ROSY'

TRADE VIEWS by W. R. WILKERSON

•WE wonder if Mr. Kuykendall and his gathering of exhibitors have taken stock of their suggestion, "We must have clean pictures?" We wonder what the MPTOA members mean by "clean pictures." We would like to ask each and every man attending the convention if, by this demand for "clean pictures," he means that he intends cancelling all pictures that he judges not to be clean. We would like to inquire if he believes the Mae West attractions are unclean and if so, will he cancel them.

We would like to ask the members of this convention and, in fact, all exhibitors, IF YOU WERE MAKING PICTURES, WHAT KIND OF PICTURES WOULD YOU MAKE? We believe the theatre owner knows better than anyone else what will sell in screen entertainment and with this knowledge, he should be able to tell Hollywood producers what to make.

If the exhibitors are honest with themselves and if they are TALKING FOR THEMSELVES they could advise Hollywood what pictures would INTEREST AND ENTERTAIN THE PUBLIC. We believe no better material could be had than is now being purchased. Maybe production of that material could be improved, but no one could get better stories, typifying public tastes.

Producers are buying the books that the public is reading. They are acquiring the plays the public is flocking to see. They are dipping into magazines and newspapers, drawing on that material, because readers have demonstrated their liking for that material. What else can they do? What else should they do? Planted here in Hollywood, they can only grasp the public's viewpoint as it reacts through that public's purchase of other entertainment, whether it be between the covers of a book, in a magazine, a newspaper or on the stage.

Hollywood attempts the fashioning of entertainment to sell to the public. It is not making pictures for its own amusement. Pictures are being made to make money for the producer, the distributor and the exhibitor. If there were a market for Grimm's Fairy Tales, they would be made into a picture, but the probability is that the public is NOT IN-

Backs Lindsey In His Refusal To Turn Complaints Over To The New Labor Committee

George Creel yesterday definitely backed Judge Ben B. Lindsey in his defiance of Sol A. Rosenblatt's order to turn over to the newly-named Studio Labor Committee all complaints that studio workers have filed before the judge. The backing of Creel came with startling suddenness and lack of fanfare in the form of a brief telegram, instructing the Judge not to turn over any complaints without further instructions from him.

Judge Lindsey, on Tuesday, had already announced that under no circumstances would he jeopardize the

New York REVIEWS

"VIVA VILLA"

MGM prod.; director, Jack Conway; writers, Edgcumb Pinchon, O. B. Stade, Ben Hecht.

Criterion Theatre

Mordaunt Hall, Times: It is a fast, furious and compelling tale. Ben Hecht's story of Villa's career set forth with expertness and ingenuity.

Richard Watts, Herald-Tribune: The already legendary Pancho Villa dashes gustily across the screen in a hearty and exciting chronicle melodrama. Splendidly played by Wallace Beery. Joseph Schildkraut is excellent, Walthall immensely moving.

Bland Johaneson, Mirror: A wildly exciting melodrama, providing Beery with another stunning character role. This rousing thriller recalls splendid days when movies really moved. Beery is supported by a great cast. The film is photographed with exceptional artistry, the dialogue is terse and punchy, and a splendid musical score accompanies the brisk action. "Viva Villa" is giving a rousing and inflammatory account of the injustice which prevailed in Old Mexico. Its battle scenes are wildly thrilling, its massiveness is impressive.

Wanda Hale, News: The reaction is Viva Beery. Jack Conway has contributed scenes of hard, wild riding and thrilling battles that are epic in their surge and power. A good measure of praise must go to Walthall and Schildkraut. The wildness, color and pathos of Villa's magnificent life are happily caught by this ambitious production.

Regina Crewe, American: So skilfully are fact and fancy blended that truth seems to dominate the entire romance. Thrilling as a bugle call, vivid as a campfire flame, vital as the crimsoned pages that he lived, Pancho Villa marches again to the mad music of "La Cucuracha." Here is war with all the trimmings, war with wine, women and song on the side. A stirring subject, startlingly portrayed in broad strokes and splashes of cinematic artistry. "Viva Villa" awaits you at the Criterion, a picture that you'll never forget.

Rose Pelswick, Journal: Beery magnificently plays the hero of the film depicting Mexico's birth of a nation. It is rousing, vigorous and exciting entertainment. It is by far Beery's most ambitious performance and he plays the part magnificently. The supporting cast is excellent, Carrillo being especially good. It is Walthall's most effective role since the Griffith spectacle, and Schildkraut gives an outstanding performance.

Thornton Delehanty, Post: In "Viva Villa" MGM has stepped in where the Russians have feared to tread, making a lusty, gory, full-throated melodrama from the colorful trail which Mexico's bandit left behind him. The vigorous, cruel and sentimental portrait which Beery draws of Villa is persuasively real. It is the kind of performance which makes your blood run hot or cold. By being the real thing himself, Beery succeeds in making you believe his Villa is the real thing too. You could not ask more of any actor. "Viva Villa" bases its appeal on the exciting, the spectacular and the human. With its beautifully directed mass scenes, its pictorial loveliness, it is an intelligent and courageous study of a memorable character. There should be special credit for Jack Conway's direction, for the solid performance of Stuart Erwin and for all those responsible for the absence of cheap melodrama and murky sentimentality. These factors have helped make it an illustrious motion picture.

William Boehnel, World-Telegram: Hecht has spun a savagely realistic, stirring and dramatic picture of Villa's life, with Beery giving a magnificent performance. In all principal roles "Viva Villa" enjoys the luxury of accomplished actors. Walthall gives the most direct and finely modeled performance since his "Little Colonel," and Carrillo is excellent. It is a truly sweeping, magnificent film.

MGM Crew Starts 7300-Mile Air Trip

George B. Seitz, director, Harold H. Noice, explorer, and Joseph Cook, business manager, leave today from Grand Central Airport on their 7300-mile flight to the South American jungles to prepare for the filming of MGM'S "Jungle Red Man," an original story by Noice.

They will stop at the Indian village, Yarawate, to assemble an all-native cast. This flight of eight days in the air is one of the longest in aviation history. Four months later a complete company will be sent to film the picture. Harry Rapf will produce, with Ned Marin associate. John T. Neville, Florence Ryerson and Ray Doyle will do the screen play.

OPEN FORUM

The Hollywood Reporter:

You are deserving of great credit on your stand on the writers' question. As a writer I agree with you that the time has come when writers, unlike children, should not only be seen, but also heard.

However, frequently, I have cause to wonder if your news editor ever reads your editorials, and vice versa. I mean that while you take the writer's part in your editorial column, you, too, seem to forget all about his existence in your news items.

Thus, we read that "Harold Teen," the picture which Murray Roth directed, broke a Philadelphia house record.* Didn't anybody write "Harold Teen"?

We read that Spencer Tracy has been set for a top spot in "Marie Gallant," which Henry King will direct.* But which, evidently, no one will write.

We read that Edward Ellis goes into the Dashiell Hammett story, which W S. Van Dyke will direct.* But which no one will write either, presumably.

We read that Ann Dvorak goes into Housewife," which will be piloted by Alfred E. Green.* But evidently, "Housewife" was just "born," and isn't being written either.

In short, what I am driving at is that, if you, who are so staunchly for us editorially, forget all about us when it comes to your news columns—what can we expect of those to whom we are merely sublimated stenographers?

Best regards,
RIAN JAMES.

FOX 'WOMEN ARE DANGEROUS' SINCERE AND CONVINCING

Baxter and Flood Share First Honors

"SUCH WOMEN ARE DANGEROUS"
(Fox)

Direction .....James Flood
Author .....Vera Caspary
Adaptation .....Jane Storm and Oscar M. Sheridan
Photography.....L. W. O'Connell
Cast: Warner Baxter, Rosemary Ames, Rochelle Hudson, Henrietta Crosman, Mona Barrie, Irving Pichel, Herbert Mundin, Richard Carle.

"Such Women Are Dangerous" has the advantage of a cleverly devised plot, worked out convincingly on an entirely credible basis—a young girl dramatically, desperately and pitifully infatuated with an older man.

The first half of the picture is a little slow. It seems to be too painstaking in planting the desperation of the girl's love. Surely some of the scenes could be suggested, instead of emphasized. The latter half of the picture swings into a nice speed and tempo and ends with fine excitement.

Rochelle Hudson is the girl, who leaves her home town and goes to New York to show her poems to Warner Baxter, a successful, glamorous novelist. She becomes an awful nuisance, but the author is overly kind and considerate of her youth, and so when circumstances force him to tell her at last that she must go home—that she bores him—the shock is so great that she kills herself, leaving circumstantial evidence that points to Baxter as her murderer. Unable to explain where he had been the evening of her death, the net slowly closes around him, until a surprise witness saves him fom conviction.

Baxter, as the kind, gentle, romantic novelist, will disappoint not a single fan. Miss Hudson offers an appealing and finely etched characterization of the girl, and Rosemary Ames is gracious and sincere as the secretary. Henrietta Crosman, as his crotchety old aunt, scores a distinct hit, as does Irving Pichel in a comparatively small role. Herbert Mundin contributes his usual comedy; Richard Carle makes a fine real estate agent, and Mona Barrie is well cast as one of Baxter's many lady friends.

James Flood directed intelligently; Jane Storm and Oscar M. Sheridan adapted Vera Caspary's story, and L. W. O'Connell photographed.

Exhibitors have a good dramatic yarn here, and splendid acting. It is a reliable programmer.

Para. Can't Get Garnett

MGM yesterday turned down a request from Paramount for the loan of Tay Garnett, Paramount planning on having him direct "Honor Bright" before MGM'S "China Seas" goes into work. MGM declared the deal would upset its production schedule on the Gable-Harlow picture.

Order Out to Jump Code Violators

Washington. — Attorney General Cummings revealed yesterday that district attorneys all over the country have been given the "go" signal for all NRA code violators without the necessity of consulting with Washington.

It is believed here that this is part of the new code enforcement drive, whereby the NRA is entering the "compliance" stage.

Anniversary Makes MGM Party Big Hit

More than 1500 MPTOA visitors and Hollywood notables attended the big celebration at the MGM studio last night for dinner and entertainment. L. B. Mayer told the guests that ten years ago yesterday he and Irving Thalberg joined MGM, so the occasion was a double celebration.

Pete Smith, as M. C., introduced a number of noted film people and President Kuykendall presented MPTOA leaders. The entertainers, drawn from various studios, included Will Rogers, Irene Franklin, Jeanette MacDonald and many more.

U. S. Millionaires Make Pix in Russia

New York.—Three American millionaires, William Osgood Field Jr., L. K. Bigelow and J. Withrow Jr., have, with Arthur Menken, formerly of the Pathe News, formed a company known as the American Group Inc. to make pictures in Russia. This is the first company to photograph in that country with a Government franchise. Henry Shapiro is the executive director in Russia.

The first pictures of the series that this group is producing has been completed and is now in this country. A new production crew leaves for Russia in two weeks.

'U' Will Put Karloff In 'Bluebeard' Role

In line with its cycle of super-horror pictures, Universal plans to bring one of the most famous characters of literature to the screen early on next year's program. The picture will be "Bluebeard," and will probably have Boris Karloff in the stellar role.

Edgar Ulmer who directed the last horror picture, "Black Cat," for Universal, will be given the directorial assignment, and plans call for an elaborate production.

47 Cameramen Sign With New ASC Agency

Executive Manager Allen Watt of the ASC announced yesterday that 47 cameramen have signed contracts with the new ASC Agency for personal management.

The Agency was established April 1. Of the cameramen signed, 26 are first cameramen and 21 are seconds.

John Lodge Gets Long Term Deal from Para.

John Lodge, who had a leading role with Marlene Dietrich in her recently completed "Scarlet Empress," has had his option taken up by Paramount and is now on a seven-year term. His next assignment has not yet been decided.

Roach Goes Fishing

Hal Roach leaves today with James Parrott, director, and Gus Shy, writer, on a combined business and pleasure trip. They will fly in Roach's private plane to Pyramid Lake, Nevada, to fish and perhaps work on stories.

Report Cohns to Split

knew nothing about dickers that were going on in New York, promoted by Jack, and Harry is understood to have said on arrival here: "If Jack wants to sell his interest, I will buy it." So that's probably what will happen.

The Cohns have never been able to agree on the production policy of the company. Harry, the production head, has been for a policy of progress in production and with larger budgets for that purpose. Jack has been more in the line of cheap negatives and large volume.

Of course, you're all more or less aware of the fact that Sam Goldwyn was not exactly niggardly about the money he spent in the publicity and advertising campaign he put over for Anna Sten. Very well, with that in mind, we just want to show you what a really "cute" person Dr. Eugene Frenke is. In regard to the picture he recently produced, Dr. Frenke was very anxious that it be reviewed, not only by trade papers, etc., but he also wanted it brought to the attention of readers of artier magazines, so he marched himself into the office of Experimental Cinema and explained that he thought they ought to send a critic over to see it and give it a notice. The editor agreed and Dr. Frenke started to leave. As he got to the door, he turned to the editor and said, "And maybe you could give my wife a mention, too, somehow?"

Now about that agent who came to New York and left his clients in Hollywood to another person. Said agent is no longer connected with that business at all and it was not he who brought suit for back commissions by attaching salaries. In fact, only one attachment has been made and the story back of that one is supposed to be a case of base ingratitude. The actor whose salary is tied up at the moment came to the agent with a hard luck story some time ago and the agent voluntarily granted the actor a ten weeks moratorium on the payment of commissions. So it seems this non-payment of commissions got to be a beloved habit with the actor and naturally something had to be done about it. Anyway, that's the other side of the story, and, out of justice toward none and malice toward all, let the shoe fit who butters it.

This business of movie stars broadcasting scenes from coming attractions is a piece of swell advertising for everyone concerned—the movie company, the commercial hour it gets the use of and the broadcasting company. BUT it seems there is a racket in back of it. The stars contribute their time for nothing, which is fair enough IF the time used is what they call "sustaining" periods. If not, the stars' time should be worth something for the value they bring to it and they ought to be paid by somebody anyway, because someone with a bright mind IS collecting on it. The idea is that someone goes to a picture company and says: "Look, I can get you free time over the air and you'll reach millions if you can get the stars to broadcast." Then that someone goes to a national advertiser and says: "I can get you a grand program filled with stars for nothing—if you PAY ME for getting them." Which is one way of being an agent without having to bother with clients and it nets more than 10 per cent.

Ralph Staub Here

Ralph Staub has arrived in Hollywood from New York on assignment at Warners, where he will direct two Technicolor shorts.

Chinese Producers To Make Jungle Pix

Shanghai.—The Luen Hua Film Company of this city, one of the largest film producers in China, has completed arrangements for the filming of four jungle pictures in British Malaya.

The first picture, titled "Menace of Wild Animals to Humanity," will be shot entirely in one of the forests in the Unfederated Malay State of Johore, near Batu Pahat. The second picture will be "When the World Was Young," and the third "Beauty Spots of Malaya." The fourth has not been selected. Four Chinese stars will be taken along to play the leads, and natives will have the other parts.

Extras' Committee Takes Up 57 Complaints

The Code Committee for Extras last night started hearing complaints from extra players, charging studios with code violations, when the Grievance Subcommittee took up a total of 57 complaints, all that have been filed to date.

Two were referred to the State Labor Board, 34 were referred by telegraph to Sol Sosenblatt because of the question of the committee's jurisdiction. Two were held for additional information, and 18 were referred to the studios for the studios' version of the cases. Mrs. Mabel Kinney, chairman of the committee, explained that no decisions were given.

Melton with Beacon

Beacon Productions yesterday borrowed Frank Melton from Fox for a principal role in "I Can't Escape," which Otto Brower will direct. Melton, who was signed for the stage play of "Ah, Wilderness," cancelled the assignment to accept the Beacon deal. Kingston-Harris negotiated. Sam Weisenthal will produce.

Kraft Returns to 'U'

H. S. Kraft, who left for New York a little over a week ago, has been signed to a writing deal by Universal and returns here by plane to start work Monday. He will not be given his assignment until he arrives. Deal negotiated by Kingston-Harris.

Swerlings on Vacation

Jo Swerling, Columbia writer, and his wife left yesterday by train for New York on a three weeks' vacation, the first for the writer in two years. Swerling just completed the script of the Al Cohen-Joseph Chisholm novel, "Take the Witness," which Sam Briskin will produce.

Fox Buys Foster Yarn

Fox yesterday purchased "Face of An Angel," an original by Lew Foster, and signed the writer to develop the story. Winfield Sheehan will produce. Deal was negotiated by Hoffman-Schlager.

Donald Woods for 'Chan'

Fox yesterday borrowed Donald Woods from Warners for the juvenile lead in "Charlie Chan's Last Case," which goes into work at Fox Western next week.

TRADEVIEW

TERESTED in that kind of a story. Picture patrons want life, discussions of humanity as it is being lived today; they want to see their every day problems acted out for them on the screen; they want the same, (and better,) entertainment on the screen that is offered them on the stage, in novels, in newspapers and magazines.

If you exhibitors would like to know why you have had so many bad pictures during the past year, would like to have reasons for so many weak stories, talk to some of our best writers here working in the studios. They will tell you they are not permitted to make an adaptation from a successful book. They will show you how impossible it is to transfer a hit play to the screen. They will give you the reasons why it is impossible to make into picture entertainment the same stories that the public is buying every day in magazines and newspapers.

Those of you who may be interested will find that, just as soon as a writer gets to a point in a story that is really expressive of life as it is lived today, he has to stop, he has to go back 20 years and write it as it was lived then. Accordingly, the picture from that story is unbelievable and holds little interest for ticket buyers.

If some of you theatre owners would corral a little GUTS and fight for your rights in the same manner that publishers of books, magazines and newspapers fight for theirs; if you would tell a lot of those longhairs, with their dried palms extended, to go fly a kite; if you would stand behind any and all effort to make PICTURE ENTERTAINMENT, you would be making a lot more money than you ever thought existed in this business.

We don't advocate dirt pictures. We are not fostering smut. We are pleading for stories that will interest audiences and send them back to your theatres tomorrow. We ask only the same right to photograph, that is given publishers to print. We are yelling for picturizations of what is going on in the country today and a frank discussion in dramatic form of those happenings.

It's easy for Mr. Kuykendall and others to mount a platform and demand CLEAN PICTURES, but what are they talking about? What do they mean by CLEAN? Producers here are striving to give them pictures that will sell. If the pictures that are available will not sell, then, Mr. Kuykendall, tell us what will and it will be delivered to you. Define the word "CLEAN" as pertaining to picture entertainment. Give the writers a stop and a go, Mr. Kuykendall, and if those pictures will draw audiences, will pay the bills, you will have done a great service to this business.

Somebody has to do some kind of a service that will get the picture business back on its feet and keep it there.

Columbia Starts One

Having borrowed Robert Young from MGM yesterday and signed Doris Kenyon for the lead, Columbia today puts Walter Connolly's first starring picture, "Whom the Gods Destroy," into work. Walter Lang directs the Felix Young production.

Webb to Produce One

Millard Webb will produce independently and direct "International Cabaret," an original story by Hans Tiedeman. The story is written around Haus Vaterland in Berlin. Production will be at Pathe studios.

New Jungle Film Ready

New York.—Showman's Pictures Inc. has acquired the jungle film, "Beyond Bengal," for distribution.

Brains at Premium Here, Says DeMille

C. B. DeMille told the MPTOA delegates yesterday: "You've heard that Hollywood is crowded. It's a desert when you're looking for brains." He got a howl, but he explained that available ability was scarce because the majors had the most important people under contract.

Big New Theatre Program in England

London.—Business throughout England in the motion picture theatres has determined many individuals and companies to start construction of new houses, and it is expected that there will be over 100 new theatres here before January 1.

All the new houses are designed to seat 2000 and more, and every modern improvement in theatre construction will be utilized.

Protest Filed on Extra Re-Registration Board

While the members of the Code Committee for Extras yesterday were speeding the work of re-registration, petitions were being circulated among extra players calling upon Sol A. Rosenblatt to prevent the present committee from carrying out the work.

Reasons given for the request were that on the committee are individuals belonging to organizations calling themselves representatives of picture players and the signers believe those not members will not get a fair deal. Also, that the signers believe the board is not qualified to pass on the capability of the players.

'U' After Helmers Novel

Universal is negotiating with Peter Otto Helmers, formerly with UFA in Germany and editor of "Scherl" there, for one of the three novels he brought here. Helmers arrived in town Monday fom New York.

AU REVOIR...
COME AGAIN

You've probably had a million laughs since you came to Hollywood . . . but you missed the biggest laugh of your lifetime.

If you had been a few days earlier you would have caught the preview of the greatest entertainment John Barrymore has ever made, "Twentieth Century," with Carole Lombard, Walter Connolly and Roscoe Karns.

It's the rowdiest, most riotous comedy the stage or screen has ever offered . . . the outstanding stage hit of last season . . . the outstanding talking picture hit of this season.

Zanuck Will Visit Foreign Exchanges

On his first visit to United Artists foreign film exchanges to discuss material with exchange managers for next year's production schedule, Darryl Zanuck, 20th Century Pictures producer, leaves Hollywood with his family May 7.

Zanuck will be absent for at least two months, his itinerary including London, Paris, Rome and Vienna in Europe, and Cairo and Capetown in Africa, where United Artists exchanges are located. He will confer with all foreign exchange managers with a view toward shaping his future productions for a more world-wide market.

While in Africa, Zanuck will join a big game hunting expedition into the interior.

New Plays on Broadway Set For Coming Week

New York.—"Broadway Interlude" goes into the Forrest Theatre on April 19. Play is by Achmed Abdullah and William Almon Wolff.

"Are You Decent" goes into the Ambassador on April 19. Also opening next week are "Trial by Jury" at the Majestic, April 16; "Stevedore" at the Civic Repertory Theatre, April 18.

MGM Holds Kruger

MGM has signed Otto Kruger for another term. He is now working in "Treasure Island."

CREEL JOINS LINDSEY IN DEFYING ROSENBLATT

welfare of the studio employees by turning the complaints over to a committee on which there was a paid representative of the producers. He questioned Rosenblatt's right to order such an act under the Code.

Charles Cunningham, head of the Local NRA Compliance Board wired Creel regarding it. Yesterday morning the wire arrived from Creel, ordering the halt in carrying out Rosenblatt's orders. At the moment all proceedings are halted awaiting a final showdown.

"I am glad to get the firm backing of Mr. Creel," said Judge Lindsey yesterday. "I mean no disrespect to Mr. Rosenblatt, but I cannot concede that he has the authority under the code to jeopardize the signers of these complaints."

Meanwhile Lew Blix, business representative of Local 37, IATSE, representing grips, property men and electricians, both wired and wrote Creel protesting against Rosenblatt's order, and also wrote Rosenblatt protesting in behalf of his men the appointment of Pat Casey to the new Studio Labor Board.

Blix in his letter stated that the turning over of the complaints bearing the names of the employees would not be in keeping with the Code.

"The integrity of identification of men guaranteed by the Administration would be violated and severe loss result," he wrote.

In his protest to Rosenblatt against the appointment of Casey to the Studio Labor Board, he stated that Casey is a leader of the producer group, has already interpreted the code wrongly, stands in a prejudicial light with the workers, and does not have and cannot get the confidence of the employees. He pointed out that he had nothing personal against Casey, but his official position makes his presence on the board unbearable.

"Lindsey has the faith and confidence of the workers," he added. "He has started to do a good job. Why not keep him?"

The new Studio Labor Committee has taken quarters in the Guaranty Building, but to date only Casey and Ed Smith have been announced as members.

Ernest Truex Plans Summer Stock Company

New York.—Ernest Truex has announced that he will head a stock company during the summer months in White Plains.

Its home will be at the Contemporary Theatre Club and his son Philip will be associated with him. According to plans the theatre will open early in June.

Dick L'Estrange, candidate for supervisor of the Third District and member of the Regional Labor Board, will leave tomorrow for Phoenix to hear complaints of violations of the NRA Code.

Pommer Praises American Pictures

New York.—Erich Pommer, noted German director, arrived here today on the Ile de France, en route to the Fox studios. On landing Pommer said:

"The American motion picture leads the world in furnishing fine entertainment for movie-goers. Their position has been considerably strengthened strengthened throughout Europe, not so much due to the failure of European producers as to the astounding progress your studios have made. America used to litter Europe with commercial trash, but that has now been supplanted by excellent pictures."

Pommer will leave here next week, accompanied by Sidney R. Kent, for Hollywood.

MAYER HANDLES EXHIBS ROUGHLY ON SMUT ISSUE

Care For Cash, Not For Morals, He Says

don't care what you buy as long as the pictures have box-office draw.

"You, as an industry, condemn block booking and howl because you can't cancel pictures you claim are unclean, but the truth is that the ones you want to cancel are the ones you have heard are not money-makers, regardless of their type.

"I thoroughly agree with you that indecencies should be eliminated. But I'll tell you this: I have talked to many leaders in churches and I have found that most of them are fairer in their criticisms than some of you."

The MGM chieftain, speaking to the exhibitors gathered at the Hotel Ambassador for the MPTOA Convention, was declared by observers to have made the first "fighting speech" of the season, standing up to the exhibitors and giving them fire instead of soft-soap.

"I started in the exhibition end of this business twenty-seven years ago," he said, "and I am as thoroughly acquainted with that branch of the industry as with production. I sold pictures, and then my ego got the better of me and I became a producer.

"The producer on Broadway who has one or two hits out of seven is a successful producer. Now, then, is it conceivably just to expect us to produce one a week, fifty-two weeks of the year? We make the pictures, seeking to make successes out of them all. But what are we going to do with them if they do not click—swallow them?

"Back of the exhibitor's complaint against block-booking is a very selfish principle. He figures it out for himself that he wants to play only the successful pictures. He will then make all the money. But who will stand for the cost of the other pictures?"

Answering the showmen's complaint against percentage bookings, Mayer declared that he did not believe it worked hardship on them as claimed.

"We offered our product for a year to one exhibitor who made the complaint and simply asked him in return to show us his books at the end of the year. He refused."

He selected for a concentrated attack the general plea for "fine pictures," asserting he is repeatedly fighting battles with important picture people on this subject.

Double and triple bills were slammed by him on the same grounds. He said: "A restaurant serving poor food decides to increase patronage by doubling its portions. How much chance has it to succeed?"

The $25,000 independent, he said, contributed to the double-bill situation and he would rather "see them out of the way" than to continue over-dosing the public. Eight years ago he predicted the exhibitor's mistreatment of producers would drive the latter either into ruin or into theatre-operation. His predictions, he said, were being fulfilled. He defended high salaries in pictures and wound up by asking for greater cooperation between exhibitor and producer.

Correction

In the page ad run by William Dieterle in this publication yesterday he was credited with the writing of Warners "Fashion Follies of 1934." Our typesetter was wrong. It should have read "directed by." Our apologies, Mr. Dieterle.

MPTOA Undecided About Extension of Convention Sessions

Expressing exhibitor sentiment against the publishing of box-office reports, Ed Kuykendall opened yesterday's session at the MPTOA convention, introducing the general counsel, Edward Levy. The eastern attorney spoke on various legal questions affecting the theatremen, Assemblyman Lawrence Cobb succeeding him on the floor to advise closer contact between exhibitor and legislator.

Fred Meyer, MPTOA secretary, when queried in regard to extending the convention, said that there was a semi-official understanding that the exhibitor huddle would be stretched, "providing we are unable to transact our business in the period alotted."

Mrs. Thomas G. Winter talked on "family entertainment," socked the so-called "intelligentsia for their influence on picture-making," and was followed by Joe Breen, of the Producers Association, delivering a eulogy on clean advertising.

Louis B. Mayer's subsequent talk lifted the session to its high spot, with Cecil B. DeMille's address on "How To Put Pictures Together" getting close attention from the crowd.

Accompanying the director was nearly a ton of exhibits, artist sketches on scenes, sets, props and gowns for Paramount's "Cleopatra." He topped his lecture by showing an artist's illustration of his bath-tub scene from the picture, claiming it was the "biggest bath-tub I've ever had." He also declared that to him the laws of censorship were unreasonable and that they are not based on good common sense.

Walter Vincent's talk was put over until this morning, owing to the lateness of the session... Kuykendall announced the golf tournament and asked for registrations.

Nearly 300 exhibitors and their families visited Radio yesterday, another group taking in a tour of the Fox studio. It was a 100 per cent attendance at the MGM soiree at night.

The program for today includes an open forum for all delegates at the business session in the morning, trips to the Paramount and Columbia studios in the afternoon and the entertainment climax at night with the convention banquet at the Ambassador.

Cantor Leaving N.Y. For Picture Here

New York.—Eddie Cantor will leave here Saturday for Hollywood and United Artists studio to start preparation for his picture, "The Treasure Hunt" (tentative title) that will go into production June 1.

The "Treasure Hunt" idea is being developed by Arthur Sheekman, Nat Perrin and Nunnally Johnson, and the only casting done on the picture to date are the two feminine leads, Ethel Merman and Ann Sothern.

Visiting Delegates to Golf for Cups and Beer

Featuring a keg of beer at the fifth hole and another at the thirteenth, the MPTOA Golf Tournament gets off tomorrow at Lakeside, with plans set for 100 entries, handicaps set at the players' discretion.

The theatremen will tee off in foursomes and aim for forty prizes donated by picture people for the event. The Fox West Coast Theatre organization is sponsoring the tournament.

Real Rebel Yell

MGM finally got a Confederate veteran to give the rebel yell in "Operator 13." S. S. Simmons, ninety-year-old major general of the Confederate army, has been signed.

Goldwyn Will Have 3 in Work by June 1

For the first time in his history, Sam Goldwyn plans to have three pictures in work simultaneously around June 1. The United Artists lot will be cleared for Goldwyn's use, with 20th Century going into a four month dark period May 1 and Edward Small moving his production unit to RKO-Pathe.

The Anna Sten-Frederic March vehicle, "Resurrection," will head the list, getting under way May 15, with Rouben Mamoulian directing. "Barbary Coast," which William Wellman handles with Gary Cooper and Gloria Swanson in the top brackets, follows two weeks later. Leonard Praskins and Dwight Taylor are shaping the script. The Cantor picture is the third.

Cameramen Serious About Silent Camera

Members of the Research Council of the Academy were rejoicing yesterday over the reception given their silent camera questionnaire, which was mailed recently to more than 1,000 techicians in the industry.

Already scores of the questionnaires have been filled out and returned, and the Council expects to start work shortly on the consolidation of the information.

WAR ON SMUT ORGANIZED

TRADE VIEWS by W. R. WILKERSON

•M.P.T.O.A. Members:—

If you have accomplished nothing else other than a sane discussion of the double feature evil, a discussion that may bring results later, you will have done more during your convention this year than any other group has done in the past ten years at these meetings.

The importance of the COMPLETE ELIMINATION of double features in representative houses throughout the country (and the small ones) is not a guess—it means BETTER PICTURES, and better pictures mean better grosses, better profits.

Hollywood has shown you that it can't turn out sufficient pictures to permit you to double them up on the same program, and, in their effort, the producers are not giving the time and attention they should to their important pictures.

You know, and we all know, that a good picture will not only run twice as long as an ordinary attraction, but will get four and five times the gross. When you see one of the big New York theatres doing $70,000 one week and as low as $17,000 the next week, YOU MUST KNOW the answer. When the Music Hall does $100,000 or better in a week and then drops to $60,000 the following week, the same answer holds good.

And think of the difference in the grosses. THINK what good pictures can really draw. You don't need a pencil to figure the difference in your profits. And what is true with the big city houses is true with the theatres in the neighborhoods and small towns. ATTRACTIONS will attract.

If you will make up your minds, assist others in arriving at the same conclusion and REFUSE TO PLAY DOUBLE FEATURES, our studios here will have to cut down their production schedules and, in cutting them down, they will have more time to devote to the important pictures—the pictures that will sell.

MGM, with the largest production organization in the business, can't make 50 pictures a year and make them right, nor can Paramount, Warners, Radio, Universal, Fox or any of the smaller plants. If any one of them would turn out 25 GOOD PICTURES, it would take the Bank of Paramount yesterday assigned Wesley Ruggles to direct "Rhumba," which will be a Carole Lombard-George Raft vehicle. Story, an original by Guy Endome, has not been assigned to a writer as yet.

Mystery For Warners

Warner Brothers have bought "The Case of the Howling Dog," a Liberty story by Erle Stanley Gardner. Ben Markson will adapt and Warren William is likely to star.

MPTOA Directors Will Meet With Producers And Insist That Films Be Cleaned Up

A determined effort is to be made by the MPTOA to convince the producers that smut and vulgarity must be eliminated from all pictures. To this end the board of directors of the exhibitor organization will remain in town for a few days after the close of the convention and will hold conferences with a representative group of producers. On this subject, Secretary Fred Mever, of the MPTOA, said yesterday:—

"A resolution is being prepared for this purpose and will be presented to the delegates before we adjourn the convention. If we are successful in getting the producers to eliminate

Television Tubes Being Made Secretly

New York.—RCA has at least 100 men at work in its Harrison, New Jersey, tube factory, turning out the new giant cathode tubes for use in television. The work is being carried on in great secrecy.

These tubes are the very latest development for large television projection and all the men employed are closely guarded to prevent any competitor getting hold of samples.

Rivkin-Wolfson Abroad

Winding up their contract at MGM on June 2, Allen Rivkin and P. J. Wolfson leave for Russia for a two months' vacation before taking a writing assignment in London. Latter deal was negotiated some time ago.

Expect Dynamite In Darrow Report

Washington.—A load of dynamite is expected to be wrapped up in the report of the Darrow NRA Review Board, which has just completed a lengthy hearing of charges against the Motion Picture Code Authority by the Independents.

The report, which goes directly to President Roosevelt, will contain findings based solely on the charges, with no defence in evidence.

This was revealed today when the Review Board dropped a bombshell

Montgomery Set For 'Mutiny on the Bounty'

Robert Montgomery has been assigned to a principal role in "Mutiny on the Bounty," a novel by Charles Nordehoff and James Norman Hall, which Frank Lloyd will direct for MGM.

Wallace Beery and Clark Gable fill the top brackets. Novel is being scripted by Carey Wilson and John Farrow.

Henry Ginsberg Back

Henry Ginsberg returned to his desk as general manager of Hal Roach yesterday, after a quick vacation in Honolulu. Ginsberg left two weeks ago to meet his wife there on her return from a tour of the Orient.

Dave Selznick East

David Selznick leaves for New York Sunday accompanying George Cukor and Howard Estabrook, who hop from there to England to prepare "David Copperfield." Selznick will be gone six weeks.

Kent on Way to Coast

WARNERS TRYING TO BUY THEATRES WITH BONDS

New York.—Warner Brothers have embarked upon another theatre-buying spree, planning to increase very largely their present string of 450 houses.

They are offering theatre owners, particularly in the New Jersey section, Warner bonds as payment for taking over the houses. Their argument is that the purchase price is guaranteed by the expected increased value of the bonds.

These deals are similar to those guaranteed by Paramount, which got that company into so much trouble.

Ernst Lubitsch Starts 'Merry Widow' Today

Ernst Lubitsch puts "The Merry Widow" into production today at MGM after two weeks of rehearsals and four days recording of the songs.

Maurice Chevalier and Jeanette MacDonald have the top spots in the Irving Thalberg production.

'U' Premiere Monday

New York.—Universal's "I Like It That Way" will have its premiere at the Mayfair Theatre Monday night.

THE LOW DOWN

The N. Y. dailies are headlining the most recent suicide attempt by Marjorie King. The papers are playing it up big because of her name being linked with that of Georgie Raft and making him the heavy because he happens to be a picture star. It's too bad that the newshounds are not aware of the fact that Margie has a suicide complex and that she has tried it many times before!

The serious illness of Frank Joyce in New York has sent many in Hollywood scurrying to their doctors for a thorough looking over, just to be on the safe side. Two results we know of are Charlie Beahan, who is now busy losing his appendix at the Cedars; and today Ricardo Cortez hies himself to the same spot for a slight (and slightly embarrassing) operation. Incidentally, Frank Joyce was reported as somewhat improved yesterday.

Well, it's gotten to the point in New York where they're paraphrasing play and picture titles now—if they can't make them fit the people any other way. Which gives the players much more leeway and twice as much fun. F'rinstance:

William Powell—
"The Powell and the Glory"
Junior Laemmle—
"Fifty Million Henchmen"
Clifton Webb—
"Lavender and Old Face"

And here are some more "straight" ones:

Johnny Weissmuller—
"Animal Kingdom"
Archie Mayo....."The Thin Man"
Maureen O'Sullivan—
"Johnny Get Your Gun"
Mrs. Pat Campbell—
"Turn Back the Clock"
Edmund Goulding—
"I Like It That Way"
Bing Crosby....."Of Thee I Sing"
George Cukor....."My Lips Betray"
Mary Brian....."No One Man"
Al Newman....."Face the Music"

It could go on for years!

Reviewing the FAN MAGS

"THE COUNTESS OF MONTE CRISTO"

Universal prod.; director, Karl Freund; writers, Walter Fliesch, Karen DeWolf, Gene Lewis.

Roxy Theatre

American: We've had this one before, quite frequently in fact, and most recently just the other week in one of the German imports. Of the players, Paul Lukas, with a sincere, unaffected portrayal, manages to make his role ring true, and garners to himself the lion's share both of honors and sympathy.

Sun: The picture needed cinematic wit to point up its trifling comedy. It needed some good light comedy acting. It got neither. Mr. Freund has directed the story smoothly enough; but there are no champagne bubbles in this talkie. It is light melodrama rather than light comedy.

Herald-Tribune: "The Countess of Monte Cristo" is a curious blend of genuinely amusing entertainment and tedium. Mr. Karl Freund, we venture to say, is finding himself, as a director, since this picture is an improvement on his last two films.

News: Even though "The Countess of Monte Cristo" has in its cast such capable names as Fay Wray, Paul Lukas, Patsy Kelly and Reginald Owen, there is precious little that can be said of its entertainment value.

Mirror: Fay gives one of her usual competent performances. Lukas displays his usual charm. Their support is good. It includes such interesting performers as Reginald Owen, Patsy Kelly and Paul Page.

Times: The new work is weak on credibility and less than overwhelming on general interest. Its allure, if any, is predicated on its ability to leap from surprise to surprise in the matter of identifying its principal players. The most heartening item in the film from the entertainment standpoint is Patsy Kelly's amusing performance.

World-Telegram: An earnest, well bred, uneventful film, which one can see and hear without boredom or discomfort, but which leaves the state of the current Broadway cinema just about where it found it. Karl Freund has directed the film with such a sure touch that one feels it is a pity to waste such expert direction on such an arid and labored story.

Journal: While there isn't anything especially new in the Cinderella idea, "The Countess of Monte Cristo" manages to disguise a stock situation so adroitly that the film emerges as amusing entertainment. Smartly directed, with Fay Wray and Paul Lukas as the principals, and Patsy Kelly as comedy relief that is not only relief but also hilarious comedy.

'Mystery Woman' Not Interested in Films

Local NRA Code offices were excited yesterday when it was learned that a mysterious woman named Barry was coming to act in a liaison capacity with State and Federal offices. No one seemed to know why, and rumor even had her replacing Mrs. Mabel Kinney on the Code Committee for Extras.

Last night Mrs. Kinney revealed that Aleska Barry, former worker in the State Social Welfare Department, is coming as a field coordinator, not to take part in picture code troubles, but to check up complaints about employment of infirm women in industry.

Shell Holds Ardell

Because of the fan mail received from his broadcast last Monday, the Shell Oil company has again signed Franklyn Ardell, comedian, to appear on its program next Monday. Program is released locally by KHJ. Deal was negotiated by Kingston-Harris.

Lukases at Springs

Paul Lukas and his wife left for Palm Springs yesterday for a week's vacation. When he returns, he goes into "I Give My Love," with Wynne Gibson, at Universal.

Hardy for 'U' Picture

Sam Hardy replaces Reginald Denny in "I Give My Love," at Universal. Denny is working at the present time and could not get released.

Seff Gets Daughter and Contract on Same Day

Manny Seff is the proud father of an eight-pound daughter. She arrived at the Cedars of Lebanon hospital yesterday morning. Also Warners presented Manny with a new one-year contract. The studio gang formed a pool for the exact time of the baby's arrival and the $40 was won by Robert Presnell.

OPEN FORUM

Dear Mr. Wilkerson:

Have noticed that you often mention the need for better pictures of the higher type both morally and fundamentally, yet some of us wonder how pictures like these will ever return on a majority basis with many interferences and falling blocks put in their paths by unthinking, unwilling supervisors and others too numerous to mention.

Writers have many beautiful scenes with perfect acting called for in their stories, but these must be removed from the scripts because the expense of the shots, ectetera, is a trifle higher than the regular stock stuff. The director does not ask for these removals. The actor or actress does not ask for these removals. They would rather have the shots made in order that the picture would be more finished and therefore not only be better for the audiences (which pay plenty) but for the reputations of the directors, the artists and the studios.

If these supervisors, producers and the other forms of efficiency experts don't care about improving pictures, it is hardly feasible that our present day pictures will see any drastic changes for the better until the Wall Street bosses put pressure on them or perhaps, do away with a large percentage of these "Bonus Drawing" drawbacks.

COLUMBIA HAS KNOCK-OUT IN 'TWENTIETH CENTURY'

Direction, Acting, Story All Superb

"TWENTIETH CENTURY"
(Columbia)

Direction .....Howard Hawks
Authors .....Charles MacArthur and Ben Hecht
Photography .....Joseph August
Cast: John Barrymore, Carole Lombard, Walter Connolly, Roscoe Karns, Charles Levison, Etienne Girardot, Dale Fuller, Ralph Forbes, Clifford Thompson, James P. Burtis, Gi-Gi Parrish, Edgar Kennedy, Ed Gargan, Snowflake, Herman Bing, Lee Kohlmar, Pat Flaherty.

If Moses had chiseled out an eleventh commandment on those stone tablets, it would have been: THOU SHALT NOT LET COLUMBIA'S "TWENTIETH CENTURY" PASS THEE BY.

This picture is so excitingly good that superlatives suddenly seem feeble. Perfect production, perfect acting, perfect story and then string a lot of "perfects" together for the dialogue.

It is farce that touches art; it is entertainment that makes dreams come true; it is satire that borders on the diabolical, and it is characterization that IS genius.

One of the BIG hit pictures of the year, this comedy will blow the dust off of any theatre's cash register. And repeaters will be legion, coming back to catch the priceless lines that were lost in the laughter.

John Barrymore has the role of his life as Oscar Jaffe, a big theatrical producer whose acting (when people are within sight and hearing) puts to shame his most famous stars. With arms waving like a windmill, his hair in acute astonishment, his eyebrows continually taking a dramatic stance, his voice thundering with maledictions, or softly cunning, and always either on the brink of suicide or on the wings of joy, Barrymore has created in Jaffe a character that will go down in screen history.

Carole Lombard, as Lily Garland, a little shop girl whom Jaffe builds into a famous star and who deserts him to go to Hollywood when she can't stand his theatrics any longer, does almost as much for her role. She is as temperamental and dramatic as Jaffe, and one of the funniest scenes in the picture is where they both go on an emotional jag at the same time in a compartment on the train without benefit of audience, until they suddenly realize that neither is being impressed.

Walter Connolly as Jaffe's long-suffering "advisor" is priceless and his comedy is superb. Roscoe Karns is better than he has ever been as Jaffe's press agent. Etienne Girardot contributes a new, fantastic humor as a slightly insane man, who goes around pasting religious signs on everybody and everything in the train. Herman Bing and Lee Kohlmar are amusing as two players from the Passion Play; Charles Levison is well cast as a rival producer; Ralph Forbes does beautifully with a small role; Dale Fuller is good as Lily Garland's maid, and Edgar Kennedy is a detective.

Most of the picture takes place on the Twentieth Century going from Chicago to New York. The action concerns Jaffe's desperate, fantastic and screamingly funny efforts to get Lily Garland to sign up with him again and save him from ruin.

Howard Hawks' direction is a miracle and a thing of beauty; Charles MacArthur and Ben Hecht wrote the story, which is a perfect setting for the jewels of dialogue, and Joseph August photographed it flawlessly.

Exhibitors will have to padlock their theatres to keep patrons from seeing this one. And it is the kind of picture that will take the padlocks off a lot of houses.

M.P. Code Authority To Open Office Here

New York.—The Motion Picture Code Authority, which has been established in New York for some time, will open an office in Hollywood very shortly to handle production disputes on the ground.

Majestic Plans to Make 12 Pictures

New York.—The reorganization plan of Majestic Pictures has been completed and the company will make twelve pictures, to be produced by Larry Darmour and Harold Hopper. Ample financing is said to have been arranged.

The company's first picture of the new season will be "The Scarlet Letter," which will be ready July 1.

Film Folk Plastered With Income Tax Liens

Income tax liens were filed yesterday in Federal Court against Sidney Fox, Herbert Brenon and Joseph P. McEvoy.

Miss Fox was tagged $256 additional on her 1931 earnings. Brenon was named in two liens for 1931 and 1932 in the amounts of $177 and $535. McEvoy was named in a 1930 lien for $2017.

Bill Koenig Marries

It was revealed at the MPTOA dinner last night that William Koenig, Warner-First National executive, and Barbara Rogers, a Warner player, wee married early this week in Mexico. Jack Warner confirmed the story.

"U" Buys Runyon Yarn

Universal has purchased the Damon Runyon story, "Ransom—$1,000,000," which was published in Cosmopolitan, and will continue its loan of Murray Roth from Warners to direct it.

Laemmle Jr. North

Carl Laemmle Jr. left for Santa Barbara last night and the rest of the Universal executive staff joins him today for a production conference.

Lindsey Continues on Code Complaints

Judge Ben B. Lindsey, NRA Labor Compliance Officer, announced last night that he is planning to hear several more witnesses in one of the complaints against a studio that is now in his hands.

"The complaint is one of those that I heard last week," explained the Judge. "Several witnesses could not appear at the time, so I postponed the hearing. Just as soon as the witnesses can come I shall continue hearing the case regardless of Mr. Rosenblatt's order to turn it over to the Studio Labor Board."

Meanwhile matters were at a standstill last night in the matter of the numerous complaints which the Judge, backed by George Creel, refuses to turn over to the board.

Script Trouble Delays 'Here Comes the Groom'

Due to script trouble, Charles R. Rogers has postponed the start of "Here Comes the Groom" from Monday to Thursday of next week.

Organization will, however, get "I Love an Actress" into work Monday, wtih Ralph Murphy directing from the Humphrey Pearson script. Casey Robinson is polishing off the Leonard Praskins screen play on "Here Comes the Groom," and Edward Sedgwick will direct.

Blackmer at Radio

Radio yesterday signed Sidney Blackmer for the lead in "Afterwards," a London stage play by Walter Hackett which is being scripted by Marian Dix and Arthur Caesar. Player is now on the lot in "Down to Their Last Yacht." Cliff Reid produces "Afterwards."

Hayden Replaces Duna

Julie Hayden replaces Steffi Duna in "Sour Grapes" at Radio, and Duna replaces Dolores Del Rio in "Sea Girl." Julie appeared opposite Francis Lederer in "Autumn Crocus" at El Capitan.

Gould Starts Dance

Dave Gould started rehearsals yesterday on the South Sea Bolero, which will be a feature of "Down to Their Last Yacht" at Radio. Dance number is slated to be something entirely different and new.

Fox Will Be Heard In $2,000,000 Suit

New York.—William Fox will be examined next Tuesday, prior to the trial of the suit for $2,011,000 brought against him by John D. Elms, an inventor. The suit will be heard in a Staten Island court.

Elms claims that, in 1927, he made a contract with Fox through Courtland Smith, for Fox to exploit and market a device which gives the effect of the third dimension in pictures. The invention is based on a system of revolving lenses on the camera and projector.

Vidor Quits Location For Few Studio Shots

King Vidor returned from location today to film a few scenes at the United Artists lot on "Our Daily Bread." He will return to the Tarzana ranch to continue production.

Almost the entire cast of forty are living at Encino during the filming of the location scenes. Karen Morley and Tom Keene head the cast.

Paris Photographer To Snap Movie Stars

Baron George Huene, Paris photographer for the Conde Nast publcations, will arrive in Hollywood, April 19, to make special photographic studies of Marlene Deitrich, Sylvia Sydney, Claudette Colbert and Miriam Hopkins.

Marjorie Klein at Para.

Paramount yesterday signed Marjorie Klein to prepare the continuity on "A Son Comes Home," the Adela Rogers St. Johns original. Story will be the first Lee Tracy picture on his new Paramount deal and will be directed by Charles Vidor. Bayard Veiller produces.

Morris Starting at 'U'

Chester Morris arrived in Hollywood last night after a two weeks' vacation at Palm Springs. He starts work Monday at Universal in "Loves of A Sailor," which Kurt Neumann will direct.

Del Andrews Injured

Del Andrews, director and writer, was run down by a hit and run driver while crossing the street last night and was taken to the Good Samaritan Hospital, where it was said his skull was fractured.

Dick Wallace to Fox

Richard Wallace has signed with Fox to direct two pictures, starting in August. His first will be "Angel Face" and the other will be a Janet Gaynor production.

Paul Sloane used 450 extras yesterday in his big set for "Down to Their Last Yacht," which he is directing for Radio.

Manners Set For Lead

David Manners has been engaged by Charles R. Rogers for the leading role in "I Love an Actress," which will be produced for Paramount.

'BRAIN SWEAT' ONE OF THE SEASON'S BEST COMEDIES

Good Picture in Play of Negro Life

James Montgomery and Henry R. Stern present "Brain Sweat," by John Charles Brownell; directed by Robert Ober, with Billy Higgins, Rose McClendon, Barrington Guy, A. B. Comathiere, Pearl Wright, Dick Campbell, Viola Dean, Marie Young, Adrew Tribble, E. J. Blunkall, plus the Russell Wooding Choir.

New York.—With the handicap of the worst title of the year, a decidedly pleasant and at all times amusing comedy of negro life along the Mississippi came quietly into the Longacre Theatre and surprised the assembled audience into the merriest first night it has had in weeks and weeks. In its quiet and unpretentious way, it offers one of the best comedies of the year, played by a cast that is not only expert, but that seems to be enjoying itself to the utmost all the way, and the attitude is contagious.

We have here the case of Henry Washington, who, deprived of the privilege of manual labor on the good ship Cotton Blossom, decided to give up that same manual labor in favor of using his brain like the white folks do, to make a lot of money for himself and family. In the process of exercising that brain, he manages to give the family rocking chair ample patronage for over two years while his wife and son support him. Finally, his loving wife sends him out of the house to go drown himself, but instead, good old Henry puts over his "big project" and, at the end of the play, is richer by ten thousand dollars.

Needless to say that, with an all-negro cast, there is bound to be at least one scene devoted to the singing of spirituals, so, with appropriate comedy overtones, Henry Washington's funeral is celebrated with all the fine trimmings that one has come to expect of such carryings on in negro plays. Above and beyond that, however, John Charles Brownell has written consistently humorous dialogue and Billy Higgins in the part of Henry Washington contributes a characterization to put in the memory book along with the kind of thing that made Frank Craven and Ernest Truex and George M. Cohan dear to the hearts of audiences.

Rose McClendon, who, they tell us, is Harlem's first actress, is very good indeed as Henry's wife, and Pearl Wright as the carping, sharp-tongued sister is perfectly grand. The rest of the cast, including the choir,are all more than adequate in their parts and the direction keeps things moving right along.

There isn't much chance of the movies doing this with a negro cast, but the casting needn't worry pictures. The idea could be just as amusing played by whites, provided they'd play it in the same homely spirit and with the same very evident good humor.

Well, a Poor Excuse Is Better Than None

Universal decided to change the spelling of Sally Blane's name to SALLIE, in the billing on "Half a Sinner," explaining that it was to avoid conflict with the name of Sally Rand, the fan dancer.

MGM-Ted Lewis Dicker

MGM is negotiating with Ted Lewis and his band for a top spot in "Student Tour," which Charles Reisner will direct, but the studio cannot see the $30,000 asked by the band. Original has been written by George Seaton and Arthur Bloch, and is being scripted by Ralph Spence. Monta Bell will produce.

'U's' Spring Soiree

New York.—Eight hundred Universal employees, all members of the Universal Club, will attend the annual "Spring Soiree" at the Hotel Lismore tomorrow night.

Beauty Winner Set

Dorothy Short, formerly a "Miss Atlantic City," was signed yesterday by Busby Berkeley for dance sequences in "Dames."

Mae West Orders Bullet-Proof Car

When a gangster threatens Mae West, she believes him. So, in addition to having a couple of bodyguards since she testified against the man who stole her jewels, she has now ordered an armored car to protect the precious lives of herself and Manager Timoney.

The armor-plated limousine will cost $13,500, of which $7000 goes for the safety element. Non-breakable glass and shields to protect the tires will be used, and not even machine gun bullets will be able to crash their way in.

Famous Authors Outfit Gets Four New Stories

New York.—The Famous Authors Pictures Corporation has acquired four new properties for pictures.

They are "The Unforbidden Sin," a novel by Roy Vickers; the book to be published simultaneously with the release of the picture; a serial entitled "A Life for Sale," by Sydney Horler; "Burned Evidence," a novel by Mrs. Wilson Woodrow, and an original by Beth Brown, called "Jazz Beau."

Darrow Report Feared

into the lap of the Motion Picture Code Authority by refusing to admit as evidence a lengthy, formal brief filed by that body, stating its case and believed to be in answer to the Independents' charges. The brief will be considered solely as a demurrer. This means that, as Wm. Elliott, of the IATSE, and the Code Authority both failed to appear before the Board, the report will have to be made on the evidence of the Independents with no counter defence.

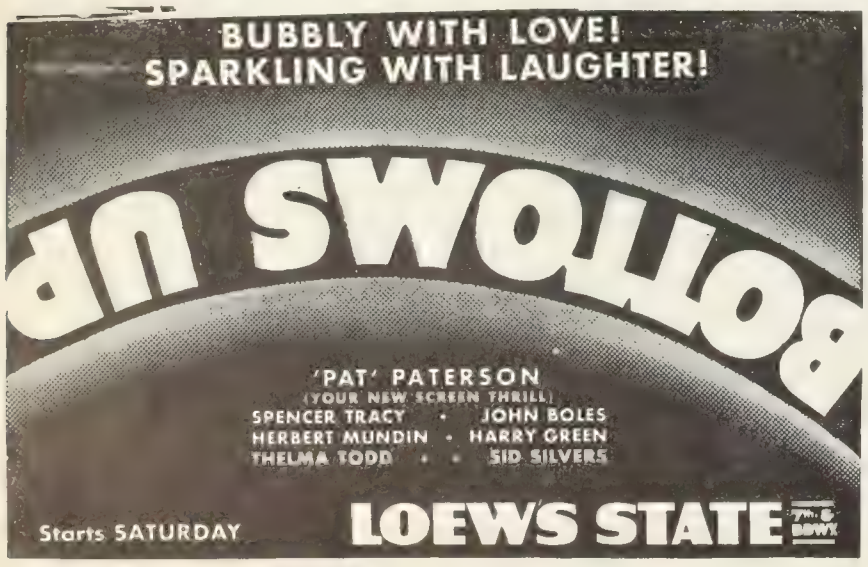
'Blumey's' Mansion Destroyed by Fire

New York.—A. C. Blumenthal's $20,000 gold-leaf bathroom and the 22-room mansion that surrounded it at Larchmont, were destroyed by fire yesterday, the loss being estimated at from $300,000 to $500,000. The owner and his wife, Peggy Fears, from whom he is separated, have not occupied the house for about six months.

Blumey's collection of antiques, paintings, and art objects, some of them priceless, were all burned. The little "manor house," as it was called, which was a private motion picture theatre and swimming pool, was not damaged.

Columbo Lead in 'U' 'Tonight's the Night'

Russ Columbo and Universal got together yesterday after arguments stretching over a couple of months, and he has been cast in the leading role of "Tonight's the Night," a B. F. Zeidman production.



Columbo refused three different pictures at Universal, including "Glamour," because he felt that he would not be given a sufficiently good singing break.

MGM Buys Sea Story

MGM yesterday bought "Man Against the Sea," a novel by Charles Nordehoff and James Norman Hall. Story is a sequel to "Mutiny on the Bounty" and studio will not worry about it until the latter is out of the way.

Reynolds Assigned

Ben Reynolds has been assigned to the cinematography on Paramount's "The Old-Fashioned Way," starring W. C. Fields. William Beaudine will direct.

Beverly Little Theatre Will Present 'Caprice'

Hope Loring (Mrs. Louis Lighton) is directing "Caprice," which will open at the Beverly Hills Little Theater for Professionals on May 7.

In the cast will be Virginia Valli, Walter Bryon, David Scott, Dorothy Phillips, Mrs. Frank Borzage, Fred Sullivan and Anne O'Neil.

Durante on Coffee Hour

Jack Harvey and Milton Raison, who wrote Jimmy Durante's dialogue for the Radio picture, "Strictly Dynamite," have been engaged by Durante to write his material for a series of 24 broadcasts. The comedian follows Eddie Cantor on the Chase and Sanborn hour beginning April 22.

N. Y. Publisher Here

Lee Furman, president of Macauley Publishing Company, arrived in town yesterday from New York. He will be here ten days, lining up material from his Hollywood clients.

Dorothy Gray Signed

Dorothy Gray who has a featured role in Warners' "As the Earth Turns," was signed yesterday by Radio to play Ann Harding's daughter in "Vergie Winters."

Phil Regan on Air

Phil Regan, Warner Brothers' new singing star now appearing in "Dames," will be guest artist on KHJ anniversary program this evening at 8:45.

Chief Davis Guest at Masquers Easter Revel

The Masquers will stage an Easter Revel at their Clubhouse Sunday night and will have Chief of Police Davis as their guest of honor. Several sketches will be presented, with much of the talent of the club in the casts.

Features of the evening will be the signing of Bing Crosby and some comedy stunts by Frank McHugh and Charles Butterworth.

'Bad Boy' Starts Apr. 20

Sol Lesser starts production on "Peck's Bad Boy" April 20, since Jackie Cooper will be available at that time. Producer had planned to get the picture under way a month ago but at the last minute MGM decided to put "Treasure Island" into work.

Gargan Loaned to MGM

MGM yesterday borrowed William Gargan from Radio for a top spot in "Professional Corespondent," which Harry Beaumont directs. Studio previously borrowed Loretta Young from Twentieth Century for the lead.

Hillyer to Try Shorts

Lambert Hillyer, Columbia contract director, will try his hand at piloting short subjects. He was assigned yesterday to handle the first two of the "Minute Mysteries" which Irving Briskin produces.

'Jane Eyre' to Start

The first production to get under way at Monogram after Trem Carr's return will be "Jane Eyre." Ben Verschleiser will produce and Adele Commandini will do the screen play.

One for Fitzpatrick

New York.—James A. Fitzpatrick is making plans for a picture to be made in the East, production to start in September.

EXHIBS PLAN ROUND TABLE CONFERENCE AGAINST DIRT

Hope For Closer Producer Contacts

smut and vulgarity in pictures it will be the most important accomplishment of the convention. There is absolutely no justification for indecent pictures, and we will seek by direct means to come to an understanding with the picture makers."

The exhibitor-producer conference is the answer to the producers' plea for a round-table discussion of mutual interests. It is expected that, out of the conference will come a means of contact between the two branches of the industry in order to overcome the charges each has been flinging at the other that neither group gives the other the understanding or interest it wants.

The producers' complaint is that the exhibitor refuses to take an active interest in production problems, while the exhibitors claim that the film makers ignore the demands of their organization.

The exhibitor-producer conference plan was disclosed by Meyer just prior to the opening of yesterday's business session of the MPTOA convention. At the same time, from another source, came a report that a resolution will be introduced seeking a revision of the NRA film code to enable exhibitors to cancel out, under the block-booking system, all indecent films.

Before adjournment, a general plea will be issued to all exhibitors for co-operation with community organizations of the Better Films Council type.

The session yesterday had Superior Court Judge Frank C. Collier and Sheriff Eugene Biscailuz speak on crime in pictures. William Ainsworth, Wisconsin MPTOA secretary, concerned himself with the small-town exhibitor, lashing out at metropolitan operators invading small communities in opposition of the local theatre men. He declared this a violation of the NRA code.

Morgan A. Walsh, a metropolitan operator, touched code matters by petitioning for an absence of red tape about the clearance, zoning and grievance boards, and took a sock at distributors for encouraging chiseling to get sales. He then went on record against the producers by taking exceptions to Louis B. Mayer's speech of the day before.

Following him was Walter Vincent, whose anti-producer barbs were neatly clothed in wit. He returned the Louis B. Mayer attack with vengeance, also slamming glorification of the criminal in pictures, film cycles and over-production. Jack Miller got the floor to launch a heavy attack on the American Federation of Labor. He demanded that exhibitors counter-organize against unions, declaring Washington had "condoned and legalized violence, union bombs and intimidation."

On a resolution presented by Fred Meyer, the convention passed a vote to continue sessions today and Saturday morning owing to the pressure of business. The session was called for this afternoon in view of the FWC golf tournament at Lakeside this morning.

The delegates devoted yesterday afternoon to visiting Paramount and Columbia. Former studio presented a lavish welcome, serving a buffet luncheon on the "Cleopatra" set and all the stars entertaining.

The program for today has the golf tournament at Lakeside getting away at 8:15, gallery arriving by bus from the Hotel Ambassador at 9 o'clock.

The business session opens at two o'clock this afternoon and will have an open forum to thresh out all problems presented by delegates and committees. Fred Wehrenberg, of the Public Relations Committee' is scheduled to present his report in which he will ask producers to make the "family type" of product.

Fruitful Comment

The MPTOA brought its own Will Rogers to Los Angeles, in the person of Walter Vincent, the organization's treasurer. Speaking at the session yesterday, he remarked that "the producers send us oranges to the train and lemons to our theatres."

Exhibitors Slap Back at Producers, Answering Mayer

Stirred to resentment by Louis B. Mayer's convention speech of Wednesday, exhibitor feeling was unleashed against producers at yesterday session of the MPTOA convention. Virtually every speaker sought to get his anti-producer sentiments on record. President Ed Kuykendall, in an interview, vented his feelings, assailing the film makers.

He interpreted Mayer's talk as "a veiled threat that the producers are intent upon entering the theatre field stronger than ever." As to forcing them into it, he said: "that is so much poppycock. I can go out and buy as many theatres as I want for fifteen cents on the dollar.

"Instead of listening to the voices of the exhibitors in making their pictures, producers ignore them entirely. They make pictures to satisfy the whims of a director or some other studio pet. This is the direct reason for smut and filth in pictures."

Even sharper was Walter Vincent, who operates twenty houses in Pennsylvania and Virginia. He opened in a ribbing vein, but quickly became serious.

"I cannot understand why, in this country of citrus fruits, Maver chose to give us applesauce. Don't misunderstand. I do not accuse the gentleman of deliberate falsehood, but there is a chance that he was mistaken—that we all make mistakes. The truth of the matter is there are too many pictures being made.

"As a play producer, I produced musical comedies, had successes and failures and I know that none of us here expects the producers to deliver to us one hit a week. The producer makes such large numbers of pictures because he is afraid some other producer will sell more pictures than he will a year. There will be 500 or 600 pictures made this year. That is far more than any first-run house can play."

He scored producers for romanticizing criminals, bringing up recent attempts of the majors to plan Dillinger pictures, hit "picture cycles and epidemics," deplored the "China wall" surrounding Hollywood, whose producers refuse to visit exhibitors, and said he wanted a community of interest between exhibitor and producer.

Convention Dinner Wonderful Success

The great Fiesta Room at the Ambassador was crowded to the doors last night by exhibitors, studio executives and stars for the annual MPTOA convention banquet. Every studio turned out all its notables and the gathering was one of the most brilliant the room has seen.

President Ed Kuykendall ruled the dinner and Will Rogers acted as master of ceremonies. Among the speakers were Dr. Giannini, Will Hays and Jack L. Warner. Entertainment was provided by the studios, with Mae West heading a long list of talent.

Set Dressers Dine

The Set Dressers Association was host last night at a dinner given for the set dressing and prop department heads at the Tavern de Savoia. Ray Moyer of the Charles R. Rogers unit at Paramount was in charge of the affair.

Scott Beal Back to 'U'

Scott R. Beal who won an assistant director's certificate in the Acadamy awards, has returned to Universal to assist Edward Sloman in "There's Always Tomorrow," which goes into production April 19.

'Alice' Goes to Stage

Henry Duffy yesterday borrowed Charlotte Henry from Paramount for the juvenile lead in his legitimate production of Eugene O'Neill's "Ah, Wilderness."

Gordon and Revel Set

Mack Gordon and Harry Revel have been signed by Paramount to write the musical score for "The Old Fashioned Way." William Beaudine will direct.

Roemheld Band at 'U'

Heinz Roemheld and his concert orchestra of fifty will handle the musical arrangement for "The Black Cat" at Universal, starring Boris Karloff and Bela Lugosi.

Donat Due April 20

New York.—Robert Donat, who will have the title role in "Count of Monte Cristo" for Reliance, arrives here on the Berengaria, April 20.

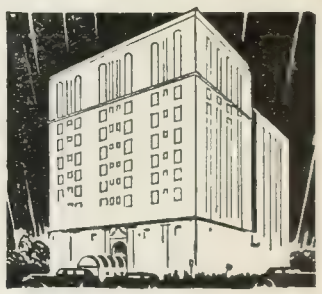
Women to Pick Good Films, Not Slam Bad

Establishing a policy of "constructive censorship," the Federation of Women's Clubs of Milwaukee has decided to voice its approval of pictures it considers worth seeing rather than to condemn films as in the past.

The Federation is a potent factor in mid-western censorship activities. Notification of the inauguration of the new policy was made in a letter to William Wyler whose picture, "Counsellor-at-Law," was chosen as the outstanding one of the month.

'Stamboul' Shelved

After planning to get the picture into work immediately and assigning Richard Schayer to polish up the script, MGM yesterday decided to shelve "Stamboul Quest," the Leo Birinski original. Studio had tried to borrow a player from another studio for the lead but the deal fell through.



'Island' Off to Island

MGM's "Treasure Island" company left yesterday for Catalina Island for a two-weeks' location trip. Wallace Beery and Jackie Cooper head the cast which is directed by Victor Fleming. Hunt Stromberg produces.

CODE DEFENSE BY MAJORS

TRADEVIEWS by FRANK T. POPE

•ONE of the most constructive moves ever made in this industry is the determination of the MPTOA directors to get together with a group of producers with regard to what type of pictures shall be made and what shall not. The original premise for such a conference is to stop the making of indecent pictures, to prevent unnecessary vulgarity from creeping into pictures, vulgarity that obviously is tossed in without the slightest excuse because some one thinks the public wants that sort of stuff.

But the conference should not be permitted to stop at that point. There are many other features about pictures as they are being made that should be corrected. Certainly the exhibitor, being closer to the public than anyone else in the business, should have a good idea of what that public wants. He has a chance to catch audience reactions that no one else has, and his opinions and advice should prove of inestimable benefit to the producers —if they will listen.

That is going to be the great trouble. The average producer never has been famed for listening to anyone. He assumes a Czaristic, know-it-all attitude, and nobody is permitted to tell him what he should or should not produce. Perhaps the producers have come to the point where they doubt their own infallibility. If that is so, if they will listen to the men who should know, there is more hope for the industry and for its box-offices.

The question of smut is, of course, of paramount importance. When the churches and the women of the country begin waging campaigns against dirty pictures, it is time for producers to watch their steps. And no one who reads the newspapers can doubt that such campaigns are on in earnest.

But there are other errors which should engage the attention of such a conference, and one of the main ones is the double feature evil. Exhibitors at the MPTOA convention have inveighed against this practise and producers also have expressed opposition. But it doesn't stop. Perhaps the planned conferences can stop it before it stops the picture business.

It is to be hoped that both producers and exhibitors, when they get together, will come into the meetings

A. T. & T. Dumping Its Loew Holdings

New York.—The heavy trading in Loew's stock this week was due to A. T. & T. disposing of most of its holdings of that issue, which it obtained from Film Securities Corporation.

M.P. Code Budget Plan Approved

New York.—Sol Rosenblatt announced yesterday that the budgeting and financing plan for the motion picture industry has been approved by the NRA in Washington and will be made public next week.

Bills will be sent to nearly 8000 theatres for their shares, as well as to all producers and distributors.

Sam Jaffe Coming Back For 'Barbary Coast'

After seeing "The Scarlet Empress" in the projection room yesterday, Sam Goldwyn signed Sam Jaffe and will bring the player back here for a principal role in "Barbary Coast." Jaffe did his first screen work in the Marlene Dietrich-Paramount picture.

William Wellman directs Gary Cooper and Gloria Swanson in "Barbary Coast."

'Greater Glory' Sags

New York.—Columbia's "No Greater Glory" did not go so hot in the four preview spots—Hartford, Springfield, Akron and Washington—so it is expected that the Seventh Avenue Roxy will be its New York house. The general release is April 20.

Brief Submitted To Darrow Declares 99.9 Per Cent Of Provisions Benefit Indies

Washington.—The defense of the major producers against the charges made by independents before the Clarence Darrow Review Board was submitted to that board yesterday in a 79-page brief from seven of the eight majors, Columbia being the missing one. Fox, MGM, Paramount, RKO-Radio, Universal, United Artists and Warners all concurred.

The brief is entitled: "Answering statement to witnesses who appeared before the National Recovery Review Board in complaint against the code of fair competition for the motion pic-

$2,500,000 Claim Is Filed Against Para.

New York. — The Metropolitan Theatre of Boston yesterday presented an unliquidated claim for $2,500,000 against Paramount-Publix before Referee Davis, alleging excess charges for film rentals and management and service charges from 1925 to 1933.

The Paramount trustees have asked for a bill of particulars.

'Dancing Fadeout' New Idea For 'Merry Widow'

Ernst Lubitsch will introduce the dancing fadeout in the forthcoming production, "The Merry Widow." This means of recording any dancing routine has been created by Albertina Rasch and Herbert Stothart. This intricate idea will be in the musical number, "Girls, Girls, Girls."

Selznick Abroad on 'Copperfield' Cast

David Selznick is going to England with Director George Cukor and Howard Estabrook, writer, to assist in the selection of important characters in the production of "David Copperfield." They leave for New York Tuesday and the sailing date has not yet been set.

Over 300 English players have been assembled by the MGM English offices for the selection of three of the most important characters — David Copperfield as a man, Mr. Micawber and Uriah Heap. Elizabeth Allen, who is now in England, is the only one selected so far, as one of the sixty-eight characters.

Harry Cohn to Capital On Stock Flotation Talk

New York.—Harry Cohn has gone to Washington to attend the Gridiron Dinner and will be gone until Monday.

It is rumored that he will also confer with Federal Securities officials regarding the possible Atlas-Dupont stock flotation, exclusively reported in this paper a few days ago.

Warner Execs Leaving

S. Charles Einfeld, Andy W. Smith and Gradwell Sears, Warner executives, leave Tuesday on their return to New York. They came here a week ago for the MPTOA convention and for production conferences.

Birth Control Feature

New York.—It is understood that Margaret Sanger, the birth control advocate, and Bud Pollard are getting together on a deal to produce a birth control feature.

Fifty For Pete Smith

Pete Smith, who, less than two years ago, began making shorts and screen oddities for MGM, today starts his fiftieth two-reeler.

AGENCY BOARD NAMED BY CODE AND ROSENBLATT

New York.—The Code Authority and Sol A. Rosenblatt yesterday appointed the long awaited Hollywood Agency Committee, made up of five producers, an agent, writer, actor, director and technician.

The producers named are Trem Carr, Emanuel Cohen, Jack L. Warner, B. B. Kahane and W. R. Sheehan. These were named by the Code Authority.

The other members, named by Rosenblatt, are: Adolphe Menjou, for the actors, with Berton Churchill as

Merger of Camera Groups Seems Near

All indications yesterday pointed to the eventual merging of the American Society of Cinematographers and Local 659, IATSE, following a lengthy meeting of the Local's executive board at which a report was rendered by a committee that has been discussing the matter with an ASC group.

While no one present at the board meeting would give out any of the details of the discussion, some of them stated that "consolidation of the two organizations looks inevitable."

Onslow Stevens and Lila Lee to Alexander

Max Alexander yesterday borrowed Onslow Stevens from Universal and signed Lila Lee for the top brackets in "I Can't Escape," which Otto Brower puts into work Monday. Original screen play has been written by Jerry Sackheim and Nathan Asch.

Asbury-Niblo Teamed

Columbia yesterday assigned Herbert Asbury to collaborate with Fred Niblo Jr. on the script of "Too Tough to Kill," which will be the fourth Jack Holt vehicle, following "Mud Turtle" into production. Asbury has completed his work on the Leonard Spigelgass original, "I'll Fix It."

McCarey on Col. Short

Ray McCarey has been ticketed by Columbia to direct "Get Along Little Hubby," the second short under Jules White's supervision at the studio, which goes into work Monday. Walter Catlett has the lead, with Vivian Oakland and Monte Collins only others set to date.

Woolf To Do Cook Book

Edgar Allan Woolf, MGM writer, has been signed by Simon and Schuster, New York publishers, to write a cook book titled "Hollywood Recipes."

Through a compositor's error, yesterday's Lowdown said that Charles Beahan was in the hospital to lose his appendix. Charles Feldman is the unfortunate, not Beahan.

New York REVIEWS

"YOU'RE TELLING ME"

Paramount prod.; director, Erle Kenton; writers, Julian Street, Walter DeLeon, Paul Jones.

Paramount Theatre

News: For the followers of the funny looking, raucous-voiced comic's peculiar brand of buffoonery there are situations galore which give Fields every opportunity to take the matters in hand and serve them up highly garnished with the most ludicrous condiments. You either take Fields' stuff or leave it. Most fun lovers take it and like it.

American: Farce has a field day at the Paramount this week, with the highly ludicrous comic, W. C. Fields, gagging the audience into hysteria with a series of giggle-getting episodes that make a happy hour for anybody's money.

Mirror: W. C. Fields' first picture as a star is one long, lusty laugh; a carnival of nonsense to make you ache with glee. Of course, he is the whole picture. The dialogue, happily, is funny enough to match the action. You will laugh yourself limp over "You're Telling Me."

Journal: The Fields film is delightfully idiotic. It's built entirely around Fields, and that superb pantomimist provides one laugh after another with his sure and effortless comedy technique.

Post: Being a star in his own right, he is permitted to take hold of the picture from the beginning. The first sequence is given over to him and thereafter there is scarcely a moment when the Fieldian antics are not wholly responsible for the humorous twists and explosions of the story.

Times: W. C. Fields, whose peculiar brand of clowning has stood him in good stead in Hollywood, is the principal performer in "You're Telling Me." In this rough-and-tumble frolic, Mr. Fields succeeds admirably in making most of the episodes very funny. The film is neatly directed and expertly acted.

Herald-Tribune: In the new W. C. Fields vehicle, the funniest man of them all appears in almost every scene, offers several of his latest inventions and plays his immortal golf game. After this information it is hardly necessary to state that this picture supplies just about as much hilarity as it would be fair for one to expect in this still slightly imperfect world.

World-Telegram: If it is laughter you crave—good, healthy laughter that springs from away down deep—then the place to visit these days is the theatre where "You're Telling Me," featuring W. C. Fields, the most amiable, ingratiating and satisfying comic on the screen, is holding forth.

METROTONE SPLITS WITH FOX; WILL GO IT ALONE

New York.—The agreement between Fox Newsreel and Hearst Metrotone, which has existed since 1929, will expire in September and will not be renewed. The chief cause of the split is said to be differences over sales policies.

Metrotone will resume its own exclusive newsreel production and is already starting to build an organization sufficiently large to meet all requirements.

After the split, Metrotone will specialize in subjects of greater variety and greater news mobility, and not subordinate such subjects to the limited range where portable sound equipment can be used. It will have more silently shot subjects, with the "Globe Trotter" running comment superimposed.

The twelve Metrotone sound trucks will be re-distributed in strategic news spots and about 18 additional cameramen will get jobs, five of them in New York. Herman Stockoff, chief MGM news cameraman, is now interviewing applicants for the new jobs. Mike Clofine will continue as editor. The company will also start at once to reorganize its foreign staff to be ready to start activities next Fall.

Mary Blackford Cast

Mary Blackford, recently under contract to Warner Brothers, has just signed for "Ah, Wilderness," opening at El Capitan Theatre.

Jack Warner Denies Elimination of Shorts

Jack L. Warner yesterday issued a formal statement, denying that Warner Brothers would eliminate shorts from the program "next year or any other year." On the contrary, he says, the company will turn out as many shorts as usual, if not more, both here and in New York.

Starr with Reliance

Irving Starr, until recently connected with the Kingston-Harris agency, has been signed as casting director for Edward Small's Reliance pictures Starr was a producer for Majestic before joining the agency.

with open minds and that each will listen to and consider what the other has to say. Some sane, sensible action is needed to bring this business back where it belongs, and perhaps these conferences will develop such action. Let's hope so.

'Only Yesterday,' 'Nana,' London Hits

London.—London has two more pet picture stars—Anna Sten and Margaret Sullavan. Both "Lady of the Boulevards"—the English title of "Nana"—and "Only Yesterday" are held over and are doing immense business.

The newcomers are "Rip Tide" at the Empire, and "Easy to Love" at the Regal. Opening Monday will be "Wonder Bar" at the Carlton, "Roman Scandals" at the Leicester Square, and "The Battle," a British version of a French picture, at the Capitol.

Fernstrom to Make World Color Shots

Ray Fernstrom, formerly one of the best known cameramen in America and Europe for Paramount News, leaves Hollywood today on a twelve months' world tour, to photograph travel shorts in Technicolor for a major release. The ASC agency placed him.

Lyons & Lyons Broke

New York.—Lyons and Lyons, Inc., a firm of theatrical booking agents, has filed a petition in bankruptcy, with liabilities of $180,122 and assets of $30,942. Arthur Lyons filed a personal petition with liabilities of $177,758 and no assets; Samuel T. Lyons filed a petition with liabilities of $176,378 and no assets.

No Stage For Jean Dixon

Due to added scenes on "Sadie McKee," starring Joan Crawford, MGM could not release Jean Dixon to go to New York to accept the offer for the Theatre Guild play. Miss Dixon has an offer for a later Guild play and will accept if it is possible at the time.

Guild Plays to Road

New York.—The Theatre Guild will send "Ah Wilderness" and "Mary of Scotland" on extensive road tours next season. George M. Cohan will play his original role in "Ah Wilderness" and Helen Hayes, Philip Merivale and Helen Menken will play their roles in "Mary of Scotland."

Agents Sign Mrs. Healy

alternate; Wells Root for the writers, with Ernest Pascal alternate; Frank Lloyd for the directors, with W. K. Howard alternate; John Nickolaus for the technicians, with Max Parker alternate; George Frank representing the agents, with M. C. Levee alternate.

The purpose of this committee, according to the film code, is to set up rules of fair practice governing the relations between producers, agents, writers, actors, directors and technicians. Special elections were held by the Screen Actors and Screen Writers Guilds, and by the Academy to select their nominees.

'FIREBRAND' LIGHT, AMUSING; 'PARTY'S OVER' PRETTY LAME

Frank Morgan Again Grabs Acting Honors

"THE FIREBRAND"
Twentieth Century

Direction .....Gregory LaCava
Author .....Edwin Justus Mayer
Adaptation .....Bess Meredyth
Art Direction .....Richard Day
Photography .....Charles Rosher
Cast: Constance Bennett, Fredric March, Frank Morgan, Fay Wray, Vince Barnett, Jessie Ralph, Louis Calhern, Jay Eaton, Paul Harvey, John Rutherford.

One of the most superbly mounted, gorgeously produced pictures released in lo, these many years is Twentieth Century's "The Firebrand."

The art direction by Richard Day is enough to send any critic into the dithers, and the costumes, by Gwen Wakeling, are stunning.

As much cannot be said for the writing or acting. "The Firebrand" now is a swell farce of the 16th century, making up in comedy what it lacks in drama, and relying upon its mounting for atmosphere and color.

All acting honors go to Frank Morgan as the dumb, willy-nilly, bewildered, vague, Duke Allessandro. By a miracle, or by sheer genius, he keeps his characterization just this side of burlesque, and practically carries the entire picture by virtue of one of the most diabolically clever performances ever caught in celluloid.

Unfortunate, the lines given Fredric March and Constance Bennett are so colorless compared with Morgan's, and their opportunities for acting are so limited that the picture is no sort of gauge of their capabilities.

Fay Wray scores heavily as Angela, who is almost as dumb as Allessandro. Vince Barnett and Louis Calhern are also outstanding in smaller roles.

The story is of Benvenuto Cellini, the great artist and goldsmith of the 16th century in Florence, and his amours—particularly his conquest of the Duchess, Miss Bennett. His modus operandi is complicated by the Duke's sudden infatuation for Angela, and the action is composed of furtive entrances and runnings around and sudden escapes from the palace, as both the Duchess and the Duke seek to keep their emotional adventures secret from each other.

Gregory La Cava seemingly directed for light comedy tempo and farce mood, and he succeeded. "The Firebrand" IS grand, light comedy. Bess Meredyth adapted the play by Edwin Justus Mayer, and Charles Rosher photographed it beautifully.

Exhibitors have a flock of swell names here and the story is certainly a drawing card. But those who come to see March and Miss Bennett will remain to cheer Frank Morgan.

Sutherland-Holmes Team

Warners have assigned Sidney Sutherland and Brown Holmes to write the script on "I'll Sell Anything," an original by Albert Cohen and Robert Shannon. Pat O'Brien will have the lead, with no director set as yet.

Marsh on Camera for 'Widow' Third Time

Oliver Marsh yesterday started at MGM photographing "The Merry Merry Widow" for the third time. First was a two-reel version. Then the silent, with Mae Murray and Gilbert. Now the talkie, with Chevalier and Jeanette MacDonald.

Brandt Adds 5 to Chain; Now Has 20

New York.—The Brandt interests have just acquired five more theatres. They are the Dewey, Brooklyn and Lakeland in Brooklyn, and the Times Square and St. Marks in Manhattan.

This gives the Brandt outfit twenty theatres and it is planned to add enough more to establish the chain as one of the strongest in Greater New York. This, Brandt feels, would mean better deals for product and extended playing time.

Graves To Do Screen Play on Sennett's Life

Mack Sennett has assigned Ralph Graves to write the screen adaptation of "Cavalcade of Motion Pictures," the life story of Sennett now being written by Gene Fowler. Picture will go into production upon completion of the story.

D'Avril Set For 'Widow'

Yola D'Avril has postponed her anticipated trip to Europe and has been signed by MGM for a featured spot in "The Merry Widow." Deal was negotiated by Jonathan Smith, of the Ivan Kahn agency.

Norman Moray East

Norman H. Moray, in charge of short subject sales at Warners, left by train last night for Dallas on his return to New York. He arrives there May 1, after making a swing through the South.

Daves on 'Herbert'

Warners have assigned Delmer Daves to write the script on "Big-Hearted Herbert," the Sophie Kerr and Stresse Richardson play which the studio recently purchased.

Hervey-Myers Teamed

Paramount yesterday signed Harry Hervey to collaborate with Henry Myers on his original story, "Mississippi," for Lanny Ross. Arthur Hornblow is producing.

New Home For Marches

Fredric March and his wife will celebrate their seventh wedding anniversary May 30, with the opening of their twenty-four room French Provincial estate in Beverly Hills.

Setay Profits Off

New York.—Setay Co., Inc. (the Yates Realty Company) reports for 1933 a net profit, after deducting interest, taxes, etc., $7,325, against $21,871 for 1932.

Indifferent Script Hampers the Cast

"THE PARTY'S OVER"
(Columbia)

Direction .....Walter Lang
Original Play.....Daniel Kusell
Screen Play.....S. K. Lauren
Photography .....Benjamin Kline
Cast: Stuart Erwin, Ann Sothern, Arline Judge, Chick Chandler, Patsy Kelly, Catharine Doucet, Marjorie Lytell, Henry Travers, William Bakewell, Esther Muir, Rollo Lloyd.

This is not one of those specials that Columbia has been so consistently turning out recently. The best that it can aspire to is ordinary program rating—and none too high in that.

For a couple of reels, "The Party's Over" seems to be going the way of the Rimplegars, that delightfully mad family of "Three-Cornered Moon" fame. Then all vestige of similarity vanishes with the single exception that Billy Bakewell is in both casts.

In "The Party's Over," we have Stuart Erwin as an accountant, engaged in a business he does not like because of the necessity of supporting his large family in the manner to which he has accustomed them. There is Henry Travers, his father of the roving eye (especially for maids—they can't keep one); Catharine Doucet, his mother, a clubwoman and budding social butterfly; Arline Judge, his sister who loves, marries and brings home to live Chick Chandler, a particularly obnoxious, aspiring radio crooner who can't even croon; and, finally, William Bakewell, his college-student brother, who also marries—a waitress.

Ann Sothern is Erwin's secretary and it is she who urges him to chuck the whole kit and caboodle of relatives that he may be free to become a painter, his secret ambition. In a final scene, he does just that, telling one and all that the party's over.

The dialogue is of that school of anything for a laugh. Thus we have what might have been keenly etched characters sacrificed to gag situations. The familiar plot formula is not strong enough to carry indifferent writing and some indifferent acting.

Erwin's assignment is routine and does not give him a chance to rise above it. Henry Travers garners most of the laughs, although allowed to overplay. Ann Sothern shows inexperience in what little she has to do. Arline Judge is pert and clever but limited. Patsy Kelly, hampered by impossible business such as the piano playing in the parlor, none the less scores as one of the procession of maids. Catharine Doucet, Bakewell and others are standard or below.

Walter Lang's direction is guilty of several careless moments. Production and photography are big-time.

Make no extravagant promises for "The Party's Over." You have some good names in the cast but the exploitation angles are slim.

Swanson at N.Y. Para.

New York.—Gloria Swanson starts her personal appearances at the New York Paramount Theatre next week.

Yesterday in NEW YORK with HELEN GWYNN

Every day sees the plan to establish a National theatre a step nearer the goal, only it won't be the kind of National theatre patterned after those now flourishing in Europe. It will really come more under the heading of Stage Relief, because so far as we've been able to make head or tail out of it, the government is going to back plays to the extent of one million dollars. That money will be disbursed by Secretary Ickes and he will be empowered to hand it over out of the employment funds he handles and the Public Works something or other for the obvious reason that the theatre stands for both.

At any rate, Herman Gantvoort, who's been in and out of both the theatre and pictures these many years, seems to be the pivot in all the plans and it looks as though the Shuberts will have plenty to say and do and then it will be up to the public to make the whole thing permanent.

The bright idea is to keep politics out of it, so there won't be just one theatre, but the government will set itself up as the backer of what someone will deem "worthy plays" and New York will be the center of the activities and road companies will take care of the entertainment of the hinterland.

And so, dear kiddies, a lot of actors and directors and property men will be given employment and producers will have something to work at again without having to appeal to Jock Whitney and at least somebody will be happy.

The Motion Picture Club is getting itself all dressed up for the grand opening of its brand new bar. Ladies are invited, and the big event takes place this afternoon, at which time they will unveil a startling, new cocktail, the name of which is to be a great, big surprise. Great changes are taking place in the old club and they're doing everything possible to inject new life into it, even to the extent of having women in the place. And they tell us that the business of inviting the "girls" almost called forth a very amusing system of red and green lights just because the place was never made to accommodate ladies.

The colyumists in town were soooo happy over the return of Marc Lachman that they all, every darned one of them, Sobol, Sullivan, Yawitz and Winchell, took him out for a big evening that included the Hollywood and the Casino de Paree and Lew Brown warbling songs at about four a.m. . . . Buddy DeSylva is going to write himself a show—and without the verbal assistance of Peter Arno. . . . If Irene Barrymore can ever tear herself away from Harlem she may yet go back to Hollywood. . . . The next time you go to Harlem yourself, drop in at the "Cubanacan," 114th street and Lenox avenoo, which is the latest jernt to become the rage. . . . The Rhumba is the cause of it all, and you'll run into dignified bankers shaking a mean hip with the hostesses who don't speak a word of English. . . . They don't have to.

MPTOA RAPS PRODUCER INFLUENCE ON BOARDS

Charges that territorial code board appointments are influenced by the producers' home offices in New York to the detriment of the exhibitors were made by the Resolutions Committee of the MPTOA at yesterday's convention business session.

It was declared that the producers, by making personal contacts with code authority officials, succeed in getting representatives of their own selection appointed to important posts on the boards. Allegations were made by Ed Levy, MPTOA legal counsel and committee chairman, who said he had found evidence enough to warrant a resolution from the convention, seeking to get the code authority to isolate the boards from this "home rule."

Opposition, headed by Walter Vincent, developed on the resolution and succeeded in getting action on it deferred to this morning's session when a redraft will be presented. The new resolution, it was said, will limit itself to endorsing the principle of isolation.

An early morning code committee hearing brought out Morgan Walsh's claim that the double-bill evil was a fault of the major producer's overproduction of pictures. Exhibitors voiced the expression that their theatres would soon play as many as five features on a single program if the majors hold to their plans for the new season.

The preview racket, the showmen declared, was spreading into a national issue and greedy distributors were largely to blame.

Late in starting, yesterday's business meet accomplished the largest portion of work by the convention. Jack Miller advised the exhibs against arbitration in strikes "because we got licked in the past." President Ed Kuykendall accused unions of misusing the code selfishly to gain increased wages unfairly.

The exhibitors then passed favorably on resolutions endorsing block-booking, but with a 15 percent rejection clause instead of 10; an objection against non-theatrical competion; one against secret buying of films under clearance and zoning restrictions; audiences at radio stations; and one against the score charge, which was labeled "a racket." Reasonable percentage deals were endorsed. Sex hygiene pictures and salacious advertising were condemned and a resolution suggested, asking producers to put more action and less dialogue in pictures. Fred Wehrenberg's report from the Public Relations Committee stressed "family type" pictures.

The session this morning will see a battle on the floor over the Cutting bill on international copyright and the possible passage of the "Home Rule" resolution. The convention then officially adjourns.

Sec. Meyer Breaks Down

Fred Meyer, convention secretary for the MPTOA, collapsed yesterday during his code committee's hearing and was confined to his room at the Hotel Ambassador under the care of a physician. Carrying the burden of the week's work on his shoulders, Meyer's breakdown was attributed to overexertion.

New York Grosses Not Very Exciting

New York.—There was little about the New York grosses for the past week to cause wild excitement. "Viva Villa" at the Criterion is doing all right and about $13,000 is estimated as its gross for the week ending next Wednesday.

"Wild Cargo" got $63,000 for its second week at the Music Hall, and "Rip Tide" at the Capitol grabbed $55,300. The Paramount did nearly $30,000 with "You're Telling Me"; "Looking for Trouble" will run to $29,000 at the Rivoli; second week of "Lost Patrol" gives the Rialto $20,000; "The Constant Nymph" got $24,000 at the Roxy; week of "As the Earth Turns" at the Strand will go around $18,000.

Exhibitors Put in Golf Day at Lakeside

Every exhibitor teeing off in the FWC golf tournament for the visiting MPTOA won a prize yesterday, owing to the fact that an exceptionally large number of trophies had been contributed by picture people. No low scores were tabulated for the match, since it was played off in flights, prizes going to each bracket.

Event saw fifty-two entrants, trailed by a gallery of seventy-five exhibitors and their families. A luncheon was tendered at the Lakeside clubhouse following the match.

Eleanor Quits Again

Eleanor Packer, who handles the film magazine contacts in the publicity office of MGM, has resigned, effective at once. Miss Packer has accepted several contracts for free lance writing.

Goulding with MGM

MGM has signed Alf Goulding to handle the Shaw and Lee short which goes into production today. Dewey Robinson is the only other member of the cast. Jack Cummings produces.

Milhauser at Warners

Bertram Milhauser has been assigned by Warners to write the script of "Story of a Country Boy." Dawn Powell original was purchased recently by the studio.

Del Ruth Cuts Budget

Roy Del Ruth feels that he has earned the vacation he is going to take with Darryl Zanuck because he brought in "Bulldog Drummond Strikes Back" $22,000 under the budget.

Harold Hopper on Way

New York.—Harold Hopper left here for the coast yesterday to prepare for Majestic's new production activities. The work will continue at Universal.

New Play Not For Films

New York.—The picture possibilities of the new play, "Wife Insurance," which opened here Thursday night, are unfavorable.

Yes—It Was Red

Lucien Hubbard agreed to play Abraham Lincoln in "Operator 13" for MGM, provided no guests were allowed on the set. His fifteen-year-old daughter crashed the set and Father Hubbard became so embarrassed that production was halted until the blushes subsided and stopped ruining the make-up.

Tri Ergon-Exhibs Decision Reversed

New York.—The appellate division of the New York Supreme Court has reversed the decision of the lower court in the suit of the American Tri Ergon Corporation against Max Goldberg, of Associated Cinemas, and Leo Brecher.

Tri Ergon sued the exhibs for alleged violations of its rights by running films that had been recorded by Tri Ergon apparatus and demanded payment of royalties. The exhibitors got the case dismissed on the ground that it did not state a cause of action. Louis Nizer, representing the exhibitors, will take the case to the New York Court of Appeals.

Geo. Walcott at MGM

George Walcott, New York stage juvenile, has arrived in Hollywood to start on his contract with MGM. Ralph Farnum is managing him.

Door Sign Jams Up Extras and Labor Bd.

Unless the new Studio Labor Committee removes a sign that now reposes on its office door before next Monday night, there will probably be a lot of fireworks at the meeting that evening of the Code Committee for Extras.

The reason is that yesterday a sign was placed on the Labor Committee's door telling the world that it was the office of both the Labor Committee and the Extras' Committee.

Actually, the headquarters of the Extras' Committee is across the corridor, and Mrs. Mabel Kinney, chairman, has her own sign. She was puzzled yesterday when she saw the sign on Pat Casey's door and stated that she would put the matter up to the committee Monday night if the sign is still there. Casey is head of the Labor Committee and a member of the Extras' Committee.

ture industry," and it is a remarkably able presentation of the case of the majors. Although it will not be admitted as evidence, it is almost certain to affect the members of the Darrow board.

The brief states that it is not intended as a defense of any member of the Code Authority or the code itself, but is simply an attempt to analyze the code and show that most of the complaints were personal business grievances. It attacks Harry Brandt by stating that he acquired 16 theatres (he has 20 now) during the time he claimed the independents were being driven out of business, and adds that Blumenthal now has nine.

"This ability," it says, "not merely to survive, but to thrive during the depression, is a tribute to the healthy, competitive soil of this industry in which the independent operator has set his roots."

The brief explains that all but two of the majors are in receiverships or bankruptcy, while the indies have been growing. It attacks the slogan, "Big Eight," by showing intensely competitive conditions among that group. The document goes into great detail. It explains that Grievance Boards have no jurisdiction over contract disputes and that they and the Clearance Boards offer the exhibitor a forum which he never had before. Arbitration boards, it says, are the only ones empowered to hear contract disputes. Speaking of fair trade practices, it says:

"If the fair trade practices were eliminated from the code, the affiliated producers and distributors (the majors) would be reinvested with many rights they voluntarily surrendered and would be the sole beneficaries of such action."

Attention is called to the "cut-throat" competition among the majors for stars as an argument against the charge that they act in concert, saying that this was the cause of the condition which made President Roosevelt take notice of the high salaries.

The brief contends that 99.9 per cent of the code provisions give the indies rights they never have had, that only four per cent benefit the majors, and that no part of the four per cent gives the majors anything they did not have before. The big exhibitor is favored in 2.2 per cent of the provisions but, taken in the light of the practical bankruptcy of most of the large ones, "this represents a real concession."

The personnel of the Code Authority is explained and it is pointed out that executive order still can dismiss anyone from that body. The functions of the Code Authority, except one, it says, are purely administrative, and that one merely gives authority to review decisions of the various boards.

The term, "metphysical aberration" is used in discussing the testimony of Abram Myers, and the brief says that the testimony of Russell Hardy, of the Department of Justice, was due to the type of complaints which he investigated, the complainants talking from purely personal business standpoints.

The majors admit over-seating, stating that there is one seat for every fifteen persons in the country and, in New York, one for every six, but allege this is due to the "racket" of building a theatre to force a competitor to buy it.

While there is only one reference to Sol Rosenblatt in the brief, that about his honesty being questioned, Washington sees his hand in the preparation of the brief.

CODE FIREWORKS TONITE

TRADEVIEWS by FRANK T. POPE

•THERE is obviously a lamentable lack of confidence between the major producers-distributors and the exhibitors of the MPTOA who have just completed their annual convention at the Ambassador Hotel.

Neither side has been impolite enough to call the representatives of the other side liars, but the belief has been intimated strongly. For example, the exhibitors lay all the blame for indecent films, for vulgarity in pictures, at the doors of the producers. Mr. Mayer, representing the producers, told the delegates that the morals of the pictures did not enter into the question with the theatre owner so long as a picture would draw at the box-office. You can take your choice as to which is right.

Both sides inveigh against the double feature evil, but the exhibitors say they are forced to play duals because of the number of pictures they have to buy, and the producers contend that they have to make that number because the theatres want them. Again, take your choice.

Now the exhibitors have learned—or say they have—that, because of the ten per cent elimination clause in the code, every major producer is planning to make a dozen or more cheap "quickies" this season. The exhibs say that these will be so bad that they will have to cancel them and, therefore, play all the rest of the product. Whether or not that is true remains to be seen, but, if it is true, it seems to be rather a new form of "chiseling," which is rapidly becoming the favorite indoor sport of the motion picture industry.

It seems a pity that producers-distributors and the exhibitors, all of whom, figuratively speaking, have to sleep in the same bed, cannot do so without each of them trying to get the softest spot at the expense of the others. It's pretty hard for a man to sleep comfortably when his bedmate is wearing spurs and is likely to use them at any minute.

Maybe some of these differences will be fixed up this week when the MPTOA directors go into conference with a group of producers. It is a

New York—The National Screen Service has just voted a forty-cent dividend on its common stock, payable May 1. This is a resumption of the dividend payments which were abandoned in January, 1933.

Para. Fighting Suit By Vince Lawrence

New York.—Paramount has filed formal objection to the claims entered by Vincent Lawrence, writer, for $113,000 for alleged breach of contract.

Lawrence alleges that he was engaged at a salary of $1750 a week and that the Paramount trustees in bankruptcy voided the contract last May. Lawrence has been working at Paramount since then, his most recent assignment having been on the De Mille production of "Cleopatra."

Calhern Returning For 'Count of Monte Cristo'

Louis Calhern, for the third time in as many months, treks back to Hollywood from New York, the Edington and Vincent office Saturday closing a deal with Edward Small for a featured role in "Count of Monte Cristo" for the player. He returns by May 15.

New One For Stanwyck

Setting it on the production schedule as a starring vehicle for Barbara Stanwyck, Warners purchased "Traveling Saleslady," by Frank Howard Clark Saturday. The Edington and Vincent office negotiated the deal.

Head Of Extras Committee Will Demand Showdown With Rosenblatt And Pat Casey

One of the biggest explosions that has yet occurred in local NRA film code circles is expected this week, with Mrs. Mabel Kinney, chairman of the Code Committee for Extras, demanding a showdown with Pat Casey, head of the newly named Studio Labor Committee as well as a member of the Extras' Committee.

High spots in the showdown will be the revelation of an attempt by someone, thus far unnamed, to have every action of the Extras' Committee to date declared illegal and unconstitutional; and the revealing of an effort on the part of J. B. Russell, a member of the Extras' Committee, to have Herta Reinachs added to the committee to represent the extra women, and Eugene Marcus appointed as counsel for the committee.

Developments over the week-end indicated that both Sidney Kent,

Fox Demands Cash To Set Foster Free

Preston Foster and Fox are in a huddle trying to settle the player's contract and release him to the free lance field.

Foster is dissatisfied with the assignments he has been given and this is the second time he has sought freedom. This time it appears serious, for Fox has stipulated he return several weeks' salary before granting him his wish.

Lubitsch Will Shoot French and English 'Widow' at One Time

Based on an idea worked out by Irving Thalberg, Ernst Lubitsch will direct two versions of "The Merry Widow" at the same time. This is the first instance in Hollywood history in which both the English and French have been shot simultaneously with the same leads. Maurice Chevalier and Jeanette MacDonald will appear in both versions.

The English part will be filmed first and, immediately following, all char-

Invited Audience To See 'As the Earth Turns'

In order to exploit the picture, Warners will preview "As the Earth Turns" at its Hollywood Theatre Wednesday morning to a specially invited audience.

Group will consist of educators, clubwomen, ministers and others who have recently censored the studio's product. Picture opens at both the Hollywood and Downtown on Thursday.

Phil Ryan in New York Dickering For Release

New York.—Phil Ryan has arrived here from the coast and is negotiating for a release for a group of independent features which he is planning to produce in Hollywood.

Col. Holds Mulhall

Jack Mulhall was unable to take his role in Paramount's "The Old Fashioned Way" because of a previous commitment to Columbia. Player has not been replaced as yet.

Doane Starts Fortieth

Warren Doane starts his fortieth short for Universal, the present title being "Beau Bashful." It stars Herbert Corthell and Sylvia Picker.

EXHIBS FEAR SCHEME TO OUTWIT CANCELLATION

Each major studio in Hollywood has set plans to increase the new season's production slate by fifteen or twenty pictures of the "quickie" type, aiming directly at circumventing the ten percent elimination clause under the block-booking system as provided in the code, according to MPTOA leaders.

This was announced by M. A. Lightman and corroborated by Ben Berinstein at the closing session of the exhibitors' convention Saturday.

"No matter what percentage of elimination you get through the code," Lightman told the exhibitors, "this is

New York REVIEWS

"LAZY RIVER"

MGM prod.; director, George Seitz; writer, Lucien Hubbard.

Mayfair Theatre

Herald-Tribune: Many of the scenes are pleasant in their lazy inactivity, leavened with gossip and an appealing humor. Had more pains been taken with this picture and a better story and performance aided it, it might have resulted in a genuine folk drama of the type of the waterfront play "Marseilles," offered here a season or two ago.

Sun: Its plot is good, old-fashioned hero, heroine and villain stuff. For all its obviousness "Lazy Rizer" is entertaining. Old-fashioned as it may be, it is the best picture the Mayfair has had in several weeks.

American: The film is good fun. Rather unfortunately for Miss Parker and Mr. Young, both romantic and melodramatic interest is thrust into the ground by the clowning of Mr. Healy and the husky Pendleton, and to this pair the film's first honors must go.

Mirror: Pretty Jean Parker and pleasing Robert Young carry the leading parts. The character roles are admirably interpreted by Maude Eburne, Irene Franklin and C. Henry Gordon. Ted Healy, assisted by Nat Pendleton, contribute the fun. Making no concessions to credibility or realism, "Lazy River" is frankly a lurid melodrama of the conventional pattern. It is brisk and mildly entertaining.

Post: Everything you can think of in the way of story material has been crammed into the picture. We are sorry to report this attempt to satisfy all tastes has resulted in a shabby and puerile picture. Its flamboyant ructions are definitely on the phony side so that the calculated "big moment" is entirely lacking in credibility.

Times: The narrative, besides being slothful, is unimportant, but the episodes afford a certain interest. The performers also lend distinction to the production and the photography and sound recording are extraordinarily good.

World-Telegram: A generally preposterous melodrama which encounters more and more difficulties as it moves along. It finally surrenders and calls it a day and allows the customers to walk out much the same as they had entered. The chief casualty of the whole thing is a trifling loss of time.

News: There is so much of the Healy-Pendleton business that the photoplay's story has a hard time impressing itself on the audience. This is quite as it should be, however, for the drama of "Lazy River" is too fanciful when it is not altogether impossible. You'll probably like "Lazy River."

"GAMBLING LADY"

Warner Bros. prod.; director, Archie Mayo; writers, Doris Malloy, Ralph Block.

Strand Theatre

Times: The dialogue in this picture is somewhat chilling. It is a film which is strong on action and weak on plausibility. Miss Stanwyck gives an adequate portrayal. Joel McCrea does well as Garry Madison.

Post: The story is shallow and absurdly sentimental, and Miss Stanwyck has a difficult time in making the simple earnestness of her acting weigh against the incredible happenings with which the authors have saddled her. The artificialities of the story place a heavy handicap on Miss Stanwyck and the supporting players.

Herald-Tribune: Miss Stanwyck is invariably a sincere and straightforward actress and she makes the gambling lady of this story a believable figure which is something of a feat. The story, as a whole, is a good enough routine melodrama that will suffice as a time killer.

American: Miss Stanwyck plays her colorful role with a directness and simplicity that make a somewhat fictional character seem real. She handles every emotional phase of the film story with utmost skill and holds audience sympathy throughout the picture. Director Mayo makes the most of the many novel elements woven into the story structure.

Mirror: Colorful, exciting, authentic. Colorful setting, smart dialogue, and strong dramatic situations give the film punch and substance.

World-Telegram: There is quite a forceful magic in Miss Stanwyck's impersonation of the title role, and the film moves steadily from start to finish and is seldom interrupted by the less plausible tricks of melodrama. In short, it is a lively and entertaining page from the chronicles of present-day Americans. It is, for the greater part, a valid, stimulating and urbane melodrama.

Journal: Crisply written and directed, the picture is filled with plenty of what movie scenarists like to call situations. Through it all moves Miss Stanwyck with an unruffled poise, a sense of humor, and becoming frocks. Her performance is sure, colorful and convincing.

Sun: An unreal but lively melodrama. Miss Stanwyck, by her usual simplicity of method, is able to make a good deal of her part. The motivation of the story gets a little cock-eyed every now and then. As a light, not too important melodrama, it's well enough.

News: Entertaining in spite of a story that is hard to believe. It has been given a smooth direction by Archie Mayo and moves quickly to its satisfactory finish. It is not an important picture, buf it furnishes a fair amount of entertainment.

Business Women in Pix Will Broadcast

New York.—A series of eight broadcasts over WEAF, starting this week, will bring into the limelight the careers of eight women executives in the motion picture business. The women, their subjects and the dates are:

Helen Hughes, personnel officer for Universal, "The Right Person for the Right Job," April 18.

Julia Kelly, secretary to Will H. Hays, "How Movie Titles Originate," April 25.

Mollie Grill, of Fox publicity department, "Breaking Into Headlines," May 2.

Tessie Michaels, United Artists publicity department, "When Stars Come to New York," May 9.

Gwen Heller, style scout for Warners, "Hollywood Becomes Style-Conscious," May 17.

Mrs. Lyon, of Paramount, "How Motion Picture Prints Get to Theatres," May 24.

Lillian Messenger, in charge of RKO-Radio screen tests, "Scouting for Screen Prospects," May 31.

Florence Browning, assistant to J. Robert Rubin of MGM, "Where Motion Picture Stories Come From," June 7.

German-Polish Swap

Warsaw.—Representatives of Polish film interests have left for Berlin to try to arrange for the exchange of pictures with Germany. Poland has 760 theatres, of which 350 are wired. Germany is interested, it is said, in this market, and as Pola dnis desirous of protecting her own film business, it looks for a swap.

Claudia Morgan Cast

Claudia Morgan, daughter of Ralph Morgan, will be seen in the leading role of the stage play, "Indecent," which opens in New York within ten days. She had the lead in "Gentlewoman," which recently closed.

'MANHATTAN MELODRAMA' SMASH SUCCESS FOR MGM

Direction, Writing, Cast Share Honors

"MANHATTAN MELODRAMA"
(MGM)

Direction .....W. S. Van Dyke
Original .....Arthur Caesar
Screen Play.....Oliver H. P. Garrett and Joseph L. Mankiewicz
Photography.....James Wong Howe

Even if "Manhattan Melodrama" were only half as good as it is, you would have a hit picture in the combination of Gable, Powell and Myrna Loy. But with the sure-fire audience plot contained in the story by Arthur Caesar and screen play by Garrett and Mankiewicz, plus the powerful direction by Van Dyke, it has all the elements of a sensational smash hit. Chalk up another for David O. Selznick and MGM.

The story opens with not one, but two spectacular scenes, strong enough to serve as climaxes for ordinary thrillers. The first is a fire aboard a pleasure-cruising Hudson River boat in which young Blackie and Jim lose their parents; the second, a Communistic riot in which the kindly old Russian, who had adopted these East Side kids, is killed as an innocent bystander.

Many films, to make comparisons again, would suffer a letdown after such a breathless beginning. There are no let-downs in "Manhattan Melodrama." A bit of montage following the 1904 prologue quickly establishes, via contrast on a split screen, the gambling proclivities of one youth and the studiousness of the other.

When we again meet Blackie, played by Gable, he is a big-time gambler. Jim (Powell) has become a lawyer, preparing his campaign for district attorney. It is obvious that their friendship, which has endured, will be complicated by the separate paths they have taken.

Further complications arise when Myrna Loy, who has been Gable's mistress, leaves him because of his refusal to stop gambling. She later falls in love with Powell and marries him, after confessing her past. Gable is invited to be best man, but fails to put in an appearance for fear that his association with Powell, now district attorney, may injure the latter's chances in the impending election, in which he is running for governor.

A crooked politician threatens to use a shooting of which Gable was guilty, although Powell could not obtain evidence enough for prosecution, against the district attorney. Gable learns of the threat from Myrna and, to protect his friend from the scandal, kills the crook. He is caught, tried and convicted, Powell conducting the case against him. The trial clinches the governorship for Powell. Gable is condemned to the electric chair.

It is within his friend's power to save him by pardon, a situation that could have been met by mock heroics. The solution, however, is worked out as cleverly and convincingly as all of the incidents leading up to it. Even a contingency that must suggest itself to thinking spectators is provided for —that of a pardon, a resignation and a joyous sailing of the pals on their yacht for the South Seas. Certainly such a gesture to a happy ending would have destroyed the entire structure of the piece. This is specifically mentioned so that you will not feel any qualms from the knowledge that Gable is electrocuted. Wait until you see how his death is motivated. It is the only possible satisfactory ending.

A brief synopsis, it must be realized, cannot do justice to the plot. Highbrow critics may find fault, overlooking the fact that it is the best of theatre. Audiences will not fail to react emotionally to the intelligent writing of it. Credit, too, Caesar, Garrett and Mankiewicz for presenting a story, essentially episodic, as a continuously engrossing narrative.

So unobtrusive is W. S. Van Dyke's smoothly-paced direction that it is difficult to say what is script and what is direction. Each situation is milked dry, yet never overplayed. That, at least, is direction at its best. The photography of Jimmy Howe is, of course, superb.

The playing of Gable, Powell and Miss Loy rates the highest superlatives. It is a dead heat for first honors. Nat Pendleton takes care of the comedy relief as dumb gangster, with some neat assistance from Isabel Jewell. Blackie and Jim as boys are splendidly played by Mickey Rooney and Jimmy Butler. There is a memorable bit by George Sidney. Leo Carrillo and others round out a uniformly excellent cast.

Shout "Manhattan Melodrama" from the housetops. It will make good even the most extravagant promises.

Briney Goes Highbrow

Since completing "Elysia" and his latest picture, "Sterilization," Bryan Foy is said to have joined the Human Betterment Foundation, an organization dedicated to the mental, moral and physical improvement of the human race.

Roger Imhof in 'Canary'

Because of a previous commitment to Warners, John Halliday was unable to take his role in Jesse L. Lasky's "Grand Canary" and was replaced by Roger Imhof. Halliday started Saturday in the romantic lead in "Housewife" at Warners.

'U' Signs Ann Darling

Universal Saturday signed Ann Darling, 18-year-old actress, to a long term deal. Contract will be ratified in court this week. Hoffman-Schlager negotiated.

'MonteCarloNights' Far Below Standard

"MONTE CARLO NIGHTS"
(Monogram)

Direction .....William Nigh
Author.....E. Phillips Oppenheim
Adaptation .....Norman Houston
Cast: Mary Brian, John Darrow, Yola D'Avril, Astrid Allyn, George Hayes, Kate Campbell.

The story of "Monte Carlo Nights" is the only thing that saves the picture from limbo. The acting and direction are too weak for the strength of the plot.

If the picture had been made on a more costly and careful basis, with more definite direction and a better cast, it would have been good average program entertainment. As it is, the film will be popular only in the smaller, less critical houses.

E. Phillips Oppenheim's story has good dramatic meat in it, with honest characterization, logical sequences, and an adventurous spirit that deserved better production seasoning than they got.

John Darrow is a young millionaire playboy who, on the eve of his marriage to Mary Brian, is arrested for the murder of the proprietor of a gambling casino. He is convicted, but, on his way to prison, is assisted to escape by a hard-boiled ex-convict who swears to the authorities that Darrow was drowned in the escape attempt. He is free, therefore, to look for the real murderer, his only clue being that the man plays certain numbers consistently at roulette.

The rest of the story takes place in Monte Carlo, with the real murderer being caught after a good many complications.

John Darrow looks to be a good bet, with Mary Brian doing her usual adequate stuff. Yola D'Avril is well cast, and Astrid Allyn, George Hayes and Kate Campbell have smaller roles.

Steer clear of this one, unless your audiences are easily impressed.

Yesterday in NEW YORK with HELEN GWYNN

Radio City, not content with being the world's largest cinema center, is now housing what surely must be the world's largest Art Exhibit. It's certainly not the best, but it includes 5000 works by 1500 oddly assorted artists, and you walk through miles and miles of labyrinthian ways in order to see it all. It includes oil paintings, sketches, water colors, sculpture, photography, etchings and whatnot, and they're all pretty generally mixed together in the vain hope that, if you're confused enough, you may think it's all in the name of Art. However, the movie colony is well represented.

And the most interesting thing to note about that is that the old idols are entirely among the missing. In the old days no exhibit of this kind would have been complete without a picture or caricature of Doug Fairbanks, Charlie Chaplin, Mary Pickford or Gloria Swanson. Today, they are replaced by Garbo, Hepburn, Sylvia Sidney, Clark Gable and Jimmy Durante. A gal by the name of Hariette Kay has done a sculptured caricature of Garbo that is really a classic for humor and execution, and her head of Hepburn doesn't lag very far behind for quality. Miss Kay, they tell us, used to be a chorus girl, but any gal that facile with her hands should just use her feet to stand on. Hepburn is also represented in a couple of drawings. And believe it or not, there is a head of Jimmy Durante done in MINIATURE! At least, in back of that schnozzola is the outline of a head.

And while on the subject of art, the outdoor advertising boys have done a perfectly grand job on the front of the Criterion Theatre with a head of Wallace Beery as Villa. We had been followed for blocks by a gushing girl from the hinterland and a friend of hers who evidently was a native New Yorker. As we got opposite the Criterion, the gushing one looked up and went into raptures over the Beery painting and turned to her companion and said: "Oh, isn't that wonderful. So natural. Did you ever see anything more natural than that eye. . . The one that's open I mean?" And the native New Yorker answered, "Yeah . . the eye that's closed!"

That heart-breaking actor whose wife tried to tie up his income lately, isn't exactly two-timing his real girl friend, but is making life plenty tough for her. He really did send for her to come east, but he can't appear in public with her on account of his irate spouse, and then he will keep calling up Chicago. He's plenty tough with the gals but they like it that way. . . . The self-styled "playboy of Paris" is heading himself for a mess of trouble, not because he tries to chisel in but because he talks about it besides. . . . He's taken a couple of beatings up in the past two weeks. . . . Charlie Beahan is going through bankruptcy at the moment, which makes him a poor man to divorce. . . . An old time exhibitor was asked the other day what picture in the past year had given him the most pleasure and he promptly replied, "THREE LITTLE WOMEN."

FOX FILM 'NOW I'LL TELL' IS GOOD ENTERTAINMENT

Spencer Tracy Fine In Rothstein Role

"NOW I'LL TELL"
(Fox)

Direction.....Edwin Burke
Author.....Mrs. Arnold Rothstein
Adaptation.....Edwin Burke
Photography.....Ernest Palmer
Cast: Spencer Tracy, Helen Twelvetrees, Alice Faye, Hobart Cavanaugh, Robert Gleckley, G. P. Huntley Jr., Vince Barnett, Ray Cook, Frank Marlowe, Theodore Newton Jr., Barbara Weeks.

Although Spencer Tracy is not exactly the type anyone would pick as the ideal actor to portray Arnold Rothstein, he has a perfect opportunity in the Fox picture, "Now I'll Tell," to show what an exceptionally fine, versatile actor he is.

Apparently miscast, as far as the popular conception of the famous gambler is concerned, Tracy nevertheless turns in a performance that is a beautiful work of art and one which will rank among his best characterizations.

Mrs. Arnold Rothstein has written this story—the facts of the career of her late husband, one of the most notorious gamblers who ever lived, and if it serves to glorify Rothstein's memory—well—it is still swell entertainment.

The story starts in 1909, with Rothstein dabbling in hundred dollar bets. In 1914, he owns an enormous gambling house and makes ten thousand dollar bets. In 1919, he is a "king" in New York. Then misfortunes begin to come to him. He is involved, although at long distance, in a murder; his "girl friend" is killed in an auto accident, and his wife—the only thing in the world he ever cared for, besides money—leaves him.

His downfall is rapid, his final death is heroic and dramatic, and by his death he wins the biggest bet he ever made.

Helen Twelvetrees gives a sincere, moving performance as his wife; Alice Faye is intriguing as the "girl friend"; Hobart Cavanaugh is splendid, as usual, as his right hand man, and the small roles in the picture are filled excellently.

Edwin Burke adapted the story, and also directed—with notable success in both fields. Ernest Palmer photographed.

Although the picture is a trifle over-long, it will undoubtedly be cut. Even if it isn't, it's a sure gamble for any house, and Tracy's fan following will be enlarged tremendously.

evidence that the producers will only increase their number of pictures, tossing you enough quickies to cover the number of pictures you have the right to cross off."

Lightman then named every major organization in Hollywood, declaring that these studios were already set to produce the increased number of short budget pictures. The exhibitor body instructed its leaders to take the issue up with the producers at the post-convention meeting today or tomorrow.

President Kuykendall said a wire had been sent to Louis B. Mayer, accepting the producer's invitation to a conference and asking Mayer to make the arrangements. The exhibitor committee named includes Kuykendall, Fred Meyer, Ed Levy, Jack Miller, Sidney Lust, Jules Michaels, C. E. Williams, E. L. Thompson, O. C. Lam, Walter Vincent and Fred Wehrenberg. MGM Jungle Party Gets Tough Breaks

MGM's pioneering expedition for "Jungle Red Man" on the first lap of its 7300-mile flight to South America was forced down twice by dust and rain storms.

The party finally left Miami on its way to the village of Para, at the mouth of the Amazon. From there the group will fly 1000 miles up the river and the last 700 miles will be covered in a chartered flying boat. The destination, Yarawate, will not be reached for two weeks yet. Gasoline and provisions are now being laid down along the route of the flight.

This expedition consists of George B. Seitz, director; Harold H. Noice, explorer-writer, and Joseph Cook, business manager. The party will return to Hollywood in about three months to lead a complete company into the wilderness for a year. The cast will be Indians living along the headwaters of the Amazon.

'FLESH' MAY REPLACE DUALS, SAY EXHIBITORS

A boom in vaudeville and other classes of "flesh" entertainment was predicted Saturday by A. E. Lichtman, Washington exhibitor and delegate last week to the MPTOA convention. The showman based his prediction upon the elimination of the dual feature policy, asserting that exhibitors who have found it profitable to operate on a double bill standard will seek to replace the second feature with stage attractions.

"Something will have to be done in the drive against double bills to provide against the revived use of vaudeville," he maintained. "It will certainly hurt the efforts of exhibitor organizations fighting for the single bill policy, load still more the shoulders of the overburdened small operator and give the first run deluxe houses a weapon which may ruin the smaller competitor.

"Flesh attractions eliminated themselves. The collapse of vaudeville was no doing of the exhibitor or theatre owner. There simply was no demand for it up to several months ago, but a renewed interest by audiences in this class of entertainment may be fostered once more. We are not discriminating against vaudeville, but we are against its unfair use. The deluxe operator can afford to play it where the small operator cannot and, to countenance such a development, means destruction of all our plans for the advancement of our group.

"The answer to the problem is in the power soon to be invoked by the regional code boards. The zoning, clearance and grievance boards are of vital importance.

"Morgan Walsh, of San Francisco, has made a study of the boards and is their strongest sponsor. He has pointed out that, when they go into action, they can control the situation by predicating zoning on admission price. This will result in the exhibitor who offers vaudeville with a single feature having an admission scale based as though he were showing two features. Thus the small showman will have a proportionate admission scale which will protect him."

EXTRA COMMITTEE HEAD OUT HUNTING FOR TROUBLE

member of the Code Authority, and Will Hays may be drawn into the battle, with the probability that Kent will be on hand at tonight's meeting of the Extras' Committee when the fireworks are expected to be touched off.

It was learned yesterday that Mrs. Kinney plans to ask Kent to attend the meeting, and, if he cannot be on hand tonight, it will be postponed to whatever night this week he will be able to come. Mrs. Kinney, who discovered Saturday that developments have been in progress in regard to her committee about which she knew nothing, has decided that the time has come for a clearing of the atmosphere, feeling that there can be no confidence in any of the code committees unless all the cards are laid on the table and the studio employees given to understand that an honest effort is being made to give them a square deal.

The first information to reach Mrs. Kinney and cause the burn-up to start was the discovery that Sol Rosenblatt had sent a wire to Pat Casey last week, informing him that he had ordered George Creel, Judge Ben B. Lindsey and Charles Cunningham, local head of the Labor Compliance Board, to turn over all complaints of both studio labor and extra players to the new committee which Casey heads, stating it would take care of the cases. The wire also informed Casey that the Studio Labor Committee and the Extras' Committee were to have "joint headquarters."

Mrs. Kinney states that she was not informed of this wire, and wants to know just what is going on. Those close to the situation now feel that this explains why Casey had a sign placed on the door of the Studio Labor Committee offices last week stating that it is also headquarters of the Extras' Committee, although Mrs. Kinney's office is across the corridor.

Next, Mrs. Kinney also learned that someone has sent word to Rosenblatt questioning the legality of the work of her committee on the grounds that some members have not been present at meetings and have had representatives there. It was learned that J. R. Jackson, of Rosenblatt's office, has written a letter saying that, because of this and because the entire committee has not always been present, the legality of the actions of the committee now may be questioned.

It was stated that Sol Rosenblatt himself set a precedent for Mrs. Kinney to follow in this matter, and it will be dumped right in his lap if there is any difficulty. Mrs. Kinney states that, at the first meeting of the committee at which Rosenblatt was present, Dr. Giannini could not be present, so he sent a Mr. Normanly to represent him. Rosenblatt, she points out, officially okayed the procedure of allowing this man to act for Dr. Giannini, and thus set a precedent to follow. She points out that, if it is not correct, it is the ruling of Rosenblatt.

Next, Mrs. Kinney learned that J. Buckley Russell had sent a communication to Rosenblatt stating that he had read in the papers that the Extras' Committee was to be increased, and recommending that Herta Reinachs be added to the committee to represent the women extras, pointing out that she is better qualified than any woman in Hollywood for the job. In the same communication, Mrs. Kinney learned that Russell had also suggested that Eugene Marcus be appointed as counsel for the committee, stating that he would serve without remuneration.

Mrs. Kinney wants to know why a member of her committee is sending such communications and making such suggestions without taking the matter up with the committee and herself.

Some members of the committee yesterday recalled the fact that Mrs. Kinney came out very strongly at one meeting in behalf of the extra women players in opposition to a determined block of committee members who, on the surface, did not seem to have the interest of the women quite so much at heart. It was soon after this episode that the legality of the acts of the committee was questioned by the unnamed person. An attempt will be made at tonight's meeting to learn who first questioned it.

From those close to Mrs. Kinney it was learned yesterday that, if there is any attempt to prevent the presence of Kent at the committee meeting, she will appeal to Will Hays for assistance, as she feels that Kent has the interest of the extras at heart and will help materially to get the alleged under-current workings up to the surface and off to a fresh start.

Academy Majority on Agency Committee

The fact that six of the ten members of the NRA film code's Agency Committee, named last Friday night, are members of the Academy, is causing rejoicing in the ranks of that organization.

Four of the producers, B. B. Kahane, W. R. Sheehan, Jack L. Warner and Emanuel Cohen, are Academy members. John Nickolaus and Frank Lloyd, named to represent the technicians and directors, also also of the Academy.

L'Estrange To Speak

Dick L'Estrange, member of the Regional Labor Board, and candidate for County Supervisor, will speak tomorrow night at the first meeting of the new Hollywood Democratic Club, an organization composed entirely of members of the film industry.

Schubert on Cohen Yarn

Universal Saturday signed Bernard Schubert to write the screen play on the Octavius Roy Cohen novel, "Transient Lady," which Edward Buzzell will direct. Julius Bernstein is the associate producer. Deal was negotiated by Hoffman-Schlager.

Kay Mulvey at MGM

Kay Mulvey, formerly of Fawcett publications, starts at MGM today to handle the fan magazine contacts in the publicity department. She replaces Eleanor Packer who resigned Saturday.

LUXURY and LINCOLNS

FOR THOSE gifted and fortunate persons who can afford to gratify their good taste for the better things of life, there is nothing quite so fine as luxurious possessions.

THAT'S WHY so many stars of the Screen . . . like successful ones in other lines of endeavor . . . are such strong devotees of the LINCOLN V12 motor car.

FOR THE NEW and finer Lincoln IS luxurious. It has both luxury of appearance and of appointments. And one ride will convince anyone that it is as flawless in performance as it is in smart, unradical looks.

The new Lincoln V12's are all powered with the same big 150 horse-power engine . . . but can be had in two wheel-bases—the "136" standard and the "145" custom models. Priced right, too—as low as $3845, delivered in Hollywood.

THEATRE OWNERS CLEAN UP ALL BUSINESS AND ADJOURN

Many Resolutions Pass at Final Meet

The concluding session of the MPTOA brought a resolution from Fred Wehrenberg, of the Public Relations Committee, for a "family night" in theatres. This was passed.

M. A. Lightman, past president of the organization, took up the subject of Walkathons in the report of his Legislative and Tax Committee. He declared them a menace and the suggestion was made to induce all exhibitors to secure, through their city councils and state legislatures, ordinances prohibiting them.

A slam at the publication of high grosses by producers was made through Ed Kuykendall, who pointed out that politicians of every nature see them and promptly formulate tax bills under the impression that the industry is growing fat. He said big town grosses "mean nothing to the small town exhibitor at whom they are directed through publication and only are misrepresenting the pictures. That a picture is a success in a metropolitan center is no proof that it will be a success for the little fellow."

The convention subsequently endorsed a move to make Lightman's committee a permanent feature to cope with constantly materializing legislation antagonistic to the industry.

Sidney Lust assailed tent shows and got a motion passed to instruct exhibitors to go to work on their councilmen to get them to raise license fees from $30 to $500 in order to keep out "thieving carnivals" and permit legitimate large tent shows entry.

A heated discussion resulted from the next resolution, introduced by Ed Levy, against double bills and resulted in a definite expression of opposition. J. J. McGuinness, of Boston, voted against the resolution, after battling it on the ground that Massachusetts and Connecticut had grown up with dual features and could not abandon them.

Out of a floor discussion between Walter Vincent and Sidney Lust came a definite understanding on admission scales. Both sides agreed to protect the other's scale, the large exhibitor getting clearance protection in exchange for agreeing to maintain a high ticket price for his de luxe houses.

Jack Miller, the MPTOA whip against labor, caused a ripple of amazement when he called upon the members to assume a portion of the producer's burden. He said exhibitors were shelving an average of one and a half features a week due to overproduction and that this could be cut down if the exhibitor co-operated with the producer.

Led by Sidney Lust, sponsoring an antagonistic move against the Cutting bill in the Senate which would have the United States joining the Berne convention and consenting to the International Copyright Union's dictates, the showshop owners denounced the bill as inimical to the industry.

Unethical practices by producer-distributors had Paramount on the carpet for a panning by R. A. MacNeil, of Santa Cruz, who complained that he had been unable to get together on a deal with the company, with Paramount virtually giving its pictures away to an American Legion Post.

He was followed by Jules Michaels, Buffalo delegate, whose Grievance Committee succeeded in getting a motion passed to recommend that "press agents avoid involving stars in scandal for publicity purposes."

After Morgan Walsh had a favorable reception on his Code Committee's suggestion for a plea to regional boards for zoning based on admission scales, President Kuykendall adjourned the convention.

Writer No Ostrich

In line with the Paramount chef getting ptomaine poisoning last year, Allen Rivkin is looking for a new place to eat after almost swallowing a half inch tack in his chop suey at the MGM commissary Saturday.

Engineers Oppose Acad. Reel Length

New York.—The Exchange Practice Committee of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers has decided to oppose the campaign of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences to make 1700 feet the standard length of a reel.

At the convention of the Society at Atlantic City, April 23-26, it will be recommended that the present 1000-foot reel is the best adapted for present exchange practices.

Both Harry Rubin, of the Projection Practice Committee, and Trevor Faulkner, of the Exchange Practice Committee, state that the 1700-foot reel would not prevent the doubling of film in the projectors.

Agfa Starts 'Contract For Snapshot' Contest

New York.—"A movie contract for a snapshot" will be offered by Agfa Ansco Corp. in a contest to be promoted nationally from May to September 15 in newspapers and magazines.

Ten million snapshots are expected to come in this summer from screen hopes to Agfa's new photographic casting office in Hollywood, headed by Myron C. Fagan. In addition to a guaranteed contract in the movies, other prizes are to be given. The company expects to spend $500,000 in advertising.

the REFLECTOR

"The shouting and the tumult dies . . . " . . . The first annual golf tournament of the A.S.C. is history . . . and a darned pleasant memory. . . . The trophy awards brought a pleasing climax last Monday night. . . . Bert Glennon proved that sportsmanship isn't confined to the golf course. . . . Eddie Cohen was all steamed up when someone told him Mae West would pull the lucky ticket. . . . Miss West didn't show but they called on another seductive personage . . . and now Eddie's wearing the Mae West sparkler annyhoo! Swell opening to pull the line . . "C'mon up 'nd . . ." . . . but it's been used . . . it's been used . . .

QUESTION!

What's in a name? . . . Plenty! . . . Since the days of the old cedar boxes with a lens on the front and crank on the side . . . the men who've been responsible for the picture's photography have been called Cameramen. . . . Those who guard the portals of the studios are called Gatemen. . . The fellows who handle the front end of the trolley cars are labeled Motormen . . . and on and on and on. . . .

The photographer deserves a BETTER and more dignified indentification. . . .

Recently there's been a movement (and not bad, at that) toward "Direotor of Photography." . . . It's colorful and it boasts some importance and size but we're wondering if someone can do better. We're afraid that it's too long to get a break on the main credit title and we're pretty sure that our brother (?) editors aren't going to give it much of a tumble for the same reason. We might find a coined word (and frankly we haven't an idea at this moment) which will carry everything embraced in "Director of Photography" . . . but we feel that something must be done. Here's why . . . Johnny Arnold has asked us to stop reference to the photographers as "Cameramen" . . . and Johnny, we've honestly tried to do it, but the long tag as recommended just doesn't seem to click in our copy . . . but here's our pledge that we'll use it anyway unless some of the boys can come through with a ticket that ticks! . . . Let's have your suggestions.

The much discussed and long awaited Technicolor three-color process starts in a big way today at Warner Bros.-First National Studio. The first of a series of shorts went into production. Ray Rannahan, who has been with Technicolor for years, is in charge of the cameras. Associated with him are Willford Cline, formerly with Universal, and William Skall, who has been with Hal Mohr for years at Fox.

Good luck . . . best wishes!

Ray Fernstrom, the popular news hawk, left Saturday for Europe with a three-color Technicolor camera. He will go directly to Holland to photograph a travelog for Fitzpatrick.

Another Technicolor three-color camera has been sent to New York to E. R. P. I. This camera will be used for some animated paintings, and upon completion of this work, will be picked up by Robt. C. Bruce on May 16. Mr. Bruce is well known; for years he shot those glorious Bruce Outdoor Series. Mr. Bruce will take the camera to Europe to shoot a series of Bruce "Musical Moods."

Tannura Back Home

Phil Tannura, who for many years was one of our leading cameramen in Hollywood, is here from England. Tannura has for the past six years been domiciled in France and England, and is at the moment associated with British Gaumont in an executive capacity. He is here for a stay of several weeks, and will look over all of the studios during this time.

Tannura spent a day at Movietone City with his old sidekick, Lou O'Connell, and expressed his astonishment at the many changes, both physical and technical which have taken place during his long stay in Europe.

Valentine Away

Joe Valentine starts work this morning on location at Stockton, California, shooting special horse race scenes for the Fox production, "Call It Luck." Back to the Westwood lot about Thursday or Friday.

"Hey, Sailor!"

Here's another argument for those skeptics who give the lip a funny little turn when you start to talk about the importance of the cameramen. When the Pacific fleet sailed away last week, they very kindly and considerately left behind them the battleship Arizona, so that Arthur Edeson and his gang could have a free swing in making scenes for "Hey, Sailor," Warner Bros. production.

Again

Clyde De Vinna, globe-trotting camera-crafter and one of the old guard of the MGM staff, takes over "Treasure Island" at the Culver City plant, and pulls anchor for Catalina, where he'll be located for the next several weeks. The company will do the boat and island sequences during this location. Probably the first time in at least five years that Clyde has been located within amplified shouting distance of his home roost.

Paramount Steams Up

Present production plans at this studio contemplate busiest period in recent history. Chances are that at least a dozen units will be under way on production not later than first week in May. This is a good break inasmuch as it is highly probable all contracted cinematographers on this lot will be assigned and busy with overflow of production, making it necessary to recruit three or perhaps four additional camera chiefs from outside.

Warrenton's Welcome

Gil Warrenton and his charming six-fifths, having completed the new guest houses at their ranch in Carlsbad, will be deprived of their opportunity to welcome flock of friends for the next few week-ends because Gil will be back on the job at one of the major studios.

Rosher Applauded

For his camera achievement in the Twentieth Century-Constance Bennett production, "Firebrand," which was previewed end of the week, Charlie Rosher was given a big hand by all the local critics.

the BUZZER

(NOTE: Each week, sales and service representatives of J. E. Brulatour, Inc. will ask a number of cameramen the same question. The question will be given and then the answers verbatim.)

QUESTION: DO YOU LIKE WHITE SETS?

JOE AUGUST (Columbia): I like them. They give us greater opportunities to portray light compositions.

ROY HUNT (R.K.O.):

YES!

HENRY SHARP (Paramount): Yes, I do, but the white sets, to obtain the best results, should be well broken up with arches, doors and windows. Considerable thought should be given to this subject by the Art Director, so that not too many white sets appear in any given picture.

ERNIE HALLER (Warner Bros.): I like white sets if they are in keeping with the mood and character of the sequence.

OLIVER MARSH (M.G.M.): Yes, I like white sets—in their place. At our place (M.G.M.) they're all over the place.

ARTIE MILLER (Fox): While we do not have a preponderance of white sets at our studio, those that we have had have worked out very satisfactorily, and I have enjoyed working on them when they are properly constructed.

TONY GAUDIO (Warner Bros.): NO, because white sets have been unreasonably overdone. Recently I have had a picture that was almost entirely white sets, ballroom, living room, bedroom, breakfast room, halls, and even the old annkay. There seems to be no limit to an idea once somebody launches it and it rings the bell. Personally, I'm tired of them.

PRODS.-EXHIBS AGREE

TRADE VIEWS by W. R. WILKERSON

•CRITICAL opinion on the result of the showing of a picture at a preview is merely the opinion of the person who wrote the review. He or she may be right or wrong in that judgment, but it is still the opinion of the writer and should be judged as such.

Occasionally the reviewer steps out of his character for a moment, and attempts to tell the producer how his picture should have been produced, the changes that should be effected to help the picture. And that, too, is but an opinion. But when a company accepts that review and follows the suggestions that, it was thought, would greatly benefit the picture, then it must be considered as quite a compliment to the opinion of the reviewer.

And that's just what happened with the Reporter review of the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer production of "Tarzan and His Mate." The critical notice in this paper gave credit to an unusual production achievement, a great show, but took exceptions to certain features of that fine production as being entirely out of tune with all the elements that contributed to the successful making of the picture.

After the review was published, both the author of that review and the entire staff of this publication were shoved into the doghouse by MGM for daring to call attention to things that might have hurt the value of the picture, even though the review credited it as a good picture.

But MGM and Bernie Hyman evidently thought the whole matter over. They started cutting and, when they finished, they had eliminated all those objectionable features, and their astonishment was terrific after the showing of the cut version. This new "Tarzan" now stands as one of the best shows an exhibitor will be able to buy for many a day. It out-circuses any circus you have ever seen. It has entertainment that will satisfy the appetite of any type audience. Kids will go nuts about it and the grown-ups will get a great kick out of it. Long before the end of the engagement the exhibitor will know that he has a solid hit on his hands, and, after all, that makes picture business.

"Tarzan and His Mate," as it has been finally cut, is recommended to any exhibitor in any type house. It's a cinch to pack them in and send them out cheering.

The Purity Brigade

"Winnie" Sheehan, who started the vogue of off-color pictures with "What Price Glory," and Jack Warner, whose pictures have been the cause of more censor slaps than those of any other studio, cast the deciding votes that eliminated one of the most beautiful scenes in "Tarzan and His Mate."

Rosenblatt Ouster Is Reported Again

Those close to the film code situation yesterday hinted strongly that, despite Washington denials, a determined effort is being made to have Sol A. Rosenblatt removed as code administrator.

Helen V. Barry, Field Representative of the Compliance Division of the NRA, now in town, is believed to be one of these steps. It was given out that she came here only on routine

Ruth Chatterton in Dicker with Thalberg

New York.—Ruth Chatterton is on her way to Hollywood and it is understood here that she is on the point of signing a contract with Irving Thalberg at MGM.

The hitch is said to be her demand that she shall select her own stories.

Harlow Cold Delays Pic

Starting the picture again Saturday after suspending it for a week, Sam Wood was once more forced to hold up production of "100% Pure" at MGM yesterday when Jean Harlow developed a cold.

Both Sides Concur At First Joint Meeting That Indecent Pictures And Duals Must Go

Following a week during which each accused the other of responsibility for all the ills of the picture business, MPTOA leaders and a group of major producers got together yesterday at the Beverly-Wilshire in the first huddle of the kind ever held in the industry. They met at luncheon to thresh out all problems, including those of indecent pictures and double bills.

On the former subject, Louis B. Mayer again defended the producers, saying: "We have no desire for smut in pictures, any more than the exhibitor has. It has always been his desires

Philip Moeller To Be Radio Director

New York.—Philip Moeller, one of the founders of the Theatre Guild and for a long time director of all its productions, has been signed to a three-year directorial contract by Radio Pictures. He will leave for the Coast about May 15.

The plan is to have Moeller direct pictures during the Summer, when he is not engaged on the Guild productions.

Pev Marley with Small

Edward Small has signed Peverell Marley to handle the photography on "The Count of Monte Cristo," which goes into production May 7 at Pathe with Rowland V. Lee directing.

Darrow Expected To Ask U.S. Regulation Of All Playing Time

New York.—Robert Robins, of the American Society for the Protection of Motion Picture Theatres, in his secret testimony before the Clarence Darrow Review Board last week, advocated not Government control, but Government regulation of the motion picture business by setting up an agency to allocate playing time on an equal division basis.

That is to say, instead of permitting major producer-distributors with

Sec. Meyer, of MPTOA, In Critical Condition

Fred Meyer, secretary of the MPTOA, who was operated on for appendicitis at the Cedars of Lebanon Hospital, was reported last night as being "a little better," although still in critical condition.

Meyer's work during the convention was so arduous that he collapsed Friday and was rushed to the hospital for the operation. Complications developed and at noon yesterday it was feared he would not recover.

Indies Meet to Oppose War Against Duals

Trem Carr has called an emergency meeting of the independent producers organization for noon today, and it is planned, according to report, to take steps to combat the deluge of propaganda launched against double bills by the MPTOA convention last week.

'Barretts' Delayed

Production on "The Barretts of Wimpole Street" will be delayed at MGM due to the late arrival from London of Charles Laughton, who is due May 1.

ACTORS' GUILD IN VICIOUS ATTACK ON THE ACADEMY

In a scathing editorial in the April issue of its magazine, The Screen Player, the Screen Actors' Guild yesterday charged that the producers have a well-organized scheme for the disruption of the Guild, and are financing the Academy as the tool to be used in wiping out the Guild, or in destroying its usefulness.

"Hidden behind the mask of an arbiter of taste," says the editorial, "and obscured under the cloak of research, what the Academy is really trying to do is to destroy the possi-

British prod., Fox release; director, Basil Dean; writers, Dorothy Farnum, Margaret Kennedy, Basil Dean.

Roxy Theatre

News: Calloused to the malformed and mutilated screen offspring spawned by charming novels, it was hard to believe that the movies had done so right by the gay, mad, tragic people created by Margaret Kennedy's pen. But it is right, beautifully right, by virtue of the understanding, delicate direction of Basil Dean, and actors who interpret roles instead of twisting characters entrusted to them to fit their own troublesome personalities. Maybe it is the British touch. The English understand restraint so much better than Hollywood.

Sun: Occasionally too British for its own good, as far as American popularity is concerned. The actors speak in slipped tones, making their sentences often quite incomprehensible. This very Englishness of the picture is also one of its chiefest merits. There is about it a tenderness, a poetic wistfulness quite free from any maudlin quality. It is a quite tender and effective picture.

American: A fine and fascinating translation of the famous Sanger Saga comes from the British studios to charm appreciative American audiences. The story has been sensitively adapted by our own Dorothy Farnum, and both Director Dean and the author, Margaret Kennedy, assisted with the dialogue.

Mirror: The remarkable Sangers, who have appeared in both a best-selling novel and in a stage hit, are as charming and entertaining as ever in this delightfully made English film. Acted with skill, directed with taste, charmingly photographed, the picture follows the play faithfully.

Journal: Effective scenic views of the Austrian Tyrol and interesting musical accompaniment are the principal attractions of the film. Miss Kennedy's novel is charming reading, but Director Basil Dean, too literal in his translation, concentrated more on bookish detail than on the action demanded by the more flexible medium of the screen.

Times: Although the new film is sometimes blurred and confused in the telling, it is also filled with nervous gaiety, tragic laughter and beauty.

Herald-Tribune: Margaret Kennedy's lovely, introspective novel, "The Constant Nymph," is not helped by its transfer to the screen. In essence a lyrical study of a musician's family, it is the intangible quality, the gossamer thread of fantasy running through it, which makes it a beautiful book to read, but as a dramatic vehicle not so important. Nor has it received much aid from Mr. Dean.

World-Telegram: Written with much grace and sentiment, and a fine sense of humor and true character observation, this shy, gentle, steadfast little comedy-drama goes far toward adding to the already established prestige of recent British films. A mighty fine piece of screen writing, to my way of thinking, too.

15 'Blessed Events' Holding Up 'Sequoia'

MGM expects to resume production within two weeks on "Sequoia," which was suspended some time ago because fifteen members of the cast were expecting blessed events.

Hold everything! The above players were fifteen of the female deer, commonly called does. Instead of cutting the youngsters up for steaks, the studio will use them in place of their parents in the picture.

Cukor Doing Re-Takes

MGM's "Manhattan Melodrama," starring Clark Gable, William Powell and Myrna Loy which was previewed Saturday night, will have scenes added today under the direction of George Cukor. W. S. Van Dyke, who originally directed the picture, has already begun work on "The Thin Man."

Trivers Stays at 'U'

At the completion of his one-picture deal with the original screen play of "A Sin for Cinderella" Saturday, Universal yesterday signed Barry Trivers to another ticket. He will write the script of Thorne Smith's "Night Life of the Gods," which Lowell Sherman will direct.

'Lucky' on Van Dine Yarn

Warners yesterday assigned H. Bruce "Lucky" Humberstone to direct S. S. Van Dine's "Dragon Murder Case," which has Warren William and Margaret Lindsay in the top brackets. Rian James and Robert N. Lee have written the screen play. Picture starts the first of next week.

Parsons Sells Another

Lone Star Productions at Monogram yesterday purchased "Randy Rides Alone," a western by Lindsley Parsons, and signed Harry Fraser to direct. John Wayne has the lead. Story is the third purchased from Parsons, who is publicity director at the studio.

She has already heard Creel's story and Judge Lindsey's, and even sat in on a hearing of one of the cases Rosenblatt ordered Lindsey to turn over to Pat Casey, and which he refused to do.

2600 Exhibs Sign Releases For Erpi

New York.—Electrical Research Products Inc. has, it is learned, already succeeded in getting 2600 exhibitors who have Erpi equipment to sign the "Double R" contracts in lieu of the original agreements.

This "Double R" contract is the one which requires exhibitors to release Erpi from any possible liability as a result of alleged monopolistic practices.

'Sisters Under Skin' For Music Hall, May 3

New York.—The Columbia picture, "Sisters Under The Skin," which was directed by David Burton, goes into the Music Hall the week of May 3.

To Remake 'Red Lights'

MGM will remake the silent success that promoted Raymond Griffith to stardom in 1923, "Red Lights," and will probably have Charles Butterworth in the lead. Harvey Thew is scripting the story, which is from the Edward A. Rose play, "Rear Car." Lucien Hubbard produces.

May Ask Regulation

their own or affiliated first runs to corner all the best first run situations, the Government agency would put major companies in class A and independent producers in class B or C, depending on their importance or type of production. Then each class of producer would be given a first run every other week alternately.

It is expected that the Darrow board will submit this recommendation to the White House with a demand for a Federal motion picture commission to regulate the industry, similar to the manner in which the Federal Radio Commission rules that business.

PARA'S 'SCARLET EMPRESS' EXPENSIVE, BORING PICTURE

Photography Only Redeeming Feature

"THE SCARLET EMPRESS"
(Paramount)

Direction.....Josef von Sternberg
Based on a Diary of Catherine the Great.
Arranged by.....Manuel Komroff
Photography .....Bert Glennon
Starring.....Marlene Dietrich
Cast: John Lodge, Louise Dresser, Sam Jaffee, C. Aubrey Smith, Maria Sieber, Ruthelma Stevens, Olive Tell, Gavin Gordon, Jameson Thomas, John Davidson.

When one considers the vast expenditure on the part of Paramount, the great amount of time, and the lavish and stupendous settings with which "The Scarlet Empress" has been invested, its complete and ludicrous flop as motion picture entertainment is positively appalling.

Were it not for the fact that we are duly considering that neither time nor money was spared in the production of this latest Dietrich opus, we would "laff the picture off" with a paragraph or two. But when a film has been months in the making and its director has been given carte blanche with pelf and players, and the picture itself is heralded as an "important" one, then there are phases that must be taken up in print, which otherwise could be pardonably ignored.

Whatever historical or entertainment value "The Scarlet Empress" may have possessed in its original conception is lost in the mad jumble and clash of pageantry, tableaux, mechanical clocks (a la "Chauve Souris"), symbolism and cymbals. The picture, although an occasional scene is breathtakingly beautiful (as a painting is beautiful) is so bad that it is extremely difficult to treat it seriously in criticism. It is such a colossal fake; such a mighty exhibition of director-ego, such a boring, ponderous parade of splendor and cruelty, that any value it might even possess as a vehicle for Dietrich fans alone, regardless of its appeal as a motion picture, is gone.

This appeal is doubly lost, for in "The Scarlet Empress" Dietrich again is "put through her paces" in the Von Sternberg manner—with little variation from the mannerisms or posturings that have characterized her roles in the past. Only her costumes are different. In "Shanghai Express," Miss Dietrich chewed on a rose. In "The Scarlet Empress," she tears one apart. One is permitted endless close-ups of the star first through gauze, then through fish-net and later through what seemed like a tennis-racket—or was it a sieve?

All the close-ups are very beautiful, for Marlene has never looked more lovely, but we doubt whether even the masses, to whom this sort of thing used to pass for "art," will get any spiritual lift from it now, though a few critics may still be impressed.

There is never a moment during the entire picture that carries conviction or any sense of reality. There isn't a scene which, except for its pictorial beauty, would strike a note of sympathy or response in any audience. There are innumerable and confusing sequences of riding Cossacks, clanging bells, marching soldiers and frenzied people—all to no avail. Oh—the waste of it all!

Sam Jaffee, a fine actor, is permitted to stalk through the film looking and acting like Harpo Marx, so that his every appearance is funny rather than sinister. John Lodge speaks every line through clenched teeth though he probably wasn't to blame.

Louise Dresser bears no resemblance to a Queen, regardless of how "tough" the Empress may have been. Miss Dresser shouts her speeches in the manner of an East Side fishwife without shading or dignity at any time. The entire production can be likened only to an "indoor Western with gargoyles thrown in"—that is the final impression which was left on this reviewer, what with its countless stampedes through marble halls.

We venture the theory that only those audiences which have already viewed the English production, "Catherine the Great," will have even a vague idea of what "The Scarlet Empress" is all about—the others certainly won't care.

It is a great pity that "Scarlet Empress" isn't what Paramount and waiting exhibs are expecting in the way of a new Dietrich picture—it couldn't be. Do what you can with the exploitation values in the star and the subject at hand . . . and don't blame the actors!

New York Kills Bill To Abolish Censors

New York.—The Ways and Means Committee of the State Legislature has killed the Brownell bill to abolish motion picture censors. The apathetic attitude of the picture industry in not getting behind the bill is blamed for its death.

Rosy to Test Code Through ITOA Case

New York.—It is understood here that Sol Rosenblatt will grant the ITOA of New York permission to sign a qualified assent to the code, the purpose being to establish a test case to be brought before the New York Grievance Board.

John Monk Saunders To Adapt Own Story

New York.—John Monk Saunders has been engaged by MGM to do the adaptation of his original, "Oxford Story."

Holmes on Shorts

Ben Holmes, having just returned from New York City from a business and pleasure trip, was immediately signed by Radio to do a series of shorts with Chick Chandler. Johnny Grey will collaborate on the stories.

Sol Lesser Moving To Sennett Studio

A deal by which Sol Lesser will make all his future productions at the Mack Sennett studios has been put over by Jed Buell, of the Sennett organization. Although the other independents who are producing there will remain, Lesser is the most important tenant, occupying by far the greater space.

Among the productions which he will make there are "Peck's Bad Boy," which is scheduled to start May 21; a serial, "Chandu," with Gayne Whitman in the title role; a Harold Bell Wright story, "When a Man's a Man," and a series of westerns.

Para. Extends Option On Detroit Theatres

New York.—Referee Davis yesterday granted Paramount permission to extend until July 16 its option on George W. Trendle's proposed purchase of a half interest in United Detroit Theatres for $50,000.

Davis also approved the charge of $18,266 made by Root, Clark and Buckner for legal expenses in the Paramount bankruptcy.

New Foy Exchanges

Three new exchanges have been established for Foy Productions Ltd. at Salt Lake City, Des Moines and Atlanta. This makes a total of twenty-one exchanges for Foy.

Casey Absent, Extra BoardMeetingTame

Pat Casey failed to show up at the meeting of the Code Committee for Extras last night at which it was expected that Mrs. Mabel Kinney, chairman, would call for a showdown with the head of the Studio Labor Committee on matters pertaining to the jurisdiction of her committee and his in the handling of complaints of extras.

He sent word that he was indisposed and his physician had advised him against going out. So there were none of the anticipated fireworks, and, as one member of the committee stated when it was over, "the code merry-go-round is still running."

Communications from the Code Authority were read explaining that alternates cannot vote for members they are representing, and it was established that at all meetings a majority has been present, making all actions legal.

Foy Tests School Kids

Crane Wilbur, who is to direct "High School Girl" for Bryan Foy Productions Ltd., gave a test yesterday to three high school students in an effort to find suitable types for the leading roles.

Those tested were Pauline True, Maurice Murphy and June Earle.

June Knight Delayed

June Knight, due back at Universal last week, will stay away another month. She is to do two weeks personal appearances in New York and one week in Chicago.

Producers and Exhibitors Agree

that have dictated our production plans."

Following the meeting, President Kuykendall, of the MPTOA, said that both sides were in accord on these two important points and each would do all in its power to find satisfactory solutions.

Mr. Mayer did most of the talking for the producers, while the MPTOA men split up the talking task. Mr. Mayer took the exhibitors to task for their criticisms of pictures and picture-makers, saying that they should be the last to try to tear down the business and should keep their criticism constructive and inside the industry.

The producers declined to make any statement after the meeting, saying: "It was the exhibitors' party. Let them do the talking." President Kuykendall later issued a statement in which he said:

"Practical working machinery for a more direct contact between theatre owners in the field and the producers of motion pictures with a view to providing a channel for the fuller expression of public reaction to motion pictures is expected to follow this afternoon's conference.

"A committee of theatre owners has accepted responsibility to relate from time to time to the production chiefs in Hollywood the public reaction to types and kinds of pictures, with a view to stimulating greater interest among theatre-goers in screen offerings. The producers have invited the fullest possible commentary and criticism of their product and the exhibitors have agreed to supply this.

"Considerable discussion dealing with what was termed good taste in the production of screen plays was carried on at the round-table conference and the fullest possible co-operation on the part of the producer was pledged as part of an all-industry effort to keep the screen free from offensiveness. The menace of double-features and other cut-throat methods of theatre operation and their effect on the production of high-quality pictures were also discussed.

"It was agreed that the general public wants quality rather than quantity in its screen entertainment and an understanding was reached pledging both theatre owners and producers to discourage, wherever possible, the showing of two features for one admission."

Attending the meeting were President Kuykendall, M. A. Lightman, M. E. Comerford, Walter Vincent, Jules Michaels, Jack Miller, A. E. Williams, L. E. Thompson, Sidney Lust, O. C. Lam and Fred Wehrenberg for the exhibitors, and L. B. Mayer, Irving Thalberg, Eddie Mannix, Fred Beetson, Joe Breen, Winfield Sheehan, B. B. Kahane, Albert Kaufman and Sam Briskin for the producers.

'U' WITH BIGGER BUDGET WILL MAKE 40 THIS YEAR

Universal will make forty features for the coming season with a largely increased budget, according to an announcement made yesterday by Carl Laemmle Jr. after a conference of Universal executives held at Santa Barbara. Last year's program had 36 features and the year before 26 were produced. The forty for this year, Laemmle Jr. said, will not include serials, but will include six adventure pictures to be made by Buck Jones.

Leonard Spigelgass, scenario editor, said that the company had considered 300 stories, plays and original ideas in framing the new program and added that the chief purchasing interest of the company this year would be in novels and plays as against originals.

"We expect to spend a great deal more money this year than any year since 1929," said young Laemmle. "Returning prosperity warrants it and, also, we want to give the public, now returning to the theatre, intelligent stories, capably acted and directed, with realistic backgrounds.

At the Santa Barbara conference, in addition to young Laemmle, were James R. Grainger, the sales manager; Leonard Spigelgass, Robert Harris, of the Eastern story department, Henry Henigson, Frank Mastroly, Martin Murphy, Stanley Bergerman, Julius Bernheim, B. F. Zeidman, E. M. Asher, Edmund Grainger, Rian James, David Werner, William Anthony McGuire, Maurice Pivar, Harry Zehner, Clarence Marks and John LeRoy Johnston.

Helen Vinson Set For Two Pictures at Radio

Radio yesterday stretched Helen Vinson's contract into a two-picture deal, the player going from "Virgie Winters" to a spot in "Sour Grapes."

Studio has also signed Henry Kolker for the picture, arranging to match the production schedule with the stage play, "Men in White," in which he is appearing.

Jean Muir in Person

Jean Muir will make a personal appearance in connection with the preview of "As the Earth Turns" at the Warner Hollywood Theatre tomorrow morning and again Thursday night when the picture starts its run. Preview tomorrow is for an invited audience.

Child Actress a Hit

Edith Fellows, an eight year old child playing with Richard Dix in "Family Man" for Radio, proved her ability so well that she has been assigned a role with Ann Harding in "The Life of Virgie Winters."

Party For Sloane

Paul Sloane, now directing "Down to Their Last Yacht" at Radio, was given a surprise birthday party yesterday on the set by the members of the company to celebrate his forty-first birthday. Lou Brock was the M.C.

'U' Seeks New Title

Universal is looking for a new title for the picture, "Loves of a Sailor," which goes into production today.

Roxy Expected Back At the Roxy May 1

New York.—S. L. Rothafel, it is reported, will cut short his personal appearance tour with his Gang after finishing in Brooklyn this week, and will step into the operation of the Roxy Theatre on May 1.

The house is planning to spend considerable money in revamping its backstage equipment and bringing it up to date before Roxy takes hold.

Karl Freund Starts 'I Give My Love' at 'U'

Karl Freund started rehearsals yesterday at Universal on the Vicki Baum story, "I Give My Love," with Wynne Gibson and Paul Lukas in the top spots, and tomorrow he puts it before the cameras. Cast to date, besides the principals, includes Tad Alexander, Eric Linden, Sam Hardy, John Darrow and Dorothy Appleby. Milton Krim adapted and Doris Anderson wrote the screen play and dialogue. B. F. Zeidman produces.

'Hey Sailor' Returns

Warners' "Hey Sailor" company, headed by James Cagney and Pat O'Brien, returned to town yesterday, after being on location at San Pedro and the U.S.S. Arizona for the past two weeks.

Lamont on Col. Short

Charles Lamont, Educational director, moves to Columbia on a one-picture ticket to direct the next Charlie Murray-George Sidney short. This will be the first picture Lamont has made outside the Educational fold for two years.

New Name for 'Humbug'

Universal has changed the title of "Humbug" to "Dangerous to Women." The picture is now in the cutting rooms.

Warners May Build New Strand Theatre

New York.—Warner Brothers have taken another five year extension of their lease on the Strand theatre and are planning to raze the old building and erect a new theatre on the site next year.

Fox and Educational War Over Child Actress

Fox and Educational are reported at an impasse over baby Shirley Temple. Kid is committed to Educational for the two remaining pictures in the "Frolics of Youth" series, an arrangement made at the time Fox placed her under contract.

Fox, however, anxious to take her out of shorts, has offered Educational a lump sum to release her, the offer being turned down. Now it is said, Fox plans to keep the child assigned in order to avoid releasing her to the shorts producers.

Isabel Jewell Must Double At Paramount and MGM

With the start of "Here Comes the Groom" delayed until the end of this week, Isabel Jewell will work in the Paramount picture as well as "The Thin Man" at MGM. Player is under contract for both subjects and the changes in shooting schedules brought about the necessity for doubling in both.

Becky Gardiner East

Gleason with Beacon

Beacon Productions yesterday signed Russell Gleason to replace Frank Melton, who was not available, in "I Can't Escape." Company also signed Otis Harlan and Hooper Atchley.

Actors' Guild Attacks Academy

bility of an honest actor organization —of, by and for the actors."

The Guild charges that the Academy "sold the actor down the river" during the framing of the first draft of the NRA film code, when "the Academy representative participated in the framing of the first draft, which was completely inimical to the interests of actors." It declares that now the producers are contributing $3000 a month to the Academy's support in order to complete the task of defeating the actors.

The editorial says that the producers' plan is first, to play up the "revival" of the Academy, emphasizing its research value to the industry. Then, if possible, start a fight in the Guild. And if that can't be done, to get as many actors as possible into the Academy and get them quarreling with those in the Guild.

Then. says the editorial, the scheme is to "give actors some concessions, and get them to sign a new five-year contract not to strike. (The old one is just about to expire)". With the Guild out of the way, the editorial charges, the producers will then disregard the concessions as far as practice is concerned.

"We do not doubt," says the Guild charges, "that most, if not all, the actor members of the Academy are actuated by the highest motives. Unwittingly, however, they are being made the tools of producers in the old shell game.

"The Guild is not going to be destroyed. But the Academy cannot exist and claim jurisdiction over actors without throwing a constant harpoon into Guild efforts for betterment of actor conditions."

The Screen Player board of editors consists of Lucile Gleason, Fredric March, Ann Harding, Robert Montgomery and Kenneth Thomson.

MGM Takes Care of Karl Dane Funeral

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios yesterday saved the once-famous Karl Dane from being buried in a pauper's grave when officials notified the coroner the studio will take charge of the funeral arrangements.

It was at MGM that Dane, who committed suicide Saturday night because he could not take what fate had handed him, won honor, money and picture stardom. Starting as a carpenter, he became a star and, when sound came in, returned to the laboring ranks again because his voice barred him.

'Liberals' Confer With Writers' Guild Board

A committee of the "liberal element" of the Screen Writers' Guild, consisting of John Emerson, Allen Rivkin and James K. McGuinness, met the Governors of the Guild, by invitation of the latter, last night to discuss points on which the two groups seemed at variance.

No statements as to the results were given out, nor will any be made public until the "liberals" have reported back to their fellows.

Swerling at Cheese Club

New York.—Jo Swerling, Columbia writer here on vacation, will speak to the Cheese Club today on "Newspaperman As Scenario Writers."

OPEN FORUM

April 16.

Hollywood Reporter:

Published statements today announcing that Howard Hurd's contract with Local 659, IATSE and MPMO has been settled for a sum of $12,000 are untrue.

The implication that the Executive Board of the Cameramen's Union has "thrown out Mr. Hurd" with a cloud of blame for the failure of the recent strike is also untrue. The members of this Board have nothing but the very finest of feeling toward Mr. Hurd.

It is true that Mr. Hurd has offered his resignation, but to date it has not been accepted. Negotiations are going on for the settlement of his contract and, in all probability, will not be completed for another two weeks. Mr. Hurd has shown a splendid spirit toward the organization in offering his resignation at a time when this union is bending every effort to gather up the loose ends and once again become a clean cut united unit.

Mr. Hurd desires to go into other fields and, if and when his resignation is accepted and his contract consummated, he will take with him the deepest feeling of regard of every member of the Executive Board, which I again reiterate has in no way ousted him.

It is the plan and desire of the Executive Board to bring the union into a high class excellent condition before we ever seriously consider the possible merger with the A.S.C., which is now being discussed.

ERPI QUITTING THEATRES

TRADEVIEWS by FRANK T. POPE

•SOMEONE in the Screen Actors' Guild obviously is a student of history. He or she knows that, to keep the members interested in such an organization as the Guild, a good, live issue is necessary. Without that issue, interest lags and the organization dies.

There is no proof that the vicious attack on the Academy and the producers in the April number of the Screen Player, official publication of the Guild, is merely an issue. Perhaps the person or persons who write it believe it is true. Perhaps they can prove it. But its very violence defeats its own ends.

"Hidden behind the mask of an arbiter of taste," says the attack, "and obscured under the cloak of research, what the Academy is really trying to do is to destroy the possibility of an honest actor organization—of, by and for the actors."

The nefarious plot is told in detail. A fight is to be started in the Guild through producer and Academy influence, actors are to be given some concessions and then induced to sign a new five-year contract not to strike, the old one being "just about to expire." The expiration date, incidentally, is next March. Then, the Guild being destroyed, the producers will ignore their promises. In all this, the Academy is the tool.

Well, maybe. Producers have been known to be guilty of unethical practices. So have actors. But we would like to know just what the members of the Guild who are still members of the Academy think about the plot and, if they believe it, why are they still in the Academy?

We hold no brief for the Academy nor for the producers. But, even in war time, we like to see common sense used and we feel that the Guild attack is rather childish, especially in its language. If the Guild has any real grievances that can be stated in sensible, believable terms, such action should be taken. But to throw wild verbal punches, as in the Screen Player article, looks too much like an attempt to create an issue.

Lew Brown Expected To Sign Up with MGM

New York.—Lew Brown, recently let out by Winfield Sheehan after he had made "Stand Up and Cheer" for Fox, is on the point of signing with MGM to do a musical at that studio. It is said his salary will be twice what he received with Fox.

Location Sound Men Must Be In I.B.E.W.

According to a communication from Pat Casey to all Hollywood studio managers, no sound technician will be allowed to work on location after next Monday, April 23, unless he is a member of the IBEW union.

The communication states that this decision was unanimously reached at a meeting of studio managers and officers of the IBEW held on March 24. It also states that the union officials will not permit non-union sound men to work on location after next Monday.

Frank Merriwell To Make Picture Debut

New York.—Burt L. Standish, author of the famous "Frank Merriwell" stories, has arranged with Mo Wax and Ronald Bank to prepare a series of movie scripts from his yarns. The Elisabeth Marbury agency is handling the deal.

Lasky Yarn in Liberty

A very interesting story will be found in Liberty which reaches the newsstands today. It was told to Ruth Cummings, MGM writer, by Jesse Lasky, and deals with Hollywood, the stars, their personalities and salaries.

Reported Ready To Hand Over Handling Of Sound Equipment To Gen. Talking And Warners

Washington.—It is authoritatively reported here that, faced with the probability of a permanent injunction in the suit brought by General Talking Pictures and Warner Brothers, Erpi will agree to step out of the picture theatre business and let the two plaintiff companies handle the distribution of all talkie equipment.

This was in accordance with the agreement made in the original contract between Erpi and Warners in 1926. Whether Warners and General Talking will be permitted to assume by transference the monopoly now exercised by Erpi is very doubtful.

Another report is that, in spite of the statement issued some days ago by J. E. Otterson, the Erpi directors

Para. to Make Color Shorts With Kids

Paramount yesterday set a series of 13 one-reel Technicolor comedies on its program and signed Bob MacGowan, formerly director of "Our Gang" comedies for Hal Roach, to produce them independently.

Plan is to design a short for children and animals to compete with Technicolor cartoons. MacGowan will ret studio space by next week, when he will get the first into production.

'U' Meeting Delayed

New York.—The meeting of the Universal stockholders at Wilmington has been postponed until tomorrow.

Unions Start Fight To Oust Casey and Code Labor Board

Charging that there is no provision in the film code for such a committee, and claiming that Sol A. Rosenblatt had no right to appoint it, a group of Hollywood studio employees have started a move to eliminate the much-discussed Studio Labor Committee, that now consists of Pat Casey and Ed Smith.

This was revealed yesterday by a prominent labor man, who declared that his group will carry the matter directly to President Roosevelt if necessary," to get justice for Hollywood's workers."

This man further said that, in case the attempt is unsuccessful, it is plan-

Korda Starts Work on Wells' First Original

London.—Production of H. G. Wells' story, "The Hundred Years to Come," written by him for London Film Productions, has begun at the Whitehall Studios, Elstree. This is Wells' first story written directly for the screen.

Alexander Korda will supervise this, which will be released by United Artists.

Schnitzer Buys One

With no release set, but operating on an assurance from J. E. Otterson, of Erpi, that one would be obtained, J. I. Schnitzer has closed a deal for the purchase of "The Jealous House," a Clarence Budington Kelland story.

Muni-Graham to Mexico

Carroll Graham, author of "Border Town," and Paul Muni, for Warner Brothers, leave tomorrow for Mexicali to make a study of the town and to obtain local color for the production, which will star Muni.

EXHIBS AGREE INDIE PRODUCERS ARE NEEDED

Leaders of the MPTOA disagreed with Louis B. Mayer's opinion of the independent producer when, at a conference with a group of these small producers yesterday, they stated that the indie was necessary to the exhibitor and should be encouraged.

The exhibitor group, however, maintained its attitude against double bills and endorsed again the idea of fewer pictures, feeling that in that way quality would be improved.

The MPTOA was represented at the meeting by President Ed Kuykendall,

THE LOW DOWN

Heh, heh! Even if this isn't true it's funny—but it was relayed to us by someone who swears that it happened. Seems that a few weeks ago Hal Wallis and Bill Koenig decided to take a jaunt to Europe with their wives. They called the French line and asked to reserve the Imperial suite on the Ile de France—nothing else would do. They were informed that this particular suite was taken for that particular voyage, but that the company would make efforts to switch the holders of that suite to another. Several days passed and then Wallis and Koenig were told that the thing could not be arranged; the occupant would not budge.

"But," Wallis or Koenig or both are said to have said, "we must have that suite—can't you tell the people who we are—that we're big picture men and must have that suite, etc.? Who has the reservation anyway? We'll ask the guy ourselves."

"Darryl Zanuck," replied the French line man.

There is no truth to the current rumor that the ex-husband of a famous star is about to marry a certain blonde. There is also no truth to a lot of rumors going around about this particular fellow. Fact is that his ex-wife, though she hasn't had any claims on him for years, is still jealous of anybody within ten miles of him and has been spreading all sorts of stories around about him herself, many of which have hit the papers in the East, where she happens to be at the moment. The thing that burns the lady most, however, is his association with anyone, male or female, who "knew them when"—when they were married and she was making life plenty miserable for him!

New York REVIEWS

"I BELIEVED IN YOU"
Fox prod.; director, Irving Cummings; writers, William Anthony McGuire, William Conselman.
Mayfair Theatre

Mirror: It is a fanciful little drama about the worthless radicals and the worthy rich, not quite convincing. The story, which is artificial, gives Miss Ames little real acting to do. She is attractive and deserves a better one.

World-Telegram: One of the screen's minor irritations, calling for a mood of tolerance rather than of wrath. Somehow I can't help feeling that here was the beginning of a fairly interesting idea, but as worked out in the film it is just about as superficial as the Greenwich Village it tries to satirize.

Herald-Tribune: The manner in which the idea is dramatized has a way of making the entire conception so foolish and annoying that we skeptics cannot help suspecting that the film was made under direct orders from the Commintern.

Times: The actors who participate in this parable are good and the direction successfully avoids the temptation to belabor the theme with facile burlesque. Rosemary Ames gives an affecting performance as the girl.

Post: The Mayfair's new screen offering has at least the merit of a story idea, but the garbled scenario, the inane dialogue and the absurdly exaggerated caricatures of Village types prevent the possibility of taking the picture seriously.

Journal: In a film called "I Believed in You," a Hollywood scenario writer lets his imagination run riot and pictures Washington Square and its vicinity as a sort of exaggerated Left Bank. And its residents as the type of wild-eyed Bohemians known to imagination riot-runners.

Sun: "I Believed in You," in these days of change and discussion, presents a viewpoint so conservative that, in contrast to the usual more fiery utterances, it is almost startling. The Mayfair talkie had an excellent idea to go on. The working out of it is hardly fortunate.

News: The theme is somewhat original, but there are spots here and there which make you wonder. Miss Ames' work, however, always comes to the rescue, with the result that "I Believed in You" doesn't stagger as much as it might otherwise.

Amercian: Mediocre entertainment is offered by this innocuous little picture. But despite its lack of brilliance, there are two items which distinguish it. Most important is the presence in the cast of one Rosemary Ames, who makes her bow herewith.

Helen Barry Making Probe of Complaints

The importance that official Washington is attaching to the efforts of Sol A. Rosenblatt to force Judge Ben B. Lindsey to turn over to the Studio Labor Committee all complaints by workers of alleged code violations by the studios was emphasized yesterday, when it was learned that Helen V. Barry, the special investigator now here, has been conferring with complainants.

She was sent here hurriedly when Lindsey, backed by George Creel, refused to turn over the complaints, and has heard the stories of Creel, Lindsey, Cunningham and Pat Casey. Tomorrow she is slated to confer with Mabel Kinney, head of the Code Committee for Extras.

However, she has not been satisfied with the information from the officials alone, but wanted to get from the workers the reasons why they do not want their complaints to get into the hands of the Studio Labor Committee. She reports direct to Washington.

Darmour Ends Shorts

Larry Darmour has completed his program of six "Mickey McGuire" shorts for the current Columbia program and will not produce any more personally. He will form an independent unit to keep his short department intact if his contract is renewed.

Hollywood on the Air Announces Big Program

Three comedians, three dramatic artists and Gene Austin will be featured in the Hollywood on the Air program to be heard over the NBC network next Monday night at 9 o'clock Pacific time.

The comedians will be Polly Moran in a humorous monologue on "The Rights of Women," and James and Russell Gleason, father and son, who will present a new radio skit.

Karen Morley, Nils Asther and Judith Wood will offer a scene from the motion picture, "The Crime Doctor."

World Cruise For Dix

Richard Dix will take a world cruise for several months at the completion of his present Radio picture, "Family Man." This production under the direction of John Robertson will be completed in approximately two weeks.

Fox Starting One

With Claire Trevor and James Dunn in the leads, Fox puts "Always Honest" into work today. Harry Lachman directs. Ray Walker, Shirley Temple and Dorothy LeBaire have featured spots.

Cagney in Auction Yarn

James Cagney is slated to star in the auctioneer story, "I'll Sell Anything," which Warners is producing. This is the Albert J. Cohen-Terry Shannon story which Sam Bischoff is supervising.

Dave Thomas Buys 9 Yarns for Pictures

New York.—Dave Thomas, a brother of Harry Thomas of First Division, has purchased nine stories to be used for independent productions in the East. All the yarns are by George Boyle and the titles are "Convention Girl," "Men Must Have Women," "Madame Secretary," "On Margin," "Love, Honor and ?", "Alimony God," "Wonder Worker," "The Diamond Horseshoe" and "Flesh Parade."

The purchase is significant in view of the statement of Harry Thomas recently that First Division would go into production.

M. A. Lightman, Walter Vincent and C. E. Williams. The producer group included Trem Carr, of Monogram, I. E. Chadwick and J. Boyce-Smith, all members of the Independent Motion Picture Producers Association. The two groups found themselves in accord on practically every point and, after the meeting, President Kuykendall gave out a statement in which he said:

"The discussion of the problems of the Independent Producers lasted about two hours, and while the MPTOA would not recede from its opposition to double features, the sentiment was unmistakable in that the Independent Producers must be encouraged in the making of product. It was the unanimous opinion of the MPTOA Executive Committee that independent production had a definite place in this industry because of the necessity for new and independent ideas in production. The Independent Producers were commended by the MPTOA for their efforts and again the MPTOA went on record as endorsing the production of fewer pictures, feeling that this is the only way that quality product can prevail.

"The Independent Producers and the MPTOA were in thorough accord in that complete encouragement should be given to any good picture, by way of play dates, regardless of who produced it."

PARAMOUNT 'DOUBLE DOOR' FANTASTIC BUT THRILLING

Direction, Acting Fine in Weird Yarn

"DOUBLE DOOR"
(Paramount)

Direction .....Charles Vidor
Author .....Elizabeth McFadden
Adaptation .....Gladys Lehman and Jack Cunningham
Art Direction.....Hans Dreier and Robert Odell
Photography .....Harry Fischbeck
Cast: Mary Morris, Evelyn Venable, Kent Taylor, Guy Standing, Anne Revere, Colin Tapley, Virginia Howell, Halliwell Hobbes, Frank Dawson, Helen Shipman, Leonard Carey, Ralph Remley, Burr Caruth.

The Paramount picture, "Double Door," has very much the same fantastic, incredible, melodramatic plot that used to thrill the readers of those paper-backed novels in the '90's.

It is of the Marie Corelli, Mrs. E.D.E.N. Southworth and Bertha M. Clay school, with villainesses, heroes and heroines that could do nothing less than demand hisses or loud shouts of approval from the audience. Even the preview audience so forgot its accustomed blase detachment as to shout instructions to the heroine and call loudly for her lover when the wicked old woman was about to shut her up in the secret vault.

Were it not for the fact that "Double Door" is superbly directed, stunningly photographed and more than competently acted, it would be a swell burlesque. As it is, it carries considerable pictorial and mechanical weight, which partly makes up for the heavy-handed, leering plot.

Mary Morris plays Victoria Van Brett, the meanest woman in the world, who reigns like a vindictive empress over the immense Van Brett mansion in New York and keeps her sister, Caroline (Anne Revere) and her step-brother, Rip (Kent Taylor), virtually prisoners, semi-hypnotized in the rich, dark old tomb of a house. Things reach a blood-curdling crisis when the old woman, hating Rip's young wife and failing to separate them by means of unusually bitter persecution, attempts to murder the girl by locking her into the air-tight vault in which the family jewels are kept

Miss Morris turns in an exceptionally strong, vivid performance; Anne Revere, as Caroline, is completely and cleverly convincing as the sister with no will of her own; Kent Taylor is likeable as Rip, who finally dares to defy Victoria, and Evelyn Venable fulfills perfectly the promise she gave in her earlier films. Guy Standing gives a flawless performance in a role that might have passed unnoticed in other hands; Colin Tapley is well cast and appealing as a family friend; Virginia Howell is good as the long-suffering Avery, and Halliwell Hobbes is seen briefly but to advantage.

Charles Vidor's direction is a miracle, considering the story, guiding moments to peaks of real excitement. Elizabeth McFadden is the author, with the idea suggested by Hermine Klepac, and Gladys Lehman and Jack Cunningham made the adaptation.

Too much praise cannot be given to Hans Dreier and Robert Odell for their art direction, and Harry Fischbeck's photography is utterly and beautifully in the mood of this extraordinary story.

This is a page out of the past; a chapter out of an old thriller, and because it is so remarkably well done, it will enjoy a certain popularity as a novelty. It needs cutting badly in the beginning and some toward the end.

'Rip Tide' Smash Success in London

London.—"Rip Tide" is doing enormous business at the big Empire Theatre here and is being held over for a second week, with a strong probability that it will run three weeks. The Empire is a grind house.

James M. Cain Buys His MGM Contract

James M. Cain has returned $3,330 to MGM and begged out of writing the screen play for "Duchess of Delmonico," on the ground that he had no desire to go through with the assignment and preferred to work on a novel he had already started.

The William Morris office returned its commission on the deal, having set a contract for $10,000 for the writer, one-third of which was paid down.

Sol Rosenblatt Turns Down Vaude Labor Bd.

New York.—Sol Rosenblatt has refused to take any action at this time on the recommendations of the Vaudeville Actors' Labor Committee.

He says that action now would mean the re-opening of the entire code and require open hearings at which all sections of the code would be discussed. This he is unwilling to see happen.

Loretta Young Figures In Double Loan Deal

Due to the postponement of the starting date on "Professional Correspondent," MGM yesterday loaned Loretta Young to Fox. The arrangement was made with Twentieth Century's consent, latter having given MGM a three-picture committment on the actress.

This is said to be the first sub-loan ever put through. Fox gives her an assignment today.

Waycoff with Small

Edward Small yesterday signed Irving Waycoff as production manager on "The Count of Monte Cristo," which Rowland V. Lee directs when it goes before the cameras next month at Pathe. Waycoff was formerly business manager for the Gloria Swanson productions.

Revue For Playhouse

Moe Morton has taken a lease on the Hollywood Playhouse with plans to put on a revue, "Shim Shams of 1934," which Dave Gould will stage.

New Pictures on B'way This Week

New York.—MGM's "Tarzan and His Mate" and Fox's "Stand Up and Cheer" are the outstanding pictures among the new ones to be seen at the Broadway picture palaces this week. The list comprises:

"I Like It That Way" at the Mayfair Monday; "Modern Hero" at the Strand today; "Stand Up and Cheer" at the Music Hall tomorrow; "Wharf Angel," with Gloria Swanson on the stage, at the Paramount; "I'll Tell the World" at the Roxy, and "Tarzan and His Mate," with radio stars on the stage, at the Capitol on Friday.

Ullman Exonerated in Valentino Estate Row

San Francisco.—The District Court of Appeals yesterday exonerated S. George Ullman of charges of mismanagement of the estate of Rudolph Valentino, of which he was executor, when it reversed an order of the Los Angeles Probate Court.

Ullman's management had been objected to by Jean Guglielmi, nephew and heir to the estate, who charged Ullman had made too many cash advances to the other heirs. The Appellate Court praised Ullman for his work.

Twelvetrees Wins Suit

Rebecca and Silton lost their suit for $236 against Helen Twelvetrees yesterday in Superior Court when Judge Thomas C. Gould sustained a demurrer claiming the court had no jurisdiction because of the amount of the suit.

New Universal Title

Universal has set "Funny Thing Called Love" as the new handle for "Love Life of a Sailor," the Chester Morris-Mae Clarke vehicle which went into work yesterday with Kurt Neumann directing.

Fight to Oust Casey

ned to appeal to Washington to have Casey removed from the committee on the ground that it is a violation of the code for a man to sit on a grievance board on any matter involving his own or his company's interests.

"We maintain," says the labor man, "that Casey, who also heads the producers' committee, comes under this head, because it is his job to work for the studios in labor matters. The labor troubles of the studios are Casey's troubles. Therefore, according to Article VI, Part 2, Section 6, he has no right to sit on complaints involving the studios he represents. We are not going to let this thing die. We are going to carry on until we get the committee or Casey out."

President W. C. Elloitt, of the IATSE, has written to one of the IATSE locals, stating that he is going to start a battle in Washington to have Casey removed.

Yesterday in NEW YORK with HELEN GWYNN

Just one more story on the "Three Little Pigs" because it happens to be true and "goes to show" how far a good picture shines in the world. A friend of ours, while spending some time in Europe, took up skiing and became quite proficient at it. So much so, that his instructor decided to take him on a difficult seven-mile run around a famous mountain in the Austrian Tyrol. The instructor warned the boy to take it easy, not go too fast and follow him at a safe distance and that, if he watched him, he'd be all right. So they started on the run and everything was proceeding smoothly when the boy noticed the instructor frequently turning around and evidently saying something. Thinking the instructor wanted to advise him of something important that he should know, the lad speeded it up and finally caught up with the instructor. Now the instructor spoke very little English and, when the boy rushed up excitedly and asked him what he wanted to say, the instructor just grinned and finally came outwith: "Who's afraid uff der Big Bad Volf?"

Add to the evils of double features, the torture of sitting through two and a half hours of stage show. The other evening, as we were about to collapse from stage-show fatigue, a big brawny out-of-towner walked over to the usher and loudly demanded the manager, and when he got the manager asked him to refund his money. He claimed that when he came into the place, they had promised him that the stage show would be over in a few minutes. He said that had been two hours ago, that there were no signs of the show stopping, that he had paid his money to see a PICTURE and, as a final argument to cinch matters, he came out with: "Hell, I'm not scheduled to stay in New York long enough to wait to see the picture!"

It begins to look as though everyone is going out for Summer stock again and Ernest Truex will join the ranks by taking over the Contemporary Theatre Club in White Plains. . . . His son, Philip, will go with him. . . . So while Peggy and Blumey were arguing over whose house it was, the darned thing went and burned down, but not before Peggy got a bad sore throat and lost her voice from arguing. . . . Believe it or not, the baby frightener who got herself a picture contract has a husband who hasn't drawn a sober breath since she went to Hollywood, and wonders when she's coming back. . . . Wonder why they make such a fuss over bad notices when "Rip Tide" breaks records and stays three weeks in spite of them! . . . And how did a certain person know a picture was going to get four stars before the picture was shown? . . . Add Famous Last Words: "I'd like you to meet a little girl who's just crazy about you, Mr. Raft!"

'WIFE INSURANCE' THIN AND ONLY MODERATELY AMUSING

New Farce Holds Nothing For Films

"Wife Insurance," by Frederic Jackson; staged by Arthur J. Beckhard, with Ilka Chase, Kenneth MacKenna, Helen Huberth, Walter Abel, Lillian Emerson and Harvey Stephens.

A very thin piece of material indeed, stretched right up to the breaking point to make a moderately amusing essay into farce, tempered by one good drawing-room comedy scene. The redeeming feature of the evening was the acting, with Ilka Chase and Ken MacKenna really giving the play far more credit than the writing warranted and, being thoroughly experienced in light comedy, they gave it a great deal more life and imagination than the direction ever thought of.

Take two business men and their wives. Add one successful novelist who is also a devil with the women. Shake thoroughly into misunderstandings, jealousy, one carefully planned evening by the smart wife to teach both her husband and the novelist a lesson in manners, and pepper with the right amount of door-slamming, and you at least have the skeleton of a farce. The trimmings (dialogue) in this case, while they are never quite dull, are not too often quite bright either, so that the net result is something better than poor, but less than good.

Ilka Chase, in the first big, carrying role of her career, definitely establishes herself as one of the very deftest comediennes on the stage. In fact, she's so good that one gets the impression that the part is written a whole lot better than is actually the case. Ken MacKenna, as her husband, is swell in a completely routine role. Lillian Emerson has improved considerably since her society debut and is okay as a rather silly, discontented wife. Harvey Stephens was a little confused and bewildered by his part as the novelist, but no more so than the author was in writing him. However, in the pseudo-seduction scene, the lad is all right. Walter Abel, a really capable dramatic actor, is not exactly at ease in a farce comedy part and we suspect that a lot of his suffering was genuine. The piece has little if anything for pictures.

Joan Crawford on Air

Joan Crawford makes her first radio broadcast over the Hall of Fame program, May 6. Franchot Tone will appear with her. M. C. Levee arranged the deal.

Myrna Loy in 'Stamboul'

Myrna Loy will star in "Stamboul Quest" for MGM. Walter Wanger is producing the spy picture from a script by Leo Birinski and Wells Root.

Hazel Hayes Soloist

Hazel Hayes, Wampas baby star, will be guest soloist and Nat Finston, guest conductor, at the Philharmonic, April 26.

It's a Long, Long Way From Frisco to L. A.

James Bartram, English husband of Juliette Compton, arrived Saturday at San Francisco from the Orient and is enroute to Los Angeles by foot, hiking being his chief amusement.

Fay Wray Borrowed For Liberty Picture

M. H. Hoffman put through a deal with Twentieth Century yesterday for the loan of Fay Wray for the leading role in Liberty's next picture, "Two Heads On One Pillow."

William Nigh will direct, the indie producer signing him yesterday through the MacQuarrie office on a two-picture ticket.

Mae Clarke to 'U'

Mae Clarke was borrowed by Universal from MGM for a leading role in "Funny Thing Called Love," which the B. F. Zeidman unit put into work yesterday.

Crosby Pic at Rivoli

New York.—"We're Not Dressing," the Paramount picture starring Bing Crosby and Carole Lombard, goes into the Rivoli on April 25.

have ordered him to stop financing independent producers, and it is believed that Erpi may give up both its Eastern and Western studios.

This hooks in with the report that Paramount will transfer some of its production to the Astoria plant and will operate there with Erpi money. If that is so, it would give an excuse for Erpi discontinuing financing of indies because of the amount needed to finance the Paramount product.

In any event, it looks as if Erpi is washed up with the theatres, and General Talking and Warners are in the saddle. The suit which is settled if this news is correct was brought by General Talking Pictures and Warner Brothers, the latter accepting an invitation to be a party. The suit was based on grounds of restraint of trade and monopolistic practices. General Talking had acquired the American rights to Kuchenmeister patents and the De Forest sound patents. Warners joined because of their allegation that Erpi had broken an agreement to furnish Warners with sound equipment free, after Warners had pioneered the sound movement.

The Federal Court granted a temporary injunction against Erpi and, when the case came up again recently, Erpi asked for a three weeks postponement. It is figured that Erpi, fearing that the temporary injunction would be made permanent, wanted that time to arrange the settlement.

The success of the plaintiffs means much to General Talking because of the replacements that are always needed in the picture theatres and also because of the service charges that the houses have to pay.

Theatre Men Get Behind NVA Drive

New York.—At a luncheon given by Major L. E. Thompson, of RKO, chairman of this year's NVA Drive, all individual theatre owners of the Times Square section and operators of all independent circuits in the metropolitan zone announced they will get behind the drive.

Publix, RKO, Warner Brothers, Loew, Fox West Coast and Skouras theatres have already agreed to sponsor this year's drive, which Major Thompson asks them to make the most successful in NVA history.

Karl Dane Funeral Services This Morning

Karl Dane comes to the end of the picture trail today when he will be buried in Hollywood cemetery. Services will be held this morning at 10 o'clock at Pierce Brothers funeral chapel.

Jean Hersholt and a few more of Dane's friends will attend the services. There will be no relatives, as none can be located. MGM is paying for the funeral.

Lloyd Near Finish

Harold Lloyd, now producing "The Cats Paw," will finish actual shooting early next week.

Majestic Schedule Boosted to Sixteen

With Harold Hopper back in town, Majestic announces that it has set 16 pictures as the minimum to be made on the current production program, with the possibility that the number may be increased. First to get under way will be "The Scarlet Letter," which goes into work some time next month.

New set-up has Larry Darmour as production head, assisted by Harold Hopper out here, and Herman Glucksman in New York in charge of distribution. The deal eliminates the necessity for Globe Pictures and exchanges which Darmour and Hopper had planned to establish.

Leonard Fields and David Silverstein have completed the script on the Nathaniel Hawthorne classic, which Hobart Henley will direct.

Helen Kane-Para. Suit Comes Up For Hearing

New York. — Judge McGoldrick heard testimony yesterday in the suit of Helen Kane against Paramount and Fleischer cartoons.

He ruled that the sole issue is to decide whether or not Paramount had used Miss Kane's name or picture in advertising the Betty Boop cartoons. The hearing was continued.

CODE AUTHORITY SENDS OUT ASSESSMENT LISTS

New York.—The Motion Picture Code Authority yesterday sent out its assessments to 7800 theatres for their shares of financing the code for the first half of 1934. The shares are:

In cities of over 1,000,000 population, 120 first run theatres will pay $96 each annually, 178 second runs will pay $48, and 571 subsequent runs will pay $36.

In cities between 700,000 and a million, 88 first run houses will pay $72, and 134 subsequent runs will pay $42.

In cities of 500,000 to 700,000, the 75 first runs will pay $48, and the 153 subsequent runs, $36.

From 300,000 to 500,000, the 74 first runs are assessed $42, and 283 subsequent runs $30.

Cities 100,000 to 300,000, the 266 first runs will pay $36, and 553 subsequent runs, $24.

Cities 25,000 to 100,000, 676 theatres will pay $24, and 448 houses, $18.

Theatres with seating capacity of over 500 must pay $18 and there are 1794 of these in towns of less than 25,000. Houses seating less than 500 will pay $12, this affecting 2387 theatres. The total assessments of all theatres which have assented to the code will be $181,362.

The share of the budget to be borne by producers and distributors has not been drawn yet.

New Indie Distrib Company Formed

New York.—Realart Distributing Corporation has been organized to handle the distribution of several series of independent productions, which will be made at the Biograph studios with Consolidated financing. The new company will have its own exchanges in key cities.

The group of pictures to be made at Biograph by the William Saal Enterprises will be among the first to be made and distributed under this new deal.

Lamont's First For Col.

Charles Lamont's first short for Columbia will be "Plumbing for Gold," which has been written by Ewart Adamson. The Charles Murray and George Sidney subject will get into work next week.

Foster Through at Fox

Preston Foster returned $2,000 to Fox yesterday, representing salary, and got his release from a contract. Negotiations went through the William Stephens office.

Bartlett-Seff Finish

Sy Bartlett and Manny Seff have just completed the screen play for "Princess of Kansas City" at Warners. Bartlett gets credit for the original story.

So What?

Merry Fahrney orders her tooth paste from Paris in dozen lots. The paste is bright red in color and leaves the gums a deep crimson after using, says Nancy Smith.

Actors' Guild Will Open Fiesta May 18

The Screen Actors' Guild will open the Gilmore Stadium on May 18 with a Fiesta. It will consist of five performances, starting with the night of May 18, running through matinees and evening performances on May 19 and 20.

Many of the stars in the Guild will participate by running concessions and taking part in a grand pageant. Arrangements have been made with Earl Gilmore to conduct this Fiesta once a year in his stadium. In addition to adequate parking space, special bus lines will be run to the stadium during the three days of the Fiesta.

Richard Tucker, chairman in charge, has arranged for twenty acts and is negotiating for additional numbers.

Shamrock Reorganizes

New York. — Shamrock Pictures Corporation has completed reorganization and the following officers were elected: B. C. Fassio, president; Walter E. Rodda, vice-president; Paul A. Hartwig, secretary; Standish T. Cox, treasurer. They were also elected as the board of directors.

Mascot To Make 10 Action Melodramas

Nat Levine returned from New York by plane Monday with revised plans for his production schedule, based on conferences with leading exchangemen in the East. Under the new plan, Mascot will make 10 action melodrams, only two exploitation features instead of the four previously announced, and four serials.

Organization will work on the same plan as used by Monogram,with supervisors in full charge of a limited number of pictures under Levine. Company has already signed Lou Baum, Marty Cohen and Lou Sarecky for these spots and is negotiating for a fourth.

Mascot has nine writers on the staff and intends to add several more. The first group to go into work will include "Crimson Dawn," being scripted by Prescott Chaplin and David Howard and supervised by Marty Cohen; "The Marines Have Landed," which Bert Clarke and John Rathmell are writing; "Headquarters," being prepared by Larry Wickland, Sherman Lowe and Barney Sarecky. Writers will be signed to work on "Waterfront Lady," and "Behind the News," an original by Ford Beebe.

Breslow on Short

Columbia yesterday signed Lou Breslow to direct the second Howard, Fine and Howard short, "Symphony in Punches," which Jules White will produce. Subject has been scripted by Jack Cluett.

NEW PARA. DEAL CLOSER

TRADEVIEWS by FRANK POPE

•THE slant that some exhibitors outside the big cities have on pictures is an interesting thing for some of the picture producers to study if they are really in earnest in their promise to make better pictures.

The producers learned, or should have learned, a number of things from the delegates to the MPTOA convention last week and, possibly, they did. As a rule, the exhibitors in the smaller cities are closest to the public and, through personal acquaintance with their patrons, get the slant on what those patrons want and do not want. This paper yesterday received a letter from such an exhibitor, a man in Kansas. He writes:

"A customer recently said to me: 'Does Hollywood think a boy and girl can't be in love without spending a night with each other? I'm sick and tired of having that kind of stuff shown to my children as if it were the regular thing.' "

The writer also comments on the prevalence of drinking scenes and says:

"There are good customers who will tell you that the liquor manufacturers are paying picture companies to run such scenes in order to make the young people think that drinking is the proper thing and thus increase the number of liquor consumers. When parents feel that way they are very liable to start reducing allowances for the kids' picture shows."

He cites another complaint which he hears many times. He says: "People are against the worn-out 'girl is going to have a baby' theme. A patron said to me recently that they never get married in the movies unless the girl finds out she is going to have a baby. I don't mean there never should be pictures with these happenings. My point is that they are injected many times without adding entertainment. They seem to be dragged in as though someone has an idea that it isn't a picture without something of that kind."

Universal has decided to produce the Charles Dickens story, "Great Expectations," Stanley Bergerman taking over the supervision of the picture and signing Gladys Unger to write the screen play.

Officials Feel Measure Now Before Senate Will Greatly Help The Reorganization

New York.—Plans for the reorganization of Paramount are rounding into shape and a definite announcement is expected very shortly. Paramount officials are immensely cheered by the report from Washington that the House has passed a bill to permit corporations to reorganize by reducing their debts, cancelling their stocks and bonds and issuing new obligations, if a majority of the creditors agree. The bill is said to be before the Senate now, and it is understood that President Roosevelt has signified his willingness to sign such a measure.

In view of this and the progress made in the plans for the reorganization, the more optimistic in Paramount

$250,000 to Sheehan For Two More Years

New York.—At the first annual meeting of the Fox Film Corporation since its recapitalization, it was disclosed that Winfield Sheehan received a salary of $250,000 last year and has a contract covering 1934 and 1935 at the same figure.

In the absence of President Sidney Kent, W. C. Michel, executive vice-president presided at the meeting, which re-elected all retiring directors. Questioned by stockholders as to the possibility of dividends in the near future, Michel refused to commit himself and said such action was up to the directors.

Film Notables Start East in Private Car

Reserving their own private car, a party of Hollywood people left last night by train for the East.

Group included David O. Selznick and wife, Howard Estabrook and his secretary, J. P. Greenwood, George Cukor, and J. H. Stenbock and wife. Selznick, Estabrook and Cukor go to England from New York.

Irv Cobb and Daughter Here from New York

Irvin Shrewsbury Cobb, the first citizen of Paducah, Kentucky, and his daughter, Mrs. Alton Brody, arrived on the Chief last night for an indefinite stay.

Mrs. Brody is the author of "She Was a Lady," which Fox is producing.

London.—Sam Goldwyn's "Roman Scandals" premiered here Tuesday night at the Leicester Square theatre to an audience of notables. Reviews in the local papers yesterday were unanimous in praise of the Cantor picture.

DARROW REPORT MAY ASK ANTI-TRUST LAWS IN CODE

Washington.—The advisability of the restoration of the anti-trust laws in all NRA codes is expected to be the feature of the report of the Clarence Darrow Review Board, which will go to President Roosevelt either Saturday or Monday.

The report will give the President a complete story of the findings of the board with respect to all complaints heard by it, together with specific recommendations for individual codes. It is believed that the contents of the report will go far to confirm charges brought by Senators Borah and Nye that the NRA is creating a monopoly.

While there is much speculation, especially among the picture men, as to the exact nature of the report, nothing definite is known.

Flood of Operations Hits Picture Colony

The hospitals are cleaning up on the picture business these days. Victor McLaglen is in Hollywood Hospital, where he was operated on Tuesday. Watterson Rothacker underwent an operation on his arm in Good Samaritan the same day, and Sam Engle, writer for Twentieth Century, went into the Cedars of Lebanon yesterday.

Marks to Supervise

Clarence Marks is understood set to become a supervisor at Universal, going up to a berth as head of a comedy unit from the writing staff.

New York REVIEWS

"THIS MAN IS MINE"

RKO prod.; director, John Cromwell; writers, Ann Morrison Chapin, Jane Murfin

Music Hall Theatre

Mirror: Splendidly played by a finished cast, smartly dialogued and smoothly directed. "This Man is Mine" is a highly entertaining representative of the marriage problem movie.

World-Telegram: The sets in "This Man is Mine" are stunning, the direction is expert and the cast, which includes, besides Miss Dunne, Ralph Bellamy, Constance Cummings, Kay Johnson, Sidney Blackmer and Charles Starrett, is excellent. All they need, really, is a good story. Now is that asking too much?

Herald-Tribune: Miss Dunne is excellent, her supporting cast is quite good, the dialogue is frequently amusing and sensible, and so the photoplay becomes one of the things you can see without pain and enjoy without too much excitement.

American: Pretty well devoid of action, the vehicle is obviously a filmed stage play, with a first act devoted to exposition and the establishment of characters, a pretty good second curtain and a third stanza that falls into shreds as it washes up the various situations and leaves things in status quo ante bellum, so to speak.

Times: It is a mediocre, verbose picture, which might possibly have made a good light comedy or perhaps a farce.

Journal: The picture consists almost entirely of conversation. The players form into small groups and have lengthy talks about what has happened, what is happening and what is going to happen.

Sun: A very talkative little film it is. This play, possibly effective upon the stage, hardly seems to be screen material.

News: Wherever the conversation gets out of its ethereal atmosphere, the circumstances of the plot jump out to shake your last fibre of credulity.

Post: Even if there were anything worthwhile in the story, "This Man Is Mine" could hardly survive the banalities of the writing and direction. Nor could we think of a less interesting group of people than that so uninterestingly played by all in the cast save Miss Cummings.

"LOOKING FOR TROUBLE"

20th Century prod.; director, William Wellman; writers, J. R. Bren, Leonard Praskins.

Rivoli Theatre

Journal: It's lightly entertaining comedy, and moves fast. Oakie, who's become a bit portly, repeats on the Southern drawl that he first tried out in "Too Much Harmony."

Post: It is a wild and incredible story, made less than praiseworthy by the cowshed quality of its humor. Spencer Tracy, Jack Oakie, Constance Cummings and others are utterly wasted on a cheap and shoddily handled story.

World-Telegram: However far-fetched the film becomes at times, it at least moves rapidly, so that the story's absurdities are for the most part forgotten in the whirlwind pace at which they take place. The result is fair-to-middling entertainment.

Herald-Tribune: The acting is quite good and the film has a lot of vitality, but it would have been more entertaining, I imagine, had it been a trifle more restrained.

Times: Mr. Tracy does all that is possible to make his part believable. Mr. Oakie helps matters by his comic behavior. Miss Cummings has a thankless task in acting the gril.

News: Perhaps it's a bit too exciting. In any event it's hardly plausible. Yet the laughs come often and easily enough to keep the audience amused and satisfied.

Sun: It is unabashedly an action picture, with no time to waste on subtleties, and, in its own careless high speed way, it's quite a jolly picture.

American: Live wire entertainment in more ways than one, this electrifying comedy drama has all it takes to make excellent movie amusement.

Mirror: It is filled with laughs, with thrills and action. Red-blooded and masculine, it is a spirited comedy which will entertain the men.

OPEN FORUM

April 17, 1934.

The Hollywood Reporter:

I notice in this morning's issue of The Reporter at the top of the last column on page 2, an item regarding Electrical Research Products obtaining 2600 exhibitors to sign what you refer to as "the Double R contracts." In this it is stated that the Double R contract is the one which requires the exhibitor to release Erpi from any possible liability as a result of alleged monopolistic practices.

This is entirely incorrect, as what you refer to as the Double R contract are Repair and Replacement contracts which we offer to exhibitors for a stipulated charge per week, under which we furnish them all the repair and replacement parts required for their Western Electric equipment during the period of the contract. This Double R contract is not in lieu of any original agreement, but is an addition thereto and is in no form in the nature of a release from liability. The contract has proven most satisfactory to exhibitors.

Knowing that you desire to print only correct statements, I am calling this to your attention.

Yours very sincerely,

GEO. C. PRATT,
Vice-President.

'SPRINGTIME' DELIGHTFUL; 'STRICTLY DYNAMITE' POOR

Orchids Due Cast, Director, Writers

"SPRINGTIME FOR HENRY"
(Fox)

Direction .....Frank Tuttle
Author .....Benn W. Levy
Adaptation .....Frank Tuttle and Keene Thompson
Photography .....John Seitz
Cast: Otto Kruger, Nancy Carroll, Nigel Bruce, Heather Angel, Herbert Mundin.

The Fox picture, "Springtime For Henry," is a charming, impudent, little bit of propaganda for the pursuit of life, love and happiness. It is utterly delightful, completely amusing, and grand entertainment.

It is a gay dig at the lengths to which a man, otherwise sane, will go for the sake of love, and it is a beautiful satiric sneer at the ease with which an experienced man can be hoodwinked by "a good, pure, innocent woman."

All in good fun, it is a persuasive gesture toward a little wickedness. Henry gets along all right when he is himself. Too susceptible to women, who find him irresistible, he is the most popular man in his club, the most sought-after bachelor in town, and even his employees at his automobile factory are fond of him.

But a "good" woman changes all that. Just because it is Spring, and Henry finds his secretary attractive, he persuades himself that he is in love with her and should reform and elevate himself to her standard of living, which is pure, dull, and has a vegetarian flavor. Instantly he gets into all sorts of trouble and loses all his friends. The climax comes when the wife of his best friend, in love with him and horrified at the change in his life, inveigles him into taking her to a meeting at the Ray of Hope Mission and there gives testimony about his spiritual uplift that results in one of the best free-for-all fights ever staged, and the re-reformation of Henry.

Otto Kruger never has been more charming than as Henry. His performance, a clever blending of the sublime and the ridiculous, is a miracle of contrast. Nigel Bruce, as the dumb, dull friend who finally wins the dumb, dull secretary, turns in a characterization that is wholly amusing and artistically superb. Nancy Carroll as his wife, who likes Henry better, has a new poise and dignity and is very well cast. Heather Angel is astonishingly convincing as the secretary, and Herbert Mundin is funny as the valet.

Frank Tuttle did two jobs well. He adapted the Benn W. Levy play, with Keene Thompson, and he also directed, achieving one of the best comedies seen in a long time. John Seitz photographed the picture well, and the art direction deserves raves.

Exhibitors should welcome this film. It's swell Spring tonic for the box-office.

Earning His Money

Leo Carrillo, since he signed a new term deal with MGM five days ago, has officiated at five civic banquets, a breakfast club meeting and three luncheons — all as MGM's representative. He has not been assigned to a picture as yet.

Max Gordon to Take RKO Center Theatre

New York.—The discussions that have been going on relative to the future of the RKO Center Theatre seem to have ended with the belief that Max Gordon will take over the house instead of Arch Selwyn and Harold B. Franklin, as previously announced.

Gordon plans to turn the house into a legitimate theatre, opening it with his forthcoming "Waltzes from Vienna." Hassard Short will stage this musical, which has been a great hit abroad. He also intends to stage "Three Sisters," the Kern-Hammerstein operetta that opened recently in London.

Hec Turnbull Estate Goes to Relatives

New York.—The will of Hector Turnbull, filed for probate here, disposed of an estate valued at more than $10,000.

A sister, Mrs. Isabel Turnbull Cooley, of New Hope, Pa., receives a legacy of $1,000. The residue was left to four sisters and a brother, Jean Westwood Turnbull, Mary Elizabeth Turnbull and Margaret McP. Turnbull, of New Hope; Mrs. Alice Turnbull Stratton and Donald R. Turnbull, of New York.

Cabanne Wanted For Monogram's 'Jane Eyre'

Monogram is closing a deal with Christy Cabanne to direct "Jane Eyre," and is awaiting a clearance from Radio, to whom Cabanne is committed to pilot "West Point."

Starting date on the Radio picture is expected to be set sufficiently in the future to permit Cabanne to direct the Monogram production.

Moses Quits Columbia

New York.—Vivian Moses, who has been handling special publicity and exploitation for Columbia Pictures for the past few months, has resigned. Harold Davis Emerson, also in Columbia's publicity, leaves the company April 20.

Halsey Goes to 'U'

Forrest Halsey was signed by Universal yesterday to work on his own original story, "Alias Mary Jones." Henry Henigson is supervising.

Kramer Back with U.A.

New York.—Earl Kramer has rejoined United Artists and will handle the distribution of British pictures in this country.

Cast Unable to Cope With Weak Story

"STRICTLY DYNAMITE"
(Radio)

Direction .....Elliott Nugent
Original.....Robert T. Colwell and Robert A. Simon
Screen Play.....Maurine Watkins and Ralph Spence
Added Dialogue.....Milton Raison and Jack Harvey
Photography .....Edward Cronjager
Cast: Jimmy Durante, Lupe Velez, Norman Foster, William Gargan, Marian Nixon, Mills Brothers, Eugene Pallette, Minna Gombell, Sterling Holloway, Leila Bennett, Stanley Fields, Tom Kennedy, Franklin Pangborn, Irene Franklin, Berton Churchill, Jackie Searl.

This is an attempted radio satire that fails to jell either as satire or as entertainment. Other than telling a simple little tale of a lad who couldn't stand success, there is no plot, just a series of more or less disconnected gags. Vague and meandering, it starts nowhere and ends in the same place.

What there is of a story opens with the struggles of a small-town author in New York. His wife interests an agent and, because a radio comic is in need of a ghost writer, the boy is given copies of all the old joke books in existence and sold as a gag man. Overnight he becomes the talk of the town and, when the comic's hotcha girl goes on the make, he loses his head. There is an indefinite suggestion of monkey business in Atlantic City. Then, again overnight, he is washed up by his wife, the comic, the hot number and the agent. The situation is saved when one of his old poems is sent the comic by mistake, and what he had intended seriously is taken as evidence of humorous genius.

It is a mistake to label Jimmy Durante as a funny man. An audience prefers to laugh at him rather than with him. Consequently much of his familiar material falls flat in this picture. Lupe Velez has precious little to do as Durante's radio team-mate. Lupe has outgrown these straight vamp parts.

Norman Foster and Marian Nixon have the nearest opportunities afforded by the script to deliver characterizations. They are both very good. William Gargan is sacrificed in the agent's assignment. And why so much lip make-up, Bill?

Sterling Holloway registers the only solid hit in the piece. It is a walk-on part, but he walks away with it. The others are merely one, two or three-scene roles.

"Strictly Dynamite" has all the earmarks of too many writers, all with different ideas. Elliott Nugent's direction was not able to weave the many conflicting elements into anything that approaches a whole. But it was probably not his fault. Photography by Edward Cronjager is standard.

With the strength of the cast names, you will experience no trouble in selling this to the public. And, of course, there is always the possibility somebody may like it.

Yesterday in New York with HELEN GWYNN

We have finally heard a picture man admit that there is plenty of picture material to be had if one will only take the time to find it. And these old ears were both astonished and gratified to hear it, particularly from one who is in a position to buy. Somehow or other it has always seemed to us that, with the thousands of stories, novels and plays that have been published, it is almost impossible that there should be a dearth of material. And there must be hundreds of stories and books at least, that even if they cannot be used in their entirety, should give forth an idea that could be used. Add to this the fact that there are thousands of people writing today, many of them well-schooled in the technique of pictures, and material is the one thing that should not be lacking. It's a question of vision and the ability to get out of established ruts and having the courage of one's convictions. There is no subject that pictures cannot sell to the public—if the production is good and there is salesmanship in back of it.

We have heard people say that "the public doesn't want war pictures." So "Forgotten Men" ran eight weeks at the Criterion. We've heard them say "the public doesn't want pictures without women." So "The Lost Patrol" is packing them in at the Rialto. We've heard them say "the public is tired of triangles, of sophisticated dramas." So "Rip Tide" stays three weeks at the Capitol. And that's just to give examples in current productions. You've all heard stories, true stories of the sneers that have greeted certain story buys because of this belief in what the public DOESN'T want and the amazing success most of them have had. Remember how they laughed when they started to produce "Little Women"? The public doesn't know what it wants until pictures give it to them. And if it's good—the public wants it.

The campaign is certainly on to try to get Mary Taylor a break on the stage or in pictures. The World-Telegram interviewed her in a Page Two feature story and, quoting Elsa Maxwell, term her "the most beautiful girl in New York." Well, depending on whom she goes around with, if she's not the most beautiful, she's the next thing to it. . . . Things we're tired of seeing rehashed in print include the Pickford-Fairbanks opera bouffe, Rudy Vallee (incidentally, Alice Faye refused to be photographed with him in the vain hope that it would stop stories) and Margie King. . . . Advertising is being very carefully watched indeed since they passed the buck on picture morality to that department, but take a look at the note that was received on an "ad" for a current picture: "The posterior of this woman is too prominent. Please change the can!" Such language from a censor.

spoke at the annual meeting of the Westchester County Teachers Association.

Mr. Lewin pointed out that already a list of twenty-eight classics are slated to be produced by the big picture companies. Among these he said were "Joan of Arc," "Pride and Prejudice," "What Every Woman Knows," "Vanity Fair," "David Copperfield" and "Gulliver's Travels."

He urged that government subsidy for production of the classics be advocated, and stated that if such were done and sufficient pictures of this type were made, every school auditorium in the country soon would be equipped with sound picture apparatus.

Two Noted Ex-Stars Buried on Same Day

Yesterday marked the earthly ending for two former motion picture celebrities, both of whom had been practically forgotten by the industry in which they once gained fame.

One was Karl Dane, former carpenter who rose for a brief period from obscurity to stardom, then hit the picture skids and shot himself when all hope was gone. The other was George A. Billings, famous for his portrayals of Abraham Lincoln on stage and screen, who died in obscurity at the Soldiers Home in Sawtelle.

Both were buried yesterday. Only a mere handful of picture people attended Dane's funeral. None were present when Billings was laid to rest.

tions" in that was natural and seemed to belong.

"It seems to me," he continues, "that when a picture is evidently just ordinary in entertainment, someone connected with its making thinks a shot in the arm of sex, wild party or shotgun wedding will pep it up, and it only makes matters worse.

"Someone has said that dirt is anything out of its proper place and I believe that applies to motion pictures. A picture may be sexy and not offensive because it is that kind of a picture. Murder, theft and drunkenness may all be in pictures if they fit.

"My slant may be wrong because I don't know much about this business. But I do know that when we have what we think is a good, clean picture, fit for the whole family, we would like to be able to advertise it that way without fear of having from one to half a dozen scenes of dirt that add nothing to the picture and may cause some customer to ask us where we got the idea it was a clean picture."

So, Mr. Producer, there is information straight from the feed box. And, naturally, there is only one answer:

BETTER AND CLEANER PICTURES.

PUBLIC OPINION THE BEST CENSOR, SAYS MRS. BELMONT

Explains Aims of Research Council

New York.—Lasting reforms in screen productions are due to result from the failure of the motion picture industry to live up to its self-adopted code forbidding the exhibition of brutalizing and indecent pictures, according to Mrs. August Belmont, president of the newly-formed Motion Picture Research Council.

Mrs. Belmont declares that this failure on the part of the picture industry has resulted in a widespread resentment, which will be crystallized by her Council into a general policy which, she believes, will bring sufficient pressure to bear upon producers to force them to make more acceptable films.

Many of the stories depicted in pictures, she declares, "may belong in the lower depths of life, perhaps in the clinic or in the jails, but why do we have to see them in every hamlet and town of the nation under the guise of entertainment?"

Mrs. Belmont, speaking of whether or not Will H. Hays has been successful in his attempts to censor the films of the industry, declared that such work as he does is "no more censorship than if you say you will give up candy during Lent."

Particularly did she emphasize the point that her Council does not want official censorship. Instead, she declares, it is planning to secure a nation-wide membership of individuals and groups who believe in the fundamental idea that citizens have the right to choose the type of motion picture they wish to have shown in their community, but who desire that that type be wholesome and fit for their families. Thus the Council hopes, by the force of an educated public opinion, to bring about a condition whereby the producers will find that they must furnish cleaner and more wholesome pictures or else they will find no one going to see them.

Cantor Tribe Arriving

Eddie Cantor gets in today by train from New York, accompanied by his wife, two daughters and Fred Kohlmar, Sam Goldwyn's production assistant who has been conferring on the picture with Cantor in the East. Comic wound up his radio program last Sunday.

Ceballos Out of Para.

Having completed his work on the added dance numbers for "Murder at the Vanities," Larry Ceballos yesterday checked off the Paramount payroll. Picture, with the exception of the dance number, was completed some time ago.

Hoffman-Watters Out

Renaud Hoffman and George Manker Watters have finished the adaptation and dialogue on "The End of the World" for Paramount and have checked off the payroll. Albert Lewis is the producer.

Tucson Makes Harlow A Deputy Sheriff

The city of Tucson handed a pair of handcuffs to bandit Dillinger when he visited there, but to Jean Harlow it has handed a gold badge, telling the world she is now a deputy sheriff. That gives her the right to carry a gun.

Conway Tearle Gets 'Fifteen Wives' Lead

Conway Tearle was signed yesterday by Maury Cohen to play the lead in "Fifteen Wives," a murder mystery which Cohen is producing for Invincible Pictures at Universal.

In addition to Tearle, Cohen has lined up a cast including Natalie Moorhead, Raymond Hatton, Noel Francis, John Wray, Ralf Harolde, Oscar Apfel and Robert Frazier. Frank Strayer is directing from an original story by Charles S. Belden.

MGM's Jungle Party Hops Off For Brazil

After a day's rest in San Juan, Porto Rico, yesterday, MGM's "Jungle Red Man" exploration party left by plane for Para, Brazil. From there they go 1,700 miles up the Amazon River to Yarawate to set the base for the expedition which follows later.

Burtis on 'Mosaic'

Thomson Burtis yesterday joined the Warner writing staff to develop the screen play on the G. B. Stern novel, "Mosaic." Writer has an option on the purchase of the story and has included it in his understanding with the company.

Stooges on Personals

Howard, Fine and Howard have been signed to open tomorrow at the Fox Warfield Theatre, San Francisco, for a week's personal appearance. Comedy trio return to make their second short for Columbia.

Dinehart at Fox

Alan Dinehart was signed by Fox yesterday for a featured role in "Always Honest," which the Sol Wurtzel unit is producing. Harry Spingler, of the Small-Landau office, negotiated the contract.

Gelsey-Erickson Team

Erwin Gelsey and Carl Erickson were yesterday assigned to write the screen play of "Miss Pacific Fleet" at Warners. Team is working under the supervision of Lou Edelman.

Denny for 'Arabella'

Extending the player's contract, Radio yesterday signed Reginald Denny for an important spot in "Arabella," which William Seiter directs under Glendon Allvine's supervision.

Hampton To Start Here

New York.—David Hampton is leaving for Hollywood within the next three weeks to establish a branch office there.

Rearguard of Exhib Convention Leaving

Ed Kuykendall, MPTOA president, and Abe Lichtman, Washington, D.C., exhibitor, left last night for San Francisco, where they will be the guests of Morgan Walsh and address the exhibitors' association of Northern California. After a three-day visit, they will head for New York.

M. E. Comerford and Walter Vincent, the two remaining exhibitor executives besides Fred Meyer, who is at the Cedars of Lebanon Hospital, remain here for a week before moving off.

Child Player Signed For Fox's 'She Was a Lady'

Edith Fellows, eight-year-old actress, was signed yesterday by Fox to appear in "She Was a Lady" with Helen Twelvetrees. Al Rockett will direct.

This is an original story by Elizabeth Cobb Brody, daughter of Irvin S. Cobb. Definite starting date has not been announced.

Hatton to Invincible

Raymond Hatton has been cast for the featured role of the detective sergeant in "Fifteen Wives," an Invincible production. Hatton recently completed work in "Mad Honeymoon" for Liberty.

Garrett Leaves Para.

Oliver H. P. Garrett completed his work on "One Way Ticket" for B. P. Schulberg at Paramount yesterday and checked off the lot. Picture is planned for Sylvia Sidney.

New 'Firebrand' Title

Darryl Zanuck has switched the title on "The Firebrand" to "The Affairs of Cellini." Constance Bennett and Fredric March have the star spots in this Twentieth Century picture.

Jarrett Renewed

Arthur Jarrett's contract with the Union Oil Company for a series of radio broadcast every Thursday night on the company's program has been renewed.

are saying that the new deal can be put through by May 15, although this seems hardly possible.

The plan as at present constituted, it is learned, provides for the satisfaction of both bondholders and common creditors. The common stock probably will remain as is, but there will be an issue of debentures and another of preferred stock ahead of the common to take care of claims.

It is understood that the company is in better shape than for a long time and that, during the past year, its earnings have amounted to a dollar a share.

Educational-Amity Settle Their Suit

New York.—Educational Pictures has settled its suit with Amity, agreeing to turn over to the latter for distribution through Amity exchanges six Bob Steele Westerns, one Ken Maynard and "The Man Called Back."

Amity has also acquired the distribution rights to a mystery drama, called "Before Morning," which stars Leo Carrillo. It was produced by Stage and Screen Productions last Fall.

Sol Lesser Moving to Sennett Lot Next Week

Sol Lesser moves his unit to the Mack Sennett studio next Wednesday to start preparation on "Peck's Bad Boy," which goes into work there May 21.

Frank Melton, production manager, Eddie Cline, director, Frank Good, cameraman, and Bill Plant, publicity man, go to the new spot. Lesser keeps the balance of his organization in the Taft building offices.

Warners Rush 'Miracle'

GOLDWYN-WARNER CLASH

TRADEVIEWS by FRANK POPE

•THERE are rumors afloat, both in Hollywood and in New York, that the many stumbling blocks that are being found in the pathway of the motion picture code are being placed there deliberately for the purpose of embarrassing the Administration.

It seems hardly credible that there are any leaders in this business who, after all the promises of co-operation they have made, would plan deliberately to prevent the proper functioning of the code. They may not be WITH the policies of the Administration; in fact, it is known that some of them are not, but it was thought that they would give these policies an even break, that they would be content to watch and not toss a wrench into the works.

This publication has no definite knowledge that this is being done, but it is evident that Washington believes something of the kind is on foot because there have been under-cover investigators here for some time, checking into various aspects of the situation. One report is already on its way to Washington which is said to contain plenty of dynamite about the film code's troubles and who is causing them.

Exhibitors have told these investigators that they have squawked about some of the things they have been advised to do, and have been told to shut up if they want to be able to get pictures.

It is pointed out that the film industry code has been of more trouble to the NRA than that of almost any other business and still is not functioning. There have been scores of complaints filed by labor sources, but the producers have ignored them. As yet, not a producer has appeared at any hearing given on these complaints. Some time ago a Studio Labor Committee was appointed, but it never found anything to do and was finally dropped and replaced by the present inactive one.

Possibly all these rumors come from disgruntled individuals and groups, but usually where there is smoke, there is fire. If there is any foundation for the reports, there might be some fingers burned before many weeks pass.

Harry Cohn May Buy Out Jack with Dupont

New York.—Rumors of the Dupont deal for Columbia are still in the air. The latest is that Harry Cohn wants to buy Jack out, but doesn't want to use his own money, so is willing to listen to a deal for Dupont to do the financing.

Universal Meeting Elects Directors

New York.—At the annual meeting of Universal, held yesterday, J. Myer Shine and Simon J. Klee were elected directors for the first preferred stock, and R. H. Cochrane for the second preferred. Directors chosen for the common stockholders are Carl Laemmle Sr., P. D. Cochrane, C. B. Paine, Helen Hughes, James R. Grainger and Willard F. McKay. The directors will elect officers of the corporation within the next few days.

New York.—Trans-Lux Daylight Picture Screen Corporation reports net profits for 1933 of $114,926 after deducting taxes and charges, compared with $93,175 for 1932.

Buzz Berkeley's Services Again Bone Of Contention Between The Two Producers

The feud between Samuel Goldwyn and Warners broke out again yesterday. As occurred eight months ago, the battle once more has Busby Berkeley as the bone of contention.

Goldwyn touched off the fireworks Wednesday when his attorneys, Loeb, Walker and Loeb, asked Superior Court Judge Frank C. Collier to order Warners to stop using the dance director immediately, although he is working on "Dames."

Judge Collier granted a temporary restraining order after Goldwyn alleged that Warners are violating their contract with him for a two-picture per year loan on Berkeley and are pre-

Reuter's News Agency To Open Branch Here

Reuter's, one of the largest news agencies in the world, has decided to open a Hollywood office.

Yesterday Colonel R. A. Duckworth-Ford arrived from the Philippines for the purpose of establishing the local branch of the agency.

Wells Root to MGM

MGM yesterday signed Wells Root to adapt "All Good Americans," a play by Laura and S. J. Perelman. Lucien Hubbard produces. Deal was negotiated by Bren, Orsatti and Marx.

South Carolina Kills Picture Tax

Charleston, S. C.—Motion picture exhibitors throughout South Carolina were rejoicing today over the repeal yesterday by the State Legislature of the ten per cent admission tax for theatres.

This tax was imposed in 1918 and for years motion picture and theatre men of the State have been vainly attempting to have it repealed, inasmuch as they claimed it was put in as a war-time measure. Exhibitors feel the repeal will boost theatre attendance tremendously.

New Theatre Will Show Only British Pictures

New York.—A new motion picture theatre, the Westminster Cinema, opens tonight in West 49th street.

A syndicate, Westminster Cinema, Inc., has been formed to operate the house, which will present British pictures exclusively on a continuous run policy, but with reserved seats for the evening performances. Two Gaumont British pictures are scheduled for the opening program—"The Prince of Wales" and "Just Smith."

Colleen Moore Sought For 'Scarlet Letter'

Larry Darmour is negotiating with Colleen Moore for the lead in "The Scarlet Letter," which Majestic gets into work in the next month. Robert Vignola will direct from a script by Leonard Fields and David Silverstein.

'U' Borrows Morgan

Universal yesterday borrowed Frank Morgan from MGM for the lead opposite Elizabeth Young, previously borrowed from Paramount, in "There's Always Tomorrow." Edward Sloman directs from his own original screen play when the picture starts Monday.

DRAMATISTS SEE HELP IN BERCOVICI DECISION

Because of the stir created among writers and dramatists by the decision of the New York Court of Appeals in the suit between Konrad Bercovici and C. B. DeMille over the ownership of the talking picture rights of the novel, "The Volga Boatman," the Dramatists' Guild has sent out the following opinion:

"While in this case, because the author had parted with his dramatic rights, the decision was adverse to him, we feel that the effect of the decision is to strengthen the position of other authors with respect to the ownership of talking picture rights. It is clear from this decision that, even though an author parted with the motion picture rights before talking pic-

THE LOW DOWN

A famous novelist and screen writer was asked recently to read the script of a big production with a Civil War background. He read it. When he had finished, they asked him:

"Do you think it will offend the South?"

"Yes," replied the writer, "And the North too!" (!)

Victor Jory has just moved into a new house in Pasadena, of all places. He lived in one in Pasadena before—and the place had six thousand books in it! When he decided to move, his landlady decided to sell the books and asked him to "take a few along." Jory bought part of the collection—a mere hundred tomes. He got them for fifty cents apiece and says that among them are a few real treasures—but he's going to read 'em—not sell 'em, he says.

But so far as coming divorce proceedings and what they might lead to—why, the gander has plenty on the goose, too. At the moment the red-haired actress is seeing more than enough of a certain producer—but very much under cover, of course! Look! We're being careful, too!

New York REVIEWS

"AS THE EARTH TURNS"

Warners prod.; director, Alfred E. Green; writers, Gladys Hasty Carroll, Ernest Pascal.

Strand Theatre

World-Telegram: Here is a film depicting the real America and one that is well worth your support and attention. Each of the characters is finely drawn, and each is excellently played. The direction, photography and staging are all of the high order, and the locale during the seasons of winter, spring ,summer and autumn is convincingly presented.

American: A sweet rural romance of the New England farm country, "As the Earth Turns" is an effort marked by sincerity and success.

Times: It is a picture that gives food for thought. Many of its episodes are which is unique as a Hollywood film. Rural types are figures in the story. They are skillfully drawn and well acted.

Herald-Tribune: "As the Earth Turns" is interesting, if not breathtaking, drama. There is none of the customary manufactured menace of the run of screen dramas. The action and mood of the story seem honestly governed, not so much from plot motives as from a genuine reaction to environment.

Times It is a picture that gives food for thought. Many of its episodes are marked with the same reticence and sincerity which distinguished the book, but occasionally the film becomes a trifle too blatant. Alfred E. Green, the director, gives effective glimpses of farm work during the four seasons.

Post: The Warner Bros., with considerable aid from Alfred Green's direction and Ernest Pascal's adaptation, have made an interesting and credible picture of Gladys Carroll's book. The film is not exciting; for a good portion of it is uneventful, but the picture comes forth as an honest screen production because there is no attempt to exaggerate or sentimentalize; the characters are drawn with a restrained hand, and they happen to be interesting enough in their respective selves to compensate for what would otherwise be a lack of dramatic fervor.

Journal: "As the Earth Turns" departs from the customary formula of movie plots. It's a simple, quiet and effective mirroring of life on a Maine farm.

Sun: "As the Earth Turns," with its quiet beauty of setting and theme, is a refreshing item in this spring season's crop of pictures. It is as welcome as the first garden asparagus and strawberries. It is well acted, this story, and directed with a pleasant lack of pretension.

Para. Changes Date of District Managers Meet

New York.—Paramount has changed the date for the district managers' meeting at the Edgewater Beach Hotel in Chicago from April 21-22 to April 28-29. This meeting is to precede the general annual sales convention in Los Angeles on June 18-20.

At the Chicago meeting George J. Schaefer will preside, assisted by Neil Agnew, Stanley Waite and J. J. Unger.

'MANY HAPPY RETURNS' RIOT; 'UNCERTAIN LADY' IS TAME

Audience Howls at Burns and Allen Pic

"MANY HAPPY RETURNS"
(Paramount)

Direction .....Norman McLeod
Original .....Lady Mary Cameron
Screen Play.....J. P. McEvoy and Claude Binyon
Adaptation .....Keene Thompson and Ray Harris
Music and Lyrics....Arthur Johnston and Sam Coslow
Photography .....Henry Sharp
Cast: George Burns, Gracie Allen, Joan Marsh, George Barbier, Ray Milland, Egon Brecher, William Demarest, Franklin Pangborn, Morgan Wallace, Larry Adler, Stanley Fields, John Kelly, Johnny Arthur, Kenneth Thomson, Velos and Yolanda, Guy Lombardo's Royal Canadians.

Never have Gracie Allen and George Burns been given such an opportunity as in "Many Happy Returns." The piece is neatly tailored to fit their brand of comedy. And how it fits! It's a near riot from beginning to end. "Many Happy Returns" should spell just that at the box-office.

George Barbier comes back from Europe to discover a wrecking crew tearing down his store. His daughter, Gracie, has ordered it because she wants to build an aviary on the site. He has her psycho-analyzed, but she drives the psycho-analyist crazy.

All else failing, the father makes a deal with George Burns, radio announcer for Guy Lombardo's orchestra, to marry Gracie and take her away. He offers $10 a mile and the further the better. Burns is headed for Hollywood and pictures with Lombardo, so Gracie is taken along.

On the same train is Gracie's sane sister, winner of a beauty contest, also Hollywood-bound with her fiance. The father orders her kidnapped rather than see her enter the movies. Gracie is talked into substituting for the missing contest winner, which leads to a hilarious scene wherein she upsets an entire studio. The finale has Burns and Gracie aboard a steamship headed for foreign shores and Burns is computing his profits at the increased rate of $30 a mile.

Burns and Allen are, of course, the picture. They score in every appearance and Gracie is photographed to excellent advantage. Joan Marsh does well in the limited role of the sister, and George Barbier delivers his standard job. Others are uniformly good.

The direction of Norman McLeod strikes and maintains a fast farce pace. Music by Johnston and Coslow has at least one sure-fire hit tune in the number played in the Pullman car. The rendition is by Lombardo and that means the best. Photography good.

There is a dance routine by Veloz and Yolanda that means but little and should be drastically trimmed. It is one of the few slow spots in an otherwise swiftly-paced comedy wow.

Don't under-rate the drawing power of Burns and Allen in your advance campaign. At the Pomona preview last evening, the audience burst into applause at the sight of their names, a rare demonstration there.

New York.—Business for "Stand Up and Cheer" for its opening day at the Music Hall was approximately $12,000, which is good, but still far from top figures for that house.

Pathe to Distribute Six Vogue Pictures

London.—Confirming the report published exclusively in the Hollywood Reporter, Howard Welsh's new company, Vogue Film Productions, announces the production of six features, to cost around $100,000 cash, for distribution through Pathe Pictures Ltd.

Desmond Tew, general manager of the Archibald Nettleford Productions, will make them for Vogue.

Goldwyn-Warner Clash

venting him from getting the dance director for the next Eddie Cantor picture.

After the Warner attorneys got in their say, the Judge dissolved the order yesterday morning, stating that a hearing had been set for Monday and that it was unreasonable to take Berkeley off the Warner production for the three days.

Warners, according to the complaint, signed Berkeley to a long term ticket October 27, 1932, at the same time agreeing to let Goldwyn have him for two musicals a year in exchange for Goldwyn's prior rights on the director. The Warner-Goldwyn agreement stipulated 45 days notice on his services from Goldwyn.

Abe Lehr sent a registered letter to Warners in January, requesting Berkeley for the first of this month.

"Warners have failed to comply," Goldwyn's complaint states, "and refuse to comply with the terms of the agreement. Warners refused on April 1 and ever since have refused to permit Berkeley to perform any services for Goldwyn or make him available and, on the contrary, ever since April 1 have used the exclusive services of the director in violation of Goldwyn's rights under the terms of the October 27, 1932, contract."

The feud started when Goldwyn is said to have fallen out with Warners last September because of Berkeley and "Roman Scandals." Goldwyn was making "Nana" at that time and had Warren William on loan, but overran his time, and Warners yanked William before the picture was finished. Goldwyn had to re-cast and re-shoot the production.

Good Plot Marred By Poor Handling

"UNCERTAIN LADY"
(Universal)

Direction .....Karl Freund
Adaptation.....Daniel Evans and Martin Brown
Screen Play.....George O'Neil and Doris Anderson
Photography .....Charles Stumar

Universal's "Uncertain Lady" is a very uncertain picture. It never quite makes up its mind whether or not to broaden its comedy into pure farce, and the audience is never quite certain as to who was the most uncertain—the authors, the director, or the cast—about the whole thing.

George O'Neil and Doris Anderson, the authors, brought rather uninspired writing to a good comedy plot, and Karl Freund, the director, was unable to shake off his lethargy except in a few rare instances. The cast, for the most part, wavered between a stubborn determination to see the thing through and discouragement.

Genevieve Tobin is the head of a large business concern, who is so busy that her husband, Edward Everett Horton, finds time to fancy himself in love with Renee Gadd. When they both come to the wife to ask her to divorce him, Miss Tobin says that she will IF they will find her another husband.

Their candidates are not so attractive, so Miss Tobin invites a man (Paul Cavanagh) in whom she really is interested, to her house party in order to arouse Horton's jealousy. And, of course, she falls in love with Cavanagh.

It is unfortunate that the good, workable basis of this comedy is glazed over with unimpressive dialogue and listless direction. The cast really hasn't a chance, although Cavanagh gets the best breaks. Both Miss Tobin and Horton fail to give their usual excellent performances. George Meeker takes advantage of the opportunity for a good characterization. Renee Gadd's acting is pretty obvious. Mary Nash, Donald Reed and Dorothy Peterson have small roles.

Not very many audiences will go for this. Its entertainment value is definitely low.

Helen Hayes Slated As 'Lost Horizons' Star

Helen Hayes is slated to star in "Lost Horizons," the unproduced Harry Segall play which MGM yesterday purchased for $15,000. Deal was handled by William Stephens.

Para. Buys Original

Paramount has purchased a story by Melville Baker and Jack Kirkland, titled "Intimate," as a possible starring vehicle for Miriam Hopkins.

Yesterday in NEW YORK with HELEN GWYNN

Migosh, wot excitement was caused by a tactical error. And your old pal "Schnozzola" Durante was the cause of it all. Durante, as you probably know, will replace Cantor on the Chase and Sanborn hour. (And incidentally, Cantor spent so much time plugging Chase and Sanborn at the testimonial dinner given to Cohan and Harris, that telegrams of protest came in and he was told to stop). Well, anyway, "Palooka" played the State Theatre and, as an added plug for it, a bright p.a. in the Loew offices made a tie-up for much window space with a coffee company, which was okay, only the company happened to be Maxwell House and there was a great big picture of Durante saying: "It's a pleasure to dunk if you have the RIGHT coffee." So they had the right person but the wrong coffee and Chase and Sanborn burned up the wires over it.

It just goes to show you what a really bad title can do to a play. These days, when a show is put on, there never is too much money back of it and unless it "takes" immediately, most of them don't get a chance to build into anything. Well, along came a play called "Brain Sweat," a really revolting title, and we noticed that even on opening night the house was not full and was mainly occupied by those whose business it was to attend. It turned out to be a comedy, and a pretty swell one at that. The critical notices the following day were unanimous in praise, with nip-ups over the performance of Billy Higgins. Three nights later, the show closed. The producers, however, claim that they will re-open it at another theatre but, under the financial arrangements they had made, they couldn't wait for the good word to get around. We still think the title is something to hurdle for the public.

A really inexcusable movie boner crept into "As the Earth Turns." The first sequences of the film go to a great deal of trouble to plant the idea that it's terribly cold—more than twelve below zero, etc., etc. In spite of the cold, however, not once can you see the actors' breaths in the icy air. Guess the actors themselves must have been pretty cold propositions, or maybe the air was penetrating.

London Studios Start Two Important Films

London.—Two big productions have just gone before the cameras in London. They are the London Films-Alex Korda picture, starring Douglas Fairbanks Sr., entitled "The Private Life of Don Juan," with Merle Oberon, Benita Hume and Elsa Lanchester in support; and "Java Head," directed by J. Walter Ruben, for Basil Dean-Associated Talking Pictures, with Elizabeth Allan, John Loder, Edmund Gwenn and George Curzon.

Lombard with Cooper

Carole Lombard has been assigned to "You Belong to Me" at Paramount opposite Gary Cooper.

Reviewing the FAN MAGS

110 pages and cover

COVER DISPLAY....Margaret Sullavan (Universal)

The stories in the May New Movie are like the nursery rhyme—when they're good, they're very, very good, and when they're bad, they're—not so good.

Edwin C. Hill writes a swell portrait, vivid, alive and convincing, in "Hepburn Is Dynamite"; an anonymous article, "Could You Take It As an Extra Girl?" is easy to take as reading matter; another unsigned story, "The Norma Shearer-Irving Thalberg Loves," is good fan mag stuff; Dorothy Manners does right by Isabel Jewell in "Love Moves in on Lee Tracy," and Herb Howe goes beautifully columnistic in "Royalty Is Rampant."

Harry N. Blair has "The Movie Scouts May Get You," a history to date of "discoveries"; Irene Thirer interviews Douglass Montgomery in "Young Man from Hollywood"; and Eric L. Ergenbright concludes his yarn on Wallace Beery, "My Life Until Now."

Grace Kingsley covers the parties; the close-ups this month are fascinating; but the question is, why did the editors waste the page on "Daughter of Will Rogers," by George Wilkins?

Trust Motion Picture to have the unusual in stories.

Read "How the Blind See the Movies," by Eric L. Ergenbright; "Carole Lombard Tells Why Hollywood Marriages Can't Succeed," by Sonia Lee, which is nothing if not frank; "How June Knight, Once an Invalid, Became a Star," by Hal Hall, which is real drama; "The Tortures That Stars Endure," by Robert Fender; "How They Get Baby LeRoy to Do Those Things," by Elisabeth Goldbeck; and "How Warren William Gets Away from It All," by Dorothy Donnell.

Read also Jack Grant's new department, "Movies in the Making."

There is a second story on Carole Lombard—all about her house. It is by Dorothy Calhoun and fans will love it.

Robert Montgomery says the usual things, but says them well in "Don't Let Anyone Tell You Acting Isn't Hard Work," by Gladys Hall; Madge Evans is "The College Boys' Favorite," according to Richard English; Dorothy Manners covers the ground pretty thoroughly in "Is Jean Harlow Hollywood's Most Underpaid Star?" and Jack Grant writes about "Hollywood Recognizes Russia."

The effect of the film capital on two players is discussed by Franc Dillon in "Hollywood Is Ruining Me As an Actress" (Gloria Stuart), and by Gladys Hall in "Hollywood Hasn't Ruined Barthelmess, BUT—"

The stories are all good and out of the ordinary.

Webb To Be Examined In Suit By Embassy

New York.—Stuart Webb, president of Pathe, will be examined by Fitelson & Mayer before the trial on April 24 of the suit brought by Embassy Pictures.

The suit is to restrain Pathe from distributing re-issues of Harold Lloyd comedies.

Melford Lesser Mgr.

Frank Melford is the production manager on Sol Lesser's "Peck's Bad Boy," and not Frank Melton, as erroneously reported yesterday.

Harry Brandt Gets Two More Theatres

New York.—The Brandt interests now have 22 theatres in their chain, having just acquired the City Hall in Manhattan, and the New Broadway in Brooklyn. Brandt is negotiating for nine more houses in his attempt to build his chain into one of the most important in New York.

A deal has also been set by which Brandt will book pictures for the Republic, a burlesque house which runs pictures occasionally.

'U' Picture Rushed In To Help Pantages

Because of a shortage of pictures, Pantages Theatre yesterday opened with Universal's "Uncertain Lady," which has just been completed, but which has not been finished long enough to be previewed.

As an accommodation to the theatre, which couldn't find a satisfactory picture, Universal let it go in without previewing.

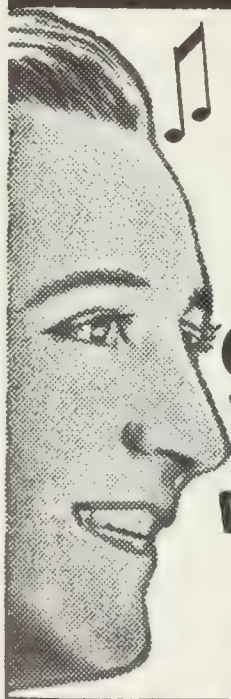
Sam Engel Going to MGM

Recuperating at the Cedars of Lebanon Hospital, following an operation, Sam Engel is set to report to MGM on loan from Twentieth Century when he checks out.

Fazenda to Fox

Louise Fazenda, signed to an MGM ticket, goes to Fox for her first assignment for the comedy lead in "Caravan," the Erik Charel production.

2600-Pound Star in N.Y. For Personals



New York.—The only 2600-pound movie star has arrived in New York to do personal appearances. She is Mary the Rhino, and will appear with the MGM picture, "Tarzan and His Mate," at the Capitol. She was honored here by an escort of motorcycle cops.

Next For Hepburn

Katharine Hepburn's first picture for Radio upon her return in June will be the Lester Cohen story, "Break of Hearts," which was once before slated for her and John Barrymore. Pan Berman supervises.

PIX WITHOUT PICTURES

TRADEVIEWS by FRANK POPE

•THE efforts of the producers and exhibitors to rid the picture industry of the double feature evil will be, if successful, one of the longest strides ever made by the business toward increased prosperity and, what is even more important, better pictures.

At the recent conference between the MPTOA executive committee and the major producers, both sides agreed that there were two important things to be eliminated—smut and double bills. Each promised to work to that desired end. Later when the MPTOA crowd met the independent producers, the exhibs maintained the same attitude—double features must go. That undoubtedly was a bit painful to some of the small producers, but the exhibs were adamant.

There are so many evils in the double feature practice that it is hard to see how anyone can support it. The necessity of making enough features to supply double bills means poorer average pictures, because, with the number that must be turned out, not enough time can be given to the important productions. The industry simply can not produce enough GOOD PICTURES to satisfy the double bill demands and, in trying to do so, they have to skimp on the whole program.

BETTER PICTURES give the answer to all the ills of the industry. Better pictures mean longer runs, larger grosses, satisfied audiences. Better pictures will draw people back to the theatres not keep them going away as the type shown on double bills does.

The motion picture patrons are not saps. The day has passed when they laid down their money for anything and everything on the screen. They want ENTERTAINMENT now and they don't get it from duals.

The most important party to this effort to kill off doubles is the exhibitor. If he refuses to play two or more features on the same bill, the studios won't make so many pictures. But so long as he plays them, the type suitable for duals will be made. Demand always governs supply. If the demand is for quantity, the consumer will get quantity. If the demand is for quality, the producer will have to supply that.

The producers are willing. They

Thirty-Hour Bill Gaining Strength

Washington. — The Connery thirty-hour bill is gaining so much support that it is believed certain it will pass when it comes to a vote, unless the Wagner bill, establishing a permanent National Labor Board, becomes a reality.

Mae West Will Play 'Queen of Sheba'

Mae West will star in "Queen of Sheba" as her next production, which William LeBaron will handle.

Paramount will use the David Boehm story, "For My Country," for the title, purchasing the property through the William Morris office yesterday. The star has cancelled plans for personal appearances and goes to work on the screen play of her picture immediately on the finish of "It Ain't No Sin."

Publicity Depts. of U.A. And 20th Century Merge

New York.—The publicity departments of United Artists and Twentieth Century in New York have been consolidated. Karl Krug has resigned and Bernard Simon is now in charge of publicity, under Hal Horne.

Swanson Draw Is Fair

New York.—Gloria Swanson's personal appearance at the Paramount yesterday put perhaps $5,000 into the house. This is not considered very hot, but the attendance is expected to build from women fans later.

Foreign Producers Experiment With Films Which Have Only Noise And Sub-titles

London.—Motion pictures without pictures! That sounds insane, and yet that is just what some of the British and German producers are making. It is all in the nature of an experiment, and a most interesting one, which may mean the end of motion pictures as they are known now and the development of a new form of entertainment.

In Berlin now three picture houses are running films that have only sound and no pictures. Recently in London a film was shown which had merely flashes and spots of light, moving to the rhythm of a melody. At Elstree, a producer is making a picture of the

Clara Kimball Young For 'I Can't Escape'

Max Alexander yesterday signed Clara Kimball Young for a featured spot in "I Can't Escape," which Otto Brower is directing for Beacon Productions. Nat Carr has also been signed for the picture. Onslow Stevens and Lila Lee have the top brackets.

Paramount Takes Up Sylvia Sidney Option

Paramount exercised its option on Sylvia Sidney's contract yesterday and the player starts her third year with the company.

Her next starring vehicle is scheduled to be "One Way Ticket," which the B. P. Schulberg unit produces.

Harry Joe Brown Going to Warners

Jack Warner is reported closing a deal with Harry Joe Brown which will have the vice-president of the Charles R. Rogers unit at Paramount moving into the Warner organization as an associate producer.

Brown has until late next month to go on his Paramount contract and it is understood that he chose the Warner ticket in preference to propositions from two other majors. Warners will have him as a writer, director and producer.

Ulmer Freed From 'U' Contract by Request

Universal yesterday granted the request of Edgar Ulmer for release from his contract, due to difficulties over salary. The director has just finished "The Black Cat," starring Boris Karloff and Bela Lugosi. Ulmer announced he would free lance.

Col. Buys 'Party Wire' And Signs the Author

New York.—Columbia has purchased a story by Vera Caspary and Bruce Manning, called "Party Wire." Miss Caspary has also been signed to a contract, which runs five years.

'U' Wants May Robson

Having closed with Warners for the loan of Mary Astor, Universal is concluding a deal with MGM for the loan of May Robson, both going into "One More River," the Galsworthy script.

McMorrow with Fox

New York—Fox has signed Thomas McMorrow, noted Saturday Evening Post writer, to do an original for Will Rogers. He leaves for Hollywood next week.

CODE AUTHORITY PUTS SCREWS ON EXHIBITORS

New York.—The Motion Picture Code Authority yesterday made public a resolution, which was adopted April 6, and which, in effect, tells exhibitors that, if they do not pay their assessments for the expenses of the code functioning, they will get no product.

The resolution, which was not announced until after the bills for the assessments had been sent out, stated that if any exhibitor fails to pay the amount assessed against his theatre within 30 days, and if the local Grievance Board does not extend that time, "such exhibitor shall refrain from

'Four Walls,' Old Silent, Will Be Remade by MGM

MGM will remake "Four Walls," one of the last silents which the company turned out in 1928 when Jack Gilbert had the lead. (Paul Muni played the role on the stage.

No director, writer or cast has been assigned as yet.

Henry Ginsberg East

Henry Ginsberg, general manager for Hal Roach, left for New York last night to confer with MGM officials on plans for next season's production.

New York REVIEWS

"SING AND LIKE IT"

RKO-Radio prod.; director, William Seiter; writers, Laird Doyle, Marion Dix; music and lyrics, Dave Dreyer and Roy Turk.

Roxy Theatre

Mirror: With riotous dialogue, daffy situations and mad characters this rowdy kidding of the gangsters in show business provides first rate fun. A splendid company of comedians is headed by Nat Pendleton and Zasu Pitts, who have never been funnier.

Herald-Tribune: "Sing and Like It" is a combination of surprise laughs and such very thin plot material that one is apprehensive lest the thread will break from strain. Yet it is good fun most of the time and a genuine take-off on a number of things. Much of the credit is due Laird Doyle and Marion Dix, who wrote the pointed dialogue.

Times: The new film, in its good natured way, is an entertaining if less than brilliant burlesque of two once popular dramatic themes. Those who provided the dialogue for the story have slipped in a number of wisecracks which achieve the ultimate in comedy delivery.

World-Telegram: Here is a film so funny that it will leave you limp from laughter, since it doesn't let up tickling the funny bone from the minute it begins until the final fadeout. Writers, directors, supervisor and the cast are to be congratulated.

Journal: One of the goofiest, giddiest and most hilarious comedies seen hereabouts in a long, long time. You'll do more than like it. You'll howl and be thoroughly and gorgeously entertained.

Sun: "Sing and Like It" is an amusing notion, and equipped with sufficient wisecracks and puns to cull plenty of easy laughs. Mr. Seiter's direction keeps the picture lively and close to slapstick. It's silly, extravagant, and funny.

Post: A pleasant little farce which disappointingly falls short of hilarity. A defter touch in the writing, a little more expertness in the direction and playing would have provided the fillip for a genuinely diverting comedy.

News: Looking over the cast you feel that you're in for a session of side-splitting laughter. You can think of Zasu Pitts, Pert Kelton, Edward Everett Horton, Ned Sparks and Nat Pendleton only as mirth provokers. But "Sing and Like It" is disappointing. The gaps between laughs give you pause to do too much thinking about what goes on. And what goes on is not at all to be desired.

American: There is a great deal that is grimly ludicrous in this thoroughly amusing satire. It's full of giggles, and loud laughs are interspersed. The cast is fine.

"I LIKE IT THAT WAY"

Universal prod.; director, Harry Lachman; writers, Harry Sauber, Chandler Sprague and Joseph Santley; songs, Conrad, Mitchell and Gottler.

Mayfair Theatre

Sun: A pale little offering which is neither very musical nor very comic nor, for that matter very objectionable. One of the mildest of the song and dance films.

News: Two good tunes, some capable singing by Gloria Stuart, and a good deal of Roger Pryor's usual aggressiveness constitute the goings-on of "I Like It That Way." You will like the song after which the picture is titled, but you are likely to feel that you've seen this sort of thing before.

American: A moderately amusing motion picture, which pauses in its routine plot long enough to feature a pleasant song or so. While they don't succeed in making this little venture epochal, they do add considerably to its entertainment merit.

Mirror: A mild little musical romance, pleasantly played by the attractive Gloria Stuart and the exuberant Roger Pryor. The songs are entertaining. The direction is brisk.

Post: The assortment of run-of-the-mill blondes in "I Like It That Way" rather defeats any attempt to gather much sense from the plot. It is all very muddled and inconsequential.

Times: It is a dull, inept affair. The picture was directed by Harry Lachman and Messrs. Conrad, Mitchell and Gottler are responsible for the songs. So it takes several minds to make even a very poor picture.

Herald-Tribune "I Like It That Way" will hardly fill you with enthusiasm for the cinema.

Journal. The new film at the Mayfair Theatre this week must have started out to be musical. But the musical theme becomes lost in the shuffle and, after a bit, the piece turns out to be composed of a couple of other ideas.

Henry Stephenson in Set with MGM and 'U'

With two more weeks to go on his contract with Paramount in "She Loves Me Not," Henry Stephenson has been signed by MGM and Universal for future pictures. He goes to MGM for a spot in "The Green Hat," and then to Universal in "One More River," tickets going through the Beyer-MacArthur office.

Govt. Prober Ends Code Trouble Task

Miss Helen V. Barry, special field investigator for the NRA Compliance Office in Washington, left yesterday after a week spent here investigating the difficulty between Sol Rosenblatt, Judge Ben Lindsey, George Creel and Pat Casey regarding the turning over of labor complaints to the Casey committee.

It developed that Miss Barry made a very complete investigation into the entire Code situation with respect to both the extra players and the studio labor people who are supposed to have their difficulties straightened out by the Code Committee for Extras and the Studio Labor Committee, respectively. Her report will be rendered to Washington.

Decision Reserved in Helen Kane-Para. Suit

New York.—Judge McGoldrick yesterday reserved decision on the civil rights angle of the suit brought by Helen Kane against Paramount and Fleischer cartoons about the Betty Boop shorts.

The court refused to grant Miss Kane a jury trial, but will hear the charge of unfair competition Monday.

Futter Reports Theft

Walter Futter yesterday reported to the Hollywood police that 6000 feet of film, showing the workings of the opium industry in Siam, have been mysteriously stolen from the vaults in his plant at 1426 North Beachwood Drive. He stated that only he, his brother Fred, and a cutter knew the combination to the safe.

Fay Wray Ducks Indie

Fay Wray, said to have been borrowed from Twentieth Century by M. H. Hoffman for a leading role in a Liberty production, has decided that she will not accept the role.

'UNKNOWN BLONDE' LONG ON PLOT BUT SHORT ON INTEREST

Timely Subject But Not For Big Cities

"UNKNOWN BLONDE"
Majestic Pictures
(Reviewed in New York)

Direction .....Hobart Henley
From the novel "Collusion" by Theodore Irwin.
Screen Play: Leonard Fields and David Silverstein.
Photography .....Ira Morgan
Cast: Edward Arnold, Barbara Barondess, Barry Norton, John Miljan, Dorothy Revier, Leila Bennett, Walter Catlett, Helen Jerome Eddy, Claude Gillingwater, Arletta Duncan, Maidel Turner, Franklyn Pangborn, Esther Muir, Clarence Wilson, Arthur Hoyt.

This picture is something like the stock market. When you get through selling the name and exploiting the subject matter, what have you got yet? So, discounting the fact that this is supposedly an expose of the divorce racket prevalent in some states, and, due to a current serial in the Mirror, a timely subject that can be luridly sold, actually what is produced is a fantastically bad story, elegantly trimmed for an independent picture, with a cast of well known players of whom one catches occasional glimpses during the lengthy proceedings.

The story is literally choked with plot, starting off with an honest lawyer being forced to take a framed divorce case in order to make good a $3500 check given out by his unfaithful wife. He is caught in his own plot for another's divorce by this same wife, who thereupon marries a banker, taking the cheeild with her and poisoning the child's mind against her father.

The lawyer then decides to go in for the divorce racket in a really big way. He makes a fortune and remakes his wife, framing it for her second husband to sue her for divorce. And, of course, the whole nasty business ends up with the lawyer unconsciously framing his own darling, innocent daughter and being forced to expose the whole works in order to preserve her happiness.

Majestic has really sought to do well by this kind of schnitzel, giving it an expensive air and using a lot of tricks that the majors do, including hiring a number of their well known players. But even so, the thing just doesn't stand up. Despite which fact, because of its subject matter, the picture can be sold and sold well, particularly when you get outside the metropolitan areas, on short runs.

Ed Kennedy Working At Fox and Radio Both

Ed Kennedy will double in two pictures at different studios next week, having been signed by Radio for "Arabella." He will be working in "Caravan" at Fox at the same time.

Radio would like to get another Kennedy short in work and may sandwich that in next week too, if possible. Deals were negotiated by Freddie Fralick.

Pix and Vaude For New York Casino

New York.—The old Casino theatre goes into a policy of pictures and vaudeville next Friday. The opening attraction will be "The Whirlpool," which will have its New York premiere.

'U' Directors Name Board of Officers

New York.—The Universal Board of Directors yesterday elected officers of the corporation. Carl Laemmle Sr. was, of course, re-elected president. Other officers are:

R. H. Cochrane, first vice-president; Samuel Sedran, second vice-president; W. S. McKay, secretary; Helen E. Hughes, assistant secretary; C. B. Paine, treasurer; E. F. Walsh, assistant treasurer.

Beery-Montgomery in 'West Point of the Air'

Wallace Beery and Robert Montgomery were set by MGM yesterday for the leading roles in "West Point of the Air," the John Monk Saunders story on which James K. McGuinness and Phillip Dunne delivered a screen play.

Richard Rosson is slated to direct, with Monta Bell producing. Production goes on the stage May 25.

Columbia Starts Last Tim McCoy Wednesday

Columbia starts the eighth and last Tim McCoy action picture, with D. Ross Lederman directing, next Wednesday. Original screen play, which is untitled, has been written by Harold Shumate.

Studio finished "Fire Patrol," the seventh on the program, last Tuesday. Irving Briskin produces.

Bruckman Para. Writer

Clyde Bruckman joined the Paramount writing staff yesterday, the veteran director taking an assignment to work with Harry Ruskin and Lynn Starling on the screen play of "52 Weeks for Florette," which Al Werker directs. The Small-Landau office set the ticket.

Horton to Stage in Fall

Edward Everett Horton has been signed by Arthur Lubin to appear in a play the latter will direct early next Fall in New York. Lubin directs "The Green Bay Tree" for Louis Macloon, which opens in San Francisco next month.

Fox Calls For Carey

Fox is negotiating with Harry Carey for the player to return from New York for a picture which goes into work the latter part of next week. Carey left last week to visit his parents in the East.

New York Grosses Hit Poor Average

New York.—The grosses of the New York picture houses are not so good. "Rip Tide' got $34,200 for its third week at Capitol, and "This Man Is Mine" grossed only $63,000 at the Music Hall.

"The Trumpet Blows" at the Paramount was poor with about $27,000 and "The House of Rothschild" drew $23,000 for its fifth week at the Astor. "Sing and Like It" could get only $20,500 at the Roxy; "Looking For Trouble" took $17,600 at the Rivoli; the Strand got $15,000 with "Modern Hero"; "Viva Villa" at the Criterion grossed $6000 for four days; "I Like It That Way" grabbed $9000 at the Mayfair, and the third week of "The Lost Patrol" gave the Rialto $14,000.

Five of 'The Drunkard' Cast Sign at Paramount

Five members of the cast of "The Drunkard" were signed yesterday by Paramount for featured roles in "Old Fashioned Way." They are Jan Duggan, Ruth Marion, Sam Etheridge, Larry Grenier and William Blatchford. Contracts went through the Beyer-MacArthur office.

Rogers Sets Jevne on 'Here Comes the Groom'

Charles R. Rogers has set Jack Jevne on the screen play of "Here Comes the Groom," with instructions to keep pace with the shooting of the picture, which went into work Thursday at Paramount. Writer is doing extra script work.

MGM Signs Brabin

Charles Brabin has been assigned by MGM to direct "Wicked Woman," the Anne Austin play. Harry Segall is scripting, and picture will be produced by Harry Rapf. No cast set as yet.

Original For Warners

Warners have purchased an original story by Harrison Jacobs, titled "The Little Big Shot." This deals with a little shot who is always imitating the big shots.

'Dark Towers' Re-Named

Warners have changed the title of "Dark Towers" Edward G. Robinson's next to "The Strange Case of Mr. Chautard."

don't want to make poor pictures. They get more money and greater satisfaction out of successes than they do out of the run of the mill product. Besides that, better pictures mean progress for the entire industry. The business can't stand still. It must progress. And the only way to make it go ahead is to make BETTER PICTURES.

Yesterday in NEW YORK with HELEN GWYNN

So a friendship that has long amused the town is gradually being cleared up to the extent of bets being made as to which of the duo will get what he wants. An erstwhile producer has gone in heavily for society, with the scion of a very old family indeed giving him more attention than anyone thaught he could rate. It now develops that the scion of the old family expects to increase his insurance business and the bets are that the producer is too smart to turn over his insurance until he's firmly established in society or maybe never.

Ever since that article appeared in the New Yorker, Mac, up at Twenty-one has taken over the job of running a Cook's Tour for the benefit of anyone interested in sliding panels, doors that are walls and walls that are doors, secret chambers and passageways that lead from one house to another until you don't know where you're at, except that you're in good company and any bottle you pick up will provide a good drink. In case you haven't read the New Yorker article, it was all about how and why, when Twenty-one was raided, although the federal agents spent twelve hours in the place with a crew of about twenty men, they couldn't find any liquor. And for anyone who's ever been a lover of mystery stories, tales of haunted castles and the like, going through that labyrinth of secret ways is a rare treat. It's a new form of entertainment, anyway and gives you a sentimental feeling about prohibition. These days must have been exciting.

Lawrence No Show, So Para. Suit Called Off

New York.—The claim brought by Vincent Lawrence against Paramount for $113,000, alleging breach of contract, was disallowed by Referee Davis yesterday. Lawrence did not show up, so the case went against him by default.

SOUND MEN FORM NEW ASSN. WITHOUT UNION AFFILIATION

200 Important Ones Joining New Group

As a result of a series of secret meetings that have been going on since last January, more than 200 of the most important sound technicians in the industry have formed a new association which they plan eventually to make the controlling factor in the handling of all studio labor problems for sound men.

The new association, the name of which at present is being kept secret, is not to be affiliated in any way with the American Federation of Labor or any labor union. In fact, the members of the new organization are outspoken against any idea of such a hook-up.

The new group is composed principally of dissatisfied members of Local 695, IATSE, and a large number of the members of the recently formed American Society of Sound Engineers, which was reported to have been a group inspired by producer suggestion, but which later found it had to get under the IBEW wing or else get out of the picture.

While no one would issue an official statement in the name of the new organization, it was formally stated that all of the men in the new group will withdraw from the IATSE local, leaving that organization with a very limited membership.

From members of the new organization it was learned that the move to form the new body was started as a result of the refusal of the A. F. of L. to settle the jurisdictional dispute between the IATSE local and the IBEW, both affiliated with the A. F. of L.

"We figured that it was time the sound men did something to protect themselves,' said one of the men. "So we started the move with a meeting of a few men. The idea has grown as the men have become more and more dissatisfied with the IATSE and the A. F. of L. We have finally decided that we will be with no union group, and we expect that, before we get through, we will have the entire sound situation in our hands, and won't have to monkey with jurisdictional fights among sister unions. It will be Sound Men for Sound Men, and to the devil with so-called labor unions."

Knechtel Will Help on 'David Copperfield'

London.—Lloyd Knechtel has returned from Paris, where he has been grabbing scenes for Leslie Howard's picture, "Of Human Bondage," and backgrounds for Irving Asher-Warner British.

Knechtel has been signed by Dave Selznick to collaborate with Cukor in getting British locations and atmosphere stuff for "David Copperfield."

Bosworth Ends Personals

Hobart Bosworth is en route here by car from Detroit, and is expected to arrive tomorrow or Monday. Player last week completed 36 weeks of personal appearances, having played all the RKO houses in the East.

Ostrow Reported Going to Universal

It was reported last night that Carl Laemmle Jr. and Lou Ostrow, who is producing for Monogram, had practically completed a deal by which Lou will join the Universal forces as an associate producer.

'Arabella' Goes Into Work at Radio Monday

Signing Gloria Shea yesterday for the role planned for Mary Carlisle, who was unavailable, Radio gets "Arabella" into production Monday, with William Seiter directing.

Marian Nixon and Reginald Denny head the cast, which includes Grant Mitchell, Billie Burke, Edna May Oliver, Buster Crabbe and Warren Hymer. Glendon Allvine produces.

Lead For Frances Drake, Taking Lombard Spot

Paramount yesterday set Frances Drake in the leading role in 'Notorious Sophie Lang" instead of Carole Lombard.

Frederick Irving Anderson and Anthony Veiller are writing the screen play of the former's original story. Bayard Veiller is associate producer.

Betty Grable at Radio

Betty Grable, who has been warbling with Jay Whidden in San Francisco, has returned to Hollywood to continue her screen work. She is now at Radio for "Headliner" with Gene Austin and his Stooges, Candy and Coco. Sam White directing.

Vidor Back to Studio

N.Y. Theatre Union Strike Is Postponed

New York.—The threatened strike of the Amusement Employees Union against the Loew houses, scheduled for this morning, was postponed yesterday, pending a check-up of the union strength by Sol Rosenblatt.

If it is found that the union has sufficient strength to warrant it, a settlement will be negotiated.

Helen Morgan Starts At Beverly Wilshire

The Gold Room of the Beverly Wilshire Hotel is scheduled to present Helen Morgan, Ziegfeld singing star, as guest of honor tomorrow night. There will be no advance in prices for this affair.

Miss Morgan is rehearsing for Myron C. Fagan's play "Memory," which opens at the Biltmore Theatre on May 7. Carol Lofner and his "Dancing Music" will be another attraction Sunday evening.

Dorothy Jordan Set For 'One Woman's Life'

Radio has started the preparation of the first picture in which Dorothy Jordan will appear on her return, although the date of the resumption of her contract still remains indefinite.

Player will have the top spot in "Doll's House," now re-titled "One Woman's Life."

Buchman on Col. Yarn

Columbia has assigned Sidney Buchman to write an original screen play for the title, "Hello, Big Boy." Buchman makes the fourth writer on the story, Joseph Moncure March having finished his trick last week.

Burtons on Old Comedy

Ralph and Eugene Burton have been signed by Universal to write the modern screen version of "School for Scandal." Carl Laemmle Jr. will personally produce it.

'Green Hat' Starting

Irving Thalberg starts "The Green Hat" at MGM Monday, with Constance Bennett and Herbert Marshall bracketed.

Darrow Report To Be Made Next Week

Washington.—The report of the Clarence Darrow Review Board will not be made to President Roosevelt before late next week. It is certain that it will contain explicit recommendations for a revision of the motion picture code. New impetus which has just been given the board, apparently direct from the White House, has weakened the belief that it will be disbanded.

The board will hear a Monogram official today, probably about the independents' side of the double feature question, as well as on the monopolistic tendencies of the code itself.

The President's approval of the anti-price cutting agreement among tire manufacturers yesterday was taken as a sign that he would disapprove any cut in admission prices by the movie houses.

George Raft Settles With His Wife Out of Court

New York.—An amicable settlement has been reached by George Raft and his wife, Grace Mulrooney Raft. The terms were not stated. In her suit, Mrs. Raft asked $1200 a week alimony and $25,000 attorney fees. She charged cruelty, abandonment and non-support.

Pix Without Pictures

recent Paris riots, which will be entirely noises and printed titles.

These pioneers in this new departure believe that the public should and will be interested in films in which they will follow not a star, not a personality, but an idea. Edward Blattner, who is making the Paris riot film at Elstree, says:

"There will be no actual scenes. The sub-titles will tell the story of the noises which follow them, and I believe we will be able to produce an extremely realistic vision of Paris during the rioting."

The film of the future, these pioneers say, will depend far more on sound than in the past. Already a novel stunt is being used in Berlin to do away with orchestras. The music played by the projector, somewhat weird as yet, is created artificially by drawing outlines, similar to those made by certain notes as recorded by the sound-on-film system, on sheets of cardboard. These are photographed on film and become audible for the first time when they are run through the projector.

Speaking of this new departure, one of the pioneer producers said:

"The film drama of the future will be a drama of actuality, a story of history in the making, its theme the problems which we all face. Its hero may be a field of standing corn, its villain the stock ticker, its heroine a trans-Atlantic liner. But it will have an IDEA. The story film has outlived its usefulness. New and vital ideas help the world on its way and it is for these new ideas that the film producers are groping. The films can be used for better purposes than showing men and women ploughing through a story book drama."

WARNERS BUY ENG. PLANT

TRADE VIEWS by W. R. WILKERSON

•NEVER in the world of industry has there been such a high premium placed on mistakes as is the case with the motion picture industry, particularly that portion of it that concerns itself with the production of its pictures.

Mistakes, GLARING MISTAKES, expensive mistakes are made day in and day out here in the studios and not only is there no penalty placed on such errors, BUT there is little or no effort to correct them, to profit by such blunders.

How is it and WHY is it?

When a producer is found wanting, when his product results in flops, why is that same producer kept on, his salary raised and given the opportunities to make other and more costly mistakes and THE SAME MISTAKES? Is it for the reason that the studio head is of the opinion that, mistakes or no mistakes, his production crew is the best that is available?

The stupidity in production ranks, right at this time, is wrecking some of our best stars, sending some of our most competent writers into hysterics and causing some of the industry's leading directors to throw up their hands and yell, "What's the use."

There is less protection given to our big box-office draws now than ever in the history of the business. There seems to be no other thought or desire than to grind out pictures, to meet release dates, with an entire disregard for the quality of the product, of what it will mean to the stars and important artists in the pictures. There seems to be no understanding whatever of what a DRAW name means to this business and how easy it is to wreck that draw.

We remember, two or three years ago, when important stars were kept sitting on their fannies for weeks and months because the studio did not have acceptable material for them. The studio heads then (and the same crowd is in power now, or are they?) figured it was far better to keep a big name draw inactive than to send him out in a picture that would kill off that draw. Why the change now? Why the continuous production of BAD PICTURES when there is such a great reward for GOOD PICTURES? Why such stupid production blunders? Why the same mistakes?

New York.—Following the preview of MGM's "Hollywood Party" at Atlanta ,the home office officials are sending the picture back to the studio for revised cutting.

Five American Pix Held Over in London

London.—Of the six pictures held over at the big houses here this week, five are American. The list comprises "Wonder Bar," "Rip Tide," "Roman Scandals," "Only Yesterday" and "Lady of the Boulevards,"which is the re-named "Nana." The only British picture held over is "The Battle."

The newcomers for the week are "Lady Killer" at the Regal, "Melody in Spring" at the Plaza, and "Morgenrot," a German submarine picture, at the New Curzon.

Howard in New MGM Deal; Will Direct Hayes

MGM is closing a new long-term deal with William K. Howard and, while the contracts have not been signed, the director is scheduled to handle the Helen Hayes picture, "Vanessa." The Walter Wanger unit will produce it.

Mintz Held For Third

Radio Saturday stretched Sam Mintz' deal into a three-picture writing ticket, granting him permission to work on "Anne of Green Gables" at Palm Springs, where he will recuperate from a flu attack. William Stephens handled the ticket.

Harry M. Warner Announces The Purchase Of Teddington, Which Firm Has Been Leasing

New York.—Harry M. Warner, who has just returned from Europe, announced Saturday that his company had purchased the Teddington studios, near London, which it has been operating under lease. Warner closed the deal on April 10, just before he left England.

Warners plan to make at least thirty pictures at the British studio this year and hope that at least half of them will be released in the United States through their exchanges. Heretofore, the pictures made in England by this firm have been simply for quota and have cost from $15,000 to $30,000 each.

It is not likely that there will be any exchange of players between the

'U' Shows $24,507 Quarterly Profit

New York.—The report of Universal for the three months ended January 27 last shows a consolidated net profit of $24,507.60, after all charges, including depreciation of fixed assets in the amount of $131,699. This compares with a loss of $213,211.74 for the corresponding period in the previous year.

It was announced that, owing to business conditions for the past three months, a substantial profit may be expected for the quarter ending April 28.

MGM and May Robson To Sign New Deal Today

May Robson and MGM get together today to place their signatures on a new contract for the player, the old ticket, option on which was exercised three weeks ago, going into the waste basket.

The new deal will give her starring and co-starring rank, with a tilt in salary.

Goldwyn-Warner Clash Up For Hearing Today

The Goldwyn-Warner feud comes up again this morning when a hearing will be held in Superior Court on Goldwyn's petition for an order restraining Warners from continuing to use Busby Berkeley for "Dames."

Lord Signs New Ticket

Robert Lord's old contract expired Saturday and Warners signed him to a new writing, directing, producing ticket. Lord has been with the studio for more than nine years.

Hervey Goes to MGM

Harry Hervey joined the MGM staff Saturday to write the screen play of "Indo-China," under the supervision of Bernie Hyman.

EXHIBS DEMAND CENSOR CUTS BE MADE PUBLIC

Philadelphia.—Bitterly condemning the Pennsylvania State Board of Censors for keeping film eliminations secret, the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Eastern Pennsylvania, Southern New Jersey and Delaware passed a resolution pledging members to support all measures necessary to force the censor board to make these eliminations public.

At the same time, the same group of exhibitors passed another resolution endorsing the activities of the Penna. Civil Liberties Committee, a group of Pennsylvania citizens formed for the Daily chuckle department: Junior Laemmle became such a basketball enthusiast during the big inter-studio season that we hear tell that he went out and purchased a huge silver trophy to be given to the championship team. Universal, y'know, led the field right up until three weeks ago, when things didn't go s'good. Well, so Columbia finally won and wot did they get yet? They got a little "loving cup" just a few sizes bigger than a thimble! So what, if anything, became of the big silver cup that Junior is supposed to have bought for the winner?

THE LOWDOWN

Speaking of Columbia, reminds us that the great success of "Twentieth Century" at its preview may be attributed perhaps to the "personal generosity" of Howard Hawks, its director. We hear that Hawks was far from satisfied with the original script and wanted Hecht and MacArthur to write a new one. The scribes wanted ten thousand dollars for the job and Columbia wouldn't "go for" that amount. So Hawks paid five thousand of it out of his own pocket—Ben and Charlie got their ten grand and wrote a new script in seven days—and Columbia has a swell picture!

New York REVIEWS

"THE TRUMPET BLOWS"

Paramount prod.; director, Stephen Roberts; writers, Porter Emerson Brown, J. Parker Reed, Jr., Bartlett Cormack, Wallace Smith

Paramount Theatre

News: Paramount gave "The Trumpet Blows" a downright handsome production, with plenty of glitter and finish in the settings and production. But Raft, with his Tenth Avenue interpretation of a dashing Mexican bull fighter, is a pretty bulky pill to gulp.

American: The trumpet blows a sour note at the New York Paramount this week, and its off-key echoes reach over the water to the house in Brooklyn. The production is about as Mexican as Dave's Blue Room, and you have no idea how un-Spanish Mr. Raft can be.

Mirror: Much of the film is unintentionally funny. The story requires much dialogue, and dialogue does make the Raft boy ill at ease. No other character is much more credible.

Herald-Tribune: A few episodes, apparently photographed in the bullrings of Mexico City provide it with a suggestion of life, but on the whole the photoplay is a dramatization that is never sure whether its serious scenes will provide humor or will be greeted by audience reverence.

Times: This synthetic affair offers some glamorous glimpses of Mexico and also colorful flashes of alert matadors, but the story is muddled and sadly unconvincing.

World-Telegram: The film contains some of the most inane dialogue that has been heard on the screen in some time. It is utterly trite and undistinguished and causes just as much embarrassment to the spectator as it must have caused to the players.

Sun: The most strenuous efforts of Director Roberts and his crew of writers couldn't make the subject matter of "The Trumpet Blows" of much importance. As a matter to become emotional over, the great Amrican movie public will probably go right on preferring baseball.

Post: The falsity of the story is reflected in the direction and the acting. Menjou has been saddled with a colorless role; the plot is overcrowded with detail, and Frances Drake has nothing to offer in the way of personality or acting ability.

Journal: Mr. Menjou, equal to any role assigned to him, walks off with the acting honors. Despite his resemblance to Valentino, Mr. Raft is less than happily cast as a Latin matador, and Frances Drake over-acts the part of the dancing Chilita.

Kent Taylor Teamed With Alice Faye at Fox

Unable to get Lyle Talbot from Warners, Sol Wurtzel borrowed Kent Taylor from Paramount and brackets him with Alice Faye in the leading roles in "She Learned About Sailors."

Mitchell and Durant also get leading parts, Fox stretching Harry Green's two-picture ticket into three to include a featured role. George Marshall directs.

No mention was made by Warner of the purchase price, but he said that many changes and improvements will be made. Practically the entire plant will be reconstructed to make it capable of carrying out the plans for bigger and better production. New buildings will be erected, new equipment installed and everything in the studio will be brought up to date.

Pickford Personal Tour a Triumph

New York.—If anyone thinks that Mary Pickford is not still an idol of the American picture-goers, he should look over the reports of her personal appearance tour in the East.

According to Manager McKay, she played to 350,000 people in three weeks at Chicago, Boston and Detroit, and gave the Earle in Philadelphia its biggest week in months. In almost every house, according to McKay, the overage gave her nearly fifty per cent more than her guarantee. Last week, in Philadelphia, she had a police guard every night, both at the theatre and at the hotel, to hold the crowds of autograph-seekers away from her.

Rosen Gets His German Film For His 'Mad Dog'

Al Rosen's jam with Collector of Customs Al Cohn over the two reels of German film to be used in "Mad Dog of Europe" was cleared up Saturday, after a four month impasse, and the agent-producer got his film.

Rosen said the withholding of the film, Nazi concentration camp shots, held up his picture.

Florida Boy Gets Break In Harold Lloyd Film

'PRIVATE SCANDAL' MURDER MYSTERY, BUT GOOD COMEDY

Capital Acting Aids Novel Treatment

"PRIVATE SCANDAL"
(Charles R. Rogers-Paramount)

Direction .....Ralph Murphy
Authors .....Vera Caspary and Bruce Manning
Screen Play.....Garrett Fort
Photography .....Milton Krasner
Cast: Mary Brian, Phillips Holmes, Zasu Pitts, Ned Sparks, Lew Cody, Olin Howland, June Brewster, Jed Prouty, Charles Sellon, Harold Waldridge, Charles Middleton, Rollo Lloyd, Olive Tell.

"Private Scandal" is a murder mystery with comedy taking the place of chills and very funny dialogue supplanting the sliding panels and gasps.

With the exception of one point to which an audience here and there might object, the picture is a good, fast, amusing piece of entertainment. Lew Cody, the murderee, is a nice, decent, honorable business man, who enlists the audience's sympathies so thoroughly that the callousness of his employees and the unfeeling comedy of the proceedings after his death might cause a twinge in some people.

The funny business starts immediately when Ned Sparks, as the detective, arrives on the scene and tries to unravel the mystery surrounding Cody's murder. Because every one of the office employees was where he shouldn't have been when the body was discovered, they all lie. June Brewster, the telephone girl, was in Jed Prouty's office having a pick-me-up; Harold Waldridge, the office boy, was acquiring a ten dollar bill from the till, while the bookkeeper, Charles Sellon, was enjoying a forbidden cigar in the stock room, and Zasu Pitts was in "Ladies."

Phillips Holmes, the dead man's partner, is the one to whom all the evidence points as the guilty party, in spite of the fact that he is Cody's prospective son-in-law.

While the plot is air-tight and the solution extremely logical and well handled, the focal point of interest is Sparks' hard-boiled efforts to pin the office employees down to the truth. His performance will swell his fan following. Holmes seems stiff and uninspired, although he hasn't much to do; Mary Brian cringes and sobs most convincingly; Zasu Pitts and her business with the key to "Ladies" is a scream; June Brewster is exceptionally fine as the telephone girl; Charles Sellon makes a lot of his part, as does Jed Prouty, and Harold Waldridge is good, as usual. Rollo Lloyd and Olive Tell have small roles and Olin Howland surprised the preview audience into giving him a spontaneous and enthusiastic burst of applause for his excellent, unusual and superb bit of characterization as the coroner.

Ralph Murphy directed for high comedy; Garrett Fort adapted the story by Vera Caspary and Bruce Manning, and Milton Krasner photographed.

This is above the average programmer, having the advantage of swell, funny dialogue and reliable, original comedy added to the mystery angle.

Did You Know Villa Was a Centipede?

Since Wallace Beery finished "Viva Villa" for MGM, he has received over 200 letters, offering him "authentic" apparel and equipment used by Pancho Villa, all at very low prices. He has had three offers of Villa's bullet-torn and blood-stained shirt, the low price being 65 pesos. Other offers: Four left boots, 40 pesos; 7 white sombreros, stained with Villa's perspiration, 100 pesos; 19 pistols used by the bandit, 250 pesos.

B. & K. Turn 1932 Loss Into '33 Profit

Chicago.—Balaban and Katz and subsidiaries report for 1933 consolidated net profit of $95,191, after taxes, interest, depreciation, provisions for impairment of investment in subsidiaries and accrued dividends on preferred stock of subsidiaries.

This is equivalent to $3.31 a share on 28,700 shares of 7 percent cumulative preferred stock outstanding. For 53 weeks, ended December 31, 1932, consolidated loss was $993,638.

Eddy and MacDonald In 'Naughty Marietta'

Nelson Eddy has been assigned to the spot spot opposite Jeanette MacDonald in MGM's "Naughty Marietta," which Hunt Stromberg will put into work as soon as "The Merry Widow" is completed. Lawrence Eyre is now scripting the operetta.

Charlie Farrell Off To Do British Picture

Charles Farrell leaves this week for England to make a picture under the direction of Monty Banks. Gregory Ratoff and Jessie Mathews will also appear in the cast.

Farrell will return in August to make one more Farrell and Gaynor picture. His wife, Virginia Valli, will join him in England in a few weeks.

Hugh Williams to MGM

MGM Saturday borrowed Hugh Williams from Fox for a role in Michael Arlen's "The Green Hat," which Robert Z. Leonard puts into work today. Herbert Marshall and Constance Bennett head the cast.

Gordon-Revel Delayed

Because Mack Gordon became ill, he and Harry Revel were unable to leave for New York Saturday on their vacation, as previously planned. They will go as soon as Gordon is well again.

'U' and Foster Dicker

Universal is dickering with Preston Foster for a long-term contract and is considering "Sutter's Gold," which William Anthony McGuire is handling, as his first assignment.

Pulp Mag Writers To Get MGM Break

MGM gives the pulp-magazine writers a break with a deal that was put through Saturday, on a plan submitted by the William Stephens office.

The plan, to which the studio has subscribed on a term-contract on Sam Marx's approval, will have Marx contacting Stephens with orders for specific types of story to fit stars, according to the demands of MGM's production schedule. The agency, which contacts nearly 200 pulp writers, will relay the order to the scriveners, who will go to work on ideas for the stories. Yarns will be written in fiction style so as to make them salable to magazines.

Stephens maintains a reading department for the material, sifts the stories and submits the best bets. The writer loses nothing, since he can sell his story to a magazine, and still have the possibility of a studio sale.

Leo Carrillo Set With Jean Harlow in 'Repeal'

Leo Carrillo's first assignment for MGM is scheduled to be an important role in the Jean Harlow picture, "Repeal." He was previously set for "The Postman Always Rings Twice," but the studio shelved the story.

Sam and Bella Spewack have prepared a screen play for Charles Francis Coe's "Repeal" and John Considine will produce it.

MGM Wants Colbert For 'Red Pepper' Lead

MGM is negotiating for the loan of Claudette Colbert for a leading role with Nelson Eddy in "Red Pepper." Leo Birinski and the music writing team of Brown and Freed are looking after the screen play.

Boy Scout Serial

Signing Vin Moore to direct Saturday, Romance Productions today starts a Boy Scout serial at Mack Sennett's for the state rights market. George W. Stout is producing, with Carter Dixon and two Eagle scouts at the head of the cast.

'U' Wants Ralston

Universal is negotiating with MGM for the loan of Esther Ralston for the lead in "There's Always Tomorrow," which Edward Sloman directs. Frank Morgan and Elizabeth Young have already been borrowed.

New Term For Markson

Warners yesterday checked off another option on Ben Markson's contract, the writer rounding out his second year with the studio on a ticket set by the Beyer-MacArthur office.

'Interlude' N.G. For Pix

New York.—The new play, "Broadway Interlude," is unfavorable for pictures. It closed Saturday night after three performances.

Yesterday in NEW YORK with HELEN GWYNN

Here's a rough idea of imaginative art as practiced by a movie fan magazine. Les Grady, the editor of Film Fun, and a former Notre Dame football husky, actually poses for those undressed damsel pictures on the cover of his magazine. It seems that his artist can draw lovely faces and figures from memory, but he likes to have a model (anyone will do), just so as to be sure to get the body angles and arms and legs in graceful positions. Soooo, once a month, Grady obligingly assumes a most bewitching attitude and gradually his large, muscular frame becomes the voluptuous cutie for the cover design. Maybe the right heading for this story should be, "Through Different Eyes."

Bets are being made around town that a little gal by the name of Eleanor Raymond will top her career with a movie contract if the movie moguls can persuade her that playing opposite actors is more fun than playing with lions and elephants. They call her the "Elephant Woman" so, naturally, the suggestion is that she join the same lot as the "Panther Woman" and eventually have a real circus in Hollywood. However, no publicity man could ever have thought up a fake story about anyone that would read more strangely than Miss Raymond's history. The gal just got out of a convent and, because of family finances, had to get a job. Someone who knew Ringling got her a job riding horses in the circus, but Miss Raymond thought playing with elephants more fun, so she's now the gal the elephants toss around and the reason Broadway got to know her was because a well known man-about-town fell in love with her at first sight and almost went crazy until he could arrange to meet her and has been spending his days and nights at the circus ever since and the gal's been getting a big break ever since. BUT her ambition is to train lions and Clyde Beatty is her ideal.

put Guy Kibbee in the leading role, but no announcement of cast has been made by the British company.

This will make four Dickens stories planned for the screen. MGM is preparing "David Copperfield," Warners will do "Tale of Two Cities," and Universal is to make "Great Expectations."

MOVIE CLASSIC

COVER DISPLAY.....Kay Francis (Warners)

"SCOOP!" announces the May Movie Classic . . . "an interview startling in its honesty, its frank self-analysis and its deep emotion."

And for once, an editor does not exaggerate. Gladys Hall's story, "I Am Destined for Divorce" (Gloria Swanson) lives up to its ballyhoo. It's a grand yarn.

Miss Hall has another story—very amusing. this one—"The Private Life (if any) of Burns and Allen." Jack Grant is another two-story writer. He has one on George Hurell, "How To Be Photographed Like a Star," and "How One Star Lost Thirty-two Pounds" (Joan Marsh).

Gretchen Colnik has an interesting psychological treatise, "Why Women Look Up to Garbo"; Rosalind Shaffer lists the eligible bachelors in Hollywood in "Movie Actors Who Sidestep Marriage"; Lee Tracy breaks into print with "Now I Know Who My Friends Are"; Lilian Harvey tells Sonia Lee that "Hollywood Has Broken My Heart"; and Mark Dowling asks "Is Young Doug Headed for the Altar?" including some interesting quotes. By the way, IS his name Dowling or Larkin? The index and the signature on the story do not agree.

Elisabeth Goldbeck has "Would You Care to Change Places with These Girls?" stressing the lack of childhood pleasures in the lives of Ida Lupino and Patricia Ellis; and Winifred Aydelotte tells of the MGM trek to Mexico in "They Dared the Impossible to Make 'Viva Villa.' "

PICTURE PLAY

COVER DISPLAY....Katharine Hepburn (Radio)

There seems to be always something to say about the poor gal whose face decorates the cover of the May Picture Play. This time M. Oakley Christoph, supposedly from her home town, has "Oh, Hepburn, Behave!" in which the author begs Katharine to be nice to fans, photographers and writers.

Dorothy Herzog comes right out in meeting and asks "Is Mae West a Fizzle?" and is quite intelligent about it; William H. McKegg has an unusual story, "Too Much Rope," in which he tells about some faults that have cut short the careers of promising players; Robert Fender goes into a rave over Mary Boland in "Sitting Pretty," and justifies it; Hal Hall tells about a strange Hollywood racket, "How to Phone a Star," revealing the methods of "telephones"; and Laura Benham has "The Strange Case of Phillips Holmes."

Leroy Keleher does right by Fredric March in "Good Guy"; Fanya Graham touches the high spots of Gregory Ratoff's colorful life in "Roguish Ratoff"; James Roy Fuller is amusing in "Is the Screen Too Sexy?" and Kathleen Key offers some interesting reminiscences in "My Friend Ramon."

Karen Hollis is still keeping her department, "They Say in New York," bright, cheerful and spirited.

Diana Wynyard Lead In 'One More River'

Universal Saturday closed negotiations with MGM for the loan of Diana Wynyard for the top spot in "One More River," John Galsworthy's novel which James Whale directs. Wynyard deal was negotiated by Bren, Orsatti and Marx.

Flinn Will Visit Code Secs on Coast

New York.—John Flinn, executive secretary of the Motion Picture Code Authority, who is flying to Hollywood today, will confer with code secretaries of San Francisco, Portland, Seattle and Salt Lake while on the trip. He probably will establish the Code Authority office in Los Angeles while there.

On his way back he will see the secretaries of Dallas, Oklahoma City, Denver, New Orleans, Des Moines and St. Louis, and later visit Chicago for meetings with the midwest boards.

Barbara Pepper Hurt In Automobile Crash

Barbara Pepper, the "blonde menace" in King Vidor's "Our Daily Bread," was painfully but not seriously hurt in an auto accident Saturday night on Wilshire boulevard.

She was coming back from location with her father when the crash occurred. Miss Pepper has a sprained arm and many bruises, and probably will lay off not more than two days.

'Can't Escape' Finished

Max Alexander wound up his first picture as an independent producer yesterday, when Otto Brower brought in "I Can't Escape" a day ahead of schedule. Lila Lee and Onslow Stevens had the top spots in the Beacon production.

MGM Signs Schubert

MGM Saturday signed Bernard Schubert to write the screen play for an untitled original which the studio owns. Lucien Hubbard will produce. Deal was negotiated by Hoffman-Schlager.

Warners Hold Regan

Two weeks earlier than required in the contract, Warners Saturday punched Phil Regan's ticket for another term. Player just completed a featured role in "Dames" and this week goes into "Housewife."

Liz Allen on Way Here

Elizabeth Allen leaves this week from London for the MGM studio, according to word received here. She is set as Mrs. Copperfield in the production of "David Copperfield."

Gordon After Stone

Leon Gordon, planning to revive his play, "The Piker," at the Hollywood Playhouse, is negotiating with George Stone to play the leading assignment.

Merger of IATSE And ASC Cooling

While no statement is forthcoming from executives of either the ASC or Local 659, IATSE, those close to the situation stated yesterday that all indications at the present time point to a collapse of the proposed merger of the two cameramen's organizations.

One indication is the decision by the IATSE locals to send delegates next June to the annual convention of the national IATSE body, to be held at Louisville. At lease three, probably five, members of Local 659 will go.

According to information given unofficially by one of the union leaders, it looks as though the merger, which seemed hot a short time ago, has grown cold, and the union is going ahead with plans to rebuild its structure.

Gillmore May Leave Legit Code Authority

New York.—The Council of the Actors Equity has advised Frank Gillmore, its president, that he may withdraw from the Legitimate Theatre Code Authority at any time he thinks best for the Equity.

This follows General Johnson's statement to the legit Code Authority that arbitration of disputes is mandatory, which is opposed by the association.

Clive Dickers With Para. Before Starting at 'U'

Colin Clive goes back to Universal for another picture, taking a featured role in "One More River" on a Leo Morrison ticket.

Paramount is negotiating with Clive for "Notorious Sophie Lang" and, if this jells today, the player will do it prior to the Universal production.

Solow on Own Yarn at 'U'

Gene Solow checks in at Universal to write the screen play of his own untitled original story, which will serve as a starring picture for Henry Hull when the player arrives here.

Tibbett-Small Disagree

Unable to agree on an option for two more pictures as part of their contract, Lawrence Tibbett and Edward Small have placed their deal in camphor.

Ames Tops in 'Wanted'

Rosemary Ames, instead of Claire Trevor, gets the top spot in"Wanted," the new title for "Painted Lady," which Sol Wurtzel produces at Fox.

Col. After Trevor

Columbia is negotiating with Sol Wurtzel at Fox for a three-picture loan on Claire Trevor, to be spread over a period of several months.

Morris Small Back

Canceling his New York trip, Morris Small returned yesterday to Hollywood after a two-week visit to Atlanta, Georgia.

Frank Albertson to Radio for "Life of Virgie Winters."

Wade Boteler to Radio for "Murder on the Blackboard."

Billy Bevan for "Caravan," Fox.

Murray Kinnell to "Charlie Chan's Last Case," Fox.

Gregory Gaye for "British Agent," Warners.

Charles Butterworth, Mary Carlisle, Russell Hardie, Ted Healy and Una Merkel in "Rear Car," at MGM.

Nora Cecil into "Old Fashioned Way," Paramount.

Doris Lloyd for "Du Barry," Warners, by Max Shagrin.

Renee Whitney at Warners for "Madame Du Barry."

'Beyond Bengal' Set For Indefinite Runs

New York.—Showmen's Pictures Inc., through the sales manager, Howard C. Hummell, has closed contracts with the Shubert booking offices for the showing of Harry Schenck's "Beyond Bengal," for the Hartman Theatre, Columbus, Ohio, starting May 2; Shubert Theatre, Cincinnati, May 6; Ohio Theatre, Cleveland, May 12, all for indefinite runs.

Other deals with the Shubert office are being closed for New York premiere May 14, and ten other cities. Harry Schenck will make personal appearances.

purpose of aiding the motion picture industry by forcing the publication of the censor board's eliminations.

The exhibitors point out that the censor board is not only making from 300 to 400 per cent more eliminations than the board in any other state, but is being unfair to the picture industry in not telling what the eliminations are.

It is stated by exhibitors that publication of the eliminations would afford the industry the opportunity of correcting any evil that exists, and thus protect the exhibitors, who are either compelled to play the picture after it has been censored or pay for it without playing it because of the injury to the picture by the cuts.

It is further pointed out that the proceedings of other state boards are public property and there is no reason why the censor board should be an exception.

CLASSIFIED!

Is it fair to classify a cameraman?

Graduated from the ranks of the seconds at a major production plant a few years ago, a cameraman moved to another lot where he was assigned to start shooting picture starring a young woman who was then top bell ringer at the box office cash registers all over the country. First day's rushes were sensational—ditto second and third—it was in the bag for this lenzer—he got the big break. He was still tops as photographer when the star faded out three or four years later. He'd been identified with her for so long that despite his rich artistry he started to find the sledding tough. At last he accepted assignment on a Western unit. The front office raved. Gorgeous—beautiful—magnificent! The home office wired, "Give us more photography like this in our future Westerns" . . other producers tried to borrow this man when they wanted unusual 'Western' stuff . . overnight Hollywood labeled him a "cameraman for Westerns." Today we phoned an executive of a major studio, who had just last night asked us to line up a good photographer . . we offered the man who's the subject of this little editorial. Said the exec: "But you must have misunderstood me—I want a man for a farce comedy—not a Western!" However, Western—drama—comedy—farce—feature or short—it makes no difference; if he's an accepted fellow in that body of cinema photographers who select their membership—he can photograph ANY picture and turn in a creditable job and should therefore NOT be CLASSIFIED!

Garmes to Gotham

After deserting the camera for several months during which time he has been preparing for his debut as a director, Lee Garmes lends an attentive ear to the important jingle of a heavy offer from New York, and will be a passenger on the eastbound Chief Wednesday night, accompanied by his wife (Ruth Hall). Special contract provides for an eight week engagement on a super-feature, to be made at Eastern Service Studios, and at the expiration of this time Lee will trek back to Hollywood.

Haskin Locationing

Bun Haskin, boss pro tem. of the Warner Bros. Special Effects Department, is in Sunnyvale, California, with his crew shooting backgrounds for Arthur Edeson's current production, "Hey, Sailor!"

"Empress" Swell Pic

Paramount's "The Scarlet Empress," previewed last week, brought one of the big photographic thrills of the season. Whole picture actually breathtaking in its beauty and imaginative intelligence. Photographer Bert Glennon has been not only audacious, but unorthodox in his lighting, and the ultimate effect is a revelation. Von Sternberg comes in for plenty credit on giving the camera such a free and daring swing from the usual shadow routine.

Jerry Ash (the big brute) is at the camera for Alexander Brothers' Beacon production, the title of which (associated with Jerry) hands us a terrific wallop . . . "I Can't Escape" . . . (You're telling ME!)

Thompson Continues

William C. (Bill) Thompson, chief staff cameraman for Foy Productions, Culver City, has turned final scenes on "Tomorrow's Children," and on Tuesday or Wednesday of this week starts photography on "High School Girls."

Sedgwick's Sharpshooter

Director Eddie Sedgwick gets away at Paramount on "Here Comes The Groom" with Henry Sharp responsible for the photography. Current production tops a fine record of achievement at Paramount for Sharp, who has accounted for "Duck Soup," "Alice in Wonderland," "Six of a Kind," "Melody in Spring," and "Many Happy Returns."

Jackson Finishes

Some weeks ago Fox Studios assigned Harry Jackson to John Reinhardt, and they leaped into production on a wild Cossack story. The production finished Saturday, everyone satisfied with manner in which Harry handled photographic assignment.

Marley Signs

Another period production looms before the lens for Pev Marley, who has signed on the dotted line to assume camera responsibility for "The Count of Monte Cristo," to be produced by Edward Small. Starting date is ticketed for early May.

Marley made one of those overnight 'once-in-a-lifetime' top reputations result of his splendid achievement on "House of Rothschild," with George Arliss, for Twentieth Century, currently restoring prosperity to the box office at Grauman's Chinese.

Do Your Fishing Early

. . . If you're going to do it at all. Because—the summer promises to be so busy that vacation plans are due for a blow-up.

Last week saw seven more units in production than during previous week. At Warners several pictures are being rushed to production. Columbia has a lull of two or three weeks, and then will go into full speed. Paramount is getting into its biggest program in several years. Same applies to Universal, while MGM, within three or four weeks, will have at least ten units. RKO has eight in production.

Only studio inactive is 20th Century, which will resume August 15.

the BUZZER

(NOTE: Each week, sales and service representatives of J. E. Brulatour, Inc. will ask a number of cameramen the same question. The question will be given and then the answers verbatim.)

QUESTION: DO YOU PREFER SHOOTING NATURAL EXTERIORS OR EXTERIORS BUILT ON THE STAGE?

BENNY KLINE (Columbia): There can be no definite ruling on this subject. There are some natural pictorial exteriors that could never be reproduced properly inside on the stage.

GEORGE BARNES (Warner Bros.): Unless the natural exterior set is exceptionally beautiful, I would prefer shooting exteriors inside, because you have so much more control over the lighting.

MILTON KRASNER (Paramount): If the schedule is not too tight and the director is willing to wait for good light conditions, by all means use natural exteriors. If the exterior scenes must be made in limited time, build them on the stage.

CHARLES LANG (Paramount): For intimate scenes where only incidental backgrounds are necessary I like to shoot exteriors on the stage. When it becomes necessary to show skylines and distant backgrounds the panoramic drop becomes inadequate, and we should move to natural exteriors.

LEN SMITH (M.G.M.): Natural exteriors when possible. However, musical and costume pictures are sometimes easier to handle with the exteriors built on the stage.

TAD McCORD: I like to shoot exteriors built on the stage when allowed sufficient lighting equipment and time to do the job right. I prefer intimate type of scenes for artificial exteriors. Large panoramas become obviously artificial, and no conscientious photographer can tolerate that.

U. S. BLOCKS ERPI PEACE

TRADE VIEWS by W. R. WILKERSON

•THERE is not a studio in Hollywood that is not holding up one or more pictures due to casting, and this hold-up, this fight for artists, is costing the industry tons and tons of money each month. All because producers choose to play the thing safe, selecting only those people they believe to be right for the parts, but in that selection only a small percentage of the available artists are called on.

Of course, EVERY producer wants to head his cast with a star, a draw name. Such names are few and far between and, as a result, as long as they can get that name they care little whether that person fits the part. This results, in the majority of cases, of stars being badly cast.

But, finished with the star name, the casting of the rest of the picture becomes equally as difficult, because the producers WILL NOT give opportunities to men and women whose every training argues for that opportunity. They will not give really fine artists a chance. And Hollywood is filled with artists who, given an opportunity, would develop into stars.

There is less effort exerted in the creation of new stars, names that will draw at the box-office, right at this time than ever before in the history of this business. Producers are not interested in new faces, new names, new performances, for the simple reason they will not take a chance. They want to play the casting problem safe, even though that delays production and runs up the cost of the picture.

The Zanuck-LeMaire organization of the old Warner days was the last combination of producer and casting office that was willing to take a chance and, in a short period, they uncovered a half dozen stars and 10 to 15 important supporting players that are, even now, the backbone of that company. They took a chance, and Warners and the whole picture business benefited.

Confronted with almost an impossibility in casting most of the pictures that are ready for production today, why not go out and give some new personalities an opportunity? Why not give some of the important supporting players a chance at star roles? Why not use some effort to progress in the development of new box-office draws?

Extras' 50-50 Break

Extra players employed on the Mae West set at Paramount yesterday were squawking long and loud last night because, they declared, 200 "dummies" were used and only 210 extra players.

Fox's 'Caravan' To Be a Super-Special

Fox has made up its mind to push "Caravan," the Erik Charel picture, into the super-special class and has budgeted the production to cost better than a million dollars on a three months shooting schedule.

The extension of the shooting schedule compelled Conchita Montenegro to abandon a deal to leave in early May for South America, where she was to make a series of Spanish pictures.

Jolson Signs Five-Year Contract with Warners

Al Jolson yesterday reconsidered his announced retirement from the screen and signed a five year deal with Warners to make one musical a year. The success of "Wonder Bar" was a big factor in his reconsideration of his retirement.

George and Norma Wed

Atlantic City.—Norma Talmadge and George Jessel were married at the Hotel Amdassador here today, Mayor Bacharach performing the ceremony.

Government Understood To Frown Upon Any Settlement Out Of Court With Warners

Washington.—It is understood here that the reported settlement of the Erpi-Vitaphone-General Talking Pictures suit, which was scheduled to be made out of court, has been stepped on by the Department of Justice, which does not look with favor on this form of adjustment. In that event, the trial of the royalty suit, set for May at Wilmington, probably will go on.

The terms of the proposed settlement are said to be based on Erpi's willingness to turn over to Warners and General Talking Pictures all the handling of its sound equipment and take itself out of active participation in the motion picture field. A vice-president of Erpi, the day after the Hollywood Reporter published the news of this alleged agreement, denied

'Cat's Paw' Finished

Sam Taylor yesterday brought in "The Cat's Paw," which Harold Lloyd produced for Fox release. Picture, which has been in production since January 29, was held up several times due to Taylor's illness.

Katherine Brown East

Bringing a two weeks story huddle to a close, Katherine Brown, Radio's Eastern story head, leaves tonight for her New York post.

Warners Sued Again Over 'Lady Killer'

A second suit against Warner Brothers, based on alleged illegal use of the title, "The Lady Killer," was filed yesterday by Attorney Harold Fengler, $50,000 damages being asked. This suit is by Alice and Frank Mandel, who allege that Warners took the title of their play, "The Lady Killer," which was produced here and in New York ten years ago.

The first suit, filed last week, was by William Selig, who produced a picture with that title in 1914 and had the title copyrighted, he claimed. He also asked $50,000.

Gable May Be Starred In 'Blonde Countess'

MGM is seriously considering "The Blonde Countess" as a possible starring vehicle for Clark Gable. It is an original by Major Herbert O. Yardsley, who, with C. Gardner Sullivan, will do the screen play and Larry Weingarten will produce.

Goldwyn Plea Delayed

The Superior Court hearing on the Goldwyn application for a restraining order against Warners on Busby Berkeley's services was pushed over to this morning when neither party was prepared yesterday to proceed with the case.

Carl Laemmle Back

Carl Laemmle Sr. yesterday returned from the East, where he attended the board meeting of Universal and was again elected president of the company for the twentieth time. He was away two weeks.

'Forsyte Saga' to Radio

London.—Radio is closing a deal with the Galsworthy estate for the purchase of "Forsyte Saga" and will make it as a starring vehicle for Irene Dunne.

PARA. RENEWING ACTIVITY AT LONG ISLAND STUDIO

New York.—Paramount is again getting busy with production plans for the Long Island studio. It has taken over two of the stages and is moving in there with its shorts production department, under the supervision of Fred Waller. This department is producing the "Headliner" series, the Paramount Pictorial and "Screen Souvenirs," which have been made heretofore in another building near the old studio.

It is also understood that Paramount will have at least six features produced at Astoria for its release this year. The three pictures to be made by Ben Hecht and Charles MacArthur account for half of the six, but no announcement has been made about the other three.

Mervyn LeRoy and Wife Are Due Home Saturday

Mervyn LeRoy and his wife, Doris Warner, return Saturday from their honeymoon cruise around the world. They arrive in San Francisco Thursday and remain on the boat, docking here Saturday. Warner director has been away since the middle of December.

Radio Signs John Beal

New York.—After all the studios tried to get him for picture work, John Beal yesterday signed a term contract with Radio. Player cannot leave for the coast until he completes his stage work in "She Loves Me Not," in which he is now appearing.

RAMBLING REPORTER

Well, we see that the Chatterton-Brent and Swanson-Farmer divorces are coming right along, as registered here some time ago. . . . Hear tell that when Junior Laemmle ties the knot (which is supposed to be very soon) it will be with a young society girl from the East who is due in Hollywood with her family next month when she finishes finishing school! . . . Alice Brady took her four non-housebroken dogs with her to a hotel in San Francisco—whoops! . . . Maurice Chevalier bought some songs for himself from the pen of Julie Cruze. . . . The Mervyn LeRoys will be back in Hollywood Saturday . . . and the Warren Williams leave this week on their boat for the Santa Cruz islands, where they will hunt wild boars, of all things! . . . Mitzi Cummings has just signed a contract with Photoplay, and Ruth Cummings is having her first novel published by Macauley, so Sunday Mrs. Ida (Momma) Cummings gave a party to celebrate the events — who wouldn't?

The Liz Dupont-Buster Collier flames were fanned at the Colony Saturday night—and a "bunch of the boys" including Charles Rogers, Darryl Zanuck, Eddie Buzzell, Joseph Schnitzer, did right well for themselves. . . . A girl named Majel McConnell, who won a contest in Spokane because she looked so much like Janet Gaynor, walked across the Warner lot yesterday and was stopped three times and addressed as Bette Davis! So who's crazy now?

Jackie Cooper having his first stand-in in the person of Johnny Dunsmuir —both kids having a swell time over at Catalina. . . . The wife of what famous comedian is in a sanitarium for the steenth time at the moment with "pink elephant" trouble? . . . Maureen O'Sullivan going to Ireland when "The Barretts" is finished—bets are that Johnny Farrow stays behind. . . . The beauteous Madeleine Carroll, Rosemary Ames, Heather Angel, Billie Burke, Frances Goldwyn, Al Newman, Capt. Richard Day, Virginia Gilbert, Dudley Murphy, Monte Brice, Paul Schofield, Ethel Butterworth, Max Marcin, Mrs. Tom May, Louise Dresser, among the lunchers at the Vendome yesterday.

New York REVIEWS

"A MODERN HERO"

Warner Bros. prod.; director, G. W. Pabst; writers, Louis Bromfield, Gene Markey, Kathryn Scola

Strand Theatre

Herald-Tribune: Mr. Pabst has set his picture excellently, obtaining atmosphere in the opening circus scenes as well as in later ones. It is photographed, too, with a nice quality. Buts its tempo is too slow. Its dialogue not very adult, and for some reason its interest is not sustained. The supporting cast is good.

Times: The film is competently, if somewhat morosely acted in the leading roles by Mr. Barthelmess and Jean Muir. Marjorie Rambeau and Florence Eldridge also contribute good performances.

Mirror: Louis Bromfield's novel, however interesting as a book, presents a very trying obstacle to the star who would assume the title role. The character is totally unsympathetic. Richard Barthelmess makes a neat job of acting it, though it isn't suited to him.

American: Mr. Barthelmess plays so sincerely, so believably that the man he creates stands forth staunch and solid in the film fable. He is ever the star of the production, but he is helped materially by the quality of his cast. The picture is well directed and has been given quality production.

News: In spite of Barthelmess' consistently good performance of the title role and the able assistance he receives from an excellent cast, "A Modern Hero" must be classified as just fair in entertainment value.

Sun: As a novel, Mr. Bromfield's story may have had more chance to explain its hero, to alleviate the ruthlessness of his climb to power. The picture has to satisfy itself with a simple relation of the plot, a long and rather involved one. Marjorie Rambeau's performance did a good deal for this flim. Still it couldn't tighten up the story sufficiently for a motion picture. Less obvious and stagey direction might have resulted in a more interesting picture.

Post: "A Modern Hero" on the screen is as dull, pointless and unprofitable a treatise as we have encountered in a decade of movie-going. The plot is diffuse and overcrowded with detail; it meanders along at a sticky pace and never once does Mr. Barthelmess succeed in bringing a semblance of interest to the character.

World-Telegram: It is a well intended drama, but, I fear, somewhat too faint and uneven for general effectiveness. Adapted into a somewhat stilted screen play and acted for the most part good and hard, it seemed, to my notion, excessively tedious.

"STAND UP AND CHEER"

Fox prod.; director, Hamilton MacFadden; writers, Will Rogers, Phliip Klein, Ralph Spence; music and lyrics, Jay Gorney, Irving Caesar, Jack Yellen, Lew Brown.

Music Hall

Times: The jollity of the film increases as it develops. It looks as if all Hollywood had taken part in this summing up of "Stand Up and Cheer."

Mirror: Richly satiric, the story introduces hilarious types and presents a delightfully mad picture of Washington. Gay and exhilarating, "Stand Up and Cheer" is an attractive and unusual musical film.

World-Telegram: What promised for the first half of its unreeling to be a satirical revue of superlative virtue suddenly became, along about its middle section, a routine song and dance production. Even so, I should be a carping fellow, indeed, if I objected too strenuously to the commonplace elements in "Stand Up and Cheer!" because it has much in its that is genuinely fine, amusing and entertaining. "Stand Up and Cheer" is something to cheer about.

American: A gay idea is amusingly developed, and provides a goodly measure of fresh and unusual film fun. The piece is well conceived and well directed.

Sun: "Stand Up and Cheer" is one of those deliberately cheerful productions with so insistent an emphasis on optimism that the result is occasionally depressing. It is at least a different type of musical.

Post: The picture is blessed with a lively and satirical plot idea. There is a wealth and diversity of material in the song and dance numbers. It is a lavish, gay and crack-brained musical revue.

News: Although "Stand Up and Cheer" was designed to wipe away our fears and blues over these hard times by insisting that the depression is over, I'm afraid it is going to have just the opposite effect. Little Shirley Temple earned the only burst of spontaneous applause.

Herald-Tribune: It is my private opinion that it is successful neither as musical comedy nor hilarious fantasy, but it must be granted certain pleasant features. Amazingly enough, one of them is a child actress.

Journal: It is all very light and gay and diverting. Despite the fact that the cast contains plenty of high-powered names, an individual triumph is scored by four-year-old Shirley Temple.

LaborAsksRosyHow It Can Get Rights

In a sarcastic letter, Lew C. G. Blix, business representative of Local 37, IATSE, composed of carpenters, property men and grips, yesterday took Sol A. Rosenblatt to task for his reported statements that any complaints of alleged film code violations filed by studio workers in any channel except through the office of the Casey committee would go in the waste basket.

"Just what is necessary for an employee to do (outside of keeping his mouth shut and taking his beating in silence) to obtain the rights which are supposed to be provided him under the code?" asks Blix.

He calls Rosenblatt's attention to Section 5, page 7, Bulletin No. 7, Manual of Adjustment of Complaints by the State Directors and Code Authorities, which states that "even though an industrial adjustment agency has been authorized to handle complaints, a complainant always has the right to file his complaint with the NRA, either in Washington or through the State Directors in order to protect his or the public interest."

that there was any truth in it, but the belief still exists in Washington that it was set until the Department of Justice stepped in.

There is another report, given some credence here, that Erpi may turn its picture business over to its employees to be run by them with supervision by Warners and General Talking Pictures. This plan resembles the step taken some time ago by the Graybar Electric Company.

'STEVEDORE' REAL PIC THEME, BUT NEEDS BRAVE PRODUCER

2 More N.Y. Plays Simply Hopeless

The Theatre Union presents "Stevedore," by Paul Peters and George Sklar; staged by Michael Blankfort; settings by S. Syrjala; with Millicent Green, Georgette Harvey, Edna Thomas, Jack Carter, Rex Ingram, Leigh Whipper. At the Civic Repertory Theatre.

New York.—Continuing in its work of presenting plays with a purpose, the Theatre Union here uncovers another vigorous, thrilling diatribe against the existing state of injustice in this country, this time choosing as the subject the Negro and his problems. George Sklar is again called upon to assist in the writing, and he is to the propaganda play what George S. Kaufman is to the Uptown Theatre—the craftsman who knows how to make good theatre out of hysteria.

The story over which the authors drape their soap-box speeches is that of a white woman who is beaten up by her lover and found screaming by her husband. Unable to tell the truth, she says she's been attacked by a negro. Immediately all the negroes in the southern town are rounded up, but no identification is made and, just as the whole matter is about to be dropped, the foreman of the Stuyvesant Dock Company makes use of the case in order to rid himself of a young negro who is trying to organize his fellow workers into demanding equal rights for themselves and living wages. But, of course, the story is soon lost in a complete resume of all the woes afflicting the colored race, and they are many and vital.

The thing that recommends this play to us is its unashamed frankness, its lack of fear of being labeled anything but what it sets out to be, which gives it all the latitude in the world for hearty emotional appeal that never insults the intelligence with cheap philosophical veneers.

Both "Stevedore" and "Peace on Earth" offer really moving motion picture material, the subject matter of which, unfortunately, is too much of a challenge to the very narrow scope to which pictures confine themselves. But it must be repeated that here is definitely good movie material for anyone with the courage to make use of it.

The cast is almost entirely negro and uniformly excellent, with standout performances by those mentioned in the casting at the top of the review. It was impossible to record all the names of the biggest cast outside of a Hippodrome show that's come to town in a long while. And the whole production offers an exciting adventure in the theatre.

'Broadway Interlude' Bad

Theodore Hammerstein and Denis Du-For present "Broadway Interlude," by Achmed Abdullah in collaboration with Almon Wolff; staged by Mr. Hammerstein; setting by Amend; with Robert Emmett Keane, Hans Hansen, Robert Lynn, Claire Whitney, Margot Allain, Sally Starr, Neil Moore, Arthur Pierson, Paul Everton, Suzanne Caubaye, Leslie Dennison, Peter Whitman, Janice Dawson, Dorothy Knapp. At the Forrest Theatre.

New York.—The OTHER trouble with plays like this is that you cannot print a review on them before they close up. There isn't the time and it's wasting your substance to offer any critical writing talent on them.

Just in case anyone might be interested in knowing what the subject matter was, it purported to depict the life of David Belasco as a theatrical entrepreneur. And in all fairness to the late Mr. Belasco, it must be said that the man couldn't possibly have been as stupid in the exercising of his charm and have attained the position he held for so many years in the theatrical world.

"Are You Decent?" Isn't

Albert Bannister presents "Are You Decent?" by Crane Wilbur; staged by Dmitri Ostrow; with Zamah Cunningham, Royal Stout, Beatrice Hendricks, A. J. Herbert, Claudia Morgan, Eric Dressler, Lester Vail. At the Ambassador Theatre.

New York.—More sex didoes that will not last the week and had no business wasting an evening. Unpardonably dull, the kind of thing that censors should use as examples of how to disgust people with sex so's they'll never touch the nasty stuff again.

This time a sassiety wench with a strong libido, but a horror of marriage, consoles herself with the fact that she is suffering from "maternal instinct" and decides to have a child without benefit of a wedding ring. Add to this the character of a female Grumpy, stomping all over the place, and two of the most repulsive drunks ever seen on a stage and then hope the curtain is forever unable to rise.

Mervyn LeRoy Will Run Warner Studio

New York.—Mervyn LeRoy will take over the reins as studio production manager for Warners-First National when Hal Wallis goes to Europe about the middle of next month.

Muni-Graham Return

Paul Muni and Carroll Graham yesterday returned from Mexicali where they have been doing research work for "Border Town." Graham is writing the screen play of his novel, which will be Muni's next picture for Warners.

Warners Buy Original

Warners yesterday purchased "Just Out of College," an original by Robert Lee Johnson. The story deals with the experiences of a boy just out of college and his efforts to adapt himself to commercial endeavors.

Fox Signs Jack Carter

Fox yesterday got a yen for Jack Carter, player who recently arrived from New York, and signed him for a featured spot in "Always Honest," while discussing a long-term deal for his services through the Hallam Cooley office.

Three-Color Short First For Whitney

Jock Whitney enters the motion picture production field on May 15 with a one-reel picture to be made with the newly perfected three-color Technicolor process as his first.

This picture will be "La Cucurachi," a song and dance number with a Mexican locale and plenty of color. It will be the first of a series which will be produced by Merian Cooper and released by Radio. All are to be made in the three-color process, in which Whitney has a financial interest, if the first turns out as expected. Cooper returns from Honolulu the day the picture is slated to start.

MGM Finds Six Boys For Barrett Brothers

MGM has tested more than 100 young actors in an effort to find six who looked sufficiently alike to be cast as brothers in "The Barretts of Wimpole Street."

Those selected are: Vernon Downing, Neville Clark, Mathew Smith, Robert Carlton, Allan Conrad and Peter Hobbes.

Columbia Planning Two Shorts in Two Days

Columbia will make the first two of the "Minute Mysteries" in two days, Lambert Hillyer directing under Irving Briskin's supervision. Sam Hinds, Charles Wilson and Arthur Rankin go into "Death in the Office" and also into "Stolen Poils," Geneva Mitchell getting the leading role in the latter.

Glasmon and Kline on 'A Son Comes Home'

Kubec Glasmon and Marjorie Kline have been selected by Paramount to write the screen play of Julian Josephson's original, "A Son Comes Home," starring Lee Tracy. Bayard Veiller will supervise.

Lindsay Play Wins Megrue Comedy Prize

New York.—Howard Lindsay's play, "She Loves Me Not," has been awarded the Roi Cooper Megrue prize for the best comedy of the year. The announcement was made at the Dramatists' Guild dinner last night by Marc Connelly, acting as master of ceremonies.

Lab Code Member Named

Washington.—A. J. Rosenberg, formerly in the laboratory business in New York, but now not connected with the picture industry, has been appointed as the administration member of the Motion Picture Laboratory Code Authority.

'Excess Baggage' Again

John F. Larkin has been signed by MGM to do the screen play on "Excess Baggage," which Harry Rapf will produce. It was once made as a silent.

Yesterday in NEW YORK with HELEN GWYNN

Two things that were bound to happen sooner or later really did occur this week. One in the newspaper world and the other in the picture game, as they like to call that particular sport. In the first instance there appeared in a New York morning paper a long criticism of a concert, right down to the audience reaction and applause. The only unfortunate thing about the criticism was that the concert had been postponed, so the whole thing was like an essay on whether or not there is sound if there is no ear to catch it.

The other thing was one of those cocktail parties for the press given by a major company for a visiting star. Well, the assembled press waited and waited and drank and talked and waited and waited and no star. Finally someone made the announcement that the star in question had contracted ptomaine poisoning from some crab meat eaten at lunch. Still later the truth of the matter inadvertently came out. The star thought to fortify himself for the coming ordeal and did so well in the process that he was unable to face it at all. And we don't blame him. Nobody has yet discovered why such parties are given, since it's no longer necessary to have an excuse to serve liquor.

There's a short soon to be released about which there has been no little controversy of late, due to the fact that a feature picture on the same subject has just been completed. However, that's something that will have to straighten itself out. The story of how the short happened to get to these shores is a good example of a surprise package, however. The company that will distribute the short in this country was approached some weeks back by a film importer and told that there was a batch of pictures on which they could make a good deal if they'd pay the duty on them to get them in. Which meant that part of the money involved in the deal would be spent blind and the seller had no idea of what the pictures were. Well, the distributing company decided to take a chance and when they opened the packages they hadn't even got prints, just negatives. Then, looking through the negatives, they came upon a two-reel picture, starring an actor now famous on the stages and screens both of England and the United States. The picture was made some years ago and was the only one in the batch worth bothering about at all and, with this particular star in it, that was enough to make it a bright, gold nugget. Because the star happens to be Charles Laughton.

Montgomery Wanted For Stage with Wieck

Douglass Montgomery yesterday received an offer from Harmon and Ullman, producers of "Waltz In Fire," to take the top spot alongside Dorothea Weick in the play which will be put into rehearsal late next month in New York.

AUSTRIAN FILM PRODUCTION UNDER HEEL OF NAZI BOARD

New Move Against All Jewish Artists

Vienna.—With the recent renewal of the motion picture trade agreement between Germany and Austria, all Austrian picture production has been placed under the dictatorship of the Nazi government, and Austrian producers fear that it spells the death knell of Austrian motion picture success.

Some idea of how thoroughly the German Nazi government controls the Austrian situation may be gained from the fact that the scenarios and casts of every Austrian picture must be submitted to the German Film Chamber before they start production. If either the story or any member of the cast displeases the Germans it is barred until such changes in writers, directors, story and players as the Germans dictate are made.

The flocking of Jewish picture artists and technicians to Vienna after they were banned from German production is said to be responsible for the recent placing of the strangle-hold on Austrian picture-making. German pictures have been falling off in quality since the Nazi drove the Jew out. Austria gained, as they rushed to Vienna, and their talents have given Austrian pictures a big boost.

However, when the film trade agreement between the two countries came up for renewal, Germany made demands which give her virtual control of the Austrian situation. If Austria would not accede, Germany would not renew the agreement and would not allow Austrian pictures in Germany. Neither would she allow her pictures to be shown in Austria. Austrian film and government officials shrugged their shoulders, but agreed, as they need the German market and the German pcitures.

When the Nazi ultimatum was given, the Austrians were frankly told that Germany would not allow anyone to take any part in the making of Austrian pictures who would be objectionable to the Nazi government. This is interpreted to mean only one thing: that all the Jewish players, cameramen, director, sound men and writers who have in the past helped build up German pictures, and are now in Austria, will be barred, and Austria will drop back into the production doldrums.

Joan Crawford to Open Private Theatre Soon

Joan Crawford will open the little theatre in her home when it is completed in about two weeks.

Francis Lederer will dedicate it the opening night, at which time a play will be presented. The theatre will accommodate 36 people.

McLeod Fast and Saving

Norman McLeod has just finished his latest picture for Paramount, "Many Happy Returns" with George Burns and Gracie Allen, four days ahead of shooting schedule and $25,000 under budget.

Hal Horne Wins Honor For 'Palooka' Campaign

New York.—Hal Horne and United Artists yesterday received the annual award offered by the American Spectator, which judged the advertising campaign on "Palooka" the best of the year. The Spectator's award for the best play went to "Richard of Bordeaux."

Swanson Plans to Divorce Farmer

New York.—The statement cabled from Paris yesterday that Michael Farmer admitted he and Gloria Swanson had separated, brought the statement from Miss Swanson that she planned to sue for divorce. She set no date and gave no details.

Regarding Farmer's statement that their daughter was in Paris and would "remain there," Miss Swanson declared she did not believe he had said it and that she was sure Farmer would not try to keep her child away from her.

'20 Million Sweethearts' Trailer Drawing Praise

The advance trailer on Warners' production of "Twenty Million Sweethearts," which is being shown at the Warner houses in conjunction with "As the Earth Turns," is causing a lot of favorable comment about the work of George Bilson, who wrote and directed it.

It is a novelty short, with Dick Powell lecturing on different types of sweethearts, and is being shown two weeks in advance of the picture.

Riggs to Stage His Play

Lynn Riggs will leave for Chicago early in July for a tryout of his latest play, "More Sky." Writer will direct and produce it at Northwestern University before turning the play over to New York producers for its Broadway run.

Short For Phil Regan

Warners yesterday assigned Phil Regan to a lead in the second Leon Errol Technicolor short, "Skirt City," which Ralph Staub directs. Comedy will not start until the early part of next week, after Regan completes his work in "Housewife."

Lugosi on Shell Hour

Bela Lugosi was yesterday signed to be guest star on the Shell radio program over the Don Lee station. Deal was negotiated by Kingston-Harris. Player just finished in "The Black Cat" at Universal.

Block-Malloy Finish

Ralph Block and Doris Malloy have completed their original screen play, "I Am a Thief," for Warners and will be given another assignment. Henry Blanke is supervising.

'Painted Veil' Set As Next for Garbo

There have been many rumors as to Garbo's next starring picture, but MGM has definitely decided on "The Painted Veil," under the direction of Richard Boleslavsky. He is now directing "Operator 13" and will begin immediately on Garbo's next at the completion of his present assignment.

The story is based on a novel by Somerset Maugham. John Meehan and Salka Viertel will do the screen play, and Hunt Stromberg will produce.

Woodard Putting His Whaling Pic in Shape

With negotiations on to get a release through United Artists, Stacey Woodard tomorrow starts work on cut-in shots for his untitled whaling feature, to which he devoted three months off Australia.

Helene Barclay was signed yesterday through William S. Gill for a featured role, location work taking place at Laguna.

Mystery Yarn Writer Will Adapt Own Story

New York.—Courtland Fitzsimmons, sales manager for the Viking Press, who writes mystery stories as a side line, is on his way to Hollywood to adapt his new story, "Death on the Diamond," for the screen.

Edwin Willis East

Edwin B. Willis, in charge of the interior decorating department at MGM, leaves tonight by plane for a three weeks visit to New York in search of new ideas and materials for stage settings.

Bloch-Seaton Team

Arthur Bloch and George Seaton, MGM writers, having finished the story, "Paris to New York," based on an original idea by Sam Marx, are now preparing the screen play for the story.

Big Saving Seen in Revised Print Rule

Minimum savings to all Hollywood major studios of from $7500 to $10,000 per year for each studio are due to result from the adoption by the Research Council of the Academy of revisions in the standard release print.

The new revisions go into effect May 1, and from then on all release print film processed in Hollywood and eastern laboratories will be under the new order. The revisions consist of the elimination of nine and a half feet from the leader of each release print for feature pictures.

The committee figures for the saving are computed from an estimate of fifty pictures per year per studio.

Margaret Sullavan Off On Six Weeks Vacation

Margaret Sullavan leaves today by plane for New York where she will hop a ship for a short vacation in England. Player returns to the studio in six weeks to do her next picture, which may be either "Angel" or "Fanny."

Miss Sullavan yesterday completed her work in "Little Man, What Now?" a Frank Borzage production. Picture winds up tomorrow.

Pynchon Finishes At Radio and Goes to Para.

Edgcumb Pynchon has finished the screen play on "Marietta" for Radio, and goes to Paramount to do the screen play of "Rhumba."

George Raft will be starred, and William LeBaron will produce it.

PICTURE HOUSES TAXED TO SUBSIDIZE THE LEGIT

Belgrade.—Yugoslavian motion picture exhibitors are yelling their heads off over the imposition by the government of what is charged as one of the most amazing tax demands ever placed upon the picture industry anywhere in the world.

On April 1 the government imposed a ten per cent tax on all motion picture house seats so as to secure funds with which to subsidize the legitimate drama houses, which are the direct competitors of the movie houses.

The large exhibitors fought the new law bitterly, but without avail, and they say that the new tax is knocking the bottom out of the theatres where the admission prices have been low. A ten dinar seat is slapped with a one dinar tax, and the trade won't stand for it; neither can the exhibitors pay it out of their own pockets.

New Ettinger Aides

Mary Barbier, who had charge of stills at MGM for 11 years, has joined the Margaret Ettinger office to do the same work. Marion Wolcott has replaced Muriel Babcock in the same office.

Maynard Due in N.Y.

New York.—Ken Maynard arrives here today aboard the Olympic from Europe. He plans to go directly to Hollywood, where he will do a serial for Mascot.

Belgian Censors to Supervise Kisses

Brussels.—There will be no more kissing on the mouth in motion pictures for youngsters up to 16 years to see, according to a new government decree here. Decree doesn't say where the children should be taught to kiss.

Julie Lang Quits Para; Virginia Wood in Spot

Julie Lang, who has been in the publicity department at Paramount for the past ten years, is leaving for New York, May 19, to free lance in the magazine field. Virginia Wood will replace her on four magazine contacts.

McNelis in Weir Spot

Johnny Mitchell, western editor of New Movie magazine, returned yesterday from a week of conferences in New York. He announced that Frank McNelis has been made editor of the magazine, taking the place of the late Hugh Weir.

Pessis in New Office

Erman Pessis, publicity and exploitation agent, yesterday announced the opening of his new offices at Room 504 in the Equitable Building. He handles advertising and publicity for several night clubs as well as for picture stars.

'U.S. Lie Campaign,' German Press Says

Berlin.—The local trade press flatly declares that Samuel Untermyer and Congressman Dickstein, advocates of a bill to halt import of alien actors, are conducting a "lie campaign" against Germany.

The papers say that Untermyer is falsely accusing the Germans of creating a war atmosphere in the world and making fresh reprisals on the Jews. They say that Dickstein is spreading the idea that the German stage and picture artists should be barred because of the hostile attitude of Germans now in America. There is much nervousness here because of the reports.

Lou Samuelson Going Into Business For Self

Lou Samuelson has resigned an executive post with the Western Costume Company and, after seven years of contacting the various studios for a group of producer-servicing companies, is striking out for himself.

He has formed a partnership with Jeff Wally and will specialize in fabrics and material props for the studios.

REVOLT AGAINST CASEY

TRADEVIEWS by FRANK POPE

•REFERRING once more to the topic of "What's the matter with Motion Pictures?" we would like, even at the risk of being thought captious, to say a few words about newsreels. It seems to be the concensus of opinion that newsreels should not be censored. Several states have held that view. The newsreel depicts events that really happen, so why not show them?

But is there any special reason why the newsreel editors should select scenes that are brutal and revolting and place them on the screen? There is being shown in this vicinity now a short which may well be classified as newsreel since it is made up of scenes showing the long chances these newsreel photographers take. One of these scenes depicts a battle between a lion and a bull, which is both brutal and revolting, so much so that we heard many women comment upon it at the theatre a few nights ago.

The animals are in a big cage. The lion gets first hold, ripping the bull's flank. Then the bull turns the tables and gores the lion. The big cat runs up and down the barrier, trying to escape, and every time he turns the bull gores and tosses him.

Americans consider bull-fighting in Mexico more or less uncivilized, but this is infinitely worse than any well-conducted bull fight. Presumably the lion was killed by the bull, although the newsreel people did have decency enough to leave out that part. And, by the way, what is the S.P.C.A. doing about this picture, if anything?

Some time ago a newsreel showed a scene of a big flatfoot questioning a boy—a mere child—about the death of his mother, whose murder had just been discovered. The youngster was crying so that he could hardly talk, his sobs being caught by the microphone, but the flattie kept him in front of the camera and kept questioning him so that the American public could enjoy the edifying spectacle of a heartbroken child.

Another reel recently had shots of the exhumation of a body in France. The man had been buried some time. It wasn't pretty—nor did it seem entirely necessary.

These are only a few instances, picked at random. Anyone who has

'Rip Tide' Held For Third London Week

London.—"Rip Tide," the MGM picture starring Norma Shearer, has been and still is doing a terrific business at the big Empire Theatre and announcement has been made that it will be held for a third week.

Para. Schedules 9 At Astoria Studio

New York—Paramount has definitely scheduled nine features to be made at the studio at Astoria, Long Island, for the coming year's program, in addition to the shorts production there. Three of these, as already announced, will be made by Ben Hecht and Charles MacArthur.

Slavko Vorkapich has been engaged to come East from Hollywood to assist Hecht and MacArthur, in place of Del Andrews, who had been considered.

Edwin Marin Out of 'U' And Signs Up with MGM

MGM yesterday took Edwin L. Marin away from Universal, signing the director to a long-term ticket through William Stephens. Universal lost out after protracted negotiations over a new salary arrangement with Marin, MGM outbidding the company.

Director's first assignment will be "Four Walls," which Bernard Schubert is writing under the supervision of Lucien Hubbard.

St. Clair to Warners

Mal St. Clair was signed by Warners yesterday, through Harry Wurtzel, to direct the Joan Blondell-Glenda Farrell picture, "Princess of Kansas City."

Union Labor Will Not File Complaints With Committee Which Has Him As A Member

Union labor yesterday definitely revolted against Pat Casey, chairman of the NRA Studio Labor Committee and chairman of the Producers' Labor Committee, when Local 37, IATSE, and the Federated Motion Picture Crafts, representing a total of approximately 6200 studio workers flatly served notice that no complaints will be filed with the Studio Labor Committee because of Casey's merbership thereon.

In Local 37 are electricians, property men, grips, property makers, special effect and miniature workers and set

Marx to Supervise Lupe Velez Picture

Sam Marx is preparing to take his first try at the task of supervising for MGM and is understood set to handle "Indecent Lady," a starring vehicle for Lupe Velez, as his first assignment.

Appointment of Jerry Sackheim as his assistant makes it possible for the story chief to venture into associate producer fields.

Grainger Home Sunday

James R. Grainger, general sales manager for Universal, who has been here for two weeks, leaves Sunday to return to his duties in the New York office.

Feist Jr. Set As Writer

Felix Feist Jr. moves into a spot on the MGM writing staff, the studio scheduling him for assignment today.

RKO Plans to Split Theatres-Pictures

New York.—J. R. McDonough, president of RKO Theatres, appears to be planning to separate the theatre interests from those of RKO-Radio Pictures, and there is also a movement on foot to divorce the interests of Keith-Albee-Orpheum from the RKO interests.

Bob Sisk has been instructed to devote all his time hereafter to handling advertising and publicity for the Radio pictures and will do nothing more for the theatres.

'100% Pure' Shelved Indefinitely by MGM

Because he did not agree with the changes in the story as ordered by the Hays office, Sam Wood yesterday asked to be relieved from the direction of "100% Pure" at MGM.

The studio has postponed the picture indefinitely. Wood immediately was assigned to handle "Stamboul Quest."

Spence To Do Screen Play of Skolsky Yarn

MGM yesterday assigned Ralph Spence to write the screen play for "Movie Queen," the Sidney Skolsky original. Writer just completed his work on "Student Tour," an original by Arthur Bloch and George Seaton, which Monta Bell will produce.

Lynn Farnol Sailing

NewYork—Lynn Farnol, publicity director for Samuel Goldwyn, will sail from Ireland for New York Friday, arriving May 3 and leaving for Hollywood three days later.

Radio-Pabst Close

Radio yesterday closed its deal with G. W. Pabst, through M. C. Levee, for the director to handle the next Francis Lederer picture, "Murietta."

PATHE MOVES TO GET BACK ON THE PRODUCTION MAP

New York — The first move by Pathe Exchange to get back into production, either in its own name or through financing others, came at the stockholders' meeting yesterday when President Stuart Webb was given an option to purchase blocks of both the class A and the common stock at a price agreed upon. All the officers were re-elected.

According to the story published in the Reporter on April 6, Webb wanted

THE LOW DOWN

In spite of the "all is peace" bulletins broadcast from Fox last week, we hear tell that the telephone conversation which really climaxed the bust-up between Winnie Sheehan and Lew Brown was full of "sound effects." When Lew got through telling Winnie that he was responsible for the success of "Stand Up and Cheer," but that he wasn't getting enough credit, etc., he got very mad and said he was going to tear up his contract, which had been signed with Sheehan but not yet okayed by the N. Y. office.

"Go ahead!" said Winnie. So Brown grabbed the contract sheets and TORE them over the telephone, right in Winnie's ears. Of course, there's no law against drawing up still another contract!

There is an angle to William Gargan's return to the MGM lot which all the chatterers seemed to miss—or maybe they just forgot. Bill is supposed to play opposite Loretta Young in "Professional Corespondent"—but about a year ago you couldn't get a nickel for his chances of working on that lot again. Because, at the time, one of their big stars was in an uproar over an interview which Gargan was supposed to have given out and in which he referred to this lady as a "very bad actress." The supposed remark cost him a job as her leading man at the time—and nobody ever thought he'd be putting in an appearance at MGM so long as this actress was there.

The assistant to a big film man is suffering from shock and chagrin at the moment, and here's why. On three different occasions during the past two weeks this fellow has caught the girl he thought was his very own, leaving (at very late hours) the apartment of his boss, who has taken an apartment in the same building for a hideaway. The fellow can't make a crack to either of the guilty parties for fear of losing "his" gal, or his [illegible]

New York REVIEWS

"TARZAN AND HIS MATE"

MGM prod.; director, Cedric Gibbons; writers, Edgar Rice Burroughs, James Kevin McGuinness, Howard Emmett Rogers, Leon Gordon.

Capitol Theatre

Sun: "Tarzan and His Mate," fantastic, half burlesque, quite incredible as it is, is still a lot of fun. It has all the thrills of a dozen dime novels, and with that former art director, Cedric Gibbons, in charge of direction, some highly effective movie jungle backgrounds, too.

Post: The second picture of the series, this "Tarzan" is, to borrow the circus phrase, bigger, better and more exciting than ever. For sheer entertainment, you could hardly ask anything better. A happy combination of showmanship, directorial skill and technical resourcefulness.

Journal: Here's one of the most exciting—and at the same time hilarious—jungle films ever made, even though the jungles are those of the California studios. It's packed with thrills that are piled one on top of the other. Fantasy and realism are merged in swift tempo.

News: There are thrills and thrills galore in the new Tarzan picture which opened before an almost hysterical audience at the Capitol Theatre yesterday. Cedric Gibbons, art director of MGM, handled his first megaphone job with great skill.

Herald-Tribune: The latest adventure of Hollywood's favorite ape man is not only a grand cinema show, but is, I believe, a genuinely brilliant motion picture. It has spectacular prowess, melodrama, imagination and humor, both intentional and unconscious, and it combines the virtues of fantasy and occasional realism.

American: There hasn't been anything like this one since the days of the Circus Maximus. "Tarzan and His Mate" is truly an amazing movie. It's one you mustn't miss.

World-Telegram: A movie natural. That's the only way to describe "Tarzan and His Mate." For it is one of the swellest entertainments of the year.

Times: "Tarzan and His Mate" is, if anything, even more fantastic than its predecessor. Aside from the wild tale, this film is a marvel from a photographic standpoint. Provides first rate fun for the fans of adventure thrillers.

"I'LL TELL THE WORLD"

Universal prod.; director, Edward Sedgwick; writers, Lincoln Quarberg, Frank Wead, Dale Van Every and Ralph Spence.

Roxy Theatre

American: We shudder a little to think how poor this one might have been without Lee Tracy. With him, even, it never rises above hackneyed mediocrity.

Sun: The Roxy's new film is a good deal better than most of its kind. In spite of its revolutionary setting, there is nothing phoney about the atmosphere.

Journal: Pleasantly diverting. The supporting cast is satisfactory.

News: It isn't Tracy's fault that "I'll Tell The World" isn't a smash hit as picture entertainment. It's the fault of the authors for letting a good newspaper yarn that started off with a bang get too fantastic in its plot.

Herald-Tribune: That Mr. Tracy can play a reporter with consummate skill is not to be denied. This accounts largely for the entertainment of "I'll Tell the World," whose tale has been repeated in pictures rather too often for comfort.

World-Telegram: A fast-moving, thoroughly entertaining little picture. In addition to a sprightly and eventful story, "I'll Tell the World" has the advantage of really authentic scenes.

Times: Mr. Tracy performs these assorted feats of reportorial derring-do in his own nervous, perfervid style, admirably combining a comic effervescence with an advanced state of apoplexy. His performance is an heroic effort to convince his audience that the lines he speaks and the things he does are fresh and funny, which they really are not.

Noffka Manager in U.S. For DeBrie Camera Firm

New York.—George Noffka has been appointed general manager in the United States for the Andre DeBrie cameras. H. R. Kossman remains as general sales manager.

Noffka leaves for the coast shortly to establish an office there and to show the new super-Parvo silent camera in the studios.

Emile Chautard Dies

Emile Chautard, formerly a director in the silent days and more recently known as an actor, died last evening at his home in Westwood. He was the stepfather of George Archainbaud. Funeral services will be held tomorrow.

Billie Burke Hostess

Billie Burke entertained at a luncheon yesterday in the commissary on the Radio lot in honor of Mrs. Frank Hutton. Among those present were Mrs. Will Hays, Dorothy Arzner, Glen Allvine, Patricia Zeigfeld, John Robertson, Diana Wynyard and Richard Dix.

Farjeon Set on 'Sailors'

Fox yesterday signed Herbert Farjeon to handle the dialogue direction on "She Learned About Sailors," which George Marshall directs. Farjeon just completed a similar job on "Merry Andrew" for the same studio. Deal was negotiated by the Sackin agency.

Rosenblatt to Talk M.P. Code Over Air

Washington.—Sol A. Rosenblatt will be the first person officially to discuss the motion picture code over the air when his address before the Society of Motion Picture Engineers, now convening at Atlantic City, will be broadcast tonight over a nation-wide NBC hook-up.

Rosenblatt will discuss the film code and will also speak on other NRA policies. It is the first time he has been on the air since his installation in office last summer.

Doris Kenyon to Tour In Concert in 5 Cities

Completing her work in "Whom the Gods Destroy" early next week, Doris Kenyon leaves for a concert tour in five mid-western cities before returning here for her next assignment at Columbia.

Player goes into "Broadway Bill," the Mark Hellinger story, which Frank Capra directs.

Louis Hyman on Trip

Louis Hyman, sales manager and vice-president of Principal Distributing Corporation, left yesterday on a five weeks business trip to exchanges in the East. Hyman returns in time for the start of "Peck's Bad Boy" at Mack Sennett studio.

Songsters For Goldwyn

Sam Goldwyn yesterday signed Walter Donaldson and Gus Kahn to write the music and lyrics for the Eddie Cantor picture. Leo Morrison set the ticket.

Mrs. Foy in Hospital

Mrs. Bryan Foy, wife of the producer, underwent a major operation yesterday at the California Lutheran Hospital.

June Knight Returns

June Knight returns today on the Chief, after a three months' vacation in Florida.

CHESTERFIELD'S 'QUITTER' EXCELLENT PROGRAMMER

Direction, Acting, Writing All Good

"THE QUITTER"
(Chesterfield)

Direction .....Richard Thorpe
Original and Screen Play..Robert Ellis
Photography .....M. A. Anderson
Cast: Emma Dunn, Charles Grapewin, William Bakewell, Barbara Weeks, Mary Kornman, Hale Hamilton, Jane Keckley, Edmund Burns (casting credits incomplete).

This is as nice a little program picture as you have seen in many a day. It is a homey, down-to-earth story, best described as comedy-drama, all about homey, familiar people. It is guaranteed to please any type of audience.

A mother has raised two sons, after their father, a man suffering from incurable wanderlust, has deserted her. The boys believe their father a hero killed in the war and revere his memory. Their mother has supported and educated them from the proceeds of a small community newspaper.

One boy returns from college with modern ideas about the newspaper business. Seeking to impress the wealthy girl he hopes to marry, he takes over the editorship and promptly throws the business into bankruptcy.

Meanwhile, the father has come back and is living unknown to his sons with the old printer who has stayed on the job all the years he has been gone. The father does not reveal himself until the time comes to set aright his priggish son. Then he again departs.

A simple tale but extremely well told, albeit almost entirely by dialogue. Yet Robert Ellis' dialogue is so good, few will notice the talkiness of the picture. Richard Thorpe has directed with a sympathetic understanding of the characters and takes full advantage of the frequent naturally humorous interludes. Photography of M. A. Anderson and production throughout is top-notch.

The performances of Emma Dunn and Charles Grapewin as the mother and father are flawless, two beautifully human portrayals. William Bakewell plays the selfish son, a deftly sustained piece of work. The other boy could not be identified by this reviewer from the limited screen credits at hands. He contributes one of the most believable adolescents we have ever seen. You will be hearing more of him.

Two other characters deserving notice are the maid Hannah, and the old printer, Zack. Unfortunately at this writing, we cannot say who played these roles either. Barbara Weeks, as the rich girl, Mary Kornman and others were uniformly excellent.

"The Quitter" is not the best sales title for as entertaining a picture as this.

New Fan Magazine

A new fan magazine, Hollywood Mirror, will make its appearance today. Jack Grant is the editor.

Flash! He Never Heard of Mae West

A professor in a girls' college in the South, explaining a point to a student, said: "If that isn't clear, come up and see me some time." The class giggled and the girl explained that Mae West had made that remark famous. Whereupon, said the professor, puzzled: "Mae West? Mae West? She isn't in my class, is she?"

Swanson Will Not Do 'Barbary Coast'

Gloria Swanson will not play the lead in Sam Goldwyn's "Barbary Coast," as had been planned.

Yesterday she arranged for the extension of her personal appearance tour to six weeks and, immediately upon her return to Hollywood, she will go into Irving Thalberg's "Three Weeks." Thalberg insists on starting his picture on schedule, and she will have to pass up the Goldwyn film.

Billy Gaxton to Radio For 'Afterwards' Cast

Radio yesterday signed William Gaxton to a long term deal and will give the player a spot in "Afterwards," which James Cruze directs.

Gaxton recently arrived here from New York, where he had the lead in the stage production, "Let 'Em Eat Cake."

Henry Hathaway Set For 'Honor Bright'

Following his successful work with "The Witching Hour," Henry Hathaway has been signed by Paramount to direct "Honor Bright." Gary Cooper, Carole Lombard and Guy Standing will be in it. The screen play is by Sylvia Thalberg and Austin Parker.

Venable-Taylor Team

Since "Double Door," Paramount has taken a liking to Evelyn Venable and Kent Taylor as a team and yesterday listed them for top spots alongside Pauline Lord, W. C. Fields and Zasu Pitts in "Mrs. Wiggs of Cabbage Patch."

Archainbaud Finishes

George Archainbaud yesterday brought in "Murder on the Blackboard" at Radio on schedule. Edna May Oliver and James Gleason headed the cast, which included Bruce Cabot, Gertrude Mitchell, Regis Toomey and Edgar Kennedy.

Butterworth Renewed

MGM exercised its option on Charles Butterworth, extending the player's ticket into his second year and putting him in the top spot in "Rear Car."

Flood Back to Para.

James Flood returned to Paramount yesterday and was assigned to direct "A Son Comes Home" as his next trick.

New Pictures on B'way This Week

New York.—"Tarzan and His Mate" and "Stand Up and Cheer" are the holdovers for the week at the New York picture palaces. The newcomers are:

"Beggars in Ermine," which opened at the Mayfair last night; "She Made Her Bed," at the Rialto, "We're Not Dressing," at the Rivoli, and "Twenty Million Sweethearts," at the Strand, today; "The Witching Hour" at the Paramount Friday, with George Jessel, Ethel Merman and Harriet Hoctor on the stage and, on the same day, "Journal of a Crime" at the Roxy and "Finishing School" at the Casino; "Upper World" at the Hollywood Saturday.

LaCava's First at MGM 'Duchess of Delmonico'

Gregory LaCava's first assignment for MGM will be "The Duchess of Delmonico," MGM yesterday announced, at the same time setting Clark Gable for the bracket spot with Jeanette MacDonald.

Nacio Herb Brown and Arthur Freed have been assigned to contribute the songs.

Chas. Christie to Make World Tour for Camera

Charles Christie, former comedy producer, has been made a vice-president of the Mitchell Camera Company and leaves shortly on a tour of the world in connection with the company's product.

He will sail next month for Japan and, after touring the Orient, will return through Europe, visiting all centers of motion picture production.

Buchman Bros. Teamed

Columbia yesterday signed Harold Buchman to collaborate with his brother, Sidney Buchman, on the original screen play of "Hello, Big Boy." Buchman recently completed his work on "Our Daily Bread" for Viking.

Ferber-MGM Part

Nat Ferber yesterday turned in his original, "Roundhouse Annie," winding up a two-picture deal with MGM. Ferber will complete a new novel he is writing about the New York City Italian colony.

Boasberg on 'Rear Car'

Al Boasberg checks in at MGM again as a writer, this time to handle the comedy in "Rear Car," which Harry Beaumont directs and Harvey Thew is writing under Lucien Hubbard's supervision.

'U' Signs Earl Eby

Earl Eby, leading man for some time time at Lela Rogers' Hollytown Theatre, was signed by Universal yesterday on a long term contract.

Connolly Due Today

Bobby Connolly arrives in town today, reporting to Warners on a term dance directing ticket.

Yesterday in NEW YORK with HELEN GWYNN

If business was poor in the picture houses this past week, there's a good alibi for it. Helen Kane was putting on a free show in court that had the public flocking to it in droves to hear all the variations of "Boop-oop-a-doop" that Helen and her alleged imitators could give. As a matter of fact, the courtroom was so crowded that it was impossible for reporters to get in unless they spent the night in the courthouse. But one trade paper representative had a sudden rush of inspiration and got one side of the case to issue a subpoena for him, demanding his presence in the courtroom. Not only did that enable the reporter to get in, but it entitled him to a seat 'way up front. Damned clever, these newshounds.

George Ross' book, "Tips on Tables," is the newest book on restaurants and night clubs to go into the best-seller class. Not only does Ross discuss wining and dining, but he takes time out to mention the celebrities and habitues of all the more famous places. However, that is not the point of the story. Some months before publication, he announced the title of his book and, a few days later, was surprised to get an offer from a theatrical producer, asking for the dramatization rights. The producer thought it was a story about spiritualism, and imagine her chagrin when she learned it was just a Cook's Tour of night spots.

You hear an awful lot about the silly statements that are made in moving picture advertising and there's a whole lot to be said on the subject, but picture advertising has yet to attain the high-water mark for nonsense that has been reached by advertising on standard products. Spring or something must have seriously affected the boys recently, because all in two days we found the following: "Imprisoned Carbon" as a catch line for a Club Soda. Surely that can't be exclusive with the manufacturers of that particular soda—some of our best friends suffer from the same thing. Then did you ever know you could buy a pre-shrunk bacon? Evidently the advertisers believe your stomach should get the same consideration that your back does and, if there are pre-shrunk shirts, why not bacon? Gimbels came out with the announcement of a sale of "Hurt Soap"! We didn't even know you could rub it the wrong way. Also there's an "Evaporated Horseradish" we'd like to try on some disappearing oysters some time. And for all the Hollywood golf enthusiasts there is now on the market a "Honey Center Golf Ball," which should enable any game to turn itself into a picnic on the links. It looks to us as though picture advertising offers the more sensible bargain for your money, even if you do hope that every picture will be better than colossal.

ALLIED STATES MEETING TALKS PRODUCTION PLAN

New York.—The question of the Allied States Exhibitors taking a plunge into the production field, which was discussed some weeks ago, came up for serious confabs at the Allied meeting at the Park Central Hotel yesterday.

The Eastern units of Allied were informed that, if $100,000 in cash could be placed on the line, Pathe was willing to back the series with raw stock and laboratory work to the extent of $900,000. The Allied leaders feel that, under this arrangement, they would be safe in going ahead.

The discussion yesterday even got as far as talk about players who are available, and among the names mentioned and agreed upon as good drawing cards were Conrad Nagel, Conway Tearle and Clive Brook.

The general sentiment of the meeting seemed to be that the entrance into the production field would be a wise step.

Technicians Sailing To Join Korda Firm

Lawrence Butler and George Teague, experts in process work, leave here Friday for London to join Alexander Korda's London Films Company. They sail from New York on he Aquitania on May 9.

They have been engaged particularly for work on the Fairbanks picture, "The Private Life of Don Juan," and the picture to be made from H. G. Wells original, "100 Years to Come."

Two Units For 'Yacht'

In order to speed up the production, Lou Brock has split the "Down to Their Last Yacht" company at Radio into two units and is handling one himself. Paul Sloane directs the picture.

Para. Trustees Turn Down DeMille Claim

New York.—The Paramount trustees met yesterday to take action on a number of claims against the company. They decided to oppose the payment of about $180,000 to Cecil B. DeMille, which he claims as percentage on a series of pictures he produced for Paramount before he rejoined the company the last time. Referee Davis will consider the case next week.

The trustees made three settlements. They gave $500 to the estate of Will MacMahon which had asked $7500 on the grounds that the Paramount picture, "Gun Smoke," was plagiarized from MacMahon's story, "Guns Aflame." The rights to John Colton's story, "China," written for the company, were given back to him to settle his claim, and the payment of $7500 to H. and M. Cort in the claim over "Once a Lady" was approved.

Rochelle Hudson East

Rochelle Hudson left yesterday with her mother on a motor trip to her home in Claremore, Oklahoma. She will return in three weeks to start another picture at Fox.

Players to Aid Shrine

Margaret Lindsay and Lyle Talbot will leave Saturday for San Francisco to participate in the Shrine convention at Tanforan racetrack.

Legit Player For MGM

New York.—Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer has signed Gladys George, an actress from the legitimate stage, and she is expected to leave for Hollywood soon.

Chicago Mayor Lets Hitler Film Be Shown

Chicago.—The Mayor has reversed his decision and "Hitler's Reign of Terror," which was closed at the Majestic Theatre, will be reopened tomorrow morning.

Thalberg Talks on Pix to Chamber of Commerce

Irving Thalberg was the principal speaker yesterday at a special luncheon of the Exploitation Committee and Advertising Club of the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce.

He spoke briefly on what the picture industry means to California, and urged that everyone put his shoulder to the wheel and help climb back to complete business recovery.

Hopkins Holds Up Pic

Paramount yesterday decided to call off production on "She Loves Me Not" for at least two weeks when it was found that the company could not shoot around Miriam Hopkins during the mending of the player's fractured ankle.

Keaton Short Starts

Charles Lamont puts the second Buster Keaton short for Educational, "Allez-Oop," into work today. Dorothy Sebastian and George Lewis have been signed for the cast.

Vacation For Muni

Paul Muni, who recently returned from Mexico, left last night for San Francisco on a week's vacation.

Hurd Officially Out Of Camera Local

Howard Hurd, for the past five years business representative of Local 659, IATSE, the cameramen's union, yesterday officially severed that connection.

For months Hurd has been the center of a controversy in the union ranks. Many of the men blamed him for the failure of the strike of last summer, while others rallied to his support. When a showdown came at a general meeting some weeks ago the union voted to retain him. However, he offered his resignation. The board finally accepted it, and negotiations toward the settlement of the contract, which still had more than a year to run and called for $23,000, were begun.

Yesterday the contract was wiped out. Hurd accepted a 50 per cent settlement, 10 per cent of which was in cash. Hurd would issue no statement yesterday.

McGreal to Warners

Mike McGreal, formerly assistant to John Arnold, head of the camera department at MGM, has been made head of the camera department at Warners, replacing Charles Clawner.

'Agent' Tests Done

Warners completed their sound tests yesterday of Leslie Howard and Kay Francis in preparation for "British Agent," which will begin production in a few days.

Labor Revolts Against Casey

dressers. In the Federated Crafts are assistant directors, script clerks, costumers, scenic artists, plumbers, sheet metal workers, plasterers, bill posters, laborers, machinists , molders, pattern makers, motion picture airplane pilots and upholsterers.

Laying the matter directly in the lap of Casey, Dick L'Estrange, secretary-treasurer of the Federated group in a letter to E. F. Smith, of the Studio Labor Committee, stated:

"This Federation must refuse to furnish complaints signed by individuals to your committee while the setup continues as at present. Mr. Pat Casey, member of the Labor Committee, is also chairman of the Producers' Committee, and we feel that he must be unfair to all complainants, or else dishonest in his dealings with the producers who pay him his salary."

Further, the letter stated that the members feel that if any of them filed a complaint with this committee, "he would be deliberately crucifying himself," and would be placing his livelihood in jeopardy.

The letter was sent to him in reply to a letter that was mailed by him a few days ago to both Local 37 and the Federated group, informing them that all complaints would have to bear the name of the complainant.

The reply sent by Lew Blix, business manager of Local 37, challenged the jurisdictional rights of the Studio Labor Committee, and declared that any and all complaints filed by the members of Local 37 would be sent directly to the NRA in Washington, and that none would be filed with the Studio Labor Committee.

The letter declared that this action is based on the belief that the workers cannot get fair treatment because Pat Casey, chairman of the labor committee, "being under the employ of the producers, is both directly and indirectly interested in having all complaints which might be submitted by employees, subdued or decided in favor of his employers."

Blix also charges that Casey in the past has been reported to have said that he thinks complainants are subjects "fit for psychopathic review" and that the present committee is definitely prejudicial.'

John Flinn Arrives For Code Meetings

John C. Flinn, executive secretary of the Motion Picture Code Authority, arrived by plane yesterday from New York for conferences with secretaries of Pacific Coast Grievance and Zoning boards and also to look into the workings of the code in the production end of the indusrty. He will meet Friday with the secretaries from Seattle, Portland, San Francisco, Salt Lake and Los Angeles. On his return trip, in about a week, he will hold similar meetings in Kansas City and Chicago.

He refused to make any statement about code conditions here, saying that he was not conversant with the situation as yet and therefore could not discuss it.

John Wayne's Illness Delays Start of 'Randy'

John Wayne's sudden illness yesterday prevented the starting of "Randy Rides Again" at Monogram.

Cecilia Parker is lost to the cast due to the late starting, as she had previously signed for another picture immediately upon the finish of the western. Alberta Vaughn replaces her.

Harry Fraser will direct the original story and screen play by Lindsley Parsons.

Grey Lead with McCoy

Columbia yesterday signed Shirley Grey for the lead opposite Tim McCoy in "Railroad Detective," which D. Ross Lederman directs when it goes before the cameras today. Stanley Mack and Addison Richards also in the cast. Richards deal negotiated by Kingston-Harris.

New Home For Santell

Al Santell, who will complete his present assignment for Radio, "The Life of Virgie Winters," starring Ann Harding, in eight days, will take his hammer and nails and leave for Idyl-wild, to help the carpenters on his new home, now nearing completion.

Warners-Goldwyn Case Off Till May 1

Sam Goldwyn yesterday dropped his intention to obtain a restraining order against Warners for continuing to use Busby Berkeley on "Dames" and paved the way, through this decision, to go to trial on his case in an effort to get a permanent injunction against the company.

An agreement was reached between Freston and Files, representing Warners, and Loeb, Walker and Loeb, for Goldwyn, whereby each will present the case May 1 to Superior Court Judge Emmett Wilson.

New Agency Starts to Handle Writers Only

Alex Paule, quitting acting, opened offices as an agent yesterday under the name of Paule and Wilma, celebrating the event by selling a story to Monogram.

The story, "If You Call the Dance," is by Helen Doherty, who joins the studio to write the screen play. The agency is located at 6538 Sunset boulevard. It will handle writers only.

Dick Powell As M.C.

Dick Powell will be master of ceremonies Saturday night at a dinner dance at the Ship Cafe in Venice, the proceeds to go to Los Angeles Sanitarium at Duarte.

PARA. DIRECTORS IN SUIT

TRADEVIEWS by FRANK POPE

•ONCE upon a time, my children, there was a Big Shot named Belshazzar. He was a king of Babylon, and he made a lot of money and he didn't care a rap what people said about him. He did exactly as he pleased, and if the people didn't like it, why, that was just too bad.

One night he was throwing a big party when, all of a sudden, some flaming writing appeared on the wall. Everyone was scared, but no one knew what it meant. Belshazzar offered a reward to anyone who could translate the words—"Mene, Mene, Tekel, Upharsin"—and along came Daniel, who knew. He told the king that he had been weighed in the balance and found wanting, that his kingdom would be taken away and he would die. And that night Belshazzar died and his kingdom was lost.

And the difference, my children, between Belshazzar and the moguls of the picture business is that Belshazzar was frightened by the writing on the wall and wanted to know about it, while the moguls either can't see the writing, or don't care how much writing there is about indecent pictures.

The warning is plain enough. The letters flame brighter every week. They have been written by organizations representing millions of people. The MPTOA wrote them a few days ago. The Roman Catholic Church has written them all over the country. The recent convention of the Daughters of the American Revolution has sounded the same warning, as have the Parent-Teachers Association and almost every big women's organization in the country. Mrs. August Belmont's Motion Picture Research Council is broadcasting the message all over the East. The Los Angeles Bar Association spread it here last week. No Daniel is needed to tell what it means.

"Dirt is anything out of place," a Kansas exhibitor wrote this paper last week. There are certain pictures, he admitted, in which smut and suggestiveness belong and, because they belong, there are few if any kicks. But it is the injection of smut "out of place" about which the loudest howls are being heard. It is the putting into pictures, without reason or excuse, of

Theatre Headaches In D.C. Boxing Bill

Washington.—President Roosevelt gave local theatre owners a lot of headaches yesterday when he signed the bill, which Congress passed last week, permitting both amateur and professional boxing in the District of Columbia.

Steve Roberts Goes To Radio For Four

Stephen Roberts yesterday signed a contract which will take him to Radio Pictures for four productions as soon as he completes his present Paramount contract. His first picture there probably will be the next Katharine Hepburn starring vehicle. Schulberg, Feldman and Gurney set the deal.

Roberts has been at Paramount for some time, one of his latest pictures having been "One Sunday Afternoon." He was set a couple of times to direct "Lives of a Bengal Lancer," but the story was shelved.

Sheldon to Europe For 6-Weeks Vacation

E. Lloyd Sheldon leaves May 15 on a trip to Europe, returning in six weeks to Paramount to place "R.U.R." into work. Waldemar Young will have the script ready for him, Mitchell Leisen to direct with Herbert Marshall up for the top spot.

Eckmann on Way Here

London.—Sam Eckmann Jr., British representative for MGM, sailed for New York today and probably will also visit the studios.

Trustees Trying To Recover $12,237,071 Expended in The Repurchase of Company Stock

New York.—Suit is to be filed today in the New York Supreme Court against the directors of Paramount-Publix who, between September 9, 1931, and March 7, 1932, authorized and approved the repurchase by Paramount of its own stock from various stockholders, the amount involved being $12,237,071.25. The trustees were instructed by Referee Davis to take this action after they had petitioned for permission to do so.

Root, Clark, Buckner and Ballantine, counsel for the trustees, advised them that, based on that firm's investigation of the facts and the law,

Columbia Making Tests For Talent in New York

New York.—Columbia is doing some extensive testing at the Lynn Shores studio in search of new talent. Bill Perlman came on from the coast with a cameraman and make-up man to do the work, and Harry Cohn is supervising it.

Doug MacLean Returns

Douglas MacLean returned to his office at Paramount yesterday after a three weeks vacation in Honolulu. His next for the studio will be "Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch."

Three Doubles a Week

New York.—The Cameo Theatre, on Forty-second street, has now switched to double features and will change three times weekly.

'U' Starting Hunt For New Talent

Prompted by casting difficulties on several productions, notably "The Human Side," during the past few months, Carl Laemmle Jr. is launching a campaign to find a list of players with star potentialities. The Universal production head has had to resort to numerous loan-out requests in the last three weeks.

Rian James has been assigned to operate the hunt locally, testing possibilities. Dave Werner, casting head, leaves for a swing around the country next week and a trip to Europe with the same instructions. He will be gone for three months, the longest period given a scout by the company.

Dan Kelly is slated to move into Werner's spot during his absence.

Para. Holds Nugent For 'Ladies Should Listen'

Paramount has extended Elliott Nugent's loan from Radio and has penciled the director in to handle "Ladies Should Listen" when he completes his work on "She Loves Me Not." Claude Binyon and Frank Butler have written the script and Douglas MacLean will produce. No cast assigned as yet.

Markey-Scola Will Do 'Adeline' Screen Play

Gene Markey and Kathryn Scola have been assigned to write the screen play of "Sweet Adeline," the Hammerstein-Curran musical, for Warners. Hugh Herbert has been assigned to the top spot.

Col. Buys Two Stories

New York.—Columbia has bought a story, called "100 Million Dollars," by Mel Baker and Jack Kirkland, and is closing negotiations for a story by Katherine Brush, titled "Maid of Honor."

ERPI NAMED IN ANTI-TRUST SUIT ASKING $15,000,000

New York.—A suit for $15,000,000, brought under the Sherman and Clayton anti-trust laws, was filed yesterday in the Federal Court for the Southern District of New York against American Telephone and Telegraph Co., Western Electric and Erpi. The plaintiff is the Biophone Sound Reproducing Corporation, of which Alfred Weiss is president, and the claim is for $5,000,000 actual damages, with triple damages under the anti-trust law.

The complaint alleges that the three corporations named caused a monop-

TRAPPIST MONK TO PLAY CHRIST IN KORDA FILM

London.—What is expected to be the most ambitious film yet attempted by London Films is slated to go into production within the next few months, according to report. It will be a picture of the life of Christ.

Present plans call for the portrayal of the role of Jesus by an unknown Trappist monk, who will leave his monastic cell to play the part and, when it is finished, will return with the full knowledge that the world will never know who played the Christ.

The entire picture will be made under the most reverent conditions and in an atmosphere of religion such as has never been seen in the making of any film. No one connected with the making of the picture will be given any screen or newspaper credit, not even Alexander Korda, who will direct it. It is expected that in the making of the film one of the most capable casts yet assembled will be gathered by Mr. Korda, who feels that the making of such a film is but a partial fulfilment of his sacred duty.

Expense will not be considered in the making of the picture, which will be done on an unparallelled scale of grandeur and magnificence. Many sequences will be photographed in the Holy Land.

Para. Backs Spanish Producing Company

New York.—Paramount is backing the formation of a new company which will make six Spanish features at the Eastern Service Studio at Astoria for Paramount distribution.

The star is Carlos Gardell, reported to be the greatest singer of the Argentine, who made three features for Paramount at the French studio at Joinville last year. The first of the three gets under way May 7.

Rushing 'Cat's Paw'

Harold Lloyd has decided to lay aside his desire to take his time in editing "Cat's Paw" and will rush it through during the next four weeks in order to have it ready for the Fox sales convention at Atlantic City May 30.

Term Deal for Fowley

Douglas Fowley was placed under a term deal by Universal yesterday through O'Reilly and Mann. Player takes it up when he finishes a contract with MGM.

Kibbee As 'Babbitt'

Warners will make "Babbitt" again, this time with Guy Kibbee in the most important role. Tom Reed and Niven Busch are working together on the screen play.

smut, of suggestive lines and situations, in much the same manner that small boys write dirty words on fences or on sidewalks.

We know that the great majority of the motion picture patrons of this or any other country do not want dirty pictures. Not only are they basically clean-minded themselves, but they certainly do not want their children to see and hear filth.

One would think that the sight of clergymen standing in their pulpits and warning their congregations not to go to certain pictures would open the eyes of the men who make those pictures, but it seems to have no effect. They promise clean pictures, they announce clean pictures, and then, in the middle of one, without reason, they write dirty words on the fences and the sidewalks.

Belshazzar was frightened and learned what the writing meant, but too late to save his kingdom. Sometimes history repeats itself.

N.V.A. Short To Be Seen By Millions

New York.—Major L. E. Thompson, chairman of the N.V.A. Drive, has announced the completion of the short subject which is to be the basis of this year's campaign. Stars who contributed their services include Walter Huston, Robert Montgomery, Lanny Ross, Jimmy Durante and Block and Sully.

The picture will be shown for seven days, beginning May 4 (N.V.A. Week) in all the theatres in the Paramount Publix, RKO, Loew, Warner Bros., Fox West Coast and United Artists circuits. About 2,500 non-circuit theatres from coast to coast have also agreed to run this short that week.

Lone Star Starting Seventh Wayne Western

Signing Cecilia Parker for the lead yesterday, Lone Star production at Monogram today puts the seventh John Wayne western, "Randy Rides Alone" into work with Harry Fraser directing from Lindsley Parson's original screen play.

Balance of the cast includes George Hayes, Yakima Canutt, Earl Dwire, Arthur Orteogo and Tex Phelps.

Mrs. Agnes Murphy Dies

Mrs. Agnes Murphy, 65, mother of Frank Murphy, chief electrical engineer at Warners, died yesterday at her son's home in Hollywood of a heart attack. Funeral services will be held tomorrow morning at nine from the Church of the Blessed Sacrament. Mrs. Murphy is survived by two other sons, Martin and Jay.

'THIRTY DAY PRINCESS' AN EXCITING, AMUSING COMEDY

Sidney, Grant and Gering High Spots

"THIRTY DAY PRINCESS"
(Paramount)

Direction .....Marion Gering
Author.....Clarence Budington Kelland
Screen Play.....Preston Sturges and Frank Partos
Adaptation.....Sam Hellman and Edwin Justus Mayer
Art Direction.....Hans Dreier and Bill Ihnen
Photography .....Leon Shamroy
Cast: Sylvia Sidney, Cary Grant, Edward Arnold, Henry Stephenson, Vince Barnett, Edgar Norton, Ray Walker, Lucien Littlefield, Robert McWade, George Baxter, Marguerite Namara.

Even with the impressive list of good mythical kingdom pictures for competition, Paramount's "Thirty Day Princess" makes a swell showing.

It is a lovely bit of hokum—unbelievable, exciting, romantic and gay. Its fantastic plot is embellished with dialogue that is witty, impudent and meaty, and with acting that is hyper and with direction that is super.

Occasionally the film verges on the satirical, but throughout it never loses its sense of humor or its spirit of good, honest fun.

Sylvia Sidney is blessed with a dual role that fits her both ways. She is seen as the Crown Princess of Taronia, and comes to make a tour of America under the auspices of an influential banker, Edward Arnold, who hopes to float a loan for Taronia. On the eve of her arrival in America, the Princess is hit with the mumps. One of the funniest scenes in the entire picture is where the banker in desperation addresses a gathering of detectives, all looking exactly alike in black derbies and with cigars, and instructs them to find a girl in New York who looks exactly like the Princess. And so they find Nancy Lane, a starving but still struggling actress, and Nancy becomes the Princess for thirty days.

One of her biggest jobs is to vamp the publisher of a paper, Cary Grant, into printing boosts for her country's bonds. And, of course, they fall in love with each other, Grant being miserable because of the gulf between him and the Princess, and Nancy being miserable because of the gulf between her and the great publisher.

Miss Sidney is very, very charming as the Princess, and very, very funny as the little actress. Cary Grant has never put more genuine spirit and vitality into a part than he does here. Arnold is good as the banker, Henry Stephenson is the King of Taronia, Vince Barnett is extremely amusing as the Princess' dumb fiance, Edgar Norton is well cast as the prime minister, Lucien Littlefield is amusing, as is Robert McWade, and Ray Walker, George Baxter and Marguerite Namara contribute a lot to the picture in smaller roles.

Marion Gering directed cleverly and with a keen sense of comedy; Preston Sturges and Frank Partos wrote the screen play, based on a Clarence Budington Kelland story, and Sam Hellman and Edwin Justus Mayer made the totally amusing adaptation. Art direction by Hans Dreier and Bill Ihnen is notable, and Leon Shamroy's photography is artistically outstanding.

No exhibitor in any town in the country will have difficulty selling this picture to his patrons. It is squawk-proof, and will make any audience happy.

Maybe Mussolini Is Interested In It

New York.—"The Life of Mussolini," written, directed, supervised and produced in Italy by Il Duce, has been sold for American distribution to Fairhaven Productions, the company formed by H. H. Rogers Jr., Lou Snitzer and Bill Alexander.

Monogram Signs Welsh As Producer

As the first step in his expansion program for Monogram Pictures, Trem Carr yesterday announced the signing of Robert Welsh, formerly with Universal and Paramount, as executive producer.

Welsh will take up his new duties immediately, and, on June 1, will take over the position now held by Lou Ostrow, present production executive, who goes to Universal June 1.

Laughton Due Here For 'Barretts' Next Month

Charles Laughton leaves London May 5 on the Berengaria, accompanied by his wife, Elsa Lanchester, and returns to Hollywood to do his role in "The Barretts of Wimpole Street" for MGM.

Studio will shoot as much of the picture as possible before suspending it to await Laughton's arrival.

Walburn with Rogers

Charles R. Rogers has signed Raymond Walburn to replace Alan Mowbray in "I Married An Actress," now in production at Paramount. Mowbray was committed to Universal previously and was unavailable.

Myers Out of Para.

Completing his one-picture deal with the script of "Mississippi," Henry Myers yesterday checked off the Paramount payroll. Picture will be the next for Lanny Ross and will be produced by Arthur Hornblow.

James on Hull Pic

Rian James will supervise the first of the Henry Hull starring pictures and is also collaborating with Gene Solow on the story for the Universal production.

Arlen Due Back May 15

New York.—According to cable advices at the Paramount office Richard Arlen will be back in Hollywood on May 15. He expects to sail from Europe on May 2.

'Me and the King' Set for Mae West

Mae West will star in "Me and the King," an original story by Marcel Ventura and Alexis Thurn-Taxis, Paramount buying the yarn yesterday at her request.

It will serve as the second on her two-picture a year contract with the company. "Queen of Sheba" is her next. She will write the screen play and William LeBaron will produce.

Cecilia Parker Signs For 'High School Girl'

Bryan Foy yesterday signed Cecilia Parker for the lead in "High School Girl," which Crane Wilbur gets before the cameras today. Others in the cast include Helen MacKellar, Noel Warwick, Carlyle Moore Jr., and Mahlon Hamilton. Script has been written by Wilbur and Wallace Thurmond.

George Marion Held at Radio For One More

Radio yesterday made another agreement with Paramount on George Marion Jr.'s services, getting the latter studio to push up its preparation on "Here's Your Quarter Back" until the writer can do one more job.

He will work under Pandro Berman on an original idea to co-star Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers.

MGM Troupe at Para.

MGM's "Jungle Red Man" exploration party has arrived at Para, Brazil, where it will outfit for the 1700 mile hop to Yarawate, which will serve as the expedition's base. It leaves for there the early part of next week.

Skipworth to Goldwyn

Alison Skipworth has been loaned to Samuel Goldwyn by Paramount for a top spot in "Barbary Coast," starring Anna Sten and Gary Cooper. William Wellman directs.

John Beal Assigned

John Beal's first assignment at Radio when he finishes the run of "She Loves Me Not" in New York will be in "A Hat, a Coat, a Glove." The William Morris office set the ticket.

Robson Not For 'U'

Universal lost out yesterday on its deal to borrow May Robson from MGM for "One More River" in view of the new contract which she is getting calling for starring and co-starring billing.

New Term for Meredyth

Bess Meredyth, who recently completed "Firebrand" and "Barnum," has been given a new contract for one year at Twentieth Century. Schulberg, Feldman and Gurney made the deal.

Ruben Back at Radio

Eddie Rubin has returned to the Radio lot to assist J. B. L. Lawrence, producer of "Hollywood on the Air."

Yesterday in NEW YORK with HELEN GWYNN

We can now give you a rough idea of the kind of reaction a strictly anti-Nazi picture would get if released throughout the country and you can draw your own conclusions as to the advisability of such a step and how much good it would do. The other day, someone went into the projection room to find out what was holding up the showing of "Unknown Blonde" at its preview, and found that a picture purporting to be the truth about Hitler was being run for an especially hand-picked audience. This film was made by the scion of a well known family while he was traveling in Germany some months ago. So those who had come to see "Unknown Blonde" waited and waited and waited, and finally someone again went into the projection room and a member of audience had started to make a speech, but he hadn't gone very far when the speech turned into an argument as to whether the scenes in the picture other than the newsreel shots were genuine. Which quickly led to a verbal battle as to the truth of the whole thing, its political and racial bias, etc., and just as quickly threatened to turn into a riot.

Fortunately, the hand-picked audience was summarily ejected from the projection room because their time was up. BUT the argument continued out into the hall and the first two reels of "Unknown Blonde" were practically completely lost because of the rumpus going on in the hallway. And this reaction, mind you, came from a group of people who had been asked because it was thought the picture would get sympathetic support from them. It seems to us that any picture of this kind is pretty dangerous material. It is impossible to get the truth, the whole truth of that particular situation, just as it has been impossible to get the truth about Russia, and certainly the newspapers have given it and are still giving it all the "exposure" it could possibly have. A far more subtle and far better propaganda can be spread by a picture like "House of Rothschild" and in a way that cannot possibly incite people to riot.

The newsreel end of the picture business has evidently come to a pretty sorry state. And practically the last straw in the matter was the separation of Fox Movietone and Hearst. At any rate, newsreels are hard to sell these days and there's certainly no room for another newsreel, so one company at least is resorting to blackjack methods in order to make exhibitors buy them. The head of a large chain of independent theatres in Greater New York was offered the choice of taking a major company's newsreel along with its feature product or not getting the feature product, and the exhibitor refused under those conditions, since he already had a newsreel for his houses. The salesman was apologetic and explained he was only acting under orders and the exhib could take it or leave it. This one left it and we hope there's enough product to go around for everyone else to refuse a bargain like that.

PARA. DIRECTORS TO BE SUED TODAY FOR MILLIONS

the suit should be brought on the grounds that the capital of the company was impaired by reasons of the stock repurchases.

The directors against whom the suit is aimed are Adolph Zukor, Sidney R. Kent, Sam Katz, John Hertz, Frank Bailey, Jules Brulatour, William H. English, Daniel Frohman, Felix Kahn, Gilbert Kahn, Austin Keough, Ralph Kohn, Jesse L. Lasky, Elek John Ludwigh, Sir William Wiseman, Eugene Zukor, Donald Stralem as executor of the estate of Casimir Stralem, and Eugene Zukor, Mel Shauer and Julia Shauer for the estate of Emil Shauer.

In addition to the amount already stated, the petition indicates that the recovery of interest is also possible.

The trustees are also investigating the possible liability of those stockholders who were the recipients of money or property in connection with these transactions. This is understood to mean the many theatre circuits who sold their chains to Paramount for stock and later took advantage of their contracts to force Paramount to repurchase that stock.

Adolph Zukor said yesterday that no officer or director of Paramount had had any interest in any of the theatre stock repurchase contracts and, in addition, the Paramount directors in these transactions had relied upon audits made by Price, Waterhouse and Company and Haskins and Sells. These audits showed, according to Mr. Zukor, that in December, 1931, the consolidated earned surplus of Paramount was over $29,000,000 before deducting $8,711,917 of the stock repurchases. He added that other accounting firms sustained the directors in performing the company's obligations to repurchase the stock.

Saul Rogers, counsel for the bondholders, said that, in his opinion, the suit of the trustees is being brought in good faith, and that, if they had not sued, he would have done so.

This is the second big suit filed by the trustees in their efforts to recover monies or preferences alleged to have been illegally given, the first having been the suit for $13,000,000 against the 12 banks which got preference as creditors through the Film Productions deal.

New Novel by Fallada

New York.—Hans Fallada, author of "Little Man, What Now?" has written a new novel now appearing in German, "He Who Has Eaten from the Tin Plate." The first edition of 20,000 copies was exhausted and a new edition will be published by Simon and Schuster early in the Fall.

First Woollcott Short

New York—"Mr. W's Little Game," Alexander Woolcott's first short, went into the Rivoli theatre yesterday. Lynn Shores directed and George Goman supervised.

New York.—The Embassy Theatre, which has been playing only Pathe News, has taken on Hearst-Metrotone News, Paramount News and the Universal-Graham McNamee reel and, in addition to this, a weekly scenic or a travelog short.

Flinn Digs Into Code Conditions

John C. Flinn, executive secretary of the Film Code Authority, met with the Los Angeles Grievance and Zoning Boards yesterday and discussed their problems and methods of procedure. Mrs. Kopple remains as secretary. He also met Pat Casey for a lengthy conference, but would give no statement regarding the discussion.

In the afternoon Flinn conferred with Lew Blix, business representative of Local 37, IATSE, and Dick L'Estrange, secretary-treasurer of the Federated Motion Picture Crafts and member of the Regional Labor Board, who laid the problems of their members before him.

Today he meets the secretaries of the Zoning and Grievance Boards of the west coast, and on Monday with the newly appointed Agency Committee, comprised of five producers, one agent, an actor, director, writer and technician. Flinn stated yesterday that the information he secures will be submitted to the Code Authority.

Pioneer Color Features Postponed Until Fall

Due to the absence of Merian C. Cooper, Pioneer Pictures has decided to postpone the making of its first feature by the new Technicolor three-component process until Fall.

Several stories are under consideration and a definite announcement is expected as soon as Cooper returns. Meanwhile plans are going ahead.

'MANY HAPPY RETURNS' A RIOT

Audience Howls at Burns and Allen Pic

"MANY HAPPY RETURNS"
(Paramount)

Direction ..... Norman McLeod
Original ..... Lady Mary Cameron
Screen Play ..... J. P. McEvoy and Claude Binyon
Adaptation ..... Keene Thompson and Ray Harris
Music and Lyrics ..... Arthur Johnston and Sam Coslow
Photography ..... Henry Sharp
Cast: George Burns, Gracie Allen, Joan Marsh, George Barbier, Ray Milland, Egon Brecher, William Demarest, Franklin Pangborn, Morgan Wallace, Larry Adler, Stanley Fields, John Kelly, Johnny Arthur, Kenneth Thomson, Velos and Yolando, Guy Lombardo's Royal Canadians.

Never have Gracie Allen and George Burns been given such an opportunity as in "Many Happy Returns." The piece is neatly tailored to fit their brand of comedy. And how it fits! It's a near riot from beginning to end. "Many Happy Returns" should spell just that at the box-office . . . Burns and Allen are, of course, the picture. They score in every appearance and Gracie is photographed to excellent advantage . . . Don't under-rate the drawing power of Burns and Allen in your advance campaign. At the Pomona preview last evening, the audience burst into applause at the sight of their names, a rare demonstration there.

COVER DISPLAY....Claudette Colbert (Paramount)

Publicity Space (Approximate)

Paramount	1058 sq. inches
MGM	581 sq. inches
Warners	556 sq. inches
Radio	290 sq. inches
Fox	290 sq. inches
Universal	198 sq. inches
Twentieth Century	80 sq. inches

With the May issue, Photoplay starts something new in the fan magazine field. It is running, in short installments, a fiction story, called "I Want a Baby," by Marilyn Herd.

Paramount grabs off the most space with "Beauty Pursues Earl Carroll," by Sara Hamilton; "I'd Never Let My Daughter Be a Star" (Sylvia Sidney), by Virginia Maxwell; a contest, "No More Crooners," conducted by the magazine and the studio, for a new tag for Bing Crosby; "Gentleman George," a rave on Raft by Kenneth Baker; and an amusing story in which Baby LeRoy tells about the Arlen baby in "ME Jealous of That Kid? Phooey!"

Leonard Clairmont writes "Greta Garbo Wanted to Be a Tight Rope Walker"; Mildred Mastin has an interesting yarn on D. W. Griffith, "The Star-Maker Whose Dreams Turned to Dust"; Ruth Rankin tells of Gloria Stuart's troubles in "And Was Gloria Burned Up!" James T. Tynan remembers when the Belgian royal family visited the old Thomas H. Ince studio, in "Just Leopold"; Kirtley Baskette has "Cruising Cowboy," in which he tells of Hoot Gibson's plans to make a picture in the Warners London studio, and Ruth Rankin offers two contrasting stories on Barrymore, "Jack the Bachelor" and "John the Husband."

George Kent has by far the most interesting story in the mag—"The Mammy and Daddy of Us All," in which he offers a brand new reason for the popularity of Mae West and Will Rogers.

Gropper Seeking Pix Stars for Plays

New York.—Picture stars for two plays that he wrote and will produce are being sought by Milton Herbert Gropper. He is now completing one, which he will produce this Fall and in which he hopes to set a well known name, and the other star is wanted for the road tour of "Sing and Whistle," which will open in Boston.

Gropper will also produce "Galloping Grandma," by Everett Dale, and Gropper's own "Every Minute Counts" is to be done by Edward Clark, of the Stage and Screen Academy, after Willard Mack's "Scarlet Fox."

'Ah Wilderness' Crowd Leaves on Try-out Trip

The "Ah, Wilderness" company left last night for Fresno to try out the Henry Duffy production Friday night before opening in San Francisco Monday.

The cast is headed by Will Rogers, and in supporting roles are William Janney and Mary Blackford. Russell Fillmore directed. The play will open at El Capitan in two or three weeks.

'Treasure Hunt' Title Of Eddie Cantor's Next

New York.—The title of Eddie Cantor's next picture for Samuel Goldwyn will be "The Treasure Hunt." Eddie will have the role of an African explorer.

Harold Smith Quits Sound Men's Union

Harold V. Smith, business representative of Local 695, IATSE, the sound men's union, handed in his resignation yesterday. It will become effective today. Smith has been with the organization since its inception, and had a contract which still has four years to run.

Neither Smith nor officials of the union would comment upon the settlement of the contract, other than to state that a satisfactory arrangement has been reached. Smith plans to take a vacation, he said, and would not discuss future plans.

The resignation follows close on the heels of the revelation a few days ago of the forming of a new sound men's association by sound recording technicians who have been dissatisfied with the way things have worked out in the union.

Herbert Van Dyke Dies

Herbert Van Dyke, for many years a second cameraman at MGM, died suddenly Tuesday night. Funeral services will be held Saturday at 2 o'clock from the Hollywood Funeral Chapel. Van Dyke was a member of the American Society of Cinematographers.

Bill Keeler, a grip at Paramount, was killed yesterday morning when his automobile figured in a crash on his way to work.

U. S. Films in 23 of 33 Paris Theatres

Paris.—The popularity of American films is increasing here, in spite of the antagonism of the French picture industry. Out of 33 major houses in Paris, 23 this week are playing pictures from the United States. Universal's "Invisible Man" is at three houses.

Strict Censorship on All Broadcast Scripts

The National Broadcasting Company has ordered a strict censorship on scripts prior to program broadcasting as a result of several suits instigated against the company because of material that got out over the air, allegedly damaging film players. The most recent of these is the Ginger Rogers suit.

Carlos Borcosque Big Shot in Buenos Aires

Buenos Aires.—Carlos Borcosque, Hollywood picture director, got a great reception when he arrived here with Ramon Novarro.

A squadron of planes bearing his name flew out over the bay to welcome him, Borcosque having been a pioneer in aviation in the Argentine.

Jean Jagger to Para.

Paramount yesterday signed Jean Jagger to a term contract and will bring the New York stage actor out here May 25. Jagger has appeared in "They Shall Not Die" and more recently in "Tobacco Road."

Erpi Named in Anti-Trust Suit

oly by pooling patents used in motion picture sound production and reproduction and that this forced Biophone out of business. Biophone, the complaint states, was in the business of manufacturing sound reproduction equipment and selling or leasing it to exhibitors, and four years ago Erpi filed suit against Biophone to restrain further sale of its product. This suit, Biophone says, has not since been prosecuted. Among the further allegations are:

That Erpi threatened exhibitors that, if they continued to use Biophone apparatus, they would be sued for infringement of Erpi patents;

That in the first four months Biophone was in business it sold $500,000 worth of equipment outright to exhibitors and subsequently got an offer of $750,000 from a banking house for a 49 per cent interest. This Weiss accepted but, before negotiations were completed, he was served with a notice of Erpi's patent infringement suit which caused the offer to be withdrawn;

That under the Erpi agreement with Vitaphone in 1926, Erpi forced Vitaphone to agree not to deal in any competing equipment, which had the effect of lessening competition and increasing the alleged monopoly;

That in 1928 Erpi granted other licenses to major producers and distributors, forcing them also to agree to use only Erpi equipment in their theatres;

That Vitaphone was also prevented by Erpi from leasing its pictures to any theatre not equipped with Erpi apparatus and that Erpi's licenses with exhibitors generally prevented them from using pictures made with sound equipment other than Erpi's.

It is believed here that this suit is the first of several that are to be filed against the same defendants, all with similar allegations. It is thought the total damages claimed will run from $50,000,000 to $100,000,000.

CHASE DUMPS FOX STOCK

TRADEVIEWS by FRANK POPE

•IF one may believe Mr. Hays, who represents the producers who make the bulk of the motion pictures of the country, we are in for an era of better pictures. In his capacity of attention-caller, he calls attention to the coming productions of "David Copperfield," "Vanity Fair," "Monte Cristo," "Rip Van Winkle," "Pickwick" and other great classics. In addition to these he promises "simple human pictures, dealing with everyday life, pictures that will reflect the great social trends of the day."

But—can one believe Mr. Hays implicitly? There have been times when his predictions have not been verified The promise is the voice of Hays, but the performance is in the hands of the producers.

Now, the question is, just what will those hands do. They may make classics, they may make "simple, human pictures," but will they make BETTER PICTURES? After all, that is the answer, and the only answer, to the problems that beset the industry. Better pictures mean more money at the box-office, more money all down the line and, what is most vital, the end of the double feature evil.

It is impossible to see how anyone can consider the grosses done by GOOD PICTURES and then believe that it pays to make mediocre ones. When the Music Hall in New York does $100,000 one week and $60,000 the next, that should tell something. And here are a few more facts:

In another column will be found some amazing figures on "The House of Rothschild," and add to these the fact that it is selling out week after week in New York, doing $22,800 in its sixth week at the Astor. "Rip Tide" has been held for three weeks in London at one of the biggests houses there and undoubtedly will go into a fourth at least. "Nana," called "Lady of the Boulevards," goes into a fourth London week. "Roman Scandals" goes into a second there and has a guarantee of twelve weeks. "Only Yesterday" and "Wonder Bar" are other London sensations.

There is only one answer—GOOD PICTURES. If they are good they do business. If they are not, they do not. It is as simple as ABC. Yet,

New N.Y.City Tax To Soak Industry

New York.—The proposed New York City tax of one-twentieth of one per cent on all gross business will be a blow both to theatres and to all film companies incorporated in New York State.

If the tax goes through, neighborhood houses of the 600-seat type will pay approximately $18 a year, 1500-seat houses about $90, 3000-seat houses around $780, and the big theatres, with 5000 to 6000 seats, about $2000.

The plan is to have the tax run one year. The New York film corporations will get heavy blows, although it cannot yet be estimated just how much.

Hecht-MacArthur Will Start Production May 20

New York.—Ben Hecht and Charles MacArthur, who are to make three pictures at the Astoria studio for Paramount release, will start the first one on May 20.

This will be one of their own stories, as yet untitled. Casting will start next week.

One-third Of Holdings Sold To N.Y. And British Interests And Option Given On Balance

New York.—The Chase National Bank is divesting itself of all its holdings of Fox Film Corporation stock. It has already closed a deal by which one-third of its holdings, or 583,135 shares, go to a New York financial group which has some British interests associated with it. The selling price is said to be $15 a share, which makes Chase take a heavy loss.

With this sale goes an option to the buying group for the remaining two-thirds. The news of the deal affected the stock market, the Fox stock jumping to a close of 17 3/8.

It is expected that the new interests will have representation on the

With "Babbitt" already scheduled, Warners has decided to make two pictures from Sinclair Lewis' books and has also placed "Main Street" on the production sheet. Erwin Gelsey will write the screen play.

'Rothschild' Rolls Up Record Receipts

"The House of Rothschild" is doing some amazing stunts at box-offices in various sections of the country. Its first three openings, outside of the road show engagements, were at Portland, Oregon, Stamford, Conn., and Chicago.

Figures received at the offices of Twentieth Century here show that, in Portland, it did more business in its first four days than "The Bowery" did in a week and "The Bowery" was held over. In Stamford its first week topped "The Bowery" by $1500, and in Chicago, where it opened Wednesday, the opening day receipts were $600 more than "The Bowery." And in each of these places "The Bowery" business was called capacity.

RESOLUTION IN SENATE DEMANDS A.T.&T. PROBE

Washington.—Government investigation of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company came closer yesterday when Senator Dill introduced a resolution in the Senate authorizing the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee to investigate the A. T. & T. and all its subsidiary companies.

Among things to be looked into, if the resolution carries, will be the extent of the inter-service contract between the parent company and Western Electric, which will reach into Erpi. It will also investigate the holding company structure, which enables the communication concern to evade state and federal regulation and taxation.

THE LOW DOWN

Some of the wise ones around town are betting that a once-big star recently signed up for her "fourth comeback" by a big studio, will never make a picture there. Y'see, when a certain producer on that lot first wanted to sign her, his family was very much against it. They argued that the star was not only passe, but would probably get herself front-paged again for some more unpleasant publicity and that she was a bad risk. The producer argued that he thought she was still a good bet—but promised that if the star got herself into any scandal, he would never make a picture with her. Well, the star is once again on the verge of a front-page mess, which all the insiders are already aware of. So the bets are that the actress now on a personal appearance tour, will either stay on the tour indefinitely or be stalled, far as pictures go.

Jean Muir is all burned up at the Warner publicity department for letting those stories be planted about her supposed big crush on George Brent. Maybe she has one and maybe she hasn't—but when Brent read in the papers that he and Jean Muir were exchanging glances—he cancelled all dates to take Jean flying around in his flying-machine. Brent is the cagey type about romances, it seems—and he was a little annoyed on his own account.

MGM hasn't made up its mind yet whether it will be an all-Chinese cast in "Good Earth" or not. But we hear that the stuff which has already arrived from China, where George Hill has been shooting, is super-extra. Incidentally, Frances Marion leaves Hollywood Saturday and will meet Hill and the returning company in Honolulu and come back here with them immediately, getting in a lot of hectic writing on the trip.

Fox Buys 'Serenade'

Fox has purchased "Serenade," an original by Rex Beach and Richard Carroll, and has assigned Sally Sandlin to do a treatment. Paul Martin will direct and Sol Wurtzel will produce.

'SADIE McKEE' SWELL PICTURE; U's 'AFFAIRS' GOOD THRILLER

Crawford, Arnold, Brown Highlights

"SADIE McKEE"
MGM)

Direction .....Clarence Brown
Story by.....Vina Delmar
Screen Play.....John Meehan
Photography .....Oliver Marsh
Starring .....Joan Crawford
Cast: Gene Raymond, Franchot Tone, Esther Ralston, Edward Arnold, Jean Dixon, Akim Tamiroff, Gene Austin, Earl Oxford.

A picture well-tailored for the talents of Joan Crawford, and a surefire audience bumper is 'Sadie McKee." It is still another and very modern version of the Cinderella theme, gorgeously mounted, with melodramatic and comedy overtones. The picture in preview dragged in several spots, but it is obvious that a little trimming (mostly in the latter half) will put "Sadie" right into the swell entertainment class.

You'd have to go a long way to find a finer cast than that which fills the bill on "Sadie McKee," and the direction of Clarence Brown is something to rave about. Particularly his attention to detail and his handling of the picture's lighter moments. Personally, we regret that these lighter moments were not retained for the film's length, though we are fully aware that heavier sequences are made of the stuff that fans cry for.

It is a credit to the lovely Joan Crawford that her fine, straightforward performance was not completely overshadowed by the seasoned and rousing work of Edward Arnold, who all but "wraps the picture up and walks away with it." He is the drunken, party-loving millionaire who marries Joan in a moment of sentimental bibbing, only later to love her deeply and lose her. Arnold's drunken screen moments are classics, and the scenes in which they occur are the comedy highlights of the picture, but he matches his own comedy talents with equally swell dramatic ability in later scenes.

Gene Raymond, (he can sing!) is very good as the real love interest; while Franchot Tone, burdened with a thankless, sanctimonious role, is O. K. Jean Dixon registers heavily as the hard-boiled companion of Joan . . she got the laughs. And that goes for Zelda Sears in her brief appearances as a boarding-house keeper. Esther Ralston, Earl Oxford, Gene Austin, "Candy and Coco" too, must be mentioned for effective contributions.

The screen play of John Meehan's with its expert writing and amusing dialogue, raises the picture to a level it might otherwise not have attained, making it a definite attraction for any theatre. "Sadie McKee" is a humdinger for the femme patrons—what more can you ask?

Pagano Out of Educ.

Ernest Pagano is out of Educational and leaves on a trip to South America, bringing to a close nearly three years with the short subject producing company where he has been story editor and scenario writer.

Jessica Dragonette Signed by Paramount

New York. — Paramount has added to its list of radio luminaries by signing Jessica Dragonette to a term contract. She will not go to the coast until late in the Summer.

Hornblow Halts Start of 'Pursuit of Happiness'

The start of "Pursuit of Happiness," Arthur Hornblow's first production for Paramount, has been set back to the end of May. The script has been completed and approved for immediate shooting, but the subject loomed up as important enough to be held until a suitable male star is secured for the lead.

It is reported that Paramount is interested in Francis Lederer for the role, with RKO watching development of its own next Lederer story before consenting to the deal.

Goldwyn Productions Going Big in London

London.—Sam Goldwyn's two pictures have settled down for healthy runs here, with Anna Sten in "Lady of the Boulevards" ("Nana") starting on its fourth week at the Tivoli and Eddie Cantor's "Roman Scandals" beginning its second week at the Leicester Square. Box office receipts for the first week of the latter have caused the theatre to give Goldwyn a twelve-week minimum guarantee.

Fox Term for Pascal

Fox yesterday signed Ernest Pascal to a long-term contract, the writer finishing a one-picture deal on the screen play of "Grand Canary" for Jesse Lasky. The Schulberg, Feldman and Gurney office negotiated the deal.

Para. Buys Woollcotts

New York.—The first of the Alexander Woollcott shorts, called "Mr. W.'s Little Game," has been purchased outright by Paramount, and it is understood the company will buy the series.

Novel Treatment of Fine Mystery Yarn

"AFFAIRS OF A GENTLEMAN"
(Universal)

Direction.....Edwin L. Marin
Authors.....Edith and Edward Ellis
Adaptation.....Cyril Hume and Peter Ruric
Photography .....John Mescal
Cast: Paul Lukas, Leila Hyams, Patricia Ellis, Onslow Stevens, Phillip Reed, Dorothy Burgess, Lilian Bond, Joyce Compton, Murray Kinnell, Dorothy LeBaire, Richard Carle, Wilfred Hari, Sara Haden, Charles Wilson, Gregory Gaye.

Based on the play, "Women in His Life," the Universal picture, "Affairs of a Gentleman," offers a novel way of presenting a murder mystery.

Furthermore, it offers a highly interesting group of characters, each one of whom is believable, human and excellently drawn, and each unwittingly adds to the mystery.

The film opens with a shot, and Gresham, a famous novelist (Paul Lukas) is found dead at his desk. The bewildered butler and Chinese chef finally pull themselves together sufficiently to phone the police and Gresham's publisher, Richard Carle. In the meantime, and quite naturally, the group of friends has gathered. The inspector gets nowhere rapidly, until a chance slip on the publisher's part leads to his decision: "Well, I'm going to keep you all here until each one of you tells all you know."

Then the picture goes back and picks up the series of events beginning with the publisher's inadvertent remark.

So many complications pile up that the perfectly simple solution for the murder (which looks like a suicide) is doubly effective, and the solution reaches the audience just before the inspector arrives, ending the picture exactly where it began. Whether or not the inspector ever solves the mystery is left to the audience's imagination.

The picture is intriguing now because of its mechanics. It will be dramatically interesting when a lot of much-needed cutting is done and the thing speeded up considerably. The direction, by Edwin L. Marin, is spotty, achieving at moments good suspense and going suddenly listless at other times.

Paul Lukas is polished, as usual; Dorothy Burgess turns in a good job as the girl with the jag; Sara Haden is uncannily fine as the secretary. Patricia Ellis, Lilian Bond, Leila Hyams, Joyce Compton and Dorothy Le Baire are good types for their parts. Richard Carle brings a callous, emotional shrug to his part that is stunning characterization. Onslow Stevens is the enraged husband, and Phillip Reed is Miss Ellis' fiance.

Cyril Hume and Peter Ruric adapted the play by Edith and Edward Ellis.

When the picture is cut, exhibitors may bank on a pretty fair entertainment feature, distinguished principally by Sara Haden's performance and the dramatic novelty of the story.

'LAST GENTLEMAN' SURE FIRE; 'MISS MARKER' CERTAIN HIT

New Arliss Comedy Worthy of the Star

"THE LAST GENTLEMAN"
(Twentieth Century)

Direction .....Sidney Lanfield
Author .....Katherine Klugston
Screen Play.....Leonard Praskins
Art Direction.....Richard Day
Photography .....Barney McGill
Cast: George Arliss, Edna May Oliver, Janet Beecher, Charlotte Henry, Ralph Morgan, Edward Ellis, Frank Albertson, Rafaela Ottiano, Donald Meek, Joseph Cawthorn, Harry C. Bradley.

A brand new comedy about a crochety old gent who has a fortune to give away, that has a novelty finish that will wow the paying customers, and there is no doubt of the fact that there will be plenty of paying customers for this latest George Arliss opus. Arliss goes back to being his old gruff, but kindly self, gives it everything he's got and, with the aid of a story that does his pet characterization proud, gives Twentieth Century another winner that is good news for the whole family.

Old Cabot Barr calls his family together to "celebrate" memorial services for a niece who died in China. Not that he cared so much for the niece, but he was anxious to see the family and have them see him. He has only one living son, a worthless bounder who is out to insure the fact that he will be Barr's sole heir. Barr's other son had died and had left as issue only a daughter, and daughters were strictly against old Barr's wishes. A sister of Barr's has adopted a boy.

To make the story come to a quick end, Barr succeeds in marrying off the grand-daughter to the adopted son and making them keep the name of Barr so that the family will not die. BUT, the way in which he accomplishes his ends is the surprise kick of the picture and it's so good we can see no reason for spoiling the pleasure of it by giving it away. See it for yourself.

As usual, Mr. Arliss takes first honors for the success of the picture, but make no mistake about the fact that Leonard Praskins' writing keeps that success at a high level, and the original idea of Katherine Klugston's is a honey. Besides which, the memorial services held for the dead niece, with Joseph Cawthorn in the role of a minister whose voice keeps fading away, are high spots that will rock your house with laughter. Edna May Oliver, Janet Beecher and Edward Ellis are simply elegant, with Ellis giving a standout performance as the butler. Frank Albertson is a pleasant juvenile, whom it is a pleasure to see again, but the kindest thing to say about Miss Charlotte Henry is nothing.

Barney McGill's camera work isn't quite up to his usual standard. In fact there are a few scenes in which the principals talk almost completely in the dark. Lanfield's direction is brisk and accounts greatly for the fact that the picture seems a whole lot shorter than it is. All in all it is a worthy follow-up to Arliss' "House of Rothschild" and keeps his career well-balanced between drama and comedy.

Ray Enright Gets 7-Year Warner Term

Warners yesterday gave Ray Enright a new seven year ticket. Director, who started with the company as an assistant film cutter 12 years ago, is now directing the dramatic sequences in "Dames."

Fox and Paramount Bidding for Del Ruth

Fox and Paramount have offered Roy Del Ruth deals to direct pictures during the Twentieth Century production lull.

Scripts have been submitted but he has so far declined to accept on the ground that he does not wish to take the studio's money unless he is convinced he can deliver a satisfactory picture. If he cannot get one that he wants to do, he will take a trip to Europe.

'Edwin Drood' Second Dickens Yarn for 'U'

Universal will make two Charles Dickens stories on its new slate, handing Edmund Grainger the task of supervising "Edwin Drood," while Stanley Bergerman, as previously announced here, looks after "Great Expectations."

Lynn Riggs was signed yesterday through the Edington and Vincent office to write the screen play for "Edwin Drood."

Rose Franken to Fox

Rose Franken takes her first try at picture writing, joining the Fox Western Avenue unit under Sol Wurtzel yesterday to collaborate with Phillip Klein on "The State vs. Eleanor Norton." The Edington and Vincent office set the ticket.

Mary McCall to Warners

Warners has purchased "A Lady Surrenders," an original by Mary McCall, and has signed the author to do the script. Studio has no definite production plan on the picture as yet.

Bruckman-Long at MGM

Clyde Bruckman and Hal Long have been given writing contracts at MGM and assigned to the Lucien Hubbard unit. No writing assignments have yet been given them.

Bertholon Back to Mono.

George Bertholon returned to Monogram yesterday to handle the production of "King Kelly of the U. S. A.," which he authored in collaboration with Howard Higgin.

Hazard Signed by Fox

Warners has signed Lawrence Hazard to write the screen play of "Saturday's Children," Maxwell Anderson's play. No cast or director set as yet.

Hall on Sidney Pic

Alexander Hall has replaced Stephen Roberts as director on "One Way Ticket" at Paramount, starring Sylvia Sidney.

Cast, Direction, Story All Score

"LITTLE MISS MARKER"
(Paramount)

Direction .....Alexander Hall
Original .....Damon Runyon
Screen Play: William R. Lipman, Sam Hellman, Gladys Lehman.
Music and Lyrics.....Ralph Rainger and Leo Robin
Photography .....Alfred Gilks
Cast: Adolphe Menjou, Dorothy Dell, Charles Bickford, Shirley Temple, Lynne Overman, Frank McGlynn Sr., Jack Sheehan, Cary Owen, Puggy White, Sleep 'n Eat, Tammany Young, Sam Hardy, Edward Earle, John Kelly, Warren Hymer.

Here is a large helping of sentimentality, served with a lavish hand. Based upon the same formula, in fact, by the same original author, Damon Runyon, it should appeal to the same audiences that laughed and cried at "Lady for a Day." And you know what that means to the box-office. This is the second B. P. Schulberg production on successive evenings and the second hit.

It is a baby girl instead of an old lady whom the tough gamblers take to heart in "Little Miss Marker." She gets her name because she was left as security by her father for a "marker," more easily identified as an I.O.U. for a racing bet. As the father does not return to redeem the human security, bookmaker is compelled to keep the child. She immediately starts winning over the rowdy denizens of the racing racket. They do not realize their interest in the kid until she begins to pick up their rough language and equally rough ways.

The baby's mother had taught her the tales of Knighthood in King Arthur's court. Hoping to re-establish the legends in her mind, her underworld friends agree to a masquerade in knightly armor. Mounted on the race horse, her "charger," she leads the muggs in parade, while they sing "East Side, West Side." A fall from the horse sends the little one to the hospital and a last-minute blood transfusion serves for a real tear-jerking finale.

Interwoven with this basic plot is a crooked scheme to frame a race and the love interest of the shabby bookmaker for the big-shot gangster's moll.

That amazing four-year-old, Shirley Temple, delivers a truly astounding performance. If we may advance a suggestion, however, her singing of a torch song could be cut to advantage. All right, suppose it did get a hand at the preview (mostly from the studio section), the subsequent reaction was unfavorable. Having a baby sing something about a "son of a gun" only unduly stresses her precociousness, which should not be stressed. A natural child is far more appealing.

It is to the distinct credit of the adult members of the cast that they were not all merely feeders for Shirley. Adolphe Menjou, stripped of every familiar mannerism, contributes probably his finest characterization as the bookie. Dorothy Dell looks better and better with each picture. Her screen success is assured. Charles Bickford plays a gangster with his usual assurance, and Lynne Overman scores heavily with every line. The others all have their moments, and all good, with Warren Hymer and John Kelly particularly outstanding as nursemaids, nee prizefighters.

The screen play by William Lipman, Sam Hellman and Gladys Lehman, contains some fine dialogue, and Alexander Hall's direction does not miss a trick. Several times obvious situations threaten, only to be avoided by a deft twist. Camera work by Alfred Gilks excellent.

Your campaign will have to explain the title, which should not be difficult. Once explained, it will intrigue and the rest is clear sailing. "Little Miss Marker" is sure-fire sentiment.

Radio Sound Men Resent Orphaning

A storm of protest broke yesterday among the 350 radio sound men who comprise the radio section of Local 695, IATSE, when they learned of the resignation of Harold V. Smith as business representative.

Their squawk was that, after they had been sold on the IATSE and had been organized in all the big cities of the Pacific Coast, they are now to be left hanging on a limb as the sound men pull out of Local 695 and go into the new sound recording engineers' association.

A committee of two, Ernest Roberts and James Brown, saw Smith yesterday. Today a larger group will meet him in an effort to work out some deal whereby they will not be left as orphans.

Paul Kelly Signed Up For 'Barbary Coast'

Although "Barbary Coast" cannot go into production until Anna Sten finishes "Resurrection," casting on the Sten-Cooper feature is being continued by Sam Goldwyn. Paul Kelly was signed yesterday.

Rouben Mamoulian expects to start camera work on "Resurrection" by June 1, with William Wellman being ready to start "Barbary Coast" immediately afterward.

Para. Sells Original To Liberty Magazine

Liberty magazine has purchased the publication rights from Paramount to "Twenty Hours By Air."

Paramount purchased the original from the authors, Bogart Rogers and Frank Dazey and will use it for Claudette Colbert and Gary Cooper.

Warners Plan to Make 26 at Teddington Plant

London.—The program of pictures to be made by Warner Brothers at their newly-purchased Teddington studio will include 26 features. It is understood that they will cost around $1,250,000.

Pertwee-Boylan Team

Roland Pertwee and Malcolm Stuart Boylan have been signed by Warners to handle the dialogue for "British Agent" under the supervision of Robert Presnell.

BRITISH PRODUCTION BOOMS, WITH MANY BIG ONES IN WORK

Korda London Films Leads The Parade

London.—With the spectacular rise of the London Film Productions, Ltd., producers of "Henry VIII" and "Catherine the Great," British film production has taken an unprecedented spurt, and present indications are that from now on British pictures will cut a big figure in the amusement field throughout the world.

For years there has been a belief that no great world film could be turned out in the British Isles. But, with the coming of London Film Productions and the production mind of Alexander Korda this bugbear was destroyed, and Britishers have discovered that they can crash the theatre gates of the world.

When "Henry VIII" appeared, Britishers sat back aghast and wondered if it was a flash in the pan or just the start. In practically every great city in the world the picture was packing thousands into the theatres. In America alone it was booked into 5800 theatres.

Then came "Catherine the Great." Again the theatres of the world welcomed a British picture. More than 6000 theatres in the United States booked it.

Now, every film producing company in England is plunging ahead into a fever of production such as this country has never known, with every company endeavoring to produce pictures with stuff in them that will make them a world product.

London Film Productions, Ltd., has the most ambitious program of all. "The Private Life of Don Juan," with the Senior Fairbanks in the starring role, is the next picture on the list, and now in production.

On the schedule is "The Hundred Years to Come;" an original by H. G. Wells. "Commissioner Sanders of the River," by Edgar Wallace, is another. Already a company has spent five months in the jungles of Africa filming scenes in which twenty thousand natives take part.

The company will star Charles Laughton in two specials, one written by Frederick Lonsdale, the other by Lajos Biro and Arthur Wimperis, who created for him his "Henry VIII." Baroness Orczy's "The Scarlet Pimpernel" is another on the list. Robert Sherwood will write a story for Maurice Chevalier. "The Field of the Cloth of Gold," picturing another chapter of English history, will be another Laughton picture, and in the cast will be Chevalier, Fairbanks, Jr., Merle Oberon and Flora Robson. Alexander Korda will supervise them all.

In other studios, Sound City Films is producing "Radio Pirate," with Tamara Desni and Anthony Kimmins heading the cast and Ivar Campbell directing. Irving Asher is producing "Something Always Happens" for Warner British at Teddington.

At the Stoli studios "Danny Boy," a Butcher production, is at work, with Dorothy Dickson, Frank Forbes-Robertson and Archie Pitt in the cast, and Manning Haynes directing. J. Walter Ruben is directing "Java Head" for Associated Talking Pictures.

At the Gaumont British and Gainsborough Studios, "Chu Chin Chow" is in production, under the direction of Walter Forde, and Tim Whelan is directing "The Camels Are Coming." "Forbidden Territory," a Wainwright production, is also in production at the same studio, with Phil Rosen directing. "Little Friend" is another at this studio.

At British International "Blossom Time" is being produced under the direction of Paul Stein. "The Great Defender" is another in production. Others for this company are "The Lost Lord," directed by Marcel Varnel; "Death on the Footplate," directed by Walter Summers; "Give Me a Ring," directed by Arthur Woods; and "Lost in the Legion," which Fred Newmeyer is directing.

British Lion is making "Night Mail," with Herbert Smith directing. At St. Margaret's Julius Hagen is producing "Bella Donna," with Conrad Veidt heading the cast and Robert Milton directing.

"Nell Gwynn" is in production at British and Dominions under the direction of Herbert Wilcox. The same company is also making "The Girl in the Flat," with Redd Davis directing a cast headed by Belle Chrystall, Vera Bogetti, Stewart Rome, John Turbull and Ada Peel.

Paramount to Build Big Glasgow Theatre

London.—Paramount is planning to build a theatre in Glasgow that will be in the "super" class. In view of the extensive plans, the city government has agreed to relax certain of its building regulations to permit novel features to be installed.

N.S.W. Film Probe Angers Taxpayers

Sydney.—Local taxpayers are beginning to wonder whether or not the New South Wales Government Film Inquiry will be worth the cost. Already the expense has reached an estimated $65,000, and the inquiry drags on.

Close to 100 witnesses have been examined, and the testimony now fills 2265 pages of foolscap. Much dirty linen has been aired in public, and a lot of it has been hung out to dry in secret, but John Public is yelling that there have been no results.

Fox directorate. The present Chase directors are H. Donald Campbell and H. G. Place. Harley Clarke is also still a director. Until such time as the option is taken up, Chase will still retain financial control of Fox.

Hollywood.—Sidney R. Kent, president of Fox Film, when asked last night about this deal, said that he knew it had been on and he understood it had been completed so far as the sale of one-third of the bank's holdings was concerned. He did not know, he said, who the New York interests are, nor did he know the identity of the British group, although he was sure that the New York rumor that it was British Gaumont was incorrect.

Spain to Protect Its Own Pictures

Madrid.—A plan is now before the Spanish Cabinet which, if it is approved, will result in the forcing of Spanish theatres to show five per cent Spanish pictures, will bar foreign talking films carrying Spanish subtitles, and will decree that all "dubbing" of films in the Spanish language will have to be done in this country.

The proposed plan was conceived by Ricardo Samper, the Spanish Minister of Industry and Commerce for the purpose of protecting the Spanish picture industr and furthering its production plans.

Tradeviews

for some inexplicable reason, picture producers can't see it. One would think that figures would open their eyes, would spur them on to make other pictures that would be as profitable as the good ones that are playing now. But they keep along in the same old rut. If they want to put the business back on its feet, if they want to see black figures instead of red, there is just one way:

FOX-GAUMONT MAY JOIN

TRADEVIEWS by FRANK POPE

•IN an interview given in New York recently, Adolph Zukor said:

"We (Paramount) pioneered in many fields, but always with the showman's angle in mind. We got into trouble only when we lost sight of the all-important fact that we were showmen, first, last and always."

Mr. Zukor has a habit of hitting the nail on the head. This time he hit it squarely. The great, the crying need of the picture business today is SHOWMANSHIP.

For a long time past everyone in the picture business seems to have forgotten that it is SHOW BUSINESS. They have forgotten that, if the business is to succeed, every person in it must be a SHOWMAN.

Everything came too easily until the crash arrived. Money was plentiful. If a picture company needed money for financing production, all it had to do was to ask one of many banks. Sometimes it did not even have to ask; finances were offered.

It was all plain sailing. Executives did not have to use their brains. The public had money and bought anything offered. The producing companies could coast—and did.

Then—as we used to say in pictures—came the crash. The golden days have passed. The banks have drawn their purse strings. They don't want to get into the picture business any more; they want to get out of it. There is just one source now from which the business can get the money it needs to produce pictures—THE BOX OFFICE.

To get money from the box office, tickets must be sold. To sell tickets the theatres must have good pictures, pictures that will attract the public, pictures of a quality that will make that public come back for more. And that means SHOWMANSHIP.

Mr. Zukor, in his interview, says that he is convinced that we are rapidly getting back to "practical show business," which he defines as "the business of selling the best possible entertainment to the greatest possible number of theatre patrons."

It is sincerely to be hoped that he is right, that SHOWMANSHIP will soon be the dominant characteristic

It was announced yesterday that Dr. A. H. Giannini has been made the third trustee in Columbia Pictures, the other two being Harry and Jack Cohn. The doctor says he has no stock interest, his job being to keep peace between Harry and Jack. Some job!

Broadway Grosses Arouse No Cheers

New York.—There is no wild enthusiasm manifested over the grosses of the Broadway picture palaces, although some of them are doing all right.

"Tarzan and His Mate" at the Capitol got a little under $49,000, which is not so hot for that picture, and "Wharf Angel" at the Paramount got only $22,000, which is very bad. "We're Not Dressing" will get around $37,000 for the week at the Small Signing Bergner

Edward Small in a long-distance telephone call to Rufus LeMaire in London yesterday set a deal to bring Elizabeth Bergner to Hollywood.

New International Set-up Seen Following Sale Of Fox Stock To British Interests

New York.—A new and gigantic international film enterprise, embracing both Fox Film and Gaumont-British, is seen as a result of the deal, announced exclusively in the Reporter yesterday, whereby the Chase Bank is divesting itself of a heavy percentage of its holdings of Fox stock.

Dixon Boardman, of the British investment firm of Balfour, Boardman & Company, sails for Europe today with the deal, signed and sealed, in his pocket. The interests he represents have acquired 200,000 shares of Fox stock outright and have two options for 200,000 shares each, making 600,000 shares in all. This represents

STUDIOS CO-OPERATING WITH EXTRAS' COMMITTEE

Most of the major studios, notably MGM and Fox, are now co-operating with the Code Committee for Extras 100 per cent, according to a statement last night by Mrs. Mabel Kinney, chairman of the committee, who returned yesterday after a week in Sacramento.

"It is decidedly heartening the way the studios are now trying to work with us," she declared. "Every decision the committee has made on complaints by the extras, in which we decided the studio in question was at fault, has been accepted and money we decided due the extras has been paid promptly.

"Most of the studios, especially MGM and Fox, are calling us daily to

New York REVIEWS

"UNKNOWN BLONDE"

Majestic prod.; director, Hobart Henley; writers, Theodore D. Irwin, Leonard Fields and David Silverstein.

Globe Theatre

American: The story is fairly complicated, not always believable, and upon occasion fails to maintain its mood through the introduction of not too brilliant comedy episodes, but on the whole it is better than average entertainment.

Sun: The Globe has a rather dreary film, all about cads and their feminine equivalents. It is a rather incredible film about people who never seem very real.

Journal: There's one point of similarity in practically all movie plots about members of the legal profession. Invariably the hero is an upright character who, for one reason or another, is propelled into circumstances that change him into a cynic. So he decides to get even by turning his talents to shady dealings. And he becomes unscrupulously successful until he's either caught or reformed. And that, with variations, is how it is here.

Post: Notwithstanding a certain ingeniousness in the plot, it is too pat for either credibility or comfort. Everything is tied up into a neat little package which, on opening, is found to be empty.

World-Telegram: An intensely artificial affair, full of amazing coincidences, limping movement and pedestrian dialogue. All of it is pretty routine and giddy stuff.

Times: It is a story illustration of puppet-dangling, and therefore a tedious attempt to attract attention. Its unsavory details are seldom convincing, and most of the incidents are depicted with amateurish abruptness and the employment of all too convenient coincidences.

News: The picture could be timely and pertinent, but there is too wide a gap between the production's claim and the sordid facts of the matter.

Herald-Tribune: "Unknown Blonde" seems so old-fashioned that you wonder why it isn't staged in crinolines. It is the unfortunate sort of work which it is difficult to believe even when it is telling the truth. The cast is not at all bad.

Mirror: Neatly directed, nicely produced, acted with restraint, "Unknown Blonde" never violates good taste or plausibility. It is sensational only because it deals with sensational conditions.

"THE WHARF ANGEL"

Paramount prod.; directors, William Cameron Menzies and Georges Somnes; writers, Frederick Schlick, Samuel Hoffenstein, Frank Partos and Stephen Morehouse Avery.

Paramount Theatre

Mirror: It is a faintly unreal story, but Miss Dell is such a convincing little actress she arouses your sympathy and makes you believe her troubles.

Times: Although there is no fault to find with the performances of the players the story is like a short story drawn out to novel length. The picture however, has been ably directed by William Cameron Menzies and George Somnes, but one rather wonders why they put so much efforts into such a thankless yarn.

World-Telegram: The new film is not a very good one. The lines and the situ- Somnes, but one rather wonders why they put so much effort into such entirely wasted.

News: It is a story that the movies have used before, and, despite the very capable Victor McLaglen and the shooting-star, Dorothy Dell, there is very little about the piece which is likely to stir your pulse.

Herald-Tribune: The settings and the atmospheric effects are successful enough, and the performance of Miss Dell is entirely helpful, but that is almost all that a friendly observer can say on the work's behalf. Among the defects the dialogue must be placed pretty high. I fear that the work must be set down among Paramount's lesser efforts.

Journal: Miss Dell's movie debut presents her as a sort of wistful Mae West, and to Paramount's newest acquisition goes much of the credit for sustaining interest in a pretty routine script. You won't have much trouble anticipating the end of it.

Sun: "The Wharf Angel" isn't a major picture; but it doesn't rely entirely upon formula characters. There is, on the part of writers, directors and cast, an attempt at a realistic idyll of the water front. It doesn't, unfortunately, entirely succeed. The fault may lie somewhat in the plot manipulations, a little too obvious for good showmanhsip. It moves rather slowly and jerkily in spite of its melodrama.

American: The idea is developed too sketchily to be as effective as intended, and Preston Foster's portrayal of his role lacks strength and the power essential to making the part appear impressive. Miss Dell is surprisingly good in her characterization. It seems that all she lacks is opportunity.

M.P. Golf Tourney At Caliente May 12

Golf stars of the silver screen will gather at Agua Caliente May 12 and 13 for the playing of the annual motion picture golf championship. It seems certain that the four man teams will be from Warner Bros., Radio, MGM, Twentieth Century, Paramount and Universal studios who will compete for the handsome shield won last year by Warner Brothers, captained by Bobby Jones.

The added feature of the tournament will be the annual championship of the Divot Diggers, Inc. Among those who will play at Caliente, and who are diehards, are Jesse Lasky, Eddie Mannix, Nat Deverich, Jack Warner, Albert Kaufman, Dave Butler, W. C. Fields, Jim Oviatt, Herman Politz, Leon Errol, Adolphe Menjou and a host of others.

Flinn Straightens Out Coast Code Secretaries

Secretaries of the Zoning and Grievance Boards of the Pacific Coast conferred all day yesterday with John C. Flinn, secretary of the Film Code Authority. Flinn stated that the entire conference was devoted to routine matters and the straightening out of details of procedure with which the secretaries will be faced when they start operating.

Monday he meets Mrs. Mabel Kinney, chairman of the Code Committee for Extras, and also the newly appointed Agency Committee.

Dixon and Revere East

Two Broadway players who came out here for single assignments boarded planes on the return trip eastward yesterday. They are Jean Dixon, who appeared in "Sadie McKee" for MGM, and Anne Revere, who finished in "Double Door" for Paramount.

Ethel Griffies Set

Sam Goldwyn yesterday signed Ethel Griffies for a spot in "Resurrection," which Rouben Mamoulian puts into production early in June. Miss Griffies is the first woman set for the picture besides Anna Sten, who has the leading role.

Count de Miollis Dies

Count Francois de Miollis, former member of MGM's foreign department, died of a sudden heart attack yesterday. He was sixty. Services will be held this morning at the Blessed Sacrament Church.

'HAPPY ANDREW' ROGERS' HIT; 'CHEATERS' FAIR PROGRAMME

Best Pic Comedian Has Had in Years

"HAPPY ANDREW"
Fox

Direction .....David Butler
Author .....Lewis Beach
Screen Play: William Conselman and Henry Johnson.
Adaptation .....Kubec Glasmon
Photography .....Arthur Miller
Cast: Will Rogers, Mary Carlisle, Roger Imhof, Peggy Wood, Paul Harvey, Robert Taylor, Frank Melton, Edward J. Nugent, Conchita Montenegro, Grace Goodall and Jessie Pringle.

All you exhibitors who greet Will Rogers' films with grins and busy cash registers . . . here comes a picture that will make you hop and throw your hats up into the air.

It's "Happy Andrew," and the best Rogers comedy in years and years. It goes places and does things, and your audiences will shriek every step of the way.

The story isn't startlingly new—it's a typical Rogersism—but writing, direction and acting, plus swell gags and unusually good comedy, lift it up above the average class.

Rogers is again inflicted with a wife, Peggy Wood, who is embarrassed by his business—an old corner drug store—and his uncouthness. She gets him to sell the store and retire like a gentleman. He retires all right, but becomes bored to the point of indulging in hobbies, like pigeons, geese and his own miniature drug store in the basement, where he fills orders from the town doctor for poor people.

His wife has a terrible time with him, which is climaxed when she drags him off to New Orleans to the Mardi Gras and he finally shows her, after her eternal nagging about relaxing and playing and having a good time, just how much of a playboy he can be. His dance, one-third tango, a third Apache, and a third bewilderment, with Conchita Montenegro at the very elegant ball which tops the Mardi Gras festivities, is a knock-out, with Rogers dressed in tiger skins and tights and carrying a huge club.

Rogers has never been funnier, and Miss Wood is charming, although her part is difficult. Mary Carlisle, their daughter, gets better with each picture. Robert Taylor is appealing as her sweetheart, and Frank Melton carries off an unpleasant part with distinction. Roger Imhof, Paul Harvey, Edward J. Nugent, Grace Goodell and Jessie Pringle add a lot to the picture, their individual performances being outstandingly fine. Miss Montenegro is beautiful and excellently cast.

David Butler's direction is speedy and pointed for comedy; Lewis Beach wrote the original play; William Conselman and Henry Johnson wrote the screen play, and Kubec Glasmon adapted. Arthur Miller photographed.

This picture is more darn fun ,and your audiences will have more darn fun watching it.

Wonder If Double Bills Fill This One

Washington.—A report to the Department of Commerce gives Burma a record for big theatres. The King Cinema, in Yonanguaung, which is in the oil district of Upper Burma, has 13,000 seats. The Music Hall in New York has 6200.

'Late Wisdom' Bust For Stage or Screen

"LATE WISDOM"

Presented by Mark Newman at the Mansfield Theatre; written and directed by Nathan Sherman; settings by Walter Street and S. L. Tabor. Cast: Walter O. Hill, Carleton Young, Miss Franc Hale, Jay Fassett, Horace Casselberry, Eric Kalkhurst.

New York.—The season's worst brainstorm. There should be a special heaven for the unwarned first nighters who choose to sit through alleged plays as boring as "Late Wisdom."

The producer and author display no early or late wisdom at any stage of the proceedings of this terribly bad duologue. What plot there is concerns itself with the middle-aged president of a rubber corporation, a married man, who falls in love with his secretary.

Despite family troubles and almost the loss of his business, love goes marching on—that is, until the third act, when all too late the late wisdom of this comic situation forces the two apart. The stage is occupied during almost the entire three acts by Jay Fassett, who plays the rubber magnate, and Miss Franc Hale, the secretary.

The audience, very much insulted by the amateurish story and the worse acting of the cast, continuously coughed and laughed during the performance, making it practically impossible to know what it was all about.

Impossible as a play, it is hopeless for pictures.

Film Row Hears All First Runs Go Dual

Los Angeles' film row buzzed yesterday with the rumor that all first-run theatres in this sector would go double-bill after the run of their present bookings.

Report included the Warner, FWC and Marco houses, but was spiked by them as "entirely unthought of."

Wanda Tuchock East

Wanda Tuchock leaves tonight for a four weeks trip to New York. Meanwhile, a deal is on with MGM to write and direct.

New York.—"Twentieth Century," produced by Columbia Pictures, goes into the Music Hall next Friday.

Boyd, Collyer and Mackaill Capital

"CHEATERS"
(Liberty)

Direction .....Phil Rosen
Original.....Fannie Heaslip Lea
Screen Play.....Adele Buffington
Photography .....Harry Neuman and Tom Galligan
Cast: Bill Boyd, June Collyer, Dorothy Mackaill, William Collier Sr., Alan Mowbray, Guinn Williams, Louise Beavers.

There is no better answer to the alleged shortage of talent in Hollywood than this picture. Here are presented a trio of top names that haven't been so prominent recently. After seeing their work in "Cheaters," we feel compelled to ask why.

Bill Boyd comes through with a corking performance as the dapper leader of a band of society crooks, working a marriage racket upon a millionaire recluse. June Collyer is lovely and appealing as the drab ex-convict transformed into a dazzling beauty that she may win enough alimony after the wedding to make the whole gang wealthy. Dorothy Mackaill, another member of the gang, does one of her hard, brittle women as magnificently as ever, scoring with every line. Yet all three work against direction that can only be described as spotty and photography that certainly could have been kinder.

It took courage on the part of the producers of "Cheaters" to stand behind the casting of their leads. Running in a lot of contemporary "names" in walk-through assignments would have been protection insurance for their investment. Yet such a move would have cluttered up the action and interrupted the flow of the story. It must be gratifying, in view of the producers' gamble, to have had their stars justify their faith so splendidly.

Strictly upon its entertainment values, "Cheaters" is quite satsifactory as a program attraction. If you will get behind the return of Bill Boyd, June Collyer and Dorothy Mackaill to give the event the ballyhoo it deserves, the picture may do even more for you. And don't overlook William Collier Sr., who registers a decisive individual hit. His name will always mean plenty.

Stephen Foster's Life To Be Mascot Feature

Mascot is planning to make a feature picture with a musical theme, based on the life and songs of Stephen Foster.

Milton Krims was engaged to write the screen play yesterday on a William Stephens ticket.

Another for Brandt

New York.—The Brandts are opening the Times Square Theatre on 42nd Street as a continuous picture house. The opening bill will consist of two features, "Streets of Chance" and "Virtue."

Yesterday in NEW YORK with HELEN GWYNN

There's always been something peculiar about thinking up a title and writing a story around it. Like building a house to go around an old fireplace, or something. However, there's a picture company, practically in the major class, that seems to build up a whole program of pictures in just that way. At least, it looks that way because, once a year, all the home office employees are told to submit as many titles as they can think of for the coming year's product. All the employees know about that product is the number of pictures they plan to make and a rough idea of who's going to be in them. So, with that as a basis, they start busily putting down on paper titles they think can be used, gauging their creative efforts by the kind of stuff Soandso usually appears in. Thus, for a western star, they try to think up a few apt titles for horse operas, etc. Incidentally, if any of these titles is used, there is no monetary reward for same. Guess the copyright cost offsets the effort.

People often stop to wonder just what sources a colyumist goes to for his news. Being no small wonderer, ourself, we were amazed to find out that there is a garage in town run by the Messrs. Colligan and Raphael (we think that's the other name), that not only houses Everyone's car, but is a general gathering place for Broadwayites, stooges, chauffeurs, etc. And there isn't an employee in the place who can't tell you more about anyone than the most popular bartender in town. Their favorite subject is blessed events, which they look out for with an avid interest equalled only by their sentiment over the business. Colligan is an ardent air enthusiast and flies about quite a bit. Once he took up a colored mechanic and tried to make him change color by stunting about a bit over Long Island Sound. Later, when somebody asked the mechanic how the trip had been, he answered: "Well, there I was looking up down into the ocean!" Well, that's New York for you, my lads, as the New York colyumists see it.

Poor Claudia Morgan—four plays in one season and not a run in the carload. . . . One thing, though, the gal has no trouble getting a job and she's so attractive it's a pity she can't pick a success. . . . A long distance call from here to the coast put Lew Brown's name back on the advertising for "Stand Up and Cheer," but he's only credited with being an associate producer, in very small type. . . . Carl Brisson, who's writing his impressions of Hollywood for an English paper while acting out there, gave the Vendome a big blurb. . . . Thinks the place is "ducky." . . . Morrie Ryskind is about to be a father again. . . . Migod, Norma Talmadge has been getting letters from Nazi cranks on her marriage to Georgie Jessel.

Contract for United

United Costumers yesterday signed a contract with Edward Small Productions to furnish the costumes for "Count of Monte Cristo," which is slated to start next week.

One of the best of the perennial yarns, "What Chance Have YOU in the Movies?", is contributed by Jerry Lane in the May issue of Screen Play. Another story that makes good reading is Nina Wilcox Putnam's "If I Could Find a Man Like This", in which she quotes a number of feminine stars.

Edgar Rice Burroughs writes "Tarzan's Seven Lives", a resume of the various incarnations of his favorite character; Jim Tully fails to be inspired in "Arkansas Traveler—Dick Powell"; Marcella Burke is dignified in "Chaplin Lives Again", all about the little Paulette; and Jack Grant tells for the thousandth time, but interestingly, "Who Is Francis Lederer?"

Roy D'Arcy is very frank and vivid in "I Was a Fool," written by Helen Burns; Alice Faye tells Maude Cheatham to "Live for Today"; Sidney Skolsky writes this month of Jean Harlow, giving a full description from left ankle to right ear; Dean Van Duyn has "A Flier in Neckties—Cary Grant", and Hal Hall tells about June Knight and Jimmy Dunn in "The Romance Shattered by a Penny."

ASC Agency Takes Larger Quarters

In order to provide for the expansion of the ASC-Agency, the American Society of Cinematographers yesterday took over an additional four-room suite on the twelfth floor of the Guaranty Building. This makes a total of ten offices.

Allen Watt, executive manager, stated that the new offices will house the personal division of the agency which will look after the professional and business affairs of members under contract. Services covered by this division, he said, include insurance, legal, publicity, secretarial and tax accounting.

Watt announced that a total of 57 cameramen have been placed under contract by the agency.

Dr. Giannini Quits Extras' Committee

Announcement was made yesterday of the resignation of Dr. A. H. Giannini, from the Code Committee for Extras. The Code Authority has named J. P. Normanly of the Bank of America to replace him.

Doty-Sayre Teamed

Douglas Doty and George Sayre have been assigned by Nat Levine to write the screen play of "Barbecue," an original by Adele Buffington, recently purchased by the studio. Sig Neufeld is supervising for Mascot.

Horman with Waggner

Arthur Horman, who was signed Thursday by Columbia, has been assigned to collaborate with George Waggner on "The Criminal Within," which Sid Rogell will produce. Horman deal was negotiated by Hoffman-Schlager.

Smith on Clyde Short

Educational has signed Vernon Smith to write the script on the next Andy Clyde short, which gets into work in three weeks. Story is an original by Harry McCoy and John Waldron.

Services for Van Dyke

Funeral services for Herbert Van Dyke, MGM cameraman who died last Tuesday, will be held at 2 o'clock today from the Hollywood Cemetery Chapel. Joint Episcopal and Masonic services will be used. He will be buried with military honors.

'Operator 13' Done

Final shots on MGM's "Operator 13" were made yesterday. Richard Boleslavsky directed and Lucien Hubbard produced.

Indie Owners Kick At Assessments

New York.—P. J. Wood, business manager of the Independent Theatre Owners of Ohio, has protested against the schedule of assessments made by the Code Authority on the independent theatres.

He says that, in Columbus, the first run houses are assessed $36 a year and the second runs $24 a year, meaning that every small theatre must pay that amount. He claims that the small independent will pay most of the code enforcement.

Tarzan, Dog Actor, May Have to Change Name

New York.—Stephen Slesinger is taking action to prevent the production of short series using "Tarzan", the police dog. He states that the name of "Tarzan" is registered in the patent office and license for its use can only be had from Edgar Rice Burroughs Inc. or Stephen Slesinger Inc.

Lon Young to Handle Publicity for Mascot

New York.—Mascot has appointed Lon Young to handle advertising and publicity for the company on the west coast. Al Sherman has a similar job in New York.

'Villa' Book in Spanish

With the acceptance for publication of a Latin-American edition by a Buenos Aires concern, Edgcomb Pinchon's novel, "Viva Villa," will be distributed in 20 countries. Raul Currachaga, Hollywood representative of "El Razon," is now finishing the Spanish translation.

Writer for Levine

Nat Levine has signed Bernard Hershey in New York to write an original screen play, "Confidential," a secret service story. Possibility the producer will bring Hershey here to join his local writing staff.

Frances Marion Sailing

Frances Marion sails today on the Malola to meet the "Good Earth" company in Honolulu. Writer will return with the unit, polishing off the script for the Irving Thalberg picture on the way.

Bradbury on Air Pic

Trem Carr has assigned R. N. Bradbury to direct "Happy Landings," Monogram production, from Stuart Anthony's air story. Paul Malvern will supervise.

Cawthorn to Warners

Joseph Cawthorn has been signed by Warners for a comedy role in "Housewife," with Bette Davis and George Brent. Al Green directs.

Apologies to Harris

Through a stenographic error, the name of Elmer Harris was omitted from the list of writers given with the excerpts from the New York reviews of "Looking for Trouble." We apologize.

Harry Cohn Put in Place by Taxi Man

New York.—Harry Cohn, head of Columbia, has a pet taxi that he uses most of the time and, having no studio staff to yell at while here, he yells at the driver. That is, he did, until the other day when the man stopped the taxi, turned around and said: "You stick to making pictures. I'll drive this cab."

Mascot to Start 2 In May at Sennett's

Getting started on the most ambitious program it has ever undertaken, Mascot puts the second serial on this year's schedule, "Burn 'Em Up Barnes," into work May 10 and, ten days later, the first of ten action melodramas, "Crimson Romance," gets under way.

Frankie Darro has been signed through Kingston-Harris for a top spot in "Burn 'Em Up Barnes," which will be directed by Bert Clark and Armand Schaeffer. David Howard will handle "Crimson Romance" with no cast signed as yet.

Both pictures will be shot at the Sennett lot.

Carminati East

Completing his work in "One Night of Love" at Columbia, Tullio Carminati leaves tonight for New York. While there he will appear in a play, "Marion's House," opposite Laurette Taylor.

Lupino in Stage Lead

Ida Lupino will have the lead in the stage play, "Pursuit of Happiness," which will be staged at the Paramount Studio Theatre. Her next picture assignment will be opposite Richard Arlen in "Ready for Love."

Gaye as Kerensky

The Kerensky role in "British Agent" went to Gregory Gaye, Warners signing the player yesterday for the spot. Beyer-MacArthur set the ticket.

approximately one-third of the Chase holdings.

It is understood here that the clients represented by Balfour, Boardman & Company are heavily interested in Gaumont-British and are dissatisfied with the present control and management. They have acquired the Fox stock, it is believed, in furtherance of a plan to effect a merger whereby, with British capital in control of both British-Gaumont and Fox, an extensive program of British pictures for America and American pictures for the British market will be worked out. The plan is more or less along the lines of the activity now going on between United Artists and British and Dominions, and undoubtedly will include an interchange of stars, directors and writers.

Hollywood Reporter: Your Kansas exhibitor, writing of dirt in pictures, is right. He's right from a psychological as well as a practical viewpoint. To me, one of the most amazing things about pictures is the appalling waste of money due to the producers' disinclination—even flat refusal—to profit by well established psychological laws of group reactions to given situations. Don't they know that for years scientists have been analyzing mental reactions in laboratories just as precise as chemical laboratories, and that, through these far-flung and minutely recorded observations, definite laws have been established, as constant as the laws of physics?

Surely they are ignorant of these facts or they could not continue to resort to the hit and miss tactics that account for over half the flops and almost all the censure heaped upon pictures. Any intelligent psychologist will tell them that there is a natural tendency towards vulgarity and commonness in every man and woman. Most people as they become more civilized, subject these tendencies to rigid discipline prescribed by the rules of social ethics. The more these tendencies are held in check the greater the enjoyment of seeing and hearing vulgarity and commonness.

A man loves to see the curves of another man's wife, but he wants his own wife on the square. Therein lies the success of the Mae West pictures. I am not, in any way, casting any criticisms on Mae personally, but she is the luscious personification of the common and vulgar. Therefore, any censure that may fall on her personality or her pictures is unfair to her. The censure should fall upon the minds of the audience, because Mae is presenting in a perfectly natural way what the people in the audience would like to do and say but dare not.

The producers see Mae get away with it and immediately jump to the conclusion that it is what Mae is saying that counts, but in this they are childishly wrong. Mae saying and doing something is all right; Loretta Young or Janet Gaynor saying and doing the same thing is immoral and dirty. Why? Because Mae is established as a definite norm of action and thought. Loretta and Janet are definitely established as other norms of entirely different characters.

Therefore, when the producer forces a sweet young girl to do things that are all right and proper for Mae to do, there is but one reaction in the minds of the audience—some foul-minded employer is prostituting a sweet young thing.

There is a natural place for dirt. In its place it is enjoyed by all. Out of its place it is censured justly. If the producers would subject their pictures to an intelligent, scientific, psychological analysis, all dirt would be allocated to its proper environment and to proper characters and not only would such dirt be entertaining, but censure would be absent.

Your Kansas exhibitor spoke wisely when he defined dirt as anything out of place. The problem is a simple one: don't show anything or say anything out of place and there is no dirt. There are probably more couples on this earth living out of wedlock than in, but we happen to be living in a country and our pictures shown in countries where law demands that couples living together should be wed.

The millions who are not married have perfectly good and just reasons for so living and we think nothing of it—take their tribal customs, their social ethics as a matter of course. But when we show a couple living out of wedlock, unless we show a good and valid reason for their living thusly, we affront the morals of a huge audience.

The means to eradicate censure are at the producers' hands—will they accept them? They are glad to get the developments from the Bell Laboratories, from the reesarch departments of the companies manufacturing mechanical equipment, yet they stubbornly close their eyes and minds to mental and moral developments which are as precise as the mechanical and even more important in the ultimate profits of his pictures.

Rivoli, and "Twenty Million Sweethearts" will take about $30,000 at the Strand. The Roxy got $23,500 with "I'll Tell the World," "Lost Patrol" in its final week gave the Rialto $9000, and the Mayfair got $8500 with "Beggars in Ermine." "Viva Villa" took $12,390 for its second week at the Criterion.

The best figures were the $90,000 for "Stand Up and Cheer" at the Music Hall, and $22,800 for the sixth week of "House of Rothschild" at the Astor.

Stars Barred from 'Melodies' Hour

A blanket order against the appearance of film notables on the California Melodies Hour, piloted by Eleanor Barnes, was issued yesterday by the Columbia Broadcasting System, emanating locally from KHJ.

Paramount, which had arranged for Carl Brisson's appearance tomorrow night, was informed of the order when told that the program would not go through as scheduled. Miss Barnes stated that the program has been suspended for three weeks, after which it will be resumed.

It is believed that this action will cause a showdown on the question of paying stars for picture appearances. Studios have been giving talent free of charge while, at the same time, stars, negotiating their own deals, have succeeded in obtaining fancy fancy prices.

Sam Krellberg Coming On Production Deal

Sam Krellberg, of the Amusement Finance Corporation, is due in Hollywood today with plans for producing an independent feature, "The Lost City."

NRA EXPLAINS POWER OF CODE AUTHORITIES

Washington.—The National Recovery Administration yesterday issued an explanation of the power given to certain code authorities to handle trade practice complaints, particularly referring to the motion picture code, and also ordered a public hearing on modification proposals submitted by the motion picture laboratory industry.

It was explained that, in handling trade practice complaints, there are two types of authorization: those where complaints have to be filed with State Compliance Directors and then referred to the code authorities, and those which go to the code authority direct. It was explained that the motion picture Code Authority is empowered to handle complaints direct.

The official release also stated that Charles O'Reilly and Robert Rubin vote, and Sol Rosenblatt without vote, but with veto power subject to review by the NRA, have been named a trade practice complaints committee and authorized to set up as local industrial adjustment agencies the present local grievance boards to handle all complaints except production, vaudeville and labor.

The public hearing for the laboratory industry will start May 9 before Deputy Administrator W. P. Farnsworth. The purpose is to discuss the trade practice amendment, involving standard cost accounting methods and lowest reasonable cost of product.

A.T.&T. PROBE CERTAIN

TRADEVIEWS by FRANK POPE

•A CAMERAMAN, under contract to a major studio, dropped into this office the other day and said he was enjoying a brief vacation. He is an ace, one of those who is always working, and we asked him why the layoff. "Well, I'll tell you," he said. "It's taking the company so long to clean up some stories and make them fit to shoot, that there isn't anything for me to do just now."

Which, once again, brings up the subject of dirt in pictures. We would like to ask why companies buy stories that have to be "cleaned up" before they can be produced. And, as a corollary, why all the companies do not "clean 'em up" before making them. Anyway, it is a healthy sign that the cleaning process is at work even in one major studio. Most producers recently have seemed to be trying to find places where they could inject unnecessary and unreasonable dirt instead of taking it out. Maybe some of the top executives are hearing things about smut.

One of the wisest moves that has been made in the picture industry recently is the naming of Dr. Giannini as the third Columbia Pictures trustee. His long friendship with Harry and Jack Cohn, the other trustees, his familiarity with their affairs and his intimate knowledge of the picture business and its financial problems should make him one of the most valuable assets of the corporation. Furthermore, both the Cohns have implicit faith in him and will trust his judgment on all matters pertaining to the finances of the company.

It really looks as if there is to be an investigation of the alleged monopoly of the A. T. & T. by the United States Senate. Washington dispatches are very emphatic in saying that both the Interstate Commerce Committee of that body and the Senate itself favor such a probe. It will, of course, extend to Erpi and other subsidiaries, which will interest the picture business. Whatever the outcome, it's a good idea. The only thing is that the corporation has a long arm which reaches into many places. Maybe it can arrange to have the probe "die a-borning."

Maryland MPTO Kicks At Exhibs Producing

Baltimore.—The Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Maryland have adopted a resolution opposing the plan of Allied and other indie exhibitors to enter the producing field. Also they object to producers being exhibitors.

Ann Harding to Star In 'Sun Also Rises'

A syndicate, composed of Ann Harding, E. H. Griffith, Horace Jackson and others, has purchased the screen rights to Ernest Hemingway's "The Sun Also Rises" from Radio, and will produce for Fox release. It is understood, but not confirmed, that Sidney Kent has an interest.

Miss Harding will star in the picture, Griffith will direct, and Jackson will do the screen play. The picture will be shot in Spain, the locale of the original story.

Lou Brock to Europe After Three More Pix

Upon the completion of the three pictures he now has in production, Lou Brock leaves for a vacation and a rest in Europe.

Producer is handling "Down to Their Last Yacht," "Cockeyed Cavaliers" and "Bachelor Bait," all of which are shooting.

Wood Sailing June 9

Sam Wood sails for Europe June 9, after completing his contract with MGM. Director will handle "Stamboul Quest" as his last for the studio, with the picture starting next week.

Favorable Report On Dill Resolution Predicted And Senate Will Pass Measure

Washington.—It is conceded at the Capitol that the resolution introduced by Senator Dill for a Senatorial investigation of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company will be favorably reported by the Senate Committee on Interstate Commerce and also that it will pass the Senate by an overwhelming majority.

The proponents of the bill state that they have private information that the White House approves of the resolution.

Another charge has been added to the many already made against A.T. & T. Robert Robins, of the Society for the Protection of Motion Picture Theatres, now accuses the corporation and its subsidiaries of attempting to control the publicity channels of the motion picture trade press. In just what way this has been done, Robins has not stated publicly. He has asked Senator Dill to have this phase of the alleged monopoly included in the Senatorial investigation.

Van Dyke Completes 'Thin Man' in 16 Days

W. S. Van Dyke brought in "The Thin Man" at MGM late Friday—16 days after the cameras had started to grind on the Dashiell Hammett story. William Powell and Myrna Loy filled the top brackets. Hunt Stromberg produced.

H. B. Franklin in N.Y.

New York.—H. B. Franklin and his son, Elbert, arrive in New York today on the Ile de France from a three weeks trip to London and Paris.

Shearer and Cantor Still Grip London

London.—Three American pictures are holding over here, two of them, "Rip Tide," with Norman Shearer, and Eddie Cantor's "Roman Scandals" going very big. The third is "Wonder Bar," which is trailing them very closely.

The newcomers this week are "Bottoms Up" at the Capitol; "Son of Kong" and "You're Telling Me" at the Plaza; "It Happened One Night" at the Tivoli; "Bulldog Drummond," a British International, at the Regal, and Bob Flaherty's Gaumont epic, "Man of Aran," a lovely piece of cinematography, at the New Gallery.

'Napoleon' First For Borzage at Warners

Frank Borzage reported to Warners over the week-end to take up his straight two-year ticket, on which he will pilot "Napoleon," starring Edward G. Robinson, as his first production.

The director has just completed 'Little Man, What Now?" for Universal.

Robert Harris East

Robert Harris leaves tonight by plane for his post as Eastern production manager for Universal in New York. He brought to a close a two-week stay.

Cohen Start Delayed

New York.—Emanuel Cohen, production head of Paramount, who was to have left for Hollywood yesterday, will leave today or tomorrow.

'Viva Villa' Release

New York.—"Viva Villa" will end its run at the Criterion Theatre on May 6 and the picture goes on general release the same day.

CONTROL OF GAUMONT FOR BRITISH BACK OF FOX BUY

New York.—The main reason for the purchase of part of the Fox holdings from Chase bank by British interests is the desire to have the control of Gaumont-British held by British capital and not, as at present, with approximately a 65 per cent interest in the hands of Fox.

Two of the actual purchasers, as named Saturday, are the Atlas Corporation, of New York, and Robert Fleming & Company, of London, both being backed by British money. Atlas has held interests in picture companies

MGM May Put Tone In 'Four Walls' Lead

MGM is trying to make up its mind to having Franchot Tone take a radical step in his career by going into the role in "Four Walls" which Paul Muni created on the stage. Tone has had conservative assignments and this one will be the first virile one handed him, if he gets it.

Karen Morley, Mae Clark and Nat Pendleton have been slated for roles.

THE LOW DOWN

Have you a little "rug-salesman" in your home? The following was put over on Wynne Gibson a few weeks ago—and she's not over it yet: A man in sailor's uniform thrust himself onto the set where Wynne was working and introduced himself as the wireless operator of one of our best boats. Then he gave out a talk on how badly he needed some cash to get a big liquor supply out of hock. He asked Miss G. to lend him the money and left with her two rugs for security, which he said were worth several hundred dollars. So, of course, Wynne gave him the money and the fellow never came back—and, of course, Wynne discovered the rugs to be worth around five dollars!

We are reminded of the devotion that Wally Beery has shown for his wife during these past weeks that she has been confined in a hospital. While the "Treasure Island" company has been living over around Catalina, Wally has been commuting. And daily he's been arising at five a.m., rushing to the hospital, getting his plane and flying himself to the island, leaping into a speedboat and joining the troupe. At the end of each day he's been reversing the process—boat, plane, hospital, home! When we told him we thought it was pretty sweet, he just said, "If it were me, she'd swim!"

Ernst Lubitsch, the Walter Wangers, the Don Stewarts (in rare form), the Ray Griffiths, Al Kaufman, Bill Powell, Zoe Akins, Jeanette MacDonald, Edgar Selwyn among the guests.

Caesar Stays at Radio

Radio extended Arthur Caesar's deal Saturday, the writer staying on to write "Romance of Manhattan" for Francis Lederer. The Edington and Vincent office set the ticket.

CHANGES IN EXTRA LIST WILL TAKE TWO MONTHS

Despite the many rumors current in extra circles and elsewhere, it will probably be close to two more months before any eliminations are made in the list of registered extras by the Code Committee for Extras.

Mrs. Mabel Kinney, chairman of the committee, stated Saturday that not a name will be removed from the list until the completion of what she describes as one of the most exhaustive investigations humanly possible to make.

"We want to be absolutely fair in the re-registration," said Mrs. Kinney. "And to be sure of fairness we are delving into the records of every name on the list. We realize it is a serious job, and that there will be a lot of kicks when it is done, so we will not rush blindly into it.

Morris Considering Offer for Personals

Chester Morris is seriously considering a contract for six weeks of personal appearance when he finishes work in his current Universal picture, "Funny Thing Called Love."

The schedule calls for time in New York, Boston, Chicago and St. Paul. It is understood that Morris has had a special dramatic sketch prepared in case he decides to accept the offer.

'British Agent' Starts Today; Presnell Super

Warners put "British Agent" into work today with Robert Presnell supervising. He also did the adaptation, and Laird Doyle wrote the screen play, assisted on some of the British dialog by Roland Pertwee.

Leslie Howard and Kay Francis have the leads, and Michael Curtiz directs.

Schwab Preparing Play

New York.—Lawrence Schwab leaves Miami tomorrow for New York to start preparations for his new protion, "Snatch as Snatch Can," a melodramatic farce with a gangster background. He expects to open in August.

Cohen Pic for Casino

"In Love with Life," a Maury Cohen production for Invincible Pictures, opens May 11 at the Casino Theatre in New York. Picture, which stars Lila Lee and Onslow Stevens, will be the only feature on the bill.

Sargent-Ross to MGM

Sargent and Ross, songsters whom the Kings Club has top-billed, have been signed by MGM for "Stamboul Quest," which Walter Wanger produces.

Brice Starts This Week

Monte Brice will locate at General Service Studio to produce "Benefit Performance," casting on which starts this week.

Retakes for Howard

Gable and Loy Give Fine Air Program

Clark Gable and Myrna Loy gave an effective broadcast last night, doing several scenes from their recent picture, "Manhattan Melodrama," with Director "Woody" Van Dyke giving the explanations. It made a grand boost for the picture.

Small-Foy Deal Off; Gordon To Do Original

The deal for Reliance to purchase from Foy Productions the latter's "Murder in the Theatre," a screen play by William Jacobs, has flopped.

Contracts had been signed for $15,000, when Edward Small changed his mind with the claim that the yarn would not fit his "Showboat of 1934" title. Small has engaged Leon Gordon to write an original instead.

Shirley Temple Goes To Para. For Another

Paramount Saturday borrowed Shirley Temple from Fox for a spot in "You Belong to Me," the new title for "Honor Bright." Henry Hathaway will direct, with Gary Cooper and Carole Lombard in the top spots.

Shirley recently completed her work in "Little Miss Marker" for B. P. Schulberg at the same studio.

Eric Wilkinson Dies

Eric Wilkinson, assistant to the head of the Universal prop department, died Saturday in the Good Samaritan Hospital after a seven month illness. More than forty blood transfusions had been given him by prop men in an effort to save him.

I. A. R. Wylie to Russia

I. A. R. Wylie, famous novelist, is sailing for Russia in June to gather material for a novel she is writing. Columbia is reported having bought one of her latest stories, "A Feather in Her Hat."

B'klyn Para. Closing

New York.—The Brooklyn Paramount Theatre will close May 11, "We're Not Dressing" being the final attraction. It will reopen in the Fall.

Gaumont Control

before this, having had a large block of Loew's, secured through the Film Securities Corporation, and a block of $3,000,000 worth of the Warner convertible debentures. The present deal with Chase, when the 600,000 shares have all been picked up, will run to about $10,000,000.

London financial writers are of the opinion that the plan is to dispose of this Fox stock to the British investing public, but the idea of a new international company seems to be the favored one. It is known that the British Government is looking into the transaction, there being some suspicion that it may violate the ban on exports of capital.

Agency Committee Meets Flinn Today

One of the most important conferences, from the point of view of production, since his arrival in Hollywood will be held today by John C. Flinn, secretary of the Film Code Authority, and the members of the newly appointed agency committee.

This committee, composed of five producers and one agent, an actor, a writer, a technician and a director, has been appointed to work out a system of fair practice between agent, producer and artist, and to see that some conditions that have existed in the past do not crop up again, such as the barring of an artist's agent from a studio lot on which the artist is working, etc.

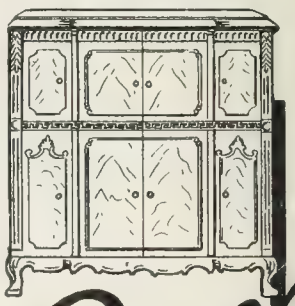
Flinn will also confer today with Mrs. Mabel Kinney, chairman of the Code Committee for Extras.

'Dragon Murder Case' in Production Wednesday

Warnrs will start "The Dragon Murder Case," new Philo Vance detective story by S. S. Van Dine, on Wednesday.

Phillip Reed and Arthur Aylesworth have been given principal roles. Warren William will create a new Philo Vance, with Margaret Lindsay as his leading woman. Lucky Humberstone will direct.

Allen to Free Lance



Judith Allen plans to free lance when her contract expires with Paramount at the finish of "The Old Fashioned Way," in which she is playing.

Tests for 'China Seas'

Director Tay Garnett starts testing today for two of the important roles in "China Seas" at MGM. Clark Gable and Jean Harlow have the leads.

Jimmy Dunn to Broadcast

Jimmy Dunn has been set for a series of broadcasts over NBC, emanating from Hollywood.

'STINGAREE' FULL OF ACTION; 'BEYOND BENGAL' THRILLER

Picture Has Charm But Poor Handling

"STINGAREE"
(Radio)

Direction .....William A. Wellman
Author .....E. W. Hornung
Screen Play.....Becky Gardiner
Music by.....Franke Harling
Lyrics by.....Gus Kahn
Photography .....James Van Trees
Cast: Irene Dunne, Richard Dix, Mary Boland, Conway Tearle, Andy Devine, Henry Stephenson, Una O'Connor and George Barraud.

"Stingaree' 'isn't what it might have been. It might have been a charming, romantic light opera, or it might have been a burlesque on one. As it is, it hovers between the two, but it is only fair to add hastily that it only occasionally and very faintly touches burlesque.

The story is too swashbuckling and fantastic for anything but a light opera treatment, with operatic scenery, choruses and posing. It has the posing, but the excuses for it are lacking. It is unfortunate that Radio took it so seriously.

But there is another side to the question. It is undoubtedly effective, from the standpoints of costuming, locale and the romantic spirit of the thing. Audiences which are easily impressed will overlook the faulty direction, the dull moments and the ineffectual swagger of the picture, and will remember the gorgeous scenery, the adventurous bravado of Richard Dix and the lovely voice and gowns of Irene Dunne. Nothing much can be said for their acting, for the impossibility of the story as a whol,e and the mis-direction of William A. Wellman, gave them too slim a chance.

Richard Dix plays Stingaree, a dashing, romantic outlaw in Australia in the year 1875. Irene Dunne is a poor girl who has been given a home by some wealthy ranchers, Henry Stephenson and Mary Boland. By a series of daring escapades, Dix, at the point of a gun, forces the famous impressario, Conway Tearle, to hear Miss Dunne's voice, even going to the lengths of getting shot for his pains.

By losing his liberty, the outlaw has given Miss Dunne hers, and, because she loves him, she obeys his wishes and goes to London to study with Tearle. She becomes a great and famous singer. But she can never forget Stingaree and his gallantry. So she gives a concert in Melbourne, hoping that he will come back to her, wherever he is. Which is what he does, in spite of the police, and he carries her off, romantically wrapped in his dark cloak, and together they gallop away on Rudolph Valentino's old white horse to an outlaw peace. Conway Tearle is left with a broken heart.

Miss Dunne and Dix are both charming in their roles but their combined efforts cannot make the picture the completely lovely thing it should have been. Mary Boland is funny; so are Andy Devine and Una O'Connor. Henry Stephenson has the only credible role. George Barraud is the police captain.

There is one song in the film that is utterly captivating—"Tonight Is Mine." Miss Dunne sings it well and has opportunity also to sing two or three arias. Franke Harling wrote the music and Gus Kahn the lyrics.

E. W. Tornung wrote the story; Becky Gardiner did the screen play, and James Van Trees' photography is one of the film's greatest assets.

Discriminating audiences will be disappointed in "Stingaree," while others, less exacting, will be impressed.

Flash! No Hollywood On Winchell Program

For what is probably the first time since he went on the air, Walter Winchell did not have a single Hollywood item in his broadcast last night. Maybe he's sore; maybe his Hollywood stooge fell down.

McGuire Signs at 'U' For Four More

After jockeying around for four months, Universal and William Anthony McGuire finally got together on a new writing-producing contract for four pictures, contracts to be signed when Charlie Feldman, who agented, returns this week to the Schulberg, Feldman and Gurney offices from the hospital.

The new deal was clinched after the studio got the first look at a rough-cut on the Frank Borzage picture, "Little Man, What Now?" for which McGuire contributed the screen play. McGuire's next is slated to be "Sutter's Gold" and, later, "The Great Ziegfeld."

Balderston on New 'Frankenstein' Yarn

John Balderston has been signed by Universal to prepare the script of "Return of Frankenstein," the next Boris Karloff thriller.

Balderston will report to Universal about May 1 at the completion of his present assignment at Radio. Schulberg, Feldman and Gurney made the deal.

Jessica Dragonette in Para. 'Big Broadcast'

Paramount Saturday concluded negotiations with Jessica Dragonette, NBC soprano, for a spot in "The Big Broadcast of 1934," being the first player signed for the picture.

David Boehm is writing the screen play and Benjamin Glazer will produce.

New Term for Durante

MGM Saturday took up the option on Jimmy Durante for another term. Player returns here this week after personal appearances in the East. Durante will continue his Chase and Sanborn radio programs from here while doing his assignment in "Student Tour."

New Jungle Pic is Over-Full of Killing

"BEYOND BENGAL"
(Showman's Pictures, Inc.)
Written, produced and directed by Harry Schenck.
(Reviewed in New York)

New York.—Produced by Harry Schenck, starting some seven years ago, this jungle animal hunt which was photographed in the Malay States and Siam is as exciting as the majority of similar films which have been seen in this country in recent years. While Mr. Schenck gives as the intention of this film expedition the primary purpose of hunting the stars of the jungle solely for photographic purposes, squeamish critics will take him to task for the almost continual slaying of these beasts.

As the film progresses and we see the long lines of elephants, hunters, beaters, etc., wind their tortuous way through the jungles, fording dangerous, crocodile-infested streams, an almost constant shooting and spearing of tigers, elephants, panthers and crocodiles unwinds and one gets the feeling that the excuse of killings is self-defense wears pretty thin.

The photography, however, with frequent close-ups and telescopic shots, is striking enough, and there are plenty of thrills and action. The two outstanding sequences of this "hunt" revolve around a wild elephant stampede through marshy grasses, and the problem of getting across a crocodile-infested river. Quite a good deal of this last sequence, particularly in close-ups of jaws snapping feverishly at the natives seeking to escape them, appears to have had the benefit of Mr. Schenck fine Italian hand. However, it detracts none from the intensity of the action and resultant thrills.

In territories where jungle films have not been over-played, exhibitors will do as well with "Beyond Bengal" as can be done by the best pictures of this type. Plenty of lurid animal and jungle paper out front where the box-office begins will do the trick, and there will be no dearth of young males flocking to see it.

MGM-Atwill Dicker For 'Stamboul Quest'

MGM is negotiating with Lionel Atwill for a spot in "Stamboul Quest" in which George Brent and Myrna Loy have the leads.

Sam Wood directs, from a screen play by Richard Schayer and additional dialogue by Allen Rivkin and P. J. Wolfson. Picture starts May 7.

Col. Buys Murder Yarn

New York.—Columbia has bought "Murder Island," a story by Leland Jamieson, which ran in Blue Book, through Paul Reynolds, New York agent.

Geo. Hill Due May 10

George Hill and his camera crew on "The Good Earth" return May 10, after photographing backgrounds in China for the past three months.

YESTERDAY IN New York

By BURNEY

Believe it or not, there is a New Deal in progress at Radio City and its High Priest is W. G. Van Schmus, managing director of the Radio City Theatres. In an informal get-together with the press recently this gentleman proved to be not only a delightful host, but also to be on the right track in his intent to make Radio City theatres the unique institution they deserve to be. Van Schmus' infectious enthusiasm and good will have been communicated likewise to his own executive staff and creative artists—even down to that excellent group of troupers, now known as the Rockettes. Where, formerly, one suspected that all was not well with that great, big, happy family which served its first impressario, there are assurances on every hand that, for the first time, proper organization and incentive go hand in hand and all are pulling together for ultimate success of the enterprise.

Rehearsals of "Caviar," a musical production with Nanette Guilford, George Houston and Hugh Cameron, are scheduled to begin shortly. The producer has chosen this title because he claims the tide has turned and people are tired of corned-beef-and-hash-depression-era shows. Therefore, the password from now on, is "Rolls-Royces and Humming-bird's Wings."

An amusing note is that given out by the Shuberts, who are planning the production of a revue called "Life Begins at 8:40." One of the features in the revue will be two Cuban dancers who call themselves Ofelia and Pimienta. We'll take American cheese on rye. . . . Crosby Gaige's apparent rout in the legitimate field appears complete, with news of an auction to be held of his library of first editions, autographs and fine bindings, among which are 100 documents and letters signed by the Stuarts, James the First, Charles the First, Napoleon, Robert Louis Stevenson and others.

One often hears about the agonies some legit authors undergo at the premiere of their brain-children. To hear them tell it, they suffer a thousand deaths. Yet one seldom hears of any writer jumping off a building or such. In Vienna, however, one day last week, Fritz Vrede took poison and cut his wrists after witnessing the premiere of his production, "Little Cafe" at the Folk Theatre. There is a happy ending. He will recover and live to commit suicide over some other play.

Binnie Barnes to Small

Binnie Barnes, who played one of the wives with Charles Laughton in "Henry VIII," has been signed by Edward Small, of Reliance, after a trans-Atlantic phone talk with Rufus LeMaire.

Santell with Schnitzer

Joseph I. Schnitzer has concluded a deal with Al Santell to direct his first picture, "The Jealous House," which the producer will make at General Service.

GOSSIP AROUND PARIS

Victor Trivas off to Amsterdam for opening of "Dans les Rues," sez he; to study exteriors, sez I. . . . Jed Harris, you know, N. Y. theatrical manager, as cold with his French as Slim Summerville with his grin. . . Brigitte Helm cocktailing comedians and fillum critics at Georges V . . . for the sake of good health. . . . Devotees of the uncrowned King Mickey celebrating at Cine l'Auto, where complete program of cartoons is being given first time on Continent. . . . Aha! "the furriners" is the slogan at the Club du Faubourg. . . . Grock, world famous clown and hero of good French talkie, sad and melancholic. . . . Seldom is he in "France la Douce"; more often in Berlin where he's very popular. . . so what? . . . Lily Damita looking for "flying" companions. . . . Who could resist; ain't she really charming?

Julien Duvivier IS a film director; at the pier he is DIRECTING magically the newshawks . . . to somebody else. . . . f. i. to Max Gordon . . who doesn't dislike it, in spite of being a theatrical producer. . . . Clayton Sheehan conquering entire manager staff of Fox with . . . real Sandeman Porto. . . . But Ken Maynard getting the very real publicity stuff; or is it his horse. . . . Now imagine Maynard meeting his voice double dubbing his pictures into French. . . . It's a delight, says that very Mr. Argus to Kenny, if I make a pitcher, you MUST dub me too; but don't brag about it. . . . Juan Berrone busy, busy. . . Marcel Coppens dashing down from Brussels to shake hands with Karstner. . . R.K.O. Leasin smiling from ear to ear after closed deal in Holland. . . . . Catherine, Catherine, when are you coming back?!?

Marcelle Chantal looks a million dollars in Pathe-Natan's "Amok." . . With Marcelle speaking Engleesh they should have given her a choice in an English version. . . . But the obvious is too hard to think, says our pal, Cyril Gardner, between four and 5 A. M. of course. . . . It looks like genuine invasion of Americans (particularly artists) this year to French capital. . . . Why, the king of Siam is already here shopping a carload of . . jazz records. . . . Is there more proof of His Majesty's sympathy for Uncle Sam? . . . Hollywood's loud speaker, Richard Arlen, has great time with entire world. . . . Sez he: "There's no excuse for Snooty Stars . . . even in Hollywood; stories, production and directors are ever important to a player's presentation, and no one person need to take a solo bow for his or her success in pictures." . . . Richard, how would you like to write a few Tradeviews in the Reporter, just like in Duluth Tribune times.

Martha Eggerth a steady triumph with the "Unfinished Symphony." . . Anna Sten's hundred faces and expressions getting as popular as Stavisky's checks. . . Must you know that Fritz Kreisler was around here for a king's lunch with library of a dozen rare bottles? . . . S.O.S. Iceberg a bit freezing. . . . Get it, Bebe Daniels is now English star; so what are you going to do about it? . . . Hays man and United Artists crowd conferring on . . possible . . trouble . . with Zama listening in. . . . Public protesting too many details—and are they gruesome —shown at exhumation of Stavisky's body. . . . So let's better run along.

Hitler Film Backer Sues German Consul

Chicago.—The stopping of the Vanderbilt film, "Hitler's Reign of Terror," and the subsequent permission for it to resume showings, have kicked up quite a mess.

Samuel Cummins, sponsor of the picture, accuses Dr. Rolfe Jaeger, German consul-general, of Chicago, of having influenced Mayor Kelly to cancel the showings and he is suing Jaeger for $250,000 for slander and libel. He also charges that Representative Dickstein used his influence with the mayor to stop the picture.

New York.—The picture, "Hitler's Reign of Terror," is scheduled to open at the Mayfair Theatre here today and it is not believed that there will be any official interference.

Robert Donat Arrives To Play 'Monte Cristo'

Robert Donat, who was borrowed from Alexander Korda by Edward Small for the lead in "Count of Monte Cristo," arrived by train from New York yesterday.

Small puts the picture into work next week at Pathe, with Rowland V. Lee directing and Elissa Landi in the top spot.

Allied Hires Counsel

New York.—The Allied Theatre Owners of New Jersey have engaged David P. Wilentz, attorney-general of New Jersey, to represent the exhibitors in code matters and in adjustments of disputes before the Clearance and Zoning boards.

Collison at Warners

Wilson Collison was signed Saturday by Warners to write the screen play for "Traveling Saleslady," the next Barbara Stanwyck picture, which Henry Blanke will produce. Small-Landau set it.

Two for Rochelle

Rochelle Hudson was signed to two major studio contracts Saturday, Radio tagging her for "Bachelor Bait," while Fox signed her for the next Rogers production, "Old Judge Priest." Small-Landau set the deals.

Eddy Arriving at MGM

Completing a concert tour, Nelson Eddy reaches Hollywood tomorrow, reporting to MGM to take up his contract.

3 For Small-Landau

Jackie Coogan, Mrs. Leslie Carter and Anne Revere have signed managerial contracts with the Small-Landau office.

2 B'way Plays Off; 3 Open This Week

New York.—Two of the current Broadway plays closed Saturday night. They are "Her Master's Voice," which Paramount is to produce as a picture, and "Broadway Interlude."

Three openings are set for this week. The Theatre Guild will present "Jig Saw" tonight; "Love Kills" comes to the Forrest tomorrow night, and "Picnic" to the National Wednesday night.

Consol. To Be Receiver For 'Broadway Virgin'

Creditors of Major Productions' "Broadway Virgin" have signed a trust agreement allowing Consolidated to act as receiver for the picture with the latter planning to dispose of it to Principal Distributing Corp.

By this deal, Consolidated will receive $10,000 to distribute to the creditors, mainly players in the picture.

Jack Robbins Better

Jack Robbins returns to the MGM lot today after being in the hospital for the past week with an abscessed ear. Robbins went to bed immediately upon his arrival here by train from New York.

Frank Scully to Fox

New York.—Fox has signed Frank Scully to its writing staff and he is on his way to Hollywood by way of the Canal.

Eternal Fitness

Bill Lackey, Monogram supervisor, is back at work after two weeks of convalescence following an operation, and the first picture handed him to supervise is entitled "Shock."

New Buildings and New Equipment for Foy

Bryan Foy will tear down one of the old office buildings on his lot and replace it with a modern office building to house writers, cutting department and a large projection room.

Contracts for the $25,000 job will be let in the next month. As a start in an expansion program, Foy purchased $17,000 worth of new lighting equipment last week.

Holman in Demand

Harry Holman got two deals Saturday when King Vidor engaged him for "Our Daily Bread" and MGM signed him for "Merry Widow." Leo Morrison set the contracts.

New Gag Man for Fox

Dave Chasen, Joe Cook's stooge and gag man, arrived in Hollywood Saturday. He joins the Fox writing staff today to handle the comedy material in the Cook production.

Chic Sale to 'Island'

Chic Sale arrived from personals in Denver yesterday and reports today to MGM to take up his contract for a featured role in "Treasure Island."

the REFLECTOR

Dozens of cameramen will regret seeing Charles Glouner leave the picture business for a new line of endeavor. . . . Charlie's one of the real old-timers who claims the good and true friendship of almost every man in the business . . . and it takes a certain amount of courage (I like to say GUTS) to quit any job when you're ON TOP and while you're HITTING THE BALL—and step out into a new and untried field after you've spent the best part of a score of years in this picture business . . . but that's what this game guy is doing and we'll string with the rest of his pals in wishing him all the luck in the world . . . and listen, young Michael McCreal . . . you can take a good lesson from Glouner just as you evidently learned plenty from Johnny Arnold.

Charlie Lang is rehearsing at Bel Air with brassie and putter while Miriam Hopkins' foot injury clears up. . . The rushes on "I Married An Actress" confirm again the good judgment of Charles Rogers who assigned Milt Krasner to this one. . . . Coyly scratching his nose Len (Big Moose) Smith refused to quote any figures or numbers at the birthday party Marion Davies gave for him on the set . . . our guess is ninety-two (for his golf score) . . . Hal Rosson is taking full advantage of the pre-summer days while they rewrite the script on "One Hundred Per Cent Pure." . . . and from China comes the roar that Charlie Clark has only a few more days work there before starting home. . . . Jackson Rose thinking up new and terribly interesting charts and graphs for his new camera hand-book. . . Ollie Marsh well along with Lubitsch photographing (for the third time) "The Merry Widow" . . but this the first time with sound.

Artie Miller took what the doctor ordered . . . popped out of bed and back to Movietone City where he relieved Hal Mohr who'd relieved him. . . . Bert Glennon and Solly Halperin doing a swell scene with Madge Evans and Warner Baxter in front of a projected background at Fox. . . . Norbert Brodine scheduled to start "There's Always Tomorrow" at Universal. . . . Charlie Stumar turning merrily along with "Loves of a Sailor" and George Robinson with Karl Freund on "I Give My Love." . . . Universal Lab worrying along without Roy Hunter who took off for Nooyawk by plane Choosday night leaving the plant in hands of Claude Baldridge and Wilson Leahy . . . and speaking of Lab boss-men . . What's On YOUR Mind?

Brulatour Bulletin: — Culver City, Calif., Apr. 26, 1934

I suppose you get lots of letters from cameramen and others that read your Bulletin every week. Well I have been reading it ever since you first published it and now I want to say I think it is better than it was at first because you give the boys a showing on their problems. I like what you said about some of the boys being classified and this is sure right up my alley and fits my case almost exactly. I think a lot of the boys have ideas and things that they would like to see printed to all the studio officials as well as other cameramen so they could say what is on their mind. I think it would be a swell idea of you would tell the boys to write letters to you on any special ideas or problems they have and that you print these letters in your Brulatour Bulletin provided these letters are not personal and that the real idea back of them is to keep on making better improvements for the cameraman and his working conditions.—"A Second who used to be a first."

Thanks, old boy—It's an idea that we're glad to go for. However, we want to get on record on a couple of things. We will NOT publish personal letters of complaint and we will NOT in the future publish any letter unless it is signed with the full and true name of the writer. We want to be helpful to every cameraman and to all cameramen but we hope we're smart enough to avoid unnecessary controversial arguments. So get it off your chest—you write it and we'll print and publish it.

—BRULATOUR BULLETIN.

McCreal Vice Glouner

Charles Glouner, many years head of camera department at Universal and a year ago moved over to Warner Bros.-First National in same position, resigned this week to devote his entire time to private business in which he has been interested for several years. From studio manager Bill Koenig down to the gateman, Glouner leaves a host of friends at the Warner plant.

As Glouner's successor Mr. Koenig has appointed Mike McCreal, who was for three years assistant to John Arnold, head of camera department Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. McCreal is peculiarly fitted for the position and has entered upon the duties of his new job ably assisted by Cecil Meyers, who has been in same spot as assistant to Glouner.

Fox Signs Glennon

Just last week we reported enthusiastic reception by all who have seen the photography of "The Scarlet Empress," photographed by Bert Glennon. In the same story we reported that Glennon had been assigned to the Irving Cummings picture at Fox.

Now we're delighted to chronicle the good news that Glennon was this week signed to a long term contract by the Fox company. This is most encouraging to some of the cameramen, who felt there was little chance of making new and important connections because of the great number of photographers contracted by all the major studios. Glennon's business is handled by the A.S.C. agency.

No Relation to Charlie

"The Notorious Sophie Lang" swings into production, under the direction of Bill Menzies, at Paramount next week, with photography in the very capable hands of Al Gilks, who was persuaded to come out from under that new house he's building.

Bus Man's Holiday

Vic Milner, one of Paramount's ace cameramen, is granted a four months leave of absence by Paramount Studio, and within a few days takes off on an extended trip through Southern Pacific waters with George Mitchell, (Mitchell Camera Company), on the latter's schooner. Principal item of cargo seems to be cameras and several cases of super-sensitive panchromatic negative for exposure at interesting points among the famous South Sea Islands. Present schedule contemplates absence of four months.

Milner is one of the executive operating committee of three representing the Board of Governors of the A.S.C., and another of this trio, Fred Jackman, is also at present on a world voyage, and was last heard from late in the week when a cable from him, bearing Shanghai, China, date line, reached production boss Bill Koenig at Warners.

Marshall Up

Charlie Marshall, famous flying cameraman, has signed with MGM to take care of the air photography of "Cadets of the Air" for the Culver City Studios. With Director Dick Rosson the flying photographer takes off for San Antonio, Texas, where he will have the cooperation of the American air forces at Randolph Field, and is quietly promising something entirely new in the way of thrilling air stuff on the screen. Happy landings!

Rosher Goes Over

When Constance Bennett completed her most recent 20th Century production, "Affairs of Cellini," she moved to Culver City, where she was accompanied by her chief photographer, Charles Rosher, who is presently photographing the star under direction of Bob Leonard. Roy Clark and Tom Dowling associated with Rosher on this one.

(NOTE: Each week, sales and service representatives of J. E. Brulatour, Inc. will ask a number of cameramen the same question. The question will be given and then the answers verbatim.)

QUESTION: WHAT'S THE MOST IMPORTANT DUTY OF THE ASSISTANT CAMERAMAN?

CHARLES E. BURKE, assistant to Henry Gerrard, (RKO): To be observant and acquaint yourself with the individual methods of the first cameraman with whom you are working.

GEORGE F. KELLY, assistant to Joe Walker, (Columbia): Being alert, gaining the confidence of the first cameraman, so that he will not worry about mechanical details, and will know that unexpected moves of the actors will be carried in focus.

PAUL G. HILL, assistant to Jack Stevens, (Universal): Because of the heavy diffusion used by most cameramen, I believe an adequate knowledge of the focus change to be the most essential duty of the assistant. There are, however, other duties which are almost as important, though not evident on the screen.

IRVING GLASSBURG, assistant to Milton Krasner, (Paramount): The assistant cameraman's most important duty is to see that the scene is in as sharp focus at all times as possible. Mistakes in this direction are very harmful to the final screen result

CLIFF SHIRPSER, assistant to Charles Lang, (Paramount): I feel that the assistant's paramount duty is to continually inspect the cameras and the magazines, so that there is no possibility of scratches, abrasions or other defects resulting from mechanical imperfections.

BERN LARSON, assistant to Sid Hickox, (Warners): Keep first cameramen happy and the shots in focus.

FREDDIE TERZO, assistant to Sol Polito, (Warners): Be on the jump ahead of the first cameraman, and "yes" the second.

RKO Roars

RKO-Radio is humming, with starts almost over-lapping finishes. Roy Hunt is assigned to start "A Hat, a Coat, a Glove" and Dave Abel is starting "Bachelor Bait"—(What a title!) Winny Wenstrom is slated to start "Afterwards." Lucien Andriot and Teddy Tetzlaff continue their respective pictures, while Nick Musuraca has a good start on "Arabella."

PAR. DIRECTORS AT ODDS

TRADEVIEWS by FRANK POPE

•PRESIDENT KUYKENDALL, of the MPTOA, in an address in San Francisco recently on the evils of the double feature practise, said that the remedy lay in the film industry code, which "is flexible so that this menace can be attacked easily." Basically, Mr. Kuykendall is right, but to attack the double feature under the code makes it purely a local matter, one to be dealt with by grievance boards in different localities.

That would mean that the question of double bills would be dealt with as it came up in hundreds of spots, all of which would take time and, moreover, would give no general ruling as grievance boards might not decide the same way in all spots.

It seems to us that there is a much simpler way of solving the problem. Suppose the major producers said to the exhibitors of the country: "We will not sell you our pictures unless you agree not to double-bill them." Of course, the majors lay the blame for double billing at the doors of the independents, but all the indie producers do not make enough pictures to supply doubles for the houses of the country. And it is not the indie pictures which go to make up the double bills.

Take the local situation for example. Practically every theatre in the Los Angeles district, with the exception of a few first runs, is playing double bills and every bill has two major features—no indies. Presumably the situation is the same in other sections of the country, so why are the majors yelling about double features from indies?

Moreover, these pictures are not of the ordinary program variety. On many double bills there can be found "Tarzan and His Mate," "Rip Tide," "Little Women," "Wonder Bar" and other new pictures which have been big hits. These go into double bills almost before they complete their first runs.

Seemingly, the remedy is in the hands of the majors themselves. Just what would be the result if they stood by their promises made to the exhibitors at the recent MPTOA convention here and made a sincere and con-

New York.—Bebe Daniels and Ben Lyon will open at the New York Paramount Friday. The feature on the bill is "Murder at the Vanities."

Cannot Agree On Counsel To Conduct Defense Against The Trustees' $12,000,000 Suit

New York.—Those present and former members of the Paramount board of directors against whom the trustees for the corporation have filed suit for $12,237,071 are bitterly at odds over the question of their defense. Some of them want the defense to be a joint affair, while others declare that they will be represented by lawyers of their own choosing.

A meeting was held a few days ago for the purpose of deciding whether or not the firm of Cravath, De Gersdorf, Swaine and Wood should conduct a joint defense. Many differences of opinion arose and the argument grew a bit heated at times, both about the Neither would indicate in any way what reception the President gave their appeal.

'U' After Sloane

Universal is negotiating with Paul Sloane, through Bren and Orsatti, to direct "After You Dear," a musical comedy in which Gloria Stuart and John Boles will be starred.

Hitler Film Packs New York Mayfair

New York.—The Vanderbilt picture, "Hitler's Reign of Terror," which has had a stormy career in Chicago, opened at the Mayfair here yesterday and gave the house the biggest opening day in its history, surpassing even that of "Bring 'Em Back Alive." The gross for the day ran between $5000 and $5500.

Because of its success, the evening prices have been advanced to 75 cents and $1, with the expectation that the week will be approximately $40,000. Police guarded the theatre yesterday, but there were no disturbances.

Cohen-Keough on Way With Season's Line-up

New York.—Emanuel Cohen, production head of Paramount, and Austin Keough, chief counsel for the company, left here yesterday for the coast.

Cohen has the complete Paramount line-up for next season and Keough is going in connection with reorganization matters in connection with theatre holdings and real estate.

Ginsberg Back Friday

Henry Ginsberg returns to his desk at Hal Roach studio Friday after a trip to New York, where he has been conferring with MGM officials about the distribution of Roach productions.

Clarke Due from China

Charles Clarke, MGM cameraman, returns next week from China where he has photographed approximately 50,000 feet of film for the "Good Earth" picture.

New York REVIEWS

"WE'RE NOT DRESSING"

Paramount prod.; director, Norman Taurog; writers, Benjamin Glazer, George Marion Jr., Horace Jackson, Francis Martin; music and lyrics, Gordon and Revel.

Rivoli Theatre

Herald-Tribune: The musical picture called "We're Not Dressing" is a gay, amiable and modestly entertaining screen comedy that gives evidence of being a pleasantly madcap edition of the apologetic sort of pseudo-social satire which was called "The Admirable Crichton."

Times: It has all the plausibility and romantic flavor of the average musical comedy. It is nicely photographed and cleverly directed, the sort of thing that is invariably diverting.

Sun: There is nothing satiric, nothing whimsical, nor anything particularly witty about this newest desert island comedy. The story is a fairly successful combination of two familiar patterns.

World-Telegram: It is first rate entertainment for the ear and funny bone; a gay, melodious, entertaining bit of musical comedy fluff which frequently "kids" itself.

Journal: Just about all one needs to say about "We're Not Dressing" is that Bing Crosby sings. He sings gaily. He sings romantically. He sings often enough to suit his most ardent enthusiasts and, of course, he sings delightfully. It's lightly diverting entertainment.

American: The film is a melange of something old, something new, something borrowed, something blue, but because of Bing and Ethel, George and Gracie, Leon and Carole, Revel and Gordon, Droopy and the Stofani boys, its good popular entertainment, bound to please a large public.

Mirror: A gay and rowdy musical comedy. Bing Crosby fans will delight in "We're Not Dressing," which is funny as well as tuneful.

News: Its thin plot is bolstered up with a lot of slapstick work and Crosby's charming voice. The whole picture is a lot of nonsense, but it is entertaining nonsense.

Post: The picture is labored, banal and dull-witted, relieved only by Bing Crosby's singing, which would be all right if there weren't too much of it.

"TWENTY MILLION SWEETHEARTS"

Warner prod.; director, Ray Enright; writers, Paul Finder Moss, Warren Duff, Harry Sauber; music and lyrics, Harry Warren and Al Dubin.

Strand Theatre

World-Telegram: "Twenty Million Sweethearts" seems to me to be the sprightliest, briefest and least consciously precious of the many musical films that Warners-First National has produced. An amiable, tuneful, jolly, well-acted offering.

Sun: It is a straight comedy, with Mr. Powell's songs worked neatly into the story, and it's the most amusing film the Strand has enjoyed for some time.

Herald-Tribune: The new picture is a straight romantic tale, rather than any brilliant effort at satire. Anyway, the whole affair is quite bearable.

Mirror: With smart dialogue, an ingenious plot, neat direction and a great company of comedians, it is a sparkling picture, one of the cleverest musical movies which have yet come out of Hollywood.

News: Opportunities galore for high jinx, comedy, and to be sure, a list of new songs. The producers of "42nd Street" have done it again.

Times: It is a rollicking porpourri of fun, song and romance. It is a film with a wide appeal, for the story always holds one's interest, the humor is keen and the melodies, which are rendered as natural incidents to the narrative, are very agreeable.

Post: There is nothing spectacularly original about the story, but it is developed with sprightliness and interspersed with enough good songs to keep the interest at a fairly high key.

American: Lots of laughs, plenty of melody, satisfying romance, pleasing players, "Twenty Million Sweethearts" is a honey for anybody's money.

Journal: With some satirical, though good-natured jabs at the ether industry, several distinctly tuneful songs and an excellent cast to put over a smartly written and directed comedy, the film is grand entertainment.

Creditors To Be Paid From 'Virgin' Advances

Cliff Elfelt, of Major Productions, stated yesterday that, while Consolidated will handle his recently completed picture, "Broadway Virgin," the distribution arrangements will not be made with Principal Distributing, as he has his own distributing contract with Imperial.

Consolidated does not stand in the position of receiver for the picture, but will collect the advances from Imperial and satisfy the claims of the creditors.

Casters Not So Hot On the Golf Course

James Ryan, of Fox Western Avenue studios, led all entries in the Casting Directors' Golf Tournament Sunday, with a low gross score of 84. Virgil Hart, of the same office, was low net with 76. Bill Mayberry was second low net with 77.

In Division 2, Phil Friedman, of Fox, won low gross with 104. Frank Stemple, of Central Casting, took low net with an 80, and Holley Morse was second low net with an 86. In Division 3, Bob Palmer, of RKO, won low gross with 112. Paul Wilkins, of MGM,was low net with an 86 and Gus Demling, of Central Casting, was second with an 87. Billy Gordon, of Paramount, took the high score prize with a total of 185 strokes, while Dan Kelly, of Columbia, was given a consolation prize for his 133.

Cedric Gibbons Now a 'Cocktail' Architect

Cedric Gibbons, MGM director, has originated a new type of architecture to be used in the sets of "The Merry Widow."

This step was taken to avoid further criticism from foreign countries as to the incorrect style of architecture used in past productions. Gibbons has titled this particular creation "Cocktail Architecture."

certed effort to stop this evil is perhaps problematical. But it would be an interesting experiment.

MONOGRAM'S 'LOUDSPEAKER' JUST FAIR ENTERTAINMENT

Cast and Director Hampered by Story

"THE LOUDSPEAKER"
(Monogram)

Direction .....Joseph Santley
Author .....Ralph Spence
Screen Play.....Albert E. DeMond
Dialogue: Ralph Spence and Albert E. DeMond.
Photography .....Gilbert Warrenton
Cast: Ray Walker, Jacqueline Wells, Charles Grapewin, Noel Francis, Wilbur Mack, Lorin Raker, Spencer Charters, Sherwood Bailey, Billy Irwin, Ruth Romaine, Lawrence Wheat and Mary Carr.

With only a fair story, a fair cast and fair dialogue, it is only natural that "The Loudspeaker" is rather less than fair entertainment.

The direction by Joseph Santley is only fair, too, but it is enlivened by clever spots which indicate that, given better material to work with, Santley would be consistently above that rating.

It's all about a young fellow named Joe Miller (Ray Walker) who, by sheer conceit and loud talking, works his way from dragging a baggage truck around a depot to the position of New York's most popular radio announcer. His success goes to his already swelled head, making him a pretty hard person to get along with, until his girl friend, Jacqueline Wells, makes a hit on his radio program, tells him a few things about his conceit and refuses to marry him. Whereupon he wrecks his career and drinks all his savings up. But he finally comes to his senses and, upon his reappearance on the radio, is given a tremendous ovation.

Walker tries hard, but fails to be a very good radio favorite, even on the screen. Jacqueline Wells has a sweet singing voice. Charles Grapewin is, of course, excellent in a small role. Spencer Charters plays the sponsor of the radio program, and Wilbur Mack and Lorin Raker are well cast.

Ralph Spence wrote the story and dialogue and Albert E. DeMond did the screen play and collaborated on dialogue. Gilbert Warrenton photographed. Cutting and a general speeding up will help this film wonderfully.

Radio Builds Picture Around Astaire-Rogers

Radio is planning to build its big broadcasting special, now tentatively called "Radio City Revels," around Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers. The studio will top-bill the team, constructing the story with them as the central characters.

Several story ideas are up for consideration, but the original which George Marion is writing leads the field. Dorothy Yost has joined him to handle the continuity.

New York.—Claude Rains has been engaged by Hecht and MacArthur for the leading role in "Crime Without Passion," their first production for Paramount release. They are after Jimmy Savo for the comedy lead.

$7000 a Week for Winchell in Vaude

New York.—Walter Winchell is opening at the Palace Theatre in Chicago next week with an act and goes to Detroit the following week. It is understood that the act is getting Walter $7000 a week.

Indie Owners Meet To Discuss Duals

Members of the Independent Theatre Owners of Southern California will meet today noon at the Hotel Mayfair to thresh out the matter of whether or not they go on record favoring dual bills.

A hot session is expected, for there are a number of exhibitors who are bitterly opposed to dual bills as well as a faction which feels that double bills must continue or the independent theatre men must pass out of the picture. A vote on the matter is expected at the meeting

Warners Borrow Jory For 'British Agent'

Warners yesterday concluded negotiations with Fox for the loan of Victor Jory for a spot in "British Agent," which starts tomorrow, having been postponed from Monday.

Studio also signed Ivan Simpson, Walter Byron, Paul Porcasi and Donald Crisp for roles. Michael Curtiz directs and Robert Presnell produces.

Terms for Boland-Wing

Paramount presented new contracts yesterday to Mary Boland and Toby Wing. Boland's next assignment will be "Her Master's Voice," starring Charles Ruggles and Lanny Ross. Toby has not been given any new assignment as yet.

Stooges Starting

The three former Healy stooges, Howard, Fine and Howard, start "Punch Drunks" at Columbia tomorrow, Lou Breslow directing the two-reeler for which Jack Cluett and Breslow contribute the screen play.

Ellis To Do Original

Robert Ellis was engaged by George Batcheller, of Chesterfield, to write an original story as the company's next picture to follow "Green Eyes." Harry Spingler of the Small-Landau office set the deal.

Novel Yarn for MGM

MGM purchased yesterday an original play, titled "Sasha Gerhard," by Harry Thomashefsky. The story deals with a race of mechanical men who are brought to life by mad inventors.

Thelma Todd for Radio

Thelma Todd was slated by Radio yesterday for a leading role in the next Fred Astaire-Ginger Rogers picture, "Gay Divorce." This will be followed by the Radio City picture.

Extra Board Delayed By Code Authority

Mrs. Mabel Kinney, chairman of the Code Committee for Extras, yesterday told John C. Flinn, executive secretary of the Code Authority, that the Extras' Committee is being held up and retarded in its work because of the delay on the part of the Code Authority in passing on the committee's recommendations and requests for rulings.

Also present at the meeting were Sidney Kent, member of the Code Authority, and Pat Casey, a member of the Extras' Committee and chairman of the Studio Labor Committee.

As a result of the conference, Flinn assured Mrs. Kinney that, immediately upon his return to New York, the Code Authority will take quick action on the Extras' Committee matters and will rush the decisions here.

Mrs. Kinney gave a complete report of the activities of the committee, together with data on the number of complaints flied with it and those disposed of.

Hearst's Birthday Guests Returning

All the notables from the picture colony who went to the Hearst ranch at San Simeon to celebrate the publisher's 71st birthday, are on their way home. Some left last night by train or car and others leave today by plane.

Charles Rogers May Do 'Canal Boy' As Final

Although "The Woman God Forgave" has been announced as the last Charles R. Rogers production on his Paramount contract, there is a possibility now that "Canal Boy" will be used to complete the schedule.

Inability to cast "The Woman God Forgave" will be ironed out when Emanuel Cohen returns, with "Canal Boy" as the alternate. Both scripts are completed.

Cast for 'Green Eyes'

Charles Starrett and Shirley Grey have been signed by George R. Batcheller for the leads in the last picture on the current Chesterfield program, "Green Eyes," which Richard Thorpe puts before the cameras Friday.

Others signed include William Bakewell, John Wray, Dorothy Revere, Ben Hendricks Jr. and Alden Chase.

'Cleopatra' to Desert

Cecil B. DeMille and company of 200 left yesterday on a location trip to Muroc dry lake in Mojave desert to shoot scenes of the trek of the chariots of "Cleopatra." The company will remain in the desert area for several days.

European Arrivals

New York.—Arriving on the Ile de France today are Louis Gasnier, who will direct Spanish productions at the Paramount Long Island studio; Samuel Eckmann, British representative of MGM; Lee Shubert, Mitzi Mayfair and Robert Newman.

NOT THAT IT MATTERS

By HELEN GWYNN

You all know the horrors of being the face on the cutting room floor, but Mady Christians' stage career in this country has been every bit as horrible and discouraging, despite the fact that the gal is a marvelous actress and succeeded in getting remarkably good notices. Her first effort over here was in "The Divine Drudge," produced by John Golden. Miss Christians triumphed, but the show flopped and in two weeks it closed. Mr. Golden immediately announced plans for a new starring vehicle for Miss Christians, which duly went into rehearsal. It rehearsed for weeks, had eight invitation performances and never opened! The Theatre Guild had by this time bought a play called "Races," which it was anxious to put into production while the Nazi indignation was at its height. They approached Miss Christians and offered her the leading role and Miss Christians accepted. The play went into rehearsal immediately and the Guild took it over to Philadelphia. Miss Christians received great critical acclaim, but somehow the play didn't jell and the Guild abandoned the idea of bringing it into New York this season. Now Miss Christians is a foreign actress and the Equity rulings on foreign invasions of the American theatre are very strict, so, after the closing of the Guild play, Miss Christians was informed that she could not accept another stage engagement for at least six months, regardless of the fact that she has yet to have anything that might really be called a stage "engagement"—such announcements being premature to say the least. So now Miss Christians is in Hollywood and for the sake of Miss Christians and the movie industry, we hope she makes pictures, because that gal is an actress and should be working at it.

Which also brings us down to the fact that this department henceforth will operate from Hollywood instead of New York, the inspiration for mental burpings in that town having settled down to a summer drone, with the bars being filled with tourists and predatory women; Harlem being taken over by the Cubans; the theatre having gone into the doldrums and because a sign on a Sunset Boulevard excavation says we can get "Free Dirt" out here while in New York you just pay and pay.

One echo from New York disturbs us, though. The latest report on the awarding of the Pulitzer prize has "Men in White" as the winner and it must have taken a difficult mental operation to put that in the running. Sidney Howard surely contributed two American pictures that more richly deserve it, to say nothing of "Tobacco Road," by Jack Kirkland, but the latter play happens to deal with a portion of Americana that no one is anxious to recognize. In fact, one of our better known critical professors of the drayma refused to go to see it because he claimed that, even if it were good, he wouldn't like it or recommend it.

AGENTS SPLIT OVER LABOR BOARD'S RULES CHANGE

The minority group of agents had their inning before the State Labor Commission yesterday on their grievances against the Commission's set of rules controlling the managers. Sam Zagon, of Zagon and Aaron, and David Tannebaum met with Charles F. Lowy, attorney for the Commission.

Lowy listened to the claim that the rules, establishing a code of ethics for agents, were unconstitutional and then pointed a way to smoothing the situation. Zagon and Tannenbaum declared that the clause in the agency rules compelling the managers to present their disputes to the Commission took away the rights of agents to go to court. The same clause, it was pointed out, is part of the State Agency Act, but has been outlawed by numerous court decisions.

The outstanding objection from the attorneys was that the clause forced the agents to sign contracts agreeing to arbitration of disputes before the commission, thus placing a powerful weapon in the Commission's hands by appointing it a judicial office instead of an executive one. Lowy rejected a proposal to eliminate the clause, but agreed to amending it.

The revision will have the agents agreeing to take their disputes to Court on condition that, at the same time, they ask the Court to appoint the Labor Commission as arbitrator. The latter's findings in disputes would then be acted on by the court.

This arrangement preserves the Commission's power to control agents and gives the latter a means to put through attachment proceedings against clients which would otherwise be denied them.

The arrangement last night also split the minority group. Harry Sokolov broke away from the Zagon and Tannenbaum group, expressing dissatisfaction with the Lowy agreement. "The agent must continue to recognize the Labor Commission as a judicial officer or have his license refused. Since there is no higher court than the Labor Commission, there would be no way to appeal decisions. I intend to carry our fight to the courts."

Retort Courteous

Radio asked Hazel Forbes, of the cast of "Down to Their Last Yacht," if she would go on the "Hollywood on the Air" program. She declined, politely, remarking: "If I really wanted to go on the air, there are two hours for which I am paying." She controls a widely known tooth paste and a hair lotion, and is in pictures because she likes the work.

Durante Coming Back

New York.—Jimmy Durante, who has been making personal appearances in the East, leaves for the coast by plane tomorrow. Milton Raison accompanies him and also Arthur Tracy.

Monogram Product All Set for Italy

New York.—N. V. Ritchey, of the Ritchey International Corporation, has completed a deal for the distribution of twenty Monogram features of this season's program for Italy.

According to Ritchey, this is the first time the entire program of an independent producer has been sold in that country.

Jack Warner on Air

Jack Warner will be the headliner on the KFWB radio program Wednesday night, exploiting "Twenty Million Sweethearts," which opens at the local theatres Thursday. Studio has promises from every member of the cast to appear on the air.

Easton Tennis Champ

Ted Easton defeated Karl Struss Sunday at the Los Angeles Tennis Club for the Mae West trophy in the Paramount tennis tournament. In the doubles matches for the C. B. De Mille trophy, Ted Easton and F. J. Lucid Jr. won over H. B. Wood and Leo Gregg, 6-1 and 6-2.

Don't Blame Us

Through an oversight on the part of the studio publicity department, the names of Lynn Riggs and Leonard Spigelgass, who did the adaptations of Radio's "Stingaree," were not on the official credit sheet.

OPEN FORUM

Hollywood Reporter:

Enclosed please find a clipping from the New York World-Telegram of April 4, 1934.

Kindly note that the staff writer, Miss Irene Kuhn, has brought to the attention of us stockholders who are interested in the Fox Film Companies something of great importance.

A section of this article notes that Mr. Winfield Sheehan, in the year 1929, received a salary of $128,727, plus a bonus for the year to the amount of $20. This particular year was the greatest and most successful year in the history of the Fox Film Corporation, and, as we read further we find that Mr. Winfield Sheehan, in the year 1933, received a salary of $250,000. In that same year many of us stockholders asked for a receivership, due to the fact that the company had lost millions of dollars. The same applied in the year 1932.

I cannot understand why a company in the terrible condition that the Fox Film Corporation has been in during those years when Mr. Sheehan was receiving $250,000 a year did not abide with the other companies who reduced the salaries of their executives instead of almost doubling them.

I also know that Mr. Sidney Kent, who at present is the President of the Fox Film Corporation, only receives a salary in the neighborhood of $75,000 a year. I cannot understand why Mr. Sheehan, who is only the Vice-President, receives $250,000 a year. If, in the event that Mr. Sheehan has a contract calling for this amount, I know of other existing contracts in the same company that have been reduced.

If there is a political machine in the Fox Film Corporation such as is existing in our politics, then I am sorry to state that my life savings of $9,000, which I have invested in the stock of this company, have been a one hundred percent loss.

Thanking you very kindly for your courtesy in reading my long letter, I remain,

Very truly yours,
A STOCKHOLDER.

Snap for Cameramen

Bert Shipman and Edward Garvin, cameramen, got a choice assignment from Sam Goldwyn when they were ordered to sail on the Empress of Britain to get sea-going shots for the Eddie Cantor picture. The cameramen get off at Balboa, Canal Zone, and board a plane for the return trip.

Board Shows Teeth

admitted the charge and were ordered to cease within 48 hours or their film will be taken away and they will have no shows.

Two other cases were heard: one a leasing argument, the other a charge by the Garfield Theatre, of Alhambra, against Fox West Coast of holding out on product. The lease case will probably go to New York for settlement. The other will be decided this morning.

Code Agency Board Has First Meeting

First steps in the work of the Film Code Agency Committee were taken last night when the members met with John C. Flinn, secretary of the Code Authority.

Flinn explained the purpose of the committee, which, in brief, is simply to set up a system of fair practice between producer-agent-artist and see that it is carried out. Thursday of this week the committee will meet at the Beverly-Wilshire at noon to organize.

Trem Carr, B. B. Kahane, W. R. Sheehan, Jack Gain and Jack Warner were present for the producers. Berton Churchill, Frank Lloyd, Wells Root, Ernest Pascal and J. M. Nickolaus represented the employees, and George Frank the agents.

'Dames' Drama Done

Ray Enright completed the dramatic sequences of "Dames" at Warners late Sunday. Busby Berkeley still has at least several weeks of work rounding out the musical sequences.

Freulich Promoted

Henry Freulich, second cameraman, has just been boosted to the rank of first cameraman and is photographing the Minute Mysteries series at Columbia.

Allen Scott Assigned

Allen Scott has been signed by Radio to do the screen play of "By Your Leave."

questions of a joint defense and about the law firm mentioned.

It is understood that Sidney Kent and Sam Katz refused flatly to be parties to the joint defense plan by that firm and that Kent has already arranged with Nathan Burkan to represent him. Katz has not made any announcement as to his counsel yet, but is expected to do so without a few days.

This suit is the result of the authorization given by the Paramount directors, between September 9, 1931, and March 7, 1932, for the repurchase by Paramount of its own stock from various stockholders. The suit was filed by the trustees after they had asked permission of Referee Davis and he had granted it. In bringing the suit the trustees acted on the advice of their own counsel, Root, Clark, Buckner and Ballantine.

The directors named as defendants are Adolph Zukor, Sidney R. Kent, Sam Katz, John Hertz, Frank Bailey, Jules Brulatour, William H. English, Daniel Frohman, Felix Kahn, Gilbert Kahn, Austin Keough, Ralph Kohn, Jesse L. Lasky, Elek John Ludvigh, Sir William Wiseman, Eugene Zukor, Donald Stralem as executor of the estate of Casimir Stralem, and Eugene Zukor, Mel Shauer and Julia Shauer for the estate of Emil Shauer.

WARNERS' THEATRE GRAB

TRADEVIEWS by FRANK POPE

•WHILE Louis B. Mayer was denouncing the exhibitors of Southern California on the double bill question Tuesday afternoon, another meeting was being held a short distance away at which there was discussed a picture topic of equally vital importance to the industry. That was the gathering of the Regional Conference of the Council of Catholic Women and the subject was indecent pictures.

Mr. Mayer, in his speech, diverged from the double bill topic long enough to admit that producers will not be allowed to go on forever turning out dirty pictures. He did not explain what is going to stop them, but Mr. Mayer is a canny soul and usually has his ear pretty close to the ground. Maybe the rumblings of the opposition to such films by the women and the churches of the country have reached that ear. They certainly have been loud enough to reach most ears in the picture industry.

These Catholic Women enthusiastically approved of a resolution which urged that all Catholics remain away from pictures "which flaunt indecency, glorify crime and criminals, condone sex sins and scoff at the sanctity of marriage and the home."

This voice has been added to the voices of practically every important organization of women in the country, and all the voices are saying the same thing. It is admitted that the patronage of the picture theatres rests largely on the tastes of women and children. If the women stay away from theatres and keep their children away, what happens to grosses?

Leaving the moral side of indecent pictures entirely out of the question, there is a business side. These Catholic women call on the mothers to keep their children away from improper pictures. Statistics show that, of the average weekly attendance of 77,000,000 in this country, nearly one-third are under 21 years of age. What percentage of those and of their parents can the theatres afford to lose?

The Catholic Church backs the views of these Catholic women 100 per cent. It has formed a "Legion of Decency" and is circulating pledges

Loew's Net Profit Makes Big Advance

New York.—Loew's Inc. yesterday reported net profit of $3,973,472 for the 28 weeks ended March 15 after subsidiaries dividends, this equaling $2.38 a share on the common. This compares with $2,013,281, or $1.04 a common share, for the corresponding period in 1933.

Music Hall to Give Opera Next Week

New York.—The presentation of opera at the Radio City Music Hall, which has been discussed for some time, will become a reality next week when "Madame Butterfly" will be staged there, beginning Thursday. The picture on the bill will be "Change of Heart."

Leonidoff will stage the opera, which will be run continuously for an hour and twenty minutes. There will be no curtains, the revolving stages being used for the changes. Some of the dialogue and minor details will be cut out, but all the principal arias and melodies are left in. If this experiment is successful, other operas will be given.

Laemmle Jr. Still Ill

Carl Laemmle Jr. was out for the third day yesterday with a sinus attack, operating a considerable portion of his Universal job from his home in Beverly Hills.

Perc Westmore Honored

Percy Westmore has been elected president of the Motion Picture Make-up Artists Association. It is his third session.

Company Trying To Corral Several Hundred New York Houses, But Bid Is Too Low

New York.—In an effort to increase their theatre holdings, Warner Brothers are trying to snare several hundred independent theatres in and around New York. They are negotiating for the Fox Metropolitan Playhouses, the Skouras houses and the Randforce chain.

It is understood that Warners are ready to lay down $6,000,000 for what they want, but this offer is considered childish as the control of the Metropolitan Playhouses alone would set them back around $13,000,000. It is not believed the company is either willing or prepared to go that high.

Whether or not the Warners propose to pay all or even part cash for the theatres has not been stated. It

Paramount Not to Make Its Shorts at Astoria

New York.—Paramount has changed its mind about transferring its shorts production to the Long Island studio and will continue to make them at the 43rd street plant. The space at Astoria is needed for feature production.

Warners Sign Newman For More Traveltalks

E. M. Newman, producing the Traveltalk shorts for Warners, got a new contract for thirteen more one-reelers yesterday and leaves May 12 for New York to start production on the group. He will operate at the Vitaphone Studio in Brooklyn.

Fox Net Profit for Quarter $805,376

New York.—The Fox Film Corporation reports for the thirteen weeks ended March 31 a consolidated net profit of $805,376, after deducting reserve for taxes, interest, depreciation and other charges .

This compares with a loss of $557,122 for the corresponding period of 1933, and makes the consolidated net earned surplus $2,509,625 on March 31, all of which has been accumulated since the reorganization of April 1, 1933.

Para. Talking Picture Work to Bernt Balchen

Paramount was reported yesterday discussing a deal with Bernt Balchen to make his first appearance in pictures other than newsreels. Studio is said to have an aviation picture in mind for him.

The noted Arctic flier slipped quietly into town during the past week on a mission for the Byrd expedition and is due to leave for the South Pole June 1.

Radio President Here

J. L. McDonough, president of Radio Pictures, who left New York Sunday, arrived here on The Chief yesterday to confer with studio officials concerning productions for the coming year.

Lou Brock East May 15

Lou Brock, Radio associate producer, leaves for New York May 15 to discuss details of the formation of an independent producing company. His contract with Radio expires June 1.

Hy Daab Turns Writer

New York.—Hy Daab has resigned from the advertising department of Warner Brothers, effective May 12, and plans to go to Hollywood on a writing assignment.

EASTERN EXHIBS PLANNING BIG WAR ON PERCENTAGES

New York.—The leaders of the theatre owners in New York, Philadelphia and along the entire Atlantic seaboard will hold an important meeting at the Motion Picture Club next Tuesday to lay out plans for a determined fight against high percentages and preferred playing time. Exhibitors from as far west as Ohio have signified their intention of attending.

The present plan is to arrange for a great mass meeting to be held in Madison Square Garden, which will be

New York REVIEWS

"THE WITCHING HOUR"

Paramount prod.; director, Henry Hathaway; writers, Augustus Thomas, Anthony Veiller, Salisbury Field.

Paramount Theatre

Mirror: Thought transference and the release of the subconscious by hypnotism make "The Witching Hour" a little artless, a theatrical melodrama which is deficient in suspense and glutted with whimsey.

Herald-Tribune: "The Witching Hour" remains one of the finest of the early American exercises in dramaturgy. The production is chiefly interesting for the way in which it suggests that a fine production can provide vast help these days for a skilful archaic melodrama. At the same time it is so attractively staged that the production achieves pictorial and dramatic excellence.

Times: Although "The Witching Hour" is somewhat stiff in the joints, it has a certain quaint appeal. This film is no shining example of plausibility and it has an utter disregard for accuracy in criminal court procedure.

World-Telegram: A civilized little anecdote from Augustus Thomas' play of the same name, affably told by a company of pleasant and competent Hollywood players under Henry Hathaway's expert guidance. One of the merits of the film is that it shows none of the usual signs of having been merely flung together. It is handsomely mounted, carefully directed and expertly played, especially by John Halliday and Sir Guy Standing. Reasonably entertaining melodrama.

Journal: A tensely absorbing melodrama that concerns itself with hypnotism. Superbly played by John Halliday in the principal role, the film has an unusual theme and develops it arrestingly. Suspense is vividly sustained by Director Henry Hathaway.

News: Although the story is kept in the period in which it was written, the idea on which the plot revolves is so lacking in novelty that the whole proceedings are a little out of tune with its modern screen presentation.

"BEGGARS IN ERMINE"

Monogram prod.; director, Phil Rosen; writers, Esther Lynd Day, Tristram Tupper

Mayfair Theatre

World-Telegram: The film is so well managed by its director and leading players that, in spite of its implausibilities, it never becomes too fantastic or melodramatic. This makes for interesting entertainment.

Times: After witnessing the strange incidents in "Beggars in Ermine," one is inclined to be thankful that few pictures quite as implausible as this offering have ever reached the screen. It is, as might be surmised, a film which succeeds in being both boring and irritating. The dialogue is crude and nothing need be said in favor of the acting.

Mirror: However fantastic the story, there is entertainment in "Beggars in Ermine." It is one of those films in which the wicked are punished and the good are rewarded, always a gratifying story solution.

American: Although author and scenarist are at some pains to explain most meticulously each of the film's contentions, the story never rings true, and, despite the efforts of those hard-working thespians, Messrs. Atwill, Walthall and Thomas, the picture, at best, provides only mediocre entertainment.

Journal: Recalling "The Beggars' Opera," the picture has a sufficiently novel theme to hold one's interest. Well dramatized and directed, it emerges as one of the better offerings from the independent studios. Mr. Atwill gives an effective and creditable performance.

News: Displeasure arises at the thought that any scenario could be written along lines that are so far-fetched and implausible. For all the manifold shortcomings of the picture, there are two qualities which lift it from utter hopelessness. These are to be found in the performances of Lionel Atwill and Henry B. Walthall.

Herald-Tribune: Perhaps plausibility is not the chief feature of the story called "Beggars in Ermine," but that is far from its most serious fault. The film, it appears, is a rather vague attempt to combine some of the melodramatic eeriness of the German picture called "M" and one of the efforts of the immortal Mr. Chaney.

Committee Cleans Up All Extra Kicks

The Complaints and Grievance subcommittee of the Code Committee for Extras yesterday cleaned up all complaints of alleged code violations by the studios when it met and decided thirty cases.

This, according to Mrs. Mabel Kinney, chairman of the committee, makes a total of 87 complaints that have been handled since the committee started functioning. She stated that, in cases decided against the studios, checks are sent to the committee which turns them over to the complainants. Thus far, she says, not a studio has refused to abide by the decision of the committee.

"We hope to keep these complaints cleaned up," said Mrs. Kinney, "and guarantee immediate action on all filed with us. If the extras will send them in, we'll give quick action."

Rose Queen Signed for 'High School Girl'

Bryan Foy has signed Treva Scott, queen of the 1934 Tournament of Roses, to a term contract and gives the girl her first picture break as the second lead in "High School Girl."

She is a student at the Pasadena high school and has had some stage experience.

Warners' Theatre Grab

may be that they expect to make the same kind of a deal which they offered theatre owners in New Jersey a few weeks ago. That was that the theatre man should turn over his house, taking Warner bonds in payment. The argument advanced by Warners was that the expected increase in the value of the bonds would guarantee the payment for the house. The proposed deal was similar to the ones made by Paramount some years ago which got that company into a lot of grief and has resulted in the granting by Referee Davis of the application of the trustees to bring suit for over $12,000,000 against Paramount directors.

'BULLDOG DRUMMOND' A WOW; 'CHANGE OF HEART' PLEASING

New Colman Film Gay and Delightful

"BULLDOG DRUMMOND STRIKES BACK"

(Twentieth Century)

Direction .....Roy Del Ruth
Author .....H. C. McNeile
Screen Play.....Nunnally Johnson
Photography .....Peverell Marley
Cast: Ronald Colman, Charles Butterworth, Loretta Young, Warner Oland, Una Merkel, C. Aubrey Smith, Arthur Hohl, George Regas, Ethel Griffies, Mischa Auer, Douglas Gerrard, Halliwell Hobbes, E. E. Clive.

With tongue in cheek and a hot-cha-cha, here is the gayest, most engaging mystery-murder story that has reached the films in years. Bodies disappear and a laugh comes tumbling after. An important radiogram means life or death to the hero and heroine and Charlie Butterworth has a field day.

It's thrilling and it's fun. It's Ronald Colman at his debonair best. It's Nunnally Johnson having a swell time writing a lot of things he always wanted to see in a murder mystery. It's Roy Del Ruth directing at a pace and with a sly sense of humor that mystery stories have been crying aloud for ever since the first "Bulldog Drummond" story hit the screen. It is our opinion that this Drummond story will play an even merrier tune at the box office than the first. And that is to say that it's the best news you can hear for your new season program.

If you know your legends, or read your Woollcott regularly, you'll recognize the basis of this story. An oriental prince has slipped in a cargo of valuable furs that he wishes to sell in England. The man who brought them in is mysteriously murdered. His wife is kidnapped. His niece thinks she is going mad because no one in London is willing to acknowledge her identity. Even the hotel at which they all register will not admit that anyone of them was ever seen in the place.

Drummond manages to stumble into the heart of the story while walking through the fog, but every time he thinks he has someone safely in his rooms to be questioned by Inspector Nielson, that person just as promptly disappears, so that finally Nielson posts a guard to arrest Drummond if he bothers anyone. The guard actually saves Drummond's life so that he can unravel the mystery and also why it was necessary to kill anyone who knew the contents of a radiogram to the oriental prince. It's because a member of the crew had died of cholera, and so Drummond finally manages to burn the cargo that might have spread the black death in England.

Where to begin ladling out the praise is a mystery in itself, because every department has been so capably handled that they all make the best possible example of the resultant perfect whole. Johnson's writing is grand, and Del Ruth's direction makes all the highlights the more elegant, particularly in the "bell" sequence. The only possible objection to the script is the over-emphasis of the Butterworth-Merkel wedding night situation to the point of obvious cheapness. But a few snips of the scissors will fix that.

Butterworth practically walks off with the picture. His lines are the best and his delivery of them as brilliant as only a Butterworth can make it. Colman is delightful as Drummond and seems to be having the time of his life. Loretta Young is sooo lovely and, right now, we might just as well give loud applause for the photography of Peverell Marley, because Young never looks so beautiful as when he is behind the camera. C. Aubrey Smith is just grand, and George Regas, Warner Oland, Halliwell Hobbes and the others are all excellent. It's elegant entertainment you can't afford to miss.

Mae West Too Hot for Aussies and Letts

According to the Hays office, both Australia and Latvia have banned the Mae West picture, "She Done Him Wrong." The former government also turned thumbs down on "Eskimo" and on "Twin Screws," an MGM short.

N.Y. Will Insist on Licensing Agents

New York.—All theatrical agents operating in New York City will have to be licensed in the near future, according to announcement yesterday by License Commissioner Paul Moss. He declared it is to be done to protect actors against "chiselers."

"My interest has been aroused for performers who are constantly complaining because of their inability to collect their money after they have worked," Moss said. "The actors are threatened with a black list if they appeal to the authorities. Licensing all agents is the only way we can protect them."

Bill Gargan Replaces Eldridge in 'Agent'

Warners took John Eldridge out of "British Agent" yesterday when it succeeded in putting through a loan-out deal for William Gargan from Radio to take his place.

Eldridge moves into a featured spot in "Big Hearted Herbert," which has Guy Kibbee and Aline MacMahon bracketed.

'Black Moon' Finished

Roy William Neill will complete "Black Moon," starring Jack Holt, at Columbia today. He is slated to start "Blind Date" Monday. No cast has been selected at yet.

Cavanagh to Para.

Paul Cavanagh has been given a top spot in "The Notorious Sophie Lang" at Paramount.

Gaynor and Farrell Are Together Again

"CHANGE OF HEART"

(Fox)

Direction .....John G. Blystone
Author .....Kathleen Norris
Screen Play.....Sonya Levien and James Gleason
Add. Dialogue.....Samuel Hoffenstein
Photography .....Hal Mohr
Cast: Janet Gaynor, Charles Farrell, James Dunn, Beryl Mercer, Ginger Rogers, Gustav von Seyffertitz, Irene Franklin, Fiske O'Hara, Jane Darwell, Nella Walker, Drue Leyton, Kenneth Thomson, Mary Carr, Barbara Barondess.

"Change of Heart," the Fox picture which offers Janet Gaynor and Charles Farrell together again, will be proof of the popularity of this team.

As a vehicle, it is just adequate—not excitingly satisfactory. But superb direction by John G. Blystone, who injected more subtlety, humor and humanness into the story than it deserved, and the acting of the four principals, Gaynor, Farrell, Ginger Rogers and James Dunn, work miracles in making the very ordinary story good entertainment.

To New York goes the quartet after graduation from college, each intent upon making a big success in the bewildering city. Dunn is in love with Gaynor, who, of course, casts longing eyes at Farrell, who sees nobody but Ginger. Each of the youngsters, after the usual number of disappointments, obtains a job—except Ginger, who breaks Farrell's heart by marrying a rich bounder. Farrell is taken seriously ill and Janet nurses him back to health and, of course, he realizes that he loves her and they marry.

Ginger comes back, her purse bulging with alimony, and attempts to recapture Farrell. But he finally sees her for what she is, and is promoted to junior partner of his firm and everything is happy forever afterwards

No one can get very excited over the story. But any audience will be interested in watching the two stars work together again—AND with such direction. James Dunn turns in a performance that hits a new high for him, and Miss Rogers is extremely effective.

Gustav von Seyffertitz and Beryl Mercer both make swell roles stand out beautifully; Irene Franklin is seen briefly, and Kenneth Thomson is a nice heavy.

Kathleen Norris wrote the original which was adapted by Sonya Levien and James Gleason, the latter, by the way, turning in a swell, strong job at dialogue direction. Hal Mohr photographed well.

The picture needs some cutting. But exhibitors need not worry about the film. The Gaynor-Farrell fans will flock to see it, and they will be rewarded by very excellent performances. The last scene especially is a grand example of good direction and good acting working harmoniously together.

NOT THAT IT MATTERS

By HELEN GWYNN

It is also Darryl Zanuck's favorite hobby to count the house every night at Grauman's Chinese in between dashing off a hit picture a week. But the other night that habit of his got him into a funny situation. He was up in the offices when a couple of fellows came in who were scheduled to have an audition with Sid Grauman. One of them was a singer and the other his manager. Unfortunately, they had forgotten to bring along an accompanist for the singer, thinking they'd find one hanging around the place. And the manager thought they had when he spotted Zanuck. Without so much as a by your leave, he sat Zanuck down at the piano and started explaining to him just how the music should be played to best offset the singer's voice. Zanuck took it for as long as he could stand it and then finally broke down and admitted he couldn't play the piano. "Oh," said the manager, "you're just up here for an audition yourself, eh?" And walked away disgustedly.

It happened at a sneak preview a few nights ago. One of the executives cornered a critic who had sneaked in and excitedly asked him what he thought of the picture and what they ought to do with it. The critic took one look at the exec and said: "If I were you, I'd arrange for a good sneak release of the whole thing."

Good heavens, Warren Hymer, one of our pet dumb bunnies on the screen, has gone high hat or something and has hired himself a secretary who speaks English as a language. The other day a newspaper man called him up and a feminine voice informed him that it was Mr. Hymer's secretary on the wire and what did he want. He said he wanted to ask Mr. Hymer about a publicity story he wanted to print. The secretary asked him to hold the line a moment and a moment later she came back and out with: "Mr. Hymer does not wish to converse, just now!"

And just to finish up our column of human interest stories about the great in the picture business. Over on the "Merry Widow" set t'other afternoon, a feller was perched high up in the rafters trying to adjust a camera for a trick shot. This feller was trying awfully hard to hear what the number of the scene was. Not only that, but he was trying awfully hard to make himself heard so's he could hear what the number was. The only difficulty was that someone was doggedly, if not beautifully, playing the piano on the set, and nothing could be heard above that. Finally the lad up in the rafters yelled down a particularly impolite series of invitations to the piano-player to stop. And with that, Ernst Lubitsch rose from the piano bench and, with a mild "Okay, I'll stop," walked away. But the boy in the rafters almost fell out and broke his neck, he was that embarrassed.

AGENTS PLAN TO BATTLE LABOR BOARD IN COURTS

Fireworks are due to break out this week when the State Labor Commission starts an investigation of the agency field in its plan to determine whether or not the agents have signed the contracts by which they agree to obey the new rules and regulations. A number of agents have failed to send in their signatures and at least three are determined to battle with the Commission through the courts.

Swung over the heads of the recalcitrants is the threat of license cancellation, the minority group taking the position that they will stand pat until the Commission shows its teeth.

Three stand-patters have placed their cases in the hands of Harry Sokolov, who declared that he has the encouragement of most of the agency attorneys in his determination to get the Labor Commission to discard its whip.

Sokolov yesterday let go a blast against the Commission for its efforts to compel the agents to arbitrate their disputes solely before the board.

"Once the agent signs a contract agreeing to arbitrate before the Commission, that contract must be complied with," he said. "The dangers of this are manifold. In the first place, the right of attachment is lost and, by the time the matter is arbitrated, the artist may be judgment-proof. Secondly, the agents would like to have their legal matters determined by a competent judge, trained in experience in judging and determining controversies. They are willing to take their chances with any judge that is assigned to them by the presiding judge of either the municipal or superior court rather than have Mr. Lowy or the Labor Commissioner, who are not so experienced and so trained in determining legal issues, be the judge and arbitrator for all.

"While the agent has no feeling against Mr. Lowy or the Labor Commissioner and respects their ability and integrity, the opportunity presented for favoritism and discrimination, either in favor of the agent or the artists, is quite apparent."

'20,000,000 Sweethearts' Plugged Over the Air

Warners spread itself last night in a special broadcast over the California network, emanating from KFWB, plugging "20,000,000 Sweethearts."

J. L. Warner appeared with Dick Powell, Allen Jenkins, Pat O'Brien, Joe Cawthorn, Al Dubin and Ted Fiorita and his orchestra.

Starbuck Funeral

Charles Starbuck, part time camera assistant at Paramount, who was killed in an automobile accident Tuesday, was buried yesterday from a private chapel. W. C. Fields, on whose picture he was working, has started plans for a benefit to raise money for Starbuck's widow.

Eddy Back from Tour

Nelson Eddy returned to MGM yesterday from a concert tour, which included 50 recitals in 26 cities. He goes into "Naughty Marietta," with Jeanette MacDonald, as his next picture.

Chase-Gen. Theatre Compromise Fought

Wilmington.—At a court hearing on the General Theatre Equipment receivership yesterday, attorneys for the William Fox bondholders, and Ivan Culbertson, representing the All-Continent Corporation, opposed a suggested compromise with the Chase bank. The proposed agreement would compromise the claims of the two organizations by Chase reducing the General Theatre indebtedness by $5,000,000.

The opposing attorneys argued that there is no reason to compromise and contended that General Theatre Equipment has claims of $14,000,000 against Chase, which should be pressed.

Chevalier Going to England for Korda Pic

As soon as he completes "The Merry Widow" in July, Maurice Chevalier leaves for London, where he will have the lead in a picture for Alexander Korda, of London Films.

Marcel Achard and Henri Jeanson have written the story, set in Napoleon's time, especially for Chevalier. Picture gets under way the last of September or early in October.

Rochelle Hudson Called Back from Her Vacation

Rochelle Hudson was forced to cut short her visit to her Oklahoma home due to a call from Radio to report immediately for the lead in "Bachelor Bait," opposite Stuart Erwin.

She had been in Claremore only a day when the call came, and hopped the first plane for Hollywood, arriving here Tuesday night.

Three Stars in Person With 'The Black Cat'

Boris Karloff, Bela Lugosi and Jacqueline Wells, the three leads of Universal's "The Black Cat," make personal appearances with the local opening of the picture at the Pantages theatre tonight.

Herman Wohl Quits MGM

Herman Wohl, associated with David Miller in producing a group of MGM shorts, has resigned, Miller continuing his work under Jack Cummings Wohl is negotiating a production deal with another major studio.

Menjou for 'Dolly'

MGM yesterday signed Adolphe Menjou for a spot in "Dolly," which Gregory LaCava will direct. Bernard Hyman produces, with picture scheduled to get under way in three weeks.

Beauty Winners Held

Paramount yesterday lifted the options on Alfred Delcambre and Eldred Tidbury, both "Search for Beauty" contest winners. Delcambre is from Texas and Tidbury from British South Africa.

Split Reported in Darrow Committees

Washington.—It was rumored here tonight that a definite rift has developed in the ranks of the Darrow Recovery Review Board, probably over the details of the report which is expected to go to the President tomorrow.

IATSE Locals Get Behind Bill Canavan

A committee of 100 has been organized among the ranks of the IATSE in the East to back the move to put William F. Canavan back into the IATSE presidential chair. The committee is sending letters to all locals throughout the United States, asking them to get behind the Canavan move.

The letter states that it is reliably reported that William C. Elliott will not be a candidate for re-election.

Russian Characters in 'Agent' Get New Names

To avoid possible legal action, Warners yesterday changed the names of every character, except Lenin's, in "British Agent."

The script had all the Russian revolutionary characters identified by their real names, but the studio's legal counsel advised the change.

Paramount May Make Betty Boop an Orphan

New York.—Paramount is understood to be considering dropping the production of Fleischer's "Betty Boop" series because of the trouble it is having with the Helen Kane suit, and substituting a new series of color cartoons.

Beal Reports to Radio

John Beal arrived yesterday from New York and reported to Radio for a role in "A Hat, a Coat, a Glove."

Beal just finished the lead in the New York production of "She Loves Me Not." He has a two-picture contract with Radio.

Betty Furness on Leave

Betty Furness and her mother leave today for a week's vacation in Santa Barbara Miss Furness was recently signed by MGM.

New One for Shumate

Harold Shumate has been assigned to adapt the screen play for Columbia's "By Persons Unknown." Irving Briskin will supervise.

Exhibs Hit Percentages

addressed by exhibitor leaders and which will try to weld all the theatre men into a solid body for their own defence.

Loud squawks have been coming from all sections. The exhibitors point out that, in the Philadelphia territory, Fox is insisting on booking thirty of next season's pictures on percentages ranging from 25 to 35 per cent. Other companies are believed to be trying to sell their product on similar terms and the exhibs say they cannot stand it.

Wampas Baby Stars In Mascot Picture

Nat Levine yesterday concluded a deal with the Wampas for the 1934 Baby Stars and will use them in "Young and Beautiful," an original by Joseph Santley, who will direct. Contract, which was negotiated by George Landy and approved by the Wampas board of directors, allows the girls to make their own deals with Mascot, either through their agents or personally, but in any event they are to receive a minimum of $125 a week and a guarantee of two weeks work.

Story has been fashioned so as to give each Baby Star an individual role. Bits in the picture will be played by Wampas members who are out of work. Agreement also provides that Mascot will not release the picture until August 1, giving B. P. Schulberg a month leeway on his subject, "Kiss and Make Up," in which the Baby Stars worked.

Corinne Griffith and Morosco Divorced

Corinne Griffith yesterday divorced Walter M. Morosco in Juarez, Mexico. The divorce was secured by mutual consent, no grounds being necessary under Chihuahua laws. Morosco arrived in El Paso early yesterday morning. The papers were filed at 10 oclock and the divorce was granted at 12:30.

The Moroscos were married in Tia Juana in 1924. Only a few days ago both Miss Griffith and Morosco vigorously denied a rumored rift, and insisted they were very happy in their married life.

Brendel-Regan Team

Warners signed El Brendel yesterday and bracketed him with Phil Regan in two Technicolor shorts which Ralph Staub will direct. Paul Gerard Smith and Joe Traub are handling the screen plays. The first will be "What, No Man!"

Jones Starting at 'U'

Buck Jones starts "The Redhead," his first picture on his Universal contract, next week. Henry McRae will supervise it and unless there is a new development in the situation, it will mark McRae's windup at Universal. Louis Friedlander will direct.

'Buff' Cobb Yarn Set

Al Rockett will start "She Was a Lady" May 14 at Fox. Helen Twelvetrees and Robert Young are in the top spots, under Hamilton MacFadden's direction. The story is by Elizabeth Cobb.

Para. Holds Carlisle

Paramount has exercised its option on Kitty Carlisle and she goes into a three-picture deal, the first of which is "She Loves Me Not." Ticket was negotiated by Walter Kane, of the Weber office.

Bill Conklin Robbed

Sneak thieves entered the office of William Conklin, in charge of Actor-Producer relations at the Academy, this week and stole an expensive desk pen set while Conklin was out for lunch.

The most interesting news in the fan magazine realm is the appearance of a new magazine, Hollywood Mirror, written, edited and published right here in Hollywood.

It is not, however, a typical fan magazine. It avoids the gossip angle, the fictional attitude, the verbal and basic exaggerations, the occasional guesswork, and the spectacular struggle for the sensational that feature some of the other magazines that seek to interpret Hollywood.

Hollywood Mirror has a note of dignity, of honesty and of authenticity that fills a definite need in the film magazine field. The stories are done with quiet sincerity and good taste, and, from all appearances, are written by Jack Grant, the editor. The stories are unsigned and his is the only name appearing as possible author.

The typography of the book is excellently handled, the type clear and bold, and the make-up of the whole thing is very effective. The art is exceptionally fine.

The Hollywood Mirror that is distributed in California has a special Los Angeles section of ads and news. The issues distributed elsewhere have special sections devoted to the cities in which they are sold, franchises having been sold in the larger cities. The mag will not be on sale at any book or magazine stand. Address: 1622 North Highland avenue, Hollywood.

The stories are "Half-Truths of Hollywood," tracing the origins of various legends; "Young Enough—That's Loretta"; "Explaining Irene Dunne"; "Ask Mr. Pomeroy"; "Hollywood Telephony"; "Always 'Little Caesar' "; "Taking a Little Liberty"; "Portrait of a Lady" (Karen Morley); "The Heart Is Gone", all about the gateman at Paramount; "Discovering Madeleine Carroll"; "Actors in the News", and "What Hollywood Has in Store".

Tony Veiller East

Anthony Veiller leaves the end of the week for New York, where he will work on plays, one of which already is set for early Fall production. He just completed his work on the screen play of "The Notorious Sophie Lang," at Paramount.

Warners Clear Title For 'Sweet Adeline'

Warners succeeded in cutting away the last bit of red-tape on "Sweet Adeline" yesterday and secured the ownership of the property which has been jockeyed between William Rowland and the company for several months.

The studio is talking to Helen Morgan for a top spot and has scheduled Phil Regan for another. Gene Markey and Katherine Scola are teamed on the script.

Voight Asks Divorce On Grounds of Cruelty

Hubert Voight, publicity chief at Columbia studios, filed suit yesterday for divorce from Olive Hatch, famous swimmer. He charged cruelty.

Voight declared his wife would not spend her evenings at home and often left the house early in the morning, disturbing his rest. He also charged that she would typewrite late at night in the room where he was trying to sleep.

Deal on for Wesco

New York.—William T. Powers, attorney representing Fox Wesco, is now at the Paramount home office, trying to complete the details of the reorganization of the principal Wesco houses.

European Arrivals

New York.—Arriving on the S.S. Washington today are H. G. Wells, the noted writer, Lynn Farnol, and Leighton Brill, playwright.

Cameramen Burn Over Note Demands

Indignation waxed hotter yesterday among the members of Local 659, IATSE, over the demand that they pay up their promissory notes which were turned over to Howard Hurd when the union settled his contract.

An unorganized attempt was being made by some members to halt any effort at collection, but no definite plan had been decided upon. It was reported that the notes have been disposed of by Hurd and that he has nothing to do with the attempt to force collection.

There were reports that many of the men would resign from the union as a protest against the handing over of their notes to Hurd, but Herbert Aller, business representative, stated last night that no resignations had been received.

Chas. Lamont Starting Fifth Sidney-Murray

Charles Lamont, director, begins his fifth George Sidney-Charlie Murray comedy tomorrow for Columbia, titled "Plumbing For Gold."

Geneva Mitchell, Billie Seward, Patricia Caron, Allyn Drake, Herbert Evan, Bobbie Burns, Al Thompson and Jack Shutta complete the cast.

William F. Kay East

William F. Kay is leaving for New York in connection with the publication of his books, "Bed and Bored," written in collaboration with Morris Fink, and "Grub Street, Hollywood."

RALPH KOHN OUT OF PAR.

TRADEVIEWS by FRANK POPE

•ABOUT three months ago the Los Angeles Times sent out a questionnaire to different groups of people in or connected with the motion picture industry, asking for selections of the ten most consistent directors in the business. The groups covered directors, actors, executives, writers, producers, critics and others, all the names being among the most prominent available.

When the lists were tabulated there was just one name that appeared on every list. That was the name of Sam Wood. On the list turned in by the producers, his name stood at the head and, although he did not top every list, he received more votes in the total than any other director.

That seems to us to be something of which to be justly proud. When a man has been in the directing game for nearly nineteen years—ten years with Paramount and nine with MGM—and still can be up with the leaders in the field, there can be no question of his ability. Moreover, Sam is a hold-over from the silent days, having successfully made the transition to sound pictures which balked so many.

He has been a steady money-maker for his company. Among his latest productions have been "The Late Christopher Bean," "Prosperity," "The Barbarian" and "Hold Your Man," and he is at present on "Stamboul Quest."

When he completes that he is going away for a long rest. He sails for Europe next month and will stay over there three or four months. He intends to forget pictures and picture-making if he can, but the habits of nineteen years are hard to shake.

That he will be snapped up when he returns, if, indeed, that is not done before he leaves, seems certain. No man with such a record will be allowed to leave the business, no matter what his private wishes may be.

If, as some famous writer once said, "consistency is a jewel," Sam Wood must be all hung over with gems. And he has been so bedecked, not by himself, not by his press agent, but by the concensus of opinion of leaders of his own industry, by colleagues, by the people who have worked for him, by the men for whom his pictures have made money and by the people whose business it is to pass on the quality of those pictures.

Jack Conway Starts '100% Pure' Today

Someone induced Jack Conway to change his mind about directing "100% Pure" for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, and he will put the picture into production at one o'clock today. Ray June will be on the camera.

Western Electric Dumps Loew Stock

New York.—The Western Electric Company, a subsidiary of the A.T.&T., has disposed of 164,000 shares of its holdings of 264,000 shares of Loew's Inc. The shares were sold on the open market.

No reason was given by the company for its action in divesting itself of the holdings, but it is believed that there may be some idea of forestalling any charges of monopoly in the motion picture business that might be made by the Government. The Loew's stock was originally acquired as a result of Western Electric's holdings of Film Securities notes.

Zanucks Leave Today To Shoot Lions and Such

The Darryl Zanucks and William Goetz leave by train today for New York, where the Zanucks board the Conte de Savoia for a two months tour of Europe and Africa. They will visit United Artists exchanges abroad and then hunt big game in Africa.

Billy La Hiff Better

Billy La Hiff, who has been seriously ill in New York, is well on the road to recovery, it was learned last night. Nancy Carroll, his niece, who flew east last week, will return within the week.

Resignation Said To Have Been Demanded By Trustees; New Deal For Para. Building

New York.—The resignation of Ralph Kohn, vice-president and a director of Paramount-Publix and its subsidiaries, was announced yesterday. It is effective immediately. Kohn has been in charge of operations of the company's theatres for some time, and it is understood that S. A. Lynch will take over this department.

It is believed that Kohn's resignation was not voluntary. The story is that the three Paramount trustees, Messrs. Richardson, Leake and Hilles, asked for it, although their reasons for such action are not known. One report is that the creditors were opposed to his remaining as head of the theatres, and another, which is more generally credited, is that he was eased out because of friction between

Crawford and Gable Bracketed in 'Chains'

Joan Crawford and Clark Gable will be bracketed in their fifth picture together, "Chains," which Hunt Stromberg produces for MGM.

Story is an original by Edgar Selwyn, and John Lee Mahin contributes the screen play.

Fox Convention May 30

New York.—The annual convention of the Fox Film Corporation will be held at the St. Moritz Hotel here, starting May 30.

Joan Blondell Ill

Joan Blondell, who has just completed "Dames" for Warners, has been confined to her bed for the past three days with a severe cold.

RKO's Quarterly Earnings $403,616

New York.—At the annual meeting of the stockholders of the Radio-Keith-Orpheum Corporation, David Sarnoff, president of RCA, announced that RKO had earned a net profit of $403,616 for the first quarter of this year, as compared with a loss of $1,297,947 for the corresponding period of 1933.

Since the first of the year, Mr. Sarnoff said, RCA has improved its cash position. On March 31, 1934, cash and marketable securities amounted to $22,800,000 against $20,545,000 at the end of 1933, an increase of $2,255,000.

Conference Due This Week on 30-Hour Bill

Washington.—Fate of the Thirty-Hour bill, which the Administration is now holding as a "club" over employers, rests on a conference later this week between Representative Connery, its sponsor, and Donald Richberg and Secretary of Labor Perkins.

Lab Code Hearings Off

Washington. — Hearings on the Motion Picture Laboratory amendments to the film code, set for May 9, have been indefinitely postponed, with no indication of when they might come up again.

'Dolly' for LaCava

Gregory La Cava will direct "Dolly," the Wilson Collison story, as his first on his new MGM contract. Allen Rivkin and P. J. Wolfson are writing the screen play and Bernard Hyman will produce. No cast signed as yet.

Chas. Farrell Sailing

New York.—Charles Farrell arrived here last night, enroute to England, where he will make a picture under the direction of Monty Banks. He sails Friday on the Majestic.

INDIE EXHIBS UNANIMOUS AGAINST DOUBLE BILLS

By practically a unanimous vote, the members of the Independent Theatre Owners of Southern California yesterday went on record, at a meeting at the Mayfair Hotel, as opposed to double billing.

The four-hour meeting was featured by a heated debate between Louis B. Mayer and I. E. Chadwick, during which Mr. Mayer told the exhibitors that, if they do not go back to single feature bills, distributors will find a

THE LOWDOWN

Consider the plight of the wife of a well known and popular director. Or perhaps we should say "one of his wives." The girl separated from the megaphone wielder several months ago and was doing right well for herself in the sincere affections of a famous producer. In fact, everyone expected that she would get a quick divorce and marry the man. But the gal has thrown her chances for a "good match" away along with a lot of other things, and at the moment is giving all her time to her one true love—the bottle! She is flat broke and jobless—but, worst of all—doesn't seem to give a dern!

So Joan Crawford opened her private theatre in her own back yard Saturday night. Francis Lederer was there—but he didn't appear in a play. In fact, there wasn't any play! The audience consisted of Joan, Franchot Tone, Jerry Ascher and a couple of others. So what did they do? They ran "Men in White"—and, anyway, they had a swell time!

Warners, we hear tell, are threatened with another walk-out. It's not a "general strike"—and it's not Jimmy Cagney—not THIS time. It's one of their pet crooners, who threatens to leave the premises permanently unless he is given a substantial raise within forty-eight hours!

The secret of Janet Beecher's "sapphire hair" is out. She was prematurely white anyway and decided she wanted all snow-white hair. So acting on the advice of some kind friends, she put bluing in the washing water. Now that might be all right to most people, but something in Miss Beecher's hair made the blue shade stick, so, desiring white, she got blue, kindly referred to as "sapphire."

New York REVIEWS

"JOURNAL OF CRIME"

Warners prod.; director, William Keighley; writers, Jacques Deval, F. Hugh Herbert and Charles Kenyon

Roxy Theatre

Mirror: The film is smoothly directed, handsomely produced, and very well acted. Miss Chatterton makes her agonies very moving and she is assisted by a great cast. The story is wholly fantastic, of course, but it is handled with sufficient skill to make it moderately entertaining.

World-Telegram: At least, "Journal of Crime," is a little bit different, even if some of its incidents are fashioned pretty much after a pat formula. The film is a heavy, sombre, psychological study that has its interesting moments, but affords little in the way of entertainment.

Times: "Journal of Crime" is neither a plain murder story nor a fancy psychological study, but a pale and vaguely idiotic hybrid, of the sort generally labeled passable.

News: It is an absorbing and somewhat morbid study of the degeneration of a woman. Miss Chatterton's performance isn't downright bad, but, in spite of the excellent supporting cast headed by Adolphe Menjou, it isn't good enough to make "Journal of Crime" an outstanding production.

Herald-Tribune: In a picture whose title is more intriguing than its story, Ruth Chatterton gives another of her highly prima donna performances which leave much to be desired. William Keighley, the director, has brought to his picture tasteful settings, careful photography and a nice atmospheric quality.

Post: In "Journal of Crime" Miss Chatterton's elocutionary diction and calculated expressions turn what might have been an absorbing psychological drama into an interesting but uninspired case history of a crime.

American: A sombre psychological study of a woman's emotional instability adds little to the gaiety of nations or the pleasure of picture-goers. For the most part it's pretty morbid material.

Journal: It's sombre drama, but handled with a sure and deft understanding. Director William Keighley strikes and maintains a sensitively meditative mood. Miss Chatterton gives an excellent performance and is ably assisted by Mr. Menjou.

Sun: In its own way "Journal of Crime" is interesting and out of the ordinary run of films. It is, in themes, characters, and methods of narration, very Continental. It is also a little dreary.

"SHE MADE HER BED"

Paramount prod.; director, Ralph Murphy; writers, James M. Cain, Casey Robinson, Frank R. Adams.

Rialto Theatre

News: Young Richard Arlen Jr., aged 8 months, is the best performer in "She Made Her Bed." It is based on a melodramatic story by James M. Cain.

Journal: It's a pleasant program picture, nicely acted by an agreeable cast that has been given the benefit of good dialogue and direction. The characters are well drawn.

Mirror: The dialogue is so realistic, the types so genuine, the tragic climax so inevitable that the film grips your interest. It is admirably acted.

Herald-Tribune: A melodrama of the first water, whose harried characters seldom have a light moment. If lots of action, speed and novel situations make a good picture, this one should do well at the box-office.

Times: It is the fascination of horror—of horror that any person, or group of persons, should ever have conceived its preposterous characters and situations, or, conceiving, should have ventured to commit them to even so ephemeral a medium as the films.

World-Telegram: It is a singularly inept, slow-moving, far-fetched screen melodrama. The cast is a good one, and gives a fine set of performances.

American: The present drama is an interesting, sometimes thrilling story. Both dialogue and story are well done, and the players act in a natural, sincere fashion.

Sun: "She Made Her Bed" is a highly moral melodrama, a little slow in working up to its exciting moment perhaps, but firm indeed, about the righteous behavior of its characters. When the melodrama does get going, somewhere near the last reel, it makes up for lost time.

Carmelita Geraghty to Marry Wilson Sunday

Carmelita Geraghty and Carey Wilson will be married Sunday at the home of Phil Berg. Jean Harlow took them down to the license bureau yesterday and fixed things up for them.

Wallis Sails May 12

New York.—Hal Wallis is booked to sail for Europe on May 12 on the same steamer with Darryl Zanuck.

Another Bread-Winner

Eleanore Griffin, the wife of Neville Reay, Paramount unit publicity man, has sold articles about pictures to Delineator and MacLean's Canadian weekly.

Writers Appoint Advisory Council

The Screen Writers' Guild last night announced the formation of an Advisory Council, composed of 25 members. Its object is to study the problems of writers and bring them to the attention of the Executive Board.

The Council meets once a month with the Board, and holds meetings of its own when it sees fit. Resolutions of the Council will receive definite action by the Board. If such resolutions are not approved, a majority vote of the Council brings them back to the Board for reconsideration.

Warners Go On Buying Spree For Stories

New York.—Warners are buying stories right and left, having acquired three new pieces of material in the past day or two.

They have bought "A Present from Margate," a play by A. E. W. Mason and Ian Hay which was produced in England last month, and have also acquired "A Lady Surrenders," by Mary McCall, and "Concealment," by Leonard Ide.

New Deal Arranged For Para.-Broadway

the trustees and other important interests in the company over matters of policy. Kohn has always been a Zukor man, but even the president was unable to save him.

Kohn was a vice-president and director of Paramount-Publix, Paramount Pictures Corp., Paramount Productions Inc., Paramount Pictures Distributing Corp., Paramount International Corp., Paramount News Inc.

Another important development yesterday in the affairs of Paramount-Publix and one which is seen as the first actual step towards reorganization was an agreement between the Bondholders' Protective Committee and the Paramount Broadway Corporation, which controls the New York Paramount Theatre building. This agreement is effective at once. Under the plan all arrears of taxes were paid yesterday, new bonds will be issued and a sinking fund provided for the retirement of half of the present outstanding bonds.

After the reorganization of the Paramount-Publix Corporation, that company will take a ten-year lease of whatever space it needs in the building and will also take a new lease on the Paramount theatre at a minimum fixed rental, to be increased if the grosses warrant it. Furthermore, Paramount-Publix will release all claims against the Paramount Broadway Corporation and its bondholders in connection with any charges that might be made that the interest payments made to the latter corporation by the former last January constituted preferential payments.

The news of this agreement sent the price of Paramount Broadway bonds up five points yesterday to equal the year's high.

Developments in the Paramount Publix situation are expected to come rapidly now. Two weeks ago it was reported from Washington that a bill to permit corporations to reorganize by reducing their debts, cancelling their stocks and bonds and issuing new obligations had been passed by the House of Representatives and that, as it was understood to have White House approval, it would pass the Senate Paramount officials at that time felt that this bill would be of great benefit to the company and predicted that the entire Paramount Publix reorganization would be in shape for announcement by May 15.

Van Dyke Plans to Make 'Hideout' in Record Time

MGM yesterday assigned W. S. Van Dyke to direct "Hideout," an original by Mauri Grashin, for which Loretta Young is tentatively set in the lead.

Van Dyke, who has completed two pictures for the studio in the past 60 days, will start "Hideout" in the next two weeks. He hopes to get it out of the way in time to see Baer and Carnera tangle in a real fight, having directed their picture fight in "The Prizefighter and the Lady."

Buddy DeSylva and MGM Close a Deal

New York.—The deal that has been pending for some time between Buddy DeSylva and MGM was closed up yesterday when a contract calling for DeSylva's services on three pictures was signed.

New Pictures on B'way This Week

New York.—Six new pictures will make their bows at the big Broadway houses this week. The list comprises:

"Success at Any Price" at the Rialto today; Columbia's "Twentieth Century" at the Music Hall tomorrow; "Manhattan Melodrama" at the Capitol, "No Greater Glory" at the Roxy, "Whirlpool" at the Casino, and "Double Door" at the Paramount, all on Friday.

Monogram in Trouble Over 'Jane Eyre' Lead

Monogram is experiencing much difficulty in the casting of the lead for "Jane Eyre," soon to go in production.

The two most suitable that have been considered for the role could not obtain release from their present studio. The casting of other characters will be delayed until the lead is definitely set.

Film Stars' Frolic To Open New Stadium

More than 500 screen celebrities will take part in the first annual Film Stars' Frolic, to be staged by the Screen Actors' Guild on May 18, 19 and 20 at the Gilmore Stadium.

The Frolic will open the new stadium, and will be open to the public. Practically every star is Hollywood is expected to be on hand for the event.

Party at 20th Century

Twentieth Century will be host today at a cocktail party at the United Artists studio for the press, players, actors and writers. Affair celebrates the washing up of the current production schedule.

'Daily Bread' Finishes

King Vidor will complete his shooting schedule today on "Our Daily Bread" for United Artists release. The studio will begin editing immediately in an effort to rush the production East.

'River' Ready to Start

James Whale will begin production Monday at Universal on "One More River." New additions to the cast are Kathleen Howard, Gilbert Emory, Robert Grieg and Henry Stephenson.

Bren Minus Tonsils

Milton Bren had his tonsils removed yesterday at the Cedars of Lebanon Hospital. His partner, Frank Orsatti, underwent the same type of operation about a month ago.

RKO - Indie Chains in Booking Combine

New York.—RKO Theatres, the A. H. Schwartz Century circuit and Jack Springer, of the Springer-Cocalis chain, have entered into a booking combine for product in all their New York houses.

There are 105 theatres involved, and of these there are no more than five which are in opposition to one another. The new combine is likely to affect the Loew New York houses more than any others.

Warners Refuse to Loan Muni to MGM

Warners yesterday put the damper on a deal between MGM and Paul Muni.

Lucien Hubbard sought to sign Muni for "Four Walls," with Paul willing to accept if Warners okayed it. Latter refused in view of Muni's determination to make only two pictures a year and Warners having signed him for both. Warners would have to waive one picture to MGM, which it declined to do.

Jeanette MacDonald Cancels Concert Tour

Jeanette MacDonald has canceled her plans to make a concert tour of South America and Europe, owing to the pressure of production at MGM.

Robert Ritchie, her manager, leaves Berlin next Friday to join her here. From "Merry Widow" she goes into "Duchess of Delmonico's" and "Naughty Marietta."

Alvarado for Short

Radio yesterday signed Don Alvarado for the lead in the first Technicolor short, "La Cucaracha," to be produced by Pioneer Pictures. Lloyd Corrigan will direct when it starts May 15.

Warners Get a Tenor

Terry La Franconi, Italian tenor, who has been appearing at the Casino in Caliente for the past 17 months, reported to Warners yesterday for the beginning of his contract. He has been given no assignment as yet.

Lipton Here on Visit

Lew Lipton, who has been in London for the past four months, is here for a two weeks visit combining business and pleasure. Lew just completed an original for British-Gaumont, titled "Present Arms."

Foy Picture Booked

Foy Productions' "Tomorrow's Children" gets its first break locally at the Pantages, where it is set to open May 10 on a double bill. "Take the Stand" gets the other spot with it.

Neill on 'Blind Date'

Columbia yesterday assigned Roy William Neill to direct "Blind Date," which goes into production Monday. Ethel Hill has written the screen play.

NOT THAT IT MATTERS

By HELEN GWYNN

You may not remember the actor who plays the main role in the following story, but surely it is a tale of the most involved acting career that's been heard of in years and years.

Fritz Feld, a German actor, came over to this country about ten years ago under the sponsorship of Max Reinhardt. He played numerous engagements on the New York stage and then journeyed out to Hollywood, where he was signed by a movie company and more or less settled down to enjoy life as a Hollywood actor. Just as everything was going along smoothly and pleasantly, along came the talkies, and Fritz Feld, because of his accent, found himself pretty much out of the picture. Sooooo, he hied himself back to his native Germany and there divided his time between making movies and doing stage work. And, just as everything was going along smoothly and pleasantly, Hitler became dictator and Feld was forced to leave his native land.

Since he was a Jew and had just found out that he had no right to call Germany his native land, he decided to go to his people's country. So he took himself off to Palestine. Feld could speak no Hebrew or Arabic, but he still had to make a living and, finally, in desperation, he picked up a second-hand soda fountain, of all things, and went about making a paying business out of it. He made up his mind to save as much money as he could to buy passage back to America and give himself another chance at acting.

About a year or so ago, Feld looked over his bank accoun,t found it good enough to enable him to set sail for the U.S.A., and thereupon made boat reservations. About two days before he was to leave, a delegation of men called on him to inform him that he COULDN'T leave the country. Astonished, to say the least, Feld asked why and was told that they had just found out that he had been in pictures. Not only that, but he had made pictures in Hollywood and knew what production was all about, using American methods. Not only that, but they were forming a picture company in Palestine and needed men with experience to run the darned thing and, from what they had heard, Feld was a number one man and, under the circumstances, he couldn't leave Palestine.

So, after being forced to leave two countries because he couldn't be an actor in them, Feld finally found himself in a place he wanted to leave and couldn't because he was an actor. And today, dear kiddies, Fritz Feld is the Director General of the Oriental Film Company of Palestine. And it gets to be a small world after all, no matter where you leave it.

'Tish' Script Done

James K. McGuinness has completed the "Tish" script at MGM.

'LES MISERABLES' IN THREE PARTS IN FRENCH, IMPOSSIBLE

Makes Good Start But Falls to Pieces

"LES MISERABLES"
(Pathe-Natan)

Direction .....Raymond Bernard
Novel .....Victor Hugo
Adapted by.....Andre Lang
Musical Score by.....Arthur Honegger
Cast: Harry Bauer, Charles Vanel, Henry Krauss, Florelle.

(Reviewed in Paris)

Paris.—While there are some moments when this film rises to great heights, the producers have spoiled whatever chance it had of being a good picture by making it in three episodes, each of which takes a full evening to show.

Despite a valiant and very praiseworthy directorial effort on the part of Raymond Bernard, the film will never be one which can be sent abroad, and it is doubtful if it will catch on in France, due to the length and the unnecessary footage.

The first episode, which carries the story up to the point where the immortal Jean Valjean, now the mayor of a small city, is discovered by a police spy who knew him as a convict, is the best of the three. It has suspense, drama, thrills, a gripping story. And the acting of Harry Bauer is simply magnificent. But even in this episode the photographers detracted by an over-abundance of unusual angle shots that hurt the picture.

The less said about the last two episodes the better. The second is the weakest of all and takes the story up to the time of the start of the French revolution.

In the third there is too much revolution; too much barricades and shooting and flag waving. If the entire second episode had been left out and most of the third left on the cutting room floor, it is possible that a great picture might have resulted.

U.S. Film to Dominate The Czech Market

Prague.—The Czechoslovakian government has decided to issue no more film import licenses until further notice. It is believed here this means that American film men have an understanding with the government that will result in complete domination of the local film market by the Americans.

France and Sweden Will Swap Pictures

Paris.—Due to negotiations between members of the French and Swedish film industries, there will be an interchange of pictures between the two countries. One Swedish picture has already been bought and will be shown shortly in Paris.

Organization in Poland

Warsaw.—Poland is going to have a Film Chamber. Polish distributors and exhibitors held a meeting recently and decided they need protection. They plan new duties and other wrinkles aimed to help the local film men.

U.S. Films Still The Tops in Paris

Paris.—American films continue to lead the picture parade in this city, with 20 Yankee pictures showing in the thirty first run houses. The other ten included seven French, one German-French, one Austrian and one English.

$250,000 Expansion For Interworld

London.—Interworld Films is spending $250,000 in constructing a new sound stage and administration building and in remodeling two other stages in the studio at Worton Hall, Isleworth.

The new studio will include a stage 130 by 86 feet, executive offices, dressing rooms, projection rooms, cutting rooms, etc. The other stages are 100 by 56 feet and 100 by 45 feet. The studios will have their own lighting plant and will be thrown open for rental purposes.

RKO Will Do Its Own French Distribution

Paris.—Failing to come to an agreement with the French distributors, and in order to avoid further postponement of its big hits, such as "Little Women," "Flying Down to Rio," etc., RKO has decided to distribute its own product in France.

W. H. Leasin plans to open distributing offices, so it is reported here, in all those countries where the RKO pictures have not been placed or released.

Universal Won't Cut German Production

Berlin.—In local trade papers Universal states that it does not intend either to give up or cut down its production of films in Germany. At present it is producing the big Trenker film, "The Lost Son," Paul Kohner directing. "The Cousin From Dingsda" will be started shortly.

Rules for Dubbed Films

Vienna.—A change in the regulations governing import of films now gives firms producing "dubbed" films the right to sell eight pictures per year in Austria. This maximum may be surpassed if the producer brings on the market a film "dubbed" in Austria.

German Talent Short

Berlin.—The German film industry is faced with a shortage of new talent. Manager von Reiht, of the UFA casting office, has just completed a tour of Germany in search of stage players for use in pictures.

Best French Picture

Paris.—The French film, "Once Upon a Time," is heading the list in the voting for the best French picture of 1933, which is being conducted by the French paper "Pour Vous."

Russia Training Own Screen Actors

Moscow.—In a short time Soviet Russia expects to have developed a large number of screen players especially grounded in the art of acting for sound pictures, as a result of a joint decision of the Art Workers Trade Union, the Commissariat of Education and film executives to establish schools of the cinema.

This was brought about by the delays caused in securing players for the pictures. The stage people turned their noses up at pictures most of the time, and, in other instances, players would leave a film company flat and go on tour, holding up production for months. The Soviets hope to remedy the situation by training people directly for the screen.

McLaglen Productions Of London Plans Three

London.—Kenneth McLaglen, of Kenneth McLaglen Productions, has announced that his company plans to make three feature films at a cost of from $100,000 to $200,000 per picture.

McLaglen states that his company is almost ready to start shooting on the first picture. He adds that he is not interested in "quota" pictures, and all made by his company will be for the international market and will be made on a big scale.

Pole Invents New and Cheap Color Process

Warsaw.—A new natural color system of photography has been brought out here which is the product of a Polish inventor. It is said to have proven very satisfactory in all demonstrations, and costs only two percent more than black and white to make.

Czechs Want U.S. Pix

Prague.—A determined effort is being made by the Czechoslovakian film industry to get American pictures back on the Czech screen again after many years absence. Negotiations have been started to this end through diplomatic circles.

Dean Signs Hyson

London.—Dorothy Hyson, most promising of the younger stars here, has been signed to a long-term contract by Basil Dean for Associate Talking Pictures. Dean signed John Loder to a three-picture contract recently.

Dutch Actor Coming

The Hague.—Cruys Voorbergh, one of Holland's most famous stage actors, has quit the stage here and is leaving for America, where he hopes to crash the American studio gates.

Paris House for Fox

Paris.—Fox Films have leased the Edward VII Theatre, and will use it shortly as a "show window" for the presentation of the Fox films in this city. Pictures shown will be original American versions.

Reeling Around London

Sam Eckmann is having his home revamped with Moorish decor in the dining room. . . . Bob Montgomery had his "rooms" in an old corner of London in "Mystery of Mr. X" (why, oh why not "Mystery of the Dead Police"?) . . . According to the back projection shots he and Liz Allan were making their way down towards the Law Courts!! . . . Snap, crackle, pop! wedding bells shortly for Jimmie Hutchinson, of MGM. . . . Cecil Landeau, Gaumont scribbler and Bright Idea Merchant, is that good-looking, people mistake him for an actor. . . . Rather nice the way London Films gives its technical staff a "break" on press announcements. . . . The "Jew Suss" unit gave Lothar Mendes a gold fountain pen on completion of that pic for British-Gaumont. . . . The Richard Arlens well liked by the space-boys here. . . . Connie Cummings and hubbie Benn Levy took up several columns on their return here, with Mrs. Levy enngeeing the idea that she was giving up pics for domestic life. . . . Who was Cicely Courtneidge visiting at that hospital the other day and why?

Cyril Gardner and Dave Bader sending sassy postal cards all the way from Brussels. . . . Glamorous Gloria Pierre, of the Dorchester Midnite Follies, at the flicks with Val Guest and Jimmie Barker. . . . Marion Harriss returning to the Cafe de Paris and the movie elite thrilled plenty. . . . Cliff Edwards warming up for that Palladium appearance. . . . Clive Brook may do one for Basil Dean in the summer. . . . Charlie Laughton has been eating, sleeping and living "Macbeth" here for days now. . . . Rae Daggett, sister of Junior's sec, buddy and movie actress in her own right, currently in the metropolis with a very likable American accent, was offered a part in a flick here; turned out the part was that of a London cockney barmaid!!!!

It is on the cards that Anna Neagle will get a release from her present British and Dominion contract to do several pictures in Hollywood; on the strict understanding that she returns later for more pics, when Hollywood has given her a swell build-up; at least the idea is a good one—for England. . . . Elsa Lanchester is rated as one of the finest "Ariels" ever to have played Bill Shakespeare's "Tempest." . . . Flo Desmond turned down a big part in a British International picture because she would have to do her imitations in it; Florence made her reputation on the impersonations, so what?

Swedes to Film 'Hamlet'

Stockholm.—In view of the local success of "Hamlet" on the stage, with Greta Ekman playing the title role, Dr. Per Lindberg is going to film the play with the same artist starred.

Slump in Germany

Berlin.—Warner Brothers' business is falling off in Germany, and Robert Schless, Warner European representative, is making a tour of all the branch offices in an attempt to pep it up.

MAYER TELLS INDIE EXHIBS DUALS ARE ALL THEIR FAULT

Ruining Industry and Must Be Stopped

way to force them to do so. And in the same breath he declared that Independent producers who make features for $6000 to $8000 are injuring the business and should be ousted.

"Double features," declared Mayer, "are simple an overdose of film that is wrecking the industry. They must be stopped or the industry cannot go on. The practice is the result of individuals thinking only of themselves. A theatre owner wants to kill off opposition. He puts in double features. In some cases, as in one case I was told of today right here in this city, two features and two previews are advertised on one bill. That is dastardly. It is criminal. It must stop.

"All of us must stop thinking only of the present moment. We must look to the future and to the good of the industry as a whole. You yell about block booking and how the studios give you bad pictures and make you take them. Then you say you have to run double bills in order to get customers.

"True, we all make some pictures that are not always an attraction. But we are always STRIVING to make them good. Therefore, you should cooperate with the producers. We cannot afford to burn these pictures and give you nothing but the big successes. You must take your share of the loss. You must consider the good of the whole rather than just one individual.

"Double billing has got to stop. If you do not stop it yourselves I am telling you the distributors will get their heads together back in New York and find a way to stop you.

"I am with them in that move. I am willing to face the United States Supreme Court, or the President of the United States, to defend my attitude of stopping you. I tell you I am going back there and I'm going to raise hell. This destruction of the industry has to stop. It can't go on."

He took a shot at the independent producers who "make pictures in six days." He said that they can't turn out good product, and that by using their pictures in the double bills the exhibitors are giving the theatre patrons film poison. He declared that a good picture can't be made in six days and for from $6000 to $8000, and that, while he sympathizes with those producers, if they can't do any good, they ought to be ousted.

I. E. Chadwick, independent producer, declared that no one has the right to take the opportunity away from any man who is trying to earn a living. He said:

"Mr. Mayer's remarks take me back to the time when Selig and Blackton were saying the same thing about Mr. Mayer, who was then one of the independents he now decries. It is easy to sit on the heights of Olympus and give advice, but success does not give anyone the Divine right to tell other men how to live. That's what makes dictators and an unhappy world."

He declared that exhibitors and independent producers have responsibility to no one but their public, and no one has the right to say whether a man may run one feature or two.

Mayer shouted: "You have no right to run your own business. No one has the right to do as he pleases. We have to think of the other fellow. If you think you can get along with just independent pictures, why not tell MGM to go to hell? Why, it is ridiculous.

"Independent producers can't give you what we can. We burned the first film of 'Prosperity' at a cost of half a million dollars because it was not good. We made another at the same cost. That's what we do for you. We maintain a stock company so we can have the best players. Last year MGM lost $750,000 on that stock company."

B. B. Kahane spoke briefly and said that he believed the double bills are ruining the industry. He explained that, unless the houses found a way to be successful and pay a proper price, the producers could not make good product.

It came to light in the general discussion that studio previews are the fly in the single bill ointment. Exhibitors complained that, if single bills are resumed, some theatres will have previews which will be the same as two features, which, they say, is unfair.

Finally, Mayer promised the co-operation of his studio in getting previews into theatres where there is no competition. A rising vote was taken of the 140 members and the result was 139 votes in favor of the single features and one in favor of double bills. A committee was then appointed to meet with Fox West Coast Theatres and with Warner Brothers' Theatres to work out the details and fix a starting date when single features will be the rule. Ben Berinstein stated that he has the assurance of Charles Skouras that Fox West Coast will go along with the independents.

Pulitzer Novel Prize to 'Lamb in His Bosom'

New York.—The Pulitzer prize, awarded annually for the best novel of the year, goes this year to Carolyn Miller for her novel, "The Lamb in His Bosom," which was published by Harpers.

Dr. Fleischmann Opens New Studio

Louis A. Fleischmann, D.V.Ph., who gets credit for having perfected the development of Anna Sten's English for pictures, has opened his own studio. After two years with Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer as vocal correctionist and diction coach, Dr. Fleischmann has embarked upon a unique venture.

At his studio on Outpost Drive he has test and recording stages. Dr. Fleischmann is best known for his ability to eliminate foreign and local accents, for correction of diction, articulation and idiosyncrasies of speech, and for the restoration of lost or impaired voices.

Theatres Have to Buck Soldiers' Home

Complaints against the National Soldiers' Home Theatre at Sawtelle, charging it with giving free picture shows two nights a week at which others than inmates of the Home are allowed to attend, were filed yesterday with the Los Angeles Grievance and Zoning Board. The complainants are the Newart and Tivoli theatres of West Los Angeles, and the Brentwood. The case will be heard tomorrow.

The hearing of a complaint by the Garfield theatre, of Alhambra, against Fox West Coast, charging holding out on product, will also be resumed tomorrow. A complaint by J. T. Rennie against Feldstein and Dietrich over a leasing argument was referred to the Code Authority.

Walburn Loaned for 'Monte Cristo' Cast

Raymond Walburn was loaned by Columbia to Edward Small yesterday for "Count of Monte Cristo."

This is the second assignment for the player on loan-outs. He finishes tomorrow in "I Married An Actress" at Paramount, while Columbia, which has him under a term deal, has yet to give him his first picture.

Original for Warners

Dan Templin, former Los Angeles newspaper man who has been in Las Vegas recently, yesterday sold Warner Brothers an original story with a Las Vegas locale. It is called "The Cinch" and is intended for James Cagney.

Darrow Board May Be Made Permanent

Washington.—After a conference yesterday between President Roosevelt and Chairman Darrow and John F. Sinclair of the President's Recovery Review Board, it was understood that an attempt will be made to have this board made a permanent part of the NRA.

The conference lasted a half hour, but at its conclusion neither Darrow nor Sinclair would issue a statement, referring all questioners to the President, who had no statement either. It was learned, however, that the discussion dealt with the generalities of the board's findings. No written report has been completed yet. As the report on each Code is finished, it will be handed directly to the President.

Brown Will Go to Warners on July 1

Harry Joe Brown yesterday signed his contract with Warner Brothers and will join that company as director and producer on July 1, after a trip to Honolulu with his wife, Sally Eilers.

Brown's association of eight years with Charles Rogers, now producing for Paramount, will terminate May 12, the Browns sailing a week later.

Jack Kearns Beats Police to the Punch

Jack Kearns was a mile ahead of the Hollywood police yesterday. Captain Hager went over to close Kearns' famous "Walkathon," only to find Jack had already closed it. He told them he will seek another restraining order so he can reopen.

PAYMENT DEMANDED ON UNION NOTES GIVEN HURD

A storm of protest burst forth yesterday from members of Local 659, IATSE, the cameramen's union, when they received letters demanding payment of promissory notes which were turned over to Howard Hurd, former business agent of the union, when his contract was settled recently and he left the service of the union.

The notes were given by union members who have borrowed money from the Local during the past year. Most of these notes were of the "demand" type, but the union has done nothing to push payment of them. However, yesterday some of the note signers received letters giving them until May 5 to pay up.

The letters, signed by an attorney, stated the notes are in the hands of the Hollywood State Bank, and that, if arrangements are not made by May 5, legal steps may be taken.

Some union members last night were starting a movement to try to stop the collection, declaring that the Executive Board of the union had no legal right to turn over the notes as they represent part of a fund that is to be used only for aid of members. A meeting of note signers is being called for today to see what can be done in a legal way.

Norman McLeod Sailing To Meet Wife in Paris

Norman McLeod, Paramount director, left for New York by plane last night and will sail on the Ile de France for a vacation in Europe.

In Paris, he will meet Mrs. McLeod, who has been touring with the Richard Arlens and who is awaiting her husband. McLeod will be gone a month.

Gould to Stage Dances

Radio yesterday assigned Dave Gould to stage the dance numbers for "Gay Divorce," the next Fred Astaire-Ginger Rogers picture, which Pandro Berman is producing.

New Goldstone Clients

Wini Shaw and Cully Richards have signed a managerial contract with Nat Goldstone. They are now appearing in the "Shim Sham Revue" at the Music Box.

'Dragon' Start Delayed

Start of "The Dragon Murder Case" at Warners has been postponed until next Monday. Robert Presnell will supervise.

VITAPHONE-W. E. SETTLE

TRADEVIEWS by FRANK POPE

•WE wonder just how much the wonderful advance in picture-making that is being evidenced in British production is going to cut into the foreign grosses of American pictures. This foreign situation is bad enough anyway, what with quotas and contingents and what not.

Heretofore the Hollywood product has had things pretty much its own way. There have been, in years past, some German and one or two Russian pictures which have created mild furores, both in Europe and among the highbrows in this country, but up to a short time ago England did not come through with anything that would cause Hollywood to lose a minute's rest.

Now, however, led by Alexander Korda and his London Films Company, British production is taking its place in the sun. Korda has already turned out two pictures—"Henry VIII" and "Catherine the Great"—which compare favorably with any that have been made here. As a matter of fact, his "Catherine" is far superior to the one Josef Von Sternberg made with Dietrich. Korda has other big ones up his sleeve. "The Private Life of Don Juan," with Fairbanks Sr., is one of them. Charles Laughton is set for two for London Films and will have Chevalier and Fairbanks Jr. in the cast of one.

British producers are feeling their oats. British financial interests have discovered that pictures, good pictures, can be made in England and are loosening the pursestrings to finance production. American players, directors and writers are being engaged to work over there.

United Artists has a tie-up with British and Dominions to handle each other's pictures, a deal which may entail an interchange of artists. The recent deal by which British interests bought heavily into Fox Film undoubtedly will be another "hands across the sea" arrangement for loans. Warner Brothers are expanding their British production plans and have bought the Teddington studio.

If the other British producing companies, animated by the Korda example, begin to turn out real box-office pictures, they are going to give Holly-

Regular Dividend On MGM Preferred

New York. — Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer yesterday declared the regular quarterly dividend of one and three-quarters percent on its preferred stock, payable June 15.

Para. Makes Agnew Gen. Sales Manager

New York.—Neil S. Agnew, who has been assistant general sales manager and Western division manager for Paramount, was yesterday promoted to general sales manager in charge of distribution.

The appointment is for the purpose of taking some of the burden off the shoulders of George Schaefer, general manager of Paramount-Publix and its subsidiaries. Schaefer made the announcement about Agnew, but gave no intimation of his successor in the division manager's berth.

Chas. Brackett Signed For Dialogue on Two

Charles Brackett signed a contract through the Edington and Vincent office yesterday on a two-picture writing ticket with Paramount.

The writer leaves New York by plane to reach here Sunday, reporting to the studio the following day to write the dialogue for "Her Master's Voice," under B. P. Schulberg, and "The Debutante," for Douglas MacLean.

Powell in Hospital

Dick Powell checked in at the Cedars of Lebanon Hospital yesterday for observation for sinus trouble.

Warners Reported Getting $3,500,000 In Suit Dating Back To The Start Of Sound

New York.—The old legal battle over royalties between Vitaphone and Western Electric, dating back to the time when Warners were pioneering sound, is understood to have been settled out of court yesterday, Warners receiving $3,500,000 cash and other considerations which were not named.

The first agreement made between Warner-Vitaphone and Western Electric at the inception of sound was violated by the latter, according to Vitaphone, and then a new one was made under the terms of which Western Electric was to pay Vitaphone

Nunnally Johnson, who did the screen play for "Bulldog Drummond Strikes Back," got a new contract and a big boost from Darryl Zanuck just before the latter left for Europe Wednesday. Johnson is now on the Cantor picture.

Big Allied Meeting To Talk Production

New York.—A special two-day meeting of all Allied States directors, vice-presidents and regional chairman, has been called for May 12 and 13 in Chicago. Abram F. Myers will preside. It will be held at the Congress Hotel.

Discussion will be held on various plans in tying up the organization with an independent producing company. Meetings had been held in various units on this production plan, but in getting together the national chiefs a definite plan will be taken up.

Selznick-Hayward Fly East; Former for London

Myron Selznick and Leland Hayward left for New York by plane yesterday. Selznick is bound for London, to be gone several weeks, and will sail on the same liner with David Selznick, George Cukor and Charles Farrell.

Hayward will fly back Saturday and will be in charge of the Selznick-Joyce office while Myron is away.

New Term for Taurog

Norman Taurog was presented a new one- year contract by Paramount yesterday. His first on the new ticket will be "Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch." Schulberg, Feldman and Gurney set the deal.

'20th Century' Good

New York.—Columbia's "Twentieth Century," which opened at the Music Hall yesterday, grossed approximately $10,000 for its opening day, which is considered good.

DARROW BOARD'S REPORT ON FILM CODE DEEP SECRET

Washington. — Clarence Darrow's National Recovery Review Board completed its long-awaited report on the movie code, and seven other codes, last night. The contents of the report were not revealed, and indications last night were that they may never be made public.

The report, it was learned, contains recommendations for specific amendments to the movie code, as well as the others. But the recommendations do not come from all the members of the board. One member, John F. Sinclair, dissented, and would not sign or

THE LOW DOWN

True story about a true son of his Pa. The other day Sam Goldwyn with a friend of his went to the Military Academy, where Sammy Jr. is a student, to watch his son in the school parade. When Goldwyn and friend arrived, the parade hadn't started, so Sam proudly led the way to the classroom where his youngster was supposed to be. When they reached the floor, there was Sam Jr., standing outside the classroom with his face to the wall. Inquiry revealed the following: The teacher had started to read a story and young Goldwyn kept interrupting. The teacher said, "Sammy, if you don't stop interrupting, you'll have to stand outside."

Said Sammy: "I'd rather stand outside than listen to a poor story!" And that's where he was when Sam, senior, found him!

Listen to this one—about the major studio which is the prime offender in the matter of signing up players and such for thousands of dollars per week, having them sit around until option time (or longer) and then letting them out. This same studio which has wasted countless thousands in the past two years, has been "dickering" with a hard-up writer for several weeks now. The fellow is so broke that he offered to write a story for them (which they had read and wanted) for two hundred a week until the script was finished. He worked at home and completed the job in four weeks, the total being of course, eight hundred dollars. Now, the studio is "thinking it over" . . . they can't risk the small change unless they're SURE they like it!

Just heard a funny story about Mrs. Pat Campbell which is worth telling even if it isn't all true . . . but our informant swears to it. Seems that several years ago Mrs. Pat was playing a London music-hall and on the same bill was a trained seal act which got the most applause at every performance, and that made the actress mad something terrible. So mad, in fact, that at the end of the week she could stand it no longer and, before curtain time, fed the seals so much fish (she attended to the matter personally!) that when their turn came they fell fast asleep on the stage!

New York REVIEWS

"FINISHING SCHOOL"

RKO prod.; directors, Wanda Tuchock and George Nicholls Jr.; writers, David Hempstead, Wanda Tuchock, Laird Doyle.

Casino Theatre

Herald-Tribune: "Finishing School" sets a standard for those interested in intelligent screen productions. While it is not a masterpiece, it gives careful consideration to a certain type of American snobbery whose expose follows the pattern set by the German picture, "Maedchen in Uniform." The picture has an adult point of view. It has been directed too slowly, to this way of thinking, but painstakingly, and has been photographed well. Its dialogue is sensible and it is told with a logical continuity.

Sun: This, in spite of a list of competent players, all of them giving competent performances, too, comes close to being a burlesque of all the recent films about sub-debutantes and their prospective babies. Frances Dee has the misfortune again to find herself in a badly written part to which she yet manages to bring dignity and some slight degree of tenderness. A few more films like this, and Hollywood may find itself responsible for a revival of good, old-fashioned chaperonage.

News: In which some favorite youngsters do all they can to prove that the life of a rich man's daughter is fraught with disadvantages. The otherwise trite proceedings of this production are considerably enlivened by Ginger Rogers.

American: A first-rate program feature film which mingles comedy with drama in a tale of feminine adolescents and the big, bad boarding scohol. The picture provides better than average entertainment.

World-Telegram: I found it an interesting drama. This "Finishing School" has not, of course, the tragedy or muted sorrow of "Maedchen," but in its own way—a thoroughly dramatic and embittered way——it is a plea for the individual against mob psychology that is as tense and penetrating and as full of appeal and heartbreak as was the appeal for poor, misunderstood little Manuela in "Maedchen."

Times: Unfortunately, it can scarcely be classed as intelligent entertainment. In the haphazard and tedious story there is little, if anything, that rings true and the dialogue is often extraordinarily crude; in fact, at times unconsciously funny. If the narrative were not so fatuous it might be harmful.

Journal: It's a fair program offering, animated chiefly by a genuinely effective performance by Miss Dee.

Mirror: It is a diverting little program picture, cleverly written, filled with laughs, tastefully directed and well cast. Skilled and attractive players lift the feature out of the ordinary.

Liberty Prods. Ask $50,000 from Para.

New York.—The $50,000 claim of Liberty Productions Ltd. against Paramount came up for discussion before Referee Davis yesterday. Liberty alleges that Paramount released the picture "Mad Parade," after shelving a Liberty picture that was very similar.

Liberty declares that Paramount agreed to pay it the first $200,000 of intake and then 32 percent of all over this amount up to $460,000. The Paramount trustees say that receipts up to the present time have been only $205,000 and the most that Paramount can still gross is only $3000. Therefore, the claim should not be allowed, they contend. The referee deferred a ruling.

James Novel Accepted

Rian James has set his novel, "Young Ladies in White," with Alfred H. King, who will publish it July 1. Jesse Lasky has purchased the story and Jesse L. Lasky Jr. is collaborating with James on the screen play.

wood real competition, because the "Buy British" slogan still cuts a lot of ice with the British people.

Competition, they say, is the life of trade. American producers have had things their own way too long. The awakening of the British industry should open their eyes and make them realize that, for consumption both here and abroad, the great need is BETTER PICTURES.

'VANITIES' SWELL PICTURE; 'BLACK CAT' PRETTY DULL

Gorgeous Girl Show, Fine in Every Way

"MURDER AT THE VANITIES"
(Paramount)

Direction .....Mitchell Leisen
Based on play by.....Earl Carroll and Rufus King
Screen Play.....Carey Wilson and Joseph Gollomb
Dialogue .....Sam Hellman
Music and Lyrics.....Arthur Johnson and Sam Coslow
Photography .....Leo Tover

Paramount has pulled a musical winner out of the hat and one that skilfully and successfully combines moving picture camera technique with that of the stage in its gorgeous production numbers. It's a brilliant girlie-girlie show, the kind you like to entertain out-of-town buyers with, and so far as masculine audiences are concerned, it just cant miss. The gals can make up their minds whether they want to go for Carl Brisson or not. He's very old school, musical comedy idol, with a smile that won't wear off even though murder is committed.

However, let it be repeated, that Paramount has crashed through with a pretty swell musical that is by far the loveliest thing to look at that has been produced in a whole season full of musicals.

For good measure in this backstage opus, a murder mystery is thrown in that involves the killing off of a lady detective by the soubrette who in turn is bumped off by her maid. Both murders, of course, involve the hero and leading lady, but everything is cleared up satisfactorily in the end and to the accompaniment of the best song in the picture.

The photography of Leo Tover is the very bright and shining star of the picture. How that boy and Mitchell Leisen have used the camera is something for every producer of musicals to learn about. And it's a real pleasure to see some dancing again instead of a batch of trick numbers that could never possibly have taken place upon a stage.

The writing is bright and not too forced in its comedy, except for a rather cheap running gag between Toby Wing and Jack Oakie that could very well be cut down considerably.

Dorothy Stickney, as the maid, turns in a grand performance, and her recital of the murder of the soubrette stops the show Kitty Carlisle is a most attractive wench, whose voice, figger and personality score heavily and will carry her far. Gertrude Michael has a thankless part that only allows her to leer heavily throughout most of her scenes, but the gal can sing blues.

And, speaking of blues, Duke Ellington plays them to a fare-thee-well and the recording of that orchestra is something. In fact the sound recording of Martin Paggi is plenty to be thankful for in this production. Jack Oakie gives out with his comedy and has McLaglen as foil in the role of a dumb detective. Jessie Ralph turns in a good performance, and Gail Patrick is really too attractive to have to be just a dead body for most of the picture.

Play this one up heavily, because it won't fail you, and it deserves the best break it can get.

Lew Brown To Do 3 Musicals for MGM

New York.—Lew Brown yesterday signed to make three musicals for MGM. Studio plans to make nine, the other six being split evenly between Buddy DeSylva and the group composed of Brown and Freed, Rivkin and Wolfson.

Player Tie-ups for Liquor Ads Are Out

All studios belonging to the Producers Association yesterday definitely decided to turn thumbs down on all advertising tie-ups for players with any alcoholic beverage, even beer

The action was taken at a meeting of the Studio Publicity Executive Committee of the Producers Association, and every studio publicity head voted for the ban. The studios and players have been swamped by advertising concerns seeking to have the stars photographed mixing cocktails, uncorking bottles, burying their noses in foaming glasses of beer, etc. The publicity executives feel that the stars have no place in the liquor ads.

Novarro and MGM Sign Bi-Lingual Contract

The completion of "Sour Grapes" washes up Clive rook's three-picture ticket with Radio. The player is taking a trip to London during negotiations with Fox and Universal on individual deals.

Too Much 'Mugging' In Tedious Story

"THE BLACK CAT"
(Universal)

Direction .....Edgar Ulmer
Author .....Edgar Allan Poe
Adaptation: Peter Ruric and Edgar Ulmer.
Screen Play.....Peter Ruric
Photography .....John Mescal
Cast: Boris Karloff, Bela Lugosi, Jacquelyn Wells, David Manners, Lucille Lund, Egon Brecher, Ann Duncan, Henry Armetta, Albert Conti.

Karloff and Bela Lugosi, the Wampas Baby-Frighteners of 1934, fight it out for seven reels for the mugging championship of the picture. Beyond that, there is little or no action in this so-called thriller, and the writing and directing both combine to do the almost impossible—to make an Edgar Allan Poe story dull.

That's not quite fair to Mr. Poe, either, because outside of the title and the fact that a black cat does stalk around every once in a while, this is not the story your customers may have thrilled to in their reading days. Take full advantage of the exploitation possibilities and your fans' love of the Karloff-Lugosi brand of horrors, and sell it fast. It won't hold up on a long run.

The script is so vaguely written and the picture so tediously and loosely put together, that it's up to the patrons to use their imagination to put any kind of story together. So far as we could gather, a doctor has come to call on an old war "pal" who has built his house over the remains of a fort and arsenal. A young couple, hurt in an accident, are brought to this sinister house by the doctor. The owner of the house is given to murdering women and preserving their bodies in glass cases. One of the women is the doctor's wife. The doctor's daughter has been made the wife of the killer-owner.

Then comes the night of the dark of the moon and the gay host thinks it would be fun to sacrifice the female half of the young couple to some kind of Lucifer festival. But no such luck for our host. He and the doctor and the daughter and the house are all blown to pieces, while the young couple get away.

Jacquelyn Wells, David Manners and Lucille Lund are a trio of attractive people who surely deserve a better break than they get in this picture. Henry Armetta and Albert Conti are literally dug up and dragged in to provide a light moment that even they have to work hard on to make funny. Karloff and Lugosi make improper faces at each other.

But, let it be remembered, that a funereal walk and talking through the teeth do not a thrilling horror story make.

Thorpe to Universal

Upon the completion of "Green Eyes" for Chesterfield, Richard Thorpe will join the Universal staff as a director. Deal was negotiated by Hoffman-Schlager.

Not that it MATTERS
by Helen Gwynn

We see by the papers (British) that England seems to be having film critic trouble, even as you and I. It is claimed that picture criticism is fast fading away over there, even as it passed out of the public prints in this country, "two or three years ago." Of course, that's just a dig that our British cousins couldn't resist, but the fact remains that everything possible is being done over here now to kill off any school of critical thought that may still be alive.

And this, we think, will eventually be a bad thing for both the picture industry and the public. Criticism is the one thing that can help raise the standard of pictures to the benefit of the industry and the fans. Your honest critic, giving his personal opinion of the technical and entertainment value of a film, has done a great deal toward the making of better pictures The critical mind is the first to appreciate the better efforts of the producers and to shout their praises to the public and encourage them to pay their money to see the pictures.

There is no good and sound reason for the making of poor pictures and not even the removal of critical thunderbolts will do them any good at the box office.

Recently a number of papers have resorted to giving only the bare outlines of current attractions, and that's even worse than giving an opinion. Too often the outline of a picture plot is enough to keep more people away than any criticism might do. Enthusiasm for performances, comment on the handling of the situations, the quality of the production, remarks on amusing incidents or highlights in a production, will tend to make fans want to see a picture for some reason or other, but given just a skeleton story to decide on, it may be one they think they don't like to see.

The only form of criticism that can possibly be objected to with any degree of fairness is the "Star System." And the reason for that is that the lazy public, not wanting to read an entire review, will buy or dismiss a picture on the number of stars it receives. Very often in the body of the review of a picture accorded two stars, will be a lot to recommend it, but that damning, dogmatic allotment of the meagre two stars blinds the public and they won't take the trouble to read the entire review.

Besides which, that star business makes the paper an oracle that can't go wrong, according to their way of figuring, and that's assuming much too much, because criticism was, is and always will be just one person's reaction to a film and that film's power to please, and it's only fair to the producers and public to keep it on that plane.

Your paper, to which I have subscribed for a long time, is informative and valuable. THE REPORTER GIVES YOU THE FACTS

MGM SHORTS WILL BE HELP TO ANY PROGRAM

MGM has four short novelties ready for release, any one of which will be an interesting addition to any program.

"Little Feller," starring Charles "Chic" Sale is a tear-jerker, but a good one. It is a monologue, but so cleverly is it handled that one never notices the fact. Sale plays an old ranch owner, whose grandson, in whom he has placed all his hopes and ambitions for the future, has just died. Unable to bear the sight of the youngster's pinto pony, he gives it away to a neighboring rancher for his little boy. His lonely confidences, given to the pony and to the rancher, are heart-breaking.

E. A. Brininstool wrote it, and Jack Cummings directed. The picture is a credit to all concerned.

"Attention—Suckers!" is a Pete Smith novelty, directed by Jack Cummings, and revealing a number of fascinating card tricks. The tricks are not confined to sleight-of-hand, but include all those employed by professional gamblers, and, as the shots are made up through a glass table, the modus operandi of those people who make poker a business is cleverly shown.

"Goofy Movies," with explanatory remarks by Pete Smith, is another one of those Wotaphony Newsreels. It is amusing, well done, and Smith's remarks are grand. It's all about a high-minded sheriff, a low-minded bandit, and a LUVLY lady.

The other Pete Smith oddity is "Flying Hunters." This film is an exciting and dizzy trip in an airplane with those men who skim the frozen surface of Montana looking for coyotes.

Flying at a terrific rate of speed as close to the earth as they dare, they chase these furtive sheep-killers and shoot them from the air with a shotgun mounted on springs at the side of the plane.

The picture is not bloody enough to hurt anyone's sensibilities, but it is exciting enough to keep the attention of any audience engaged. Lauron A. Draper did a swell job, photographing and directing.

Writers' Guild in New Deal with Writers' Club

The Screen Writers' Guild has accepted the proposal of the Writers' Club to open the facilities of the club to all members of the Guild, without payment of initiation fee or dues.

The Guild will conduct all of its general meetings at the club, but will continue to maintain its offices at 1655 North Cherokee.

Monta Bell Seeking Oarsmen for Picture

Monta Bell, MGM producer now preparing "Student Tour," is searching for a crack rowing crew to be used in the picture. This crew must be bonafide college men in addition to having acting ability, as each will have a definite part in the production.

Grace George To Be In 'Dolly' for MGM

New York.—Grace George, wife of William A. Brady and for years one of the leading actresses of the American stage, was signed yesterday by MGM and will be given an assignment in "Dolly."

Warners Face New Suit Over 'Miracle'

New York.—Another knot appeared in the legal tangle which enshrouds the attempts of Warner Brothers to produce "The Miracle" when Philip Minor, a Cleveland capitalist, announced yesterday that he intends to start legal action to prevent the production. Minor, some years ago, sponsored the production of the play in Cleveland.

He declares that Warners will never make the picture because he controls the picture rights. He intimates that he was concerned in a suit some years ago which resulted in MGM being restrained from making the picture. This suit was brought by Al Woods, and First National joined in it. As a result, MGM, Minor says, cancelled its plans.

Warners, however, do not seem to be discouraged and are still trying to cut all the legal red tape that stands in their way. It is understood that they are trying to get Reinhardt to come over to produce the picture, but whether or not he is agreeable, no one seems to know. He was coming once before to make "Darling of the Gods" for United Artists, but nothing happened.

Berkeley-Goldwyn

producers over the dance director's services. The trial starts this morning, Judge Emmett Wilson having pushed it into another court yesterday, owing to his own overcrowded schedule.

"The contract between Goldwyn and Warners," Berkeley alleges, "was secured by Goldwyn through misrepresentation and deceit. Goldwyn claimed he had certain rights over me when, in fact, he had none. At the time that Goldwyn negotiated his contract with Warners, he had no written commitment, oral understanding or any other contract with me. Nor was I receiving any royalty, salary or other compensation from him.

"Goldwyn is not entitled to equitable relief in that he does not come into court with clean hands," the director states. Berkeley's answer further alleges that, after he had made his deal with Warners, he told Goldwyn about it and the latter "became very abusive to this defendant, called him names, threatened him and finally importuned him to break the contract, stating that he would accept the responsibility."

Over the telephone last night, Mr. Goldwyn declined to discuss the Berkeley answer.

NEW SOUND MEN'S GROUP SWINGING INTO ACTION

The American Society of Sound Engineers is the name selected by the new organization which has been formed by leading sound technicians after months of preliminary meetings.

At a meeting this week the leaders decided that it is now time to come out in the open as a definite factor in the industry. Within the next week an executive manager will be engaged, permanent quarters will be secured, the organization will file incorporation papers at Sacramento and a drive for members will be started. More than 200 sound men are already in the group.

The new society was formed, so it was stated by several of the organizers, for the express purpose of getting the sound men away from jurisdictional disputes and labor union difficulities. Most of the men in the new group feel that they have not had a square deal from the unions during the past year, and practically all of the members of Local 695, IATSE, the sound mens union, are expected to flock to the banner of the new society which will not be affiliated in any way with labor unions.

'U' Signs Lois Wilson

Lois Wilson was signed by Universal through Hallam Cooley yesterday for the bracket spot with Frank Morgan in "Today We Live," which Ed Sloman places in work today. Morgan was borrowed from MGM for the role.

Code Agency Board Meeting Postponed

Because of the inability of two members to be present, the meeting of the newly appointed Code Agency Committee set for yesterday, was postponed until Tuesday.

Emanuel Cohen was out of the city, and Jack Warner could not be present. As this was to have been a meeting at which a permanent chairman and a paid secretary were to be chosen, it was deemed wiser to postpone the meeting until all members could be on hand.

sanction the recommendations signed by the other five. Sinclair was appointed to the board by General Johnson.

What disposition of the report will be made by President Roosevelt after he reads it is the subject of much speculation. Some guess Senators Nye and Borah may get a look at it, while others figure it may be turned over to NRA officials. Still others suggest that the report details may be withheld until after Congress adjourns, if they ever become public.

Darrow denied that the report had ever been to the White House before and had been sent back for changes.

Pete Knows All About Babies, But Mothers—!

Pete Smith is sunk. He is casting for a short, "How to Take Care of Babies," and he is being besieged by hundreds of mothers, all of whom want to have their babies in the picture and also want to tell Pete just how they should be cared for.

School Kids As Extras

Bryan Foy yesterday used 150 Beverly Hills high school students for a barn dance sequence in "High School Girl," now in production.

Parry Option Lifted

Fox yesterday lifted the first option on Paul Parry's seven-year contract and gave him a spot in "Chralie Chan's Courage."

Para. and Col. on Labor 'Unfair' List

It was revealed yesterday that the Los Angeles Building Trade Council has started a move to establish a boycott among the workers of Los Angeles against films made by Columbia and Paramount studios.

A resolution was adopted by the Council on April 13, placing the product of these two studios on their "unfair and we do not patronize" list. The resolution also called for a "militant boycott."

The reason for the action is an alleged discrimination by the two studios against craftsmen in the matter of wage scales on building projects. The Council charges the studios with demanding that contractors do the building work at such a low figure that they cannot pay their workers a fair living wage.

eight per cent of every dollar taken in by the Electric on talking pictures, made or shown with its equipment.

The amount has been variously estimated from $5,000,000 to $50,000,000. It is extremely improbable that anyone knows the exact figures, except Western Electric or its subsidiary, Erpi, which was not in existence in those early days.

Western Electric fought the case when Warners sued, and finally lost the decision. An appeal was taken and, last July, in the Federal Court at Wilmington, Judge Penniwell denied the Electric's application for modification of the decision that it must pay.

This court action followed several attempts to settle the matter by arbitration, Warners finally deciding that that could not be done and bringing legal action.

Helen Vinson Signed By Radio for 3 More

Radio signed Helen Vinson yesterday to a three-picture contract. Her first will be "Afterwards," which she begins tomorrow.

Miss Vinson just completed a two-picture assignment at the same studio, having finished "Life of Virgie Winters" and "Sour Grapes." Schulberg, Feldman and Gurney made the deal.

'FILM TRADE MONOPOLY'

TRADEVIEWS by FRANK POPE

•TALKING the other day with one of the sanest exhibitors in Southern California, we got rather a new slant on the double feature question. This man, who probably would be considered a renegade by his fellow-exhibitors, pins the bulk of the blame for the dual evil right on the theatre men themselves. He says:

"The exhibitors are constantly stirring up a fuss and trying to lay the blame for all their troubles at the doors of the producers, the distributors, the public, professional boxing, football—anywhere except where it belongs, which is right on their own doorsteps.

"The real crux of the situation is that the exhibitors out here will not stick together. If they would, their troubles would be ended and their problems solved.

"Ever since I can remember anything about the local business, there have been a few exhibitors, really just a mere handful, who will double-cross the others, and then the mess is all stirred up again. If these few could be whipped into line and made to stick with the rest, we would be able to wipe out double bills, get back to where we show one GOOD picture, surrounded by a real bill of entertaining shorts, and once more we would see ourselves out of the red.

"But I despair when I think of trying to get them to hold fast. Here's the trouble: In the past, when we went to single features, some little houses, not more than half a dozen, that never made money anyway and which should be wiped out for the good of their owners and the picture business in general, would grab a couple of fairly good pictures and maybe, as a result, take fifteen or twenty patrons away from a nearby house.

"Instead of sitting back and letting the little fellow go on and show two pictures and cut his own throat, the manager or owner of the nearby house ran out, forgot his promises to the other theatre owners and grabbed a couple of pictures and put on his own double bill. Then the rush would be on.

"They'd do better to buy the tiny theatres outright than to follow their example and double-cross THEM-

Will Hays Makes His Debut As a Singer

Will Hays swept an audience, composed largely of motion picture people, off its feet Thursday night at the Theatre Mart. Following a performance of "The Drunkard," Hays rose and sang "The Tale of a Kangaroo," a hit from the old musical show, "The Prince of Pilsen."

Gable-Colbert Pic Smash in London

London. — "It Happened One Night," with Clark Gable and Claudette Colbert starred, which opened at the Tivoli last week, has taken its place with the other smash hits from Hollywood and is held over for at least another week. Other holdovers are "Roman Scandals" and Bob Flaherty's beautiful production of "Man of Aran." "Rip Tide" is closing after an extremely successful engagement.

The newcomers of the week are "Viva Villa" at the Empire, "Man of Two Worlds" at the Plaza, and "Fashions of 1934" at the Regal.

Heather Angel Signs Term Ticket with 'U'

Carl Laemmle Jr. yesterday signed Heather Angel to a term deal and plans to use her in several stories on the new program.

It is understood that Miss Angel has completed her Fox contract and was free to accept the Universal deal.

Hays and 'Odd' East

Will Hays left for New York last night aboard the Chief. With him were Mr. and Mrs. O. O. McIntyre.

Gen. Johnson States Block Booking And Patent Pools Make It Only One In NRA

Washington.—In an address at the State Fair Stadium, at Columbus, Ohio, tonight, which was broadcast nationally, Gen. Hugh Johnson declared that the motion picture code makes that industry a monopoly, the only one, he added, created by any code. He pleaded for the principles of the NRA and lashed out at critics who said codes promoted monopolies or oppressed the "little fellow." The one glaring exception, he said, is the movie code.

"There is one qualification and one exception to these general statements," he said. "The qualification is that there are cases of monopoly based on statutory patent pools. There is block booking in the movies based on copyright laws and various other dis-

Hecht and MacArthur May Do Four For Para.

New York.—The deal by which Ben Hecht and Charles MacArthur will write and produce three pictures for Paramount at the Long Island studio may be extended to four, the making of the fourth being optional with each side.

Gordon a Supervisor

Expanding Leon Gordon's duties with Reliance, Edward Small has placed the writer in a supervisory capacity on "Count of Monte Cristo." He continues on the screen play of "Transatlantic Showboat" at the same time.

New York Grosses Keep Low Average

New York.—The grosses at the big New York picture houses are still far from the figures that the managers would like to see. "The House of Rothschild" is still the pick of the lot, getting around $20,000 for its seventh week at the Astor. "Hitler's Reign of Terror," which opened very big at the Mayfair Monday, slipped, and will do a little better

Sam Goldwyn Borrows Del Ruth For Cantor

Sam Goldwyn yesterday borrowed Roy Del Ruth from 20th Century to direct "Treasure Hunt," the Eddie Cantor picture, which starts June 1.

Nat Perrin, Arthur Sheekman and Nunnally Johnson are preparing the screen play. Del Ruth last directed "Bulldog Drummond Strikes Back," which was written by Johnson.

Mady Christians May Do 'Wicked Woman'

Charles Brabin has made tests this week of Mady Christians for the starring role in "The Wicked Woman," which is scheduled to start at MGM in three weeks under his direction.

Understood that the slight accent of the foreign actress is the only stumbling block.

Jean Arthur for Lead In Columbia Picture

Jean Arthur has been signed by Columbia for the lead in "The Defense Rests," which, with Jack Holt starred, goes into work next week. Ralph Farnum set the deal.

'Chains' for Brown

Clarence Brown was selected yesterday by MGM to direct the Crawford-Gable production, "Chains."

WARNER THEATRE DEAL FINDS THE GOING ROUGH

New York.—The big deal which Warner Brothers have under way in their attempt to acquire control of some 110 independent theatres in the New York sector is meeting with difficulties and there are several conflicting reports about it.

One report, which seemingly emanates from the Warner side, is that a deal has been closed for the control of the Fox Metropolitan group and several of the Manhattan Playhouses, of which Si Fabian was trustee for the mortgagee. Skouras, according to this report, will be out completely, and advantages to small operators with which the NRA has nothing to do and over which it has no power of control. They are permitted under other laws, and in my opinion these laws should be changed. But the charge that any code of fair competition hurts any small operator is the exact reverse of fact."

JOHNSON DECLARES FILM INDUSTRY IS MONOPOLY

Gen. Johnson's speech followed by a few hours the presentation to President Roosevelt of the report of the Clarence Darrow Recovery Review Board. This, although it has not yet been made public, is understood to declare that NRA codes create monopolies in eight major industries, including the motion picture business.

The document was presented at noon and, later in the day, the White House stated that the President would read the report over the week-end and that it would be made public later.

It is considered here that Gen. Johnson's speech admitting monopoly in the picture industry rather takes the wind out of Darrow's sails, as the attack on the picture business in the Darrow report is believed to be the most bitter of the lot.

Official Washington tonight points to the report, the Johnson speech and the pending inquiry into the A. T. & T. as conclusive proof that the next year or so will see a completely changed motion picture industry. It is felt that the Administration will give its support to amendments of the copyright and patent laws, to legislation to outlaw block booking and to prevent preferential treatment being given producer-affiliated theatres.

Film Salesmen May Be Put Under Hour and Wage Code Provisions

Washington.—Traveling salesmen, including those in the motion picture business, probably will find themselves under the wage and hour provisions of the NRA code within a short time.

It was announced today that public hearings will be held May 24 in the Commerce building to determine the question of whether or not traveling salesmen, now excluded from these wage and hour provisions, shall be placed under them. This will affect all manufacturing industries and wholesale trades. With the present attitude of officialdom towards the codes, it seems certain that the wage and hour provisions will prevail.

Another development in the NRA today was the release of a Manual of Procedure on Appeal to the National Labor Board. This was signed by Robert F. Wagner, chairman of the board, and is taken to mean that the board is going to be greatly strengthened, either by legislative action or an executive order, entrenching it more firmly than ever as a powerful labor appeals board.

Term For Sheridan

Clara Lou Sheridan, Texas "Search for Beauty" player, had her option lifted by Paramount yesterday.

OPEN FORUM

The Hollywood Reporter:

I read on two or three occasions in the Hollywood Reporter that I was to play in a London picture with Charles Laughton and Douglas Fairbanks Jr.

This information is wrong and the real facts are as follows:

After I finish "The Merry Widow," I will make one picture for the London Film Productions, titled "Mr. The Marshal," directed by Alexander Korda. The story is being written for me by Marcel Achard and Henri Jeanson.

I have no other agreement with the London Film Productions or Alexander Korda, or any other foreign producing company.

I would be greatly obliged if you would correct in the next issue of the Hollywood Reporter this erroneous information.

MAURICE CHEVALIER.

Ed. Note.—The information that Mr. Chevalier would play in a picture with Charles Laughton and Doug Fairbanks Jr. is contained in the official announcement of Alexander Korda's London Films.

Hollywood Cricketers to Hold Dinner and Revel

The annual dinner dance and revel of the Hollywood Cricket Club, a British organization, will be held at the Roosevelt Hotel at 8 o'clock Sunday night to celebrate the result of the cricket clash between the "gentlemen" and the "actors" of the organization.

The event follows a meeting of the two teams at the C. Aubrey Smith field, one mile east of the Warner-First National studios on Riverside Drive, at 1 o'clock in the afternoon.

New Bill of Plays At Writers' Club

Two one-act plays and four sketches were presented by the Writers' Club last night before an audience that packed the club auditorium.

The plays were: "Rings on Her Fingers," by Kerry Conway, and "Morning Shows the Day," by Madeline Brandeis. The first was directed by Craufurd Kent. The cast included Mr. Kent, Minna Gombell and Georgia Cains. The second was directed by Paul Gerard Smith. The cast: Douglas Scott, Yvonne Pelletier, Kenn Randall, Clarence Geldert, Wilbur Higby, Vesey O'Davoren, Milton Kahn, Marion Starling and Al Jerome.

The four sketches, under the general title of "After Such Pleasures," were written by Dorothy Parker, and were taken from her books. The first was "The Mantle of Whistler," with Shirley Chambers, James Guilfoyle and Laura Breska in the cast. The second was "You Were Perfectly Fine," with Clara Kimball Young and Hyram Hoover. Third was "The Lady from Paris," with Ruthelma Stevens and Byron Bishop. Last was "Dusk Before Fireworks," with Adele Rowland and Walter Armitage.

The plays will be repeated tonight.

'Memory' Opens at the Biltmore Monday Night

With Helen Morgan as the star, Myron C. Fagan's play, "Memory," will open at the Biltmore Theatre Monday night. In the cast with Miss Morgan are Kay Hammond, Jackie Searl, Bryant Washburn, Leon Waycoff, Rafael Corio, Mia Marvin and Vera Lewis.

Miss Morgan has one song in the play, "A Fool There Was," by Fred Fischer and Stella Ungar. The engagement is for a limited time and Summer prices will prevail.

Beverly Hills Players To Do 'Bitter Harvest'

"Bitter Harvest," a play based on the life of Lord Byron, will be presented Monday night at the Hawthorne School by the Beverly Hills Community Players.

Leslie Fenton has the lead, and Dickson Morgan is the director.

Levinson in Agency

Leonard Levinson has joined the Hillman-Shane advertising agency and will have charge of the newly-created publicity and exploitation department.

SOUND MEN BURNED OVER SCHOOL BACKED BY IBEW

Hays Office Will Investigate Plan

Sound technicians of Hollywood were burned yesterday when it was revealed that Local 40, IBEW, is circulating among its members a four-page pamphlet, announcing that the Executive Board is officially co-operating with F. W. Corbett in the promotion of classes in Motion Picture Sound Recording and Projection Machine Operating at the Motion Picture Engineering Institute.

The sound men bitterly denounced this move on the part of the IBEW as a step to try to bring new men into the sound field to replace those who object to the IBEW union. They pointed out that, even if men can become proficient in sound technique through the courses suggested, fifty per cent of the sound men in town now are unemployed because there are more men than are needed.

The course offered in the pamphlet is a ten-week one, at a cost of $50, payable $5 weekly, and the range of subjects covers every angle of the entire sound and projection field. "Only in this school,' says the IBEW pamphlet, "can such a course be taught in such a short time."

The pamphlet states that the union has "every confidence" in the ability of Corbett to "successfully instruct our members in the many subjects relating to sound."

The pamphlet also reveals that Corbett is a member of Local 40, and adds: "We are proud to have in our membership a man of the ability of Brother Corbett, and suggest that, if you are interested in a course of this kind, you personally investigate and be assured that you will receive unlimited co-operation to further your particular interests in this field."

An unusual angle of the situation, according to sound men, is that the Hays office has for years warred against the various schools that have sprung up, purporting to teach various phases of the picture business. As the IBEW has a contract, covering sound men, with the producers, the other sound men were wondering yesterday just what it all means

However, it was learned last night that the Hays organization here is going to investigate the school. An executive of the Hays office yesterday stated that it had not heard of the new school.

Pratt Assigned to Direct 'Ladies First'

Gilbert Pratt goes from screen writing to his first directorial assignment with Paramount on "Ladies First," the George Bancroft starring picture, instead of "Honor Bright," which Henry Hathaway will direct.

Lead For Michael

Gertrude Michael, Paramount contract player, gets her first important break in the title spot in "Notorious Sophie Lang," which William Cameron Menzies will direct under Bayard Veiller's supervision. It is Frederick Irving Anderson's story.

Mumps Stops Personal Appearances of Bebe

New York.—Bebe Daniels and Ben Lyon did not appear at the Paramount yesterday. Bebe—and she is very much ashamed—is down with the mumps. However, their engagement will be deferred for only one week.

Rush of New Plays on B'w'y Next Week

New York.—First-nighters are going to be busy next week, for five new plays are scheduled for their Broadway debuts.

The Henry Miller starts the week off Monday night with "These Two,' by Lionel Hall. Tuesday comes "The Milky Way," by Lynn Root and Harry Clark, at the Cort, and on Wednesday the Mansfield offers "I, Myself," by Adelyn Bushnell, while the Provincetown Playhouse presents a revue, called "Don't Mind the Rain." Thursday night's opening at the Royale is "Every Thursday," by Doty Hobart.

Mary Carlisle Lead For MGM's 'Rear Car'

MGM yesterday definitely set Mary Carlisle for the lead in "Rear Car," which goes into production under the direction of Harry Beaumont Monday.

The studio also assigned Porter Hall to the same picture. Hall came to Hollywood for "Thin Man," and plans to return East when "Rear Car" is completed.

New York Composer on Music For Brock's First

Lou Brock has signed Jimmy Base, a New York composer, to write the music and lyrics for "Johnny Loves Mary,' his first independent picture. The story is by Gregory Wortsen.

Kids For 'U' Picture

Universal has signed two of the youngsters who appeared in "Seed" with Lois Wilson for similar parts in "There's Always Tomorrow" which begins today under Edward Sloman's direction. The kids are Helen Parrish and Dick Winslow.

'Kelly' Lead Signed

Trem Carr has signed Guy Robertson, now in "All the King's Horses" in New York, to a term deal and will bring the player here for the lead in "King Kelly of the U.S.A." It will be his first screen appearance.

'U' After Robinson

Casey Robinson, who washes up with Charles R. Rogers next week, may move over to Universal to do the script for the re-make of "The Hunchback of Notre Dame."

Union Guarantees HurdNotePayments

Herbert Aller, business representative of Local 659, IATSE, announced last night that the union will stand 100 per cent behind all the members whose notes were turned over to Howard Hurd in the settlement of his contract, payment of which has been demanded by today with threat of legal action if the money is not forthcoming.

Aller explained that the union will furnish legal counsel for the signers of the notes in case the matter goes to court, will attempt to arrange with the present note holders to allow the men to pay the moff at the rate of ten per cent of their earnings weekly when they work, which was the arrangement with the Local. And, if any of the men cannot get work and are pushed, the union will make weekly payments on the notes at the rate of ten per cent of what the men would earn if they were working.

"We will not fall down on our members," said Aller, "and we will not allow them to suffer any hardship through this transaction."

Marcus Starting Two Shorts at Radio Today

Lee Marcus gets the first of two new series of shorts into work today at Radio, when Ben Holmes directs the first of the Chick Chandler series and Alf Goulding starts the first Edgar Kennedy.

Tom Kennedy, Ed Deering and Jeanie Roberts have been signed for the former. Florence Lake, Dot Farley, Jack Rice and Bill Augustin go into the latter.

Three Out of Four New Plays Not For Pictures

New York.—Three out of four new plays on Broadway are definitely not for pictures. They are "Love Kills," "Lady from the Sea" and "Picnic." The fourth, "Jig Saw," is a good possibility.

Pallette For 'Dragon'

Warners signed Eugene Pallette yesterday for a detective role in "The Dragon Murder Case" which begins Monday under the direction of Lucky Humberstone. Pallette created the same character in other S S. Van Dine stories.

Farnol Leaving N. Y.

Lynn Farnol leaves tomorrow by train from New York for the coast. The Goldwyn publicity man arrived in New York Thursday from London, where he handled the campaigns on "Nana" and "Roman Scandals."

Lou Brock with Zanft

The John Zanft Ltd. agency announced yesterday that it had signed a five-year managerial contract with Lou Brock, who will become an independent producer shortly.

Not that it MATTERS

by Helen Gwynn

Because lack of time and space prevented it before, we want to take time out here to give a vote of thanks to Larry Ceballos and LeRoy Prinz for the perfectly grand dances they staged for "Murder at the Vanities." First of all, it was a genuine pleasure to watch chorus girls doing chorus dances instead of being flower petals. It was fun to see them dancing, facing the audience, instead of having to look at the tops of a lot of heads going around in circles. But best of all, there isn't a dance in the picture that couldn't have been done on the stage, and, since they all took place in a review, the fact that they looked as if they belonged in one is something very much to the credit of Messrs. Ceballos and Prinz.

Furthermore, in staging the dances that way, they didn't slow up the action, and better than that, they combined pictorial beauty with movement without digging for trick effects. Especially lovely is the number that Carl Brisson sings about "What are the wild waves saying" (or something like that), wherein the chorus does things with fans that make you think of what a nice place the seashore really is.

And having mentioned Carl Brisson, we might as well give out what he had to say to a friend of his about his first American picture role. This friend knew him from England and so Carl was saying, "You know, over there I am always playing lighthearted, gay, happy-go-lucky parts and here in this picture I am a murderer. Imagine, me, a murderer, who am always so happy-go-lucky. But it doesn't really matter—I still have my dimples!"

Aha, there's a new racket being worked around these here parts by a publicity agent who evidently isn't quite bright. It is his idea to go around to newcomers to the screen and offer his services to them for nothing until such time as he has put them over in a big way or until they are making $250 a week, and then they are supposed to remember him and pay him off accordingly. But there is a cute little catch in the arrangement. In order to get this remarkable service, absolutely free, ladies and gents, all the prospective clients have to do is to subscribe to a clipping bureau that will cost them FIFTY dollars a month.

Our mention of a movie boner to the effect that in "As the Earth Turns," despite the fact that it was below zero weather, no one had a frosty breath, has had good results. Dr. Nolan called in to tell us that his invention for creating frosty breaths on the screen is about to be snapped up by all the studios going in for cold weather scenes. It's an ill breath that blows nobody some good, we always say.

Para. Denies It Is Unfair to Labor

Frank Brandow, studio manager at the Paramount studios, yesterday issued a statement in which he denied any intent on the part of Paramount to discriminate against any building trades craftsmen in Los Angeles.

The statement was in reply to the report that the Los Angeles Building Trades Council had passed a resolution calling for a boycott of Paramount pictures on the ground that the studio has been unfair to labor in the letting of contracts for building projects at its plant. Mr. Brandow states that the wage scale of the contractors doing the work comes under the buildings trades NRA code, and is something outside the studio's jurisdiction, and adds that the studio is living up to the code and will continue to do so.

Lewis Foster Goes to Para. For 'Fleurette'

Completing his work today on the treatment of his own original, "Face of an Angel," at Fox, Lewis Foster moves to Paramount Monday to write the screen play of "52 Weeks For Fleurette," which Alfred Werker directs.

Lynn Starling, Walter De Leon and Harry Ruskin, who were on the story, have completed their work and will be given new assignments Hoffman-Schlager set the Foster deal.

Radio Player Coming

Barbara Robbins arrives by train from New York Monday to start her term contract with Radio. Her first assignment will be the lead opposite John Barrymore in "A Hat, a Coat, a Glove," which George Nicholls Jr. puts before the cameras Tuesday. Kenneth Macgowan produces.

Agents Sue Nixon

Rebecca and Silton yesterday filed suit against Marian Nixon for $393 in commissions on "Strictly Dynamite." Harry Sokolov acted for the complainant.

Beatrice Van an Agent

Beatrice Van drops out of the writing ranks to become an agent, joining the Hallam Cooley office to operate a writers' and story department.

Mary Morris East

With Paramount still holding an option for her services, Mary Morris started last night on the return trip to New York. She was in "Double Door."

'Cleopatra' Returns

The "Cleopatra" unit of 15, headed by C. B. DeMille, returned yesterday from a week's location at the Mojave desert.

Arthur Loew Returning

New York.—Arthur Loew, who has been in Europe inspecting the continental offices, returns to New York Tuesday.

Dorothy Ates to London

Dorothy Ates is sailing for London next week to fill an engagement at the Kit-Kat Club.

Trial of Sam Goldwyn's petition for an injunction against Warners continuing to use Busby Berkeley finally got under way yesterday before Judge Frank Smith in Superior Court.

Eddie Cantor was called as a witness for Goldwyn and the day's session was devoted to defining the meaning of the technical term "rehearsal." The definition, it is said, may be the focal point in the trial in view of Warners' contention that the studio was unable to deliver the dance director because, at the time Goldwyn's demand for him was served, he was rehearsing "Dames." The case continues Monday morning.

Eight Fox-World Wide Features for Amity

New York—Amity Pictures has acquired eight of the Fox-World Wide features for distribution through Amity exchanges.

They are "The Man Called Back," "Hell-Fire Austin" and six Bob Steele Westerns. Amity now has 27 pictures for release.

United Films Corp. Plans Florida Studio

New York.—United Films Corporation announces that it is planning the construction of a sound studio with two stages at Hollywood, Florida. It will be available to independents.

'Dynamite' Retakes

Additional scenes and retakes will be made Sunday at Radio on "Strictly Dynamite." Those in the cast who were recalled are Jimmy Durante, Norman Foster, Marian Nixon, William Gargan, Tom Kennedy and Stanley Fields.

Roy Jones Will Wed

Roy C. Jones, prop department head at Paramount, and Irene Hulbert, expect to fly to Las Vegas today to be married. Miss Hulbert was formerly in Paramount's wardrobe department.

'Now I'll Tell' Shifts

New York.—The Fox picture, "Now I'll Tell," originally scheduled for the Music Hall, will go into the Roxy instead, opening May 25.

Snell With Mascot

Mascot has signed Earle Snell to collaborate with Joseph Santley on the latter's original, "Young and Beautiful." Lou Baum supervises.

Bartlett on 'Cinch'

Sy Bartlett has been assigned to adapt the screen play of "The Cinch" at Warners, a story dealing with Boulder Dam, by Dan Templin.

Van Upp-McEvoy Team

Virginia Van Upp has been assigned by Paramount to collaborate with J. P. McEvoy on the screen play of "Ready for Love."

Laboratory Theatre of MGM Sets Debut

MGM tossed its hat into the talent-hunt circle yesterday through its Laboratory Theatre, which will serve as the medium of finding new players and writers.

Official debut takes place May 14 at the Hawthorne High School auditorium, which the studio has leased. Five one-act plays will be presented, studio executives, directors, writers and players constituting the audience. Maurice Revnes, Oliver Hinsdale and Samuel Kayser head the Laboratory, with Dr. Garland Greever of USC as advisory counsel.

Mussolini Biographer Luncheon Guest at MGM

MGM tendered a banquet yesterday to Margherita Sarfatti, biographer of Mussolini. L. B. Mayer acted as host to a number of prominent Italians. The Italian Consul, Dr. A. P. Giannini, Frank Capra and Will Hays attended.

20th Century Changes

Twentieth Century has started extensive alterations to its executive offices, which will include the addition of a private dining room for the executives. Bill Dover is the only official of the company still in town, and he leaves on his vacation June 1.

Ratony With Radio

Radio yesterday signed Dan Ratony to collaborate with H. W. Hanemann, Frank R. Adams and Jane Murfin on "The Other Passport," which is slated as the next Francis Lederer vehicle. John Cromwell will direct and Pandro Berman will produce.

Stuart-Gleason on Air

Gloria Stuart and James Gleason will head the "Hollywood on the Air" radio program, which now goes over NBC Sunday night from 8:15 to 9. Berton Churchill, Joan Marsh, Noah Beery and Jan Rubini's orchestra will also be heard.

Warner Deal Lagging

Randforce will operate the chain under the Warner theatre department. If this report is true, Skouras will be confined to operations in Fox West Coast.

It is reported that Warners expect to be called upon to make a cash outlay of about $2,500,000, the balance to be guaranteed by Warner bonds.

However, a conflicting report comes from financial sources close to Fox Metropolitan. That is that any claim that Warners may make that they have closed for these houses is ridiculous. The Fox Metropolitan reorganization plan will go through next week, it is said, and thirty days after that offers will be entertained. Furthermore, this authority says, no offer has been received.

So, "you pays your money and takes your choice." If the deal goes through, Warners will have approximately 600 houses and will rank in New York with Loew's and RKO.

FWC TO FIGHT CODE SLAP

TRADEVIEWS by FRANK POPE

•ONE of the most important and far-reaching decisions ever given in the motion picture industry was that of the Los Angeles Grievance Board in ruling that Fox West Coast and Principal Theatres had over-bought product and must relinquish twenty pictures to a competing independent independent house in Alhambra.

We heard several conflicting opinions yesterday, but all agreed on the importance of the ruling, IF it is upheld by the Code Authority and other authorities or courts who may consider it. That it will be carried to the highest courts in the land if the decision of the Code Authority goes against the chains is certain.

The conflict of opinion came over the effect of the ruling on block booking. A number of industry leaders expressed the belief that it meant the end of that practise; that, if the Code Authority has the right to say how pictures shall be divided in a certain territory, to allocate product, selling in block is over because an exhibitor or chain could not be certain that he would get what he had purchased.

On the other hand, the Grievance Board's decision is understood to have been largely influenced by the fact that the Alhambra independent had had the Warner product last year and that this year the chains had taken it away from him. So a sufficient number of pictures to make up this loss was awarded him. A member of the Grievance Board said that he could not see how the ruling would affect block booking in any way.

Whatever may be the ultimate effect, the Code has suddenly assumed added importance. Heretofore, there hasn't been very much interest in it among the leaders in the industry. This ruling is the first time it has really shown its teeth and showed also that it can bite. Gen. Johnson has said right along that the NRA would protect the "little fellow." In the present instance, that is what has been done.

The ruling also establishes a precedent for other territories. No one can have any doubt that similar conditions exist all over the country and, if the present decision is finally up-

Hot Weather Hits New York Grosses

New York.—The sudden hot weather yesterday played havoc with the grosses of the Broadway picture houses and spoiled the prospects for a good week. The temperature ran up to well over 80 degrees, too hot for shows.

Jerry Sackheim New 'U' Story Dept. Head

Universal yesterday signed Jerry Sackheim to a long term contract as head of the story department. Leonard Spigelgass remains as scenario head and will become an associate producer. Sackheim checks out as Sam Marx's assistant at MGM Saturday, moving to Universal Monday.

Deal was negotiated by Noll Gurney of the Schulberg, Feldman and Gurney office.

Laughton on Way to Take 'Barretts' Role

Southampton.—Charles Laughton and his wife, Elsa Lanchester, sailed Saturday for America. The two "Henry the Eighth" protagonists are due to reach Hollywood about May15.

Laughton is cast for the demoniacal dad of "The Barretts of Wimpole Street" at MGM.

New York.—Lou Metzger, of San Diego, has been appointed American representative for British International Pictures. He is due here from England next week and will open New York offices.

Will Carry Its Appeal From Grievance Board Ruling To Supreme Court If Necessary

Fox West Coast and Principal Theatres are going to fight the decision of the Los Angeles Grievance Board which found them guilty of over-buying product and withholding pictures from an independent competitor, and will carry the battle clear up to the United States Supreme Court if necessary.

The decision to fight was reached yesterday immediately after executives had received the ruling of the Grievance Board, which ordered them to turn over twenty first-run pictures to the Garfield theatre in Alhambra. Legal counsel set to work at once drafting an appeal from the local Grievance Board's decision. This will

Selznick, Cukor and Estabrook in London

London.—David O. Selznick arrived today to seek authentic Dickensonian types for "David Copperfield" principals. He is accompanied by George Cukor and Howard Estabrook, the director and scenarist of the projected MGM picture.

Faces to fit the traditional illustrations for Mr. Micawber, Uriah Heep and Copperfield as a young man are sought.

Mrs. Viertel to Korda

Salka Viertel has been signed by Alexander Korda to go to England on a writing ticket with London Films. Deal was negotiated via cable and Mrs. Viertel leaves in two weeks for London.

Boycott Urged on Improper Pictures

Declaring that the motion picture producers and exhibitors have not kept faith with their public, a virtual boycott of motion picture theatres until pictures are cleared up was recommended yesterday at a conference at the Biltmore hotel of educators, churchmen, and members of women's organizations.

The opinion of those present was that the boycott should be maintained until the subject matter of pictures is improved to conform to the ideals upon which our country was founded. Rev. Martin McNicholas, head of the Catcholic schools in the diocese of Los Angeles and San Diego, said that pictures have great responsibilities, but must be regulated and their force directed in the proper channel or else no children should be permitted to see them.

Irv Cobb May Star in Feature Film For MGM

The possibility of Irvin Cobb starring in a feature to be written by himself has been discussed by the humorist with Hal Roach.

The first two or three shorts of the Cobb series of eight will be the test of his aptitude as a screen actor, and of his interest in going big-time for an MGM feature.

John Daumery Dies

London—John Daumery, one of the best known of British directors, is dead in Lausanne, Switzerland. Irving Asher, Warner's British representative, started for Lausanne by plane when he heard of Daumery's condition, but arrived too late.

Jane Murfin is listed on the Radio production slate as an associate producer and it is understood that she moves into that spot on the completion of her script work on "The Other Passport."

ZANUCK WANTS TO SCREEN SHAKESPEARE AND OPERA

New York.—In his first interview given here yesterday, Darryl Zanuck, who is sailing for Europe and Africa shortly, said that he hopes in the near future to be able to transfer Shakespeare's plays and some grand operas to the screen.

Zanuck touched on several angles of the picture business in his talk. He spoke emphatically against the double feature evil and condemned the star system. He also came out flatly in favor of criticism of pictures and said he did not care how severe it was. He

"SUCCESS AT ANY PRICE"

Radio prod.; director, J. Walter Ruben; writers, John Howard Lawson, Howard J. Green

Rialto Theatre

Times: With the connivance of the author, the screen version of John Howard Lawson's sardonic success story has been managed with considerable effectiveness. Fortunately, the dramatic instinct, or lack of it, which was responsible for crudely renovating the original title to "Success At Any Price" has not extended its sinister influence to the work itself.

News: Douglas Fairbanks Jr. presents a splendid performance in the role of Joe Martin. The direction is skilful and the settings are good.

World-Telegram: Enough of the intensity and fervor, vehemence and bitterness of the original have been preserved to make the film really interesting screen entertainment. Douglas Fairbanks Jr. is excellent as Martin.

Mirror: A moderately impressive movie, though it lacks the movie qualities of speed and action. It is intelligently directed and skilfully played.

Post: Though the plot is vigorous and the dialogue penetrating, the whole affair has a tendency to put you into one of those what-of-it moods. Probably one reason why all of this matters so little is due to the inordinate mediocrity of the acting.

American: The play has gained nothing in transition to the screen, and so the new entertainment at the Rialto is very mediocre movie. Mr. Fairbanks lends strength to a bitterly unattractive and flamboyantly written role.

Herald-Tribune: Considered as screen entertainment, "Success At Any Price" is an intelligent, if a somewhat melodramatic story, in which Douglas Fairbanks Jr. gives an interesting portrayal.

Sun: Even to one who has not seen or read the stage play, it is easy to surmise that the film version has been tempered, sweetened somewhat—a few punches pulled and the ending changed, perhaps. "Success At Any Price" is shrewdly effective movie fare. It is well done and you'll probably find it worth your time.

Radio Testing New Lamp in Color Work

Radio yesterday put to test a new device, the Bishop lamp, with a view to using it in the first Technicolor short if it is passed on favorably.

The lamp controls rapid changes of colored lights and also blends them accurately at the same time. Lloyd Corrigan conducted the tests, with Don Alvarado and Steffi Dunni enacting a scene from "La Cucaracha" for the purpose.

Erpi Execs East As Smoot Suit Nears

The two-year-old suit against Electrical Research Products, Inc., brought by Mrs. Alice Smoot and claiming commissions on the sale of sound equipment to the Mormon Church at Salt Lake City, is set for trial in New York next Monday.

Morris Ridge, head of Erpi's Western Service Studio, Arthur Lamb, sales manager, and George Pratt, vice-president, will be in New York when the trial is slated to start. Ridge and Lamb have already left and Pratt leaves Thursday. One of the executives stated yesterday that the trio will testify at the suit if called upon, but that it is expected the case will be settled out of court between now and Monday.

Lawrence-Fairbanks Play Interests London

London.—Most of London is waiting for reports from Manchester, England, on the opening of "The Winding Journey," which co-stars Gertrude Lawrence and Doug Fairbanks Jr.

It is Doug's first stage shot and, if the idea clicks, it is his intention to divide his time in the future between theatre and films.

'WHEN STRANGERS MEET' IS ONLY FOR THE SMALL TIME

Story Better Than Acting or Direction

"WHEN STRANGERS MEET"
(Liberty)

Direction.....William Christy Cabanne
Author.....Adele Buffington
Photography ..... ——— Johnson
Cast: Arline Judge, Richard Cromwell, Lucien Littlefield, Charles Middleton, Sarah Padden, Sheila Terry, Ray Walker, Julie Haydon, Vera Gordon, Luis Alberni.

Well, you'd think that the Grand Hotel cycle would be over by this time. But no. It isn't. Here comes the Grand-Hotel-in-a-Bungalow-Court drammer, entitled "When Strangers Meet." It's a Liberty production.

While the story isn't original, it has enough interest to keep it going. Rather, it would have, if the cast and direction gave it a break. Oddly enough, all the bit players turn in remarkably fine performances, but the principals, and the slow, listless direction of Christy Cabanne, weaken the whole thing. Considerable cutting would help a lot.

Charles Middleton plays the mean old owner of the bungalow court, who keeps his wife, Sarah Padden, in a continual state of abject fright, and his son, Richard Cromwell, in ineffectual rebellion. Cromwell, in love with Arline Judge, the daughter of a quaint old drunk, Lucien Littlefield, is unable to accept a splendid position in another city because he is afraid to leave his mother to the untender mercies of his father. Finally, however, because a double murder is committed in the bungalow court, the villain is exposed with all his misdeeds, and everything turns out fine.

The story is less important than the characterizations. There is the wife who fails to pay the rent each month because she can't resist gambling her husband's hard-earned dollars on the races; a charming Jewish couple whose son is learning to play the drums and who practices long and hard; a couple of golddiggers; a German tenor whose home-brew just will explode; an excitable cobbler, and a young couple with a baby.

Arline Judge has fine moments in her performance, and Richard Cromwell gets away rather well with his role of the weak boy. Sarah Padden is ineffective, and so is Charles Middleton, both over-playing. Lucien Littlefield is splendid as the drunk, Ray Walker is a fast-working reporter, Julie Haydon is the girl whose charms contribute to Middleton's downfall, and Sheila Terry has a small role. Vera Gordon contributes a high note to the picture as the Jewish mother; Luis Alberni is fascinating as the cobbler, and the man who played the tenor is grand. Adele Buffington wrote the story.

This one is not for the big houses, and the less critical audiences will be only half-way pleased with it unless it is pepped up.

Col. Picture Gets $5,000 in Four Days

New York.—Columbia's production of "Twentieth Century," which is now playing at the Radio City Music Hall, rolled up a gross of $56,000 for its first four days, about the best the house has had recently.

'Social' Interests Start Agency Fuss

An agency war has broken out between the Small-Landau office and the Schulberg, Feldman and Gurney over two players, Rochelle Hudson and Helen Vinson.

The Small-Landau office accuses Johnny Madgio, of Schulberg, Feldman and Gurney, of attempting to ring their client, Rochelle Hudson, while the latter office accuses Pat De Cicco, of Small-Landau, of trying to lasso Helen Vinson. Each disclaims raiding intentions, asserting the respective interests are "social."

MGM Signs Actress at Her Stage Play Opening

New York.—Gladys George was signed by MGM to a term contract just before opening last night in "Milky Way," at the Cort theatre.

The picture contract goes into effect after the run of the play, making Miss George probably the first example of talent bought "in galley proof." She does character leads.

Ethel Shannon Jackson, widow of Joseph A. Jackson, has recently been visiting Cuba and has written friends she will shortly return to Hollywood after an absence of about two years.

Warners Buy Novel

Warners have purchased "Go Into Your Dance," a novel by Bradford Ropes and will use it as a musical, probably for Dick Powell and Ruby Keeler. Ropes wrote "42nd Street" which started the current list of musicals

'Hell's Angels' Footage

The Howard Hughes office denied yesterday that Nat Levine had optioned all the remaining unused footage of "Hell's Angels." Mr. Levine was said to have purchased a small quantity, but there is plenty left.

Fishing Short For Cobb

Irvin Cobb's first picture for Hal Roach will be "Fisherman's Luck" and will be directed by James Parrot when it starts next week. He will be supported by an all-star cast.

Small Chain Fights Ban on 2-for-Ones

Pacific National Theatres, Inc., of National City, yesterday filed an appeal with the Code Authority from the decision of the Los Angeles Grievance Board, which last week ordered the concern to stop the practice of "two for ones" and the giving of cash inducements to its patrons at the National theatre.

The complaint was brought against the National by the Seville theatre of Chula Vista. In its appeal, the National claimed that it is five miles from the nearest competitor, and that as Wednesday, Thursday and Saturdays are dull nights, such practices had to be resorted to in order to keep the doors open.

The Grievance Board has ordered the National Soldiers Home at Sawtelle to cease admitting the public free of charge to the theatre conducted for the inmates of the home.

Aarons and Goldwyn Split After Dispute

Alex Aarons, of the producing firm of Aarons and Freedley, brought here from New York by Samuel Goldwyn to handle the next Eddie Cantor picture, has come to a parting of the ways with Goldwyn.

Yesterday he revealed that he and Goldwyn have had a friendly difference of opinion, and the deal between them is all off.

Colleen Moore Lead in 'The Scarlet Letter'

Majestic yesterday concluded a deal for Colleen Moore for the lead in "The Scarlet Letter," negotiations for which were reported exclusively in the Reporter about a month ago.

Picture, the first production by Larry Darmour for the company, will be directed by Robert Vignola and starts in two weeks.

Fox Buys Sealing Yarn For Lowe and McLaglen

Fox yesterday purchased "The Seal Poachers," an original story by Norman Reily Raine, and will probably use it as an Edmund Lowe-Victor McLaglen vehicle. Deal was negotiated by the Hawks-Volck Corporation.

Not that it MATTERS
by Helen Gwynn

We've been listening to a lot of complaints lately to the effect that the picture industry doesn't make use of the best writing talent there is. That may be true to a certain degree, but we have noticed that the "giant brains" amongst the writing crew of this country are the very ones who have done the least to remedy the writer's situation in the picture industry. And they are the ones who, long ago (had they been sufficiently interested), could have demanded and gotten innumerable reforms.

The reasons why they didn't are fairly numerous. The most significant of them is the fact that most writers of great reputation have no love for pictures as a medium of expression. They have no faith in the enormous potentialities of pictures. They do not or will not see them as a really great composite art. To them, pictures are a stepchild whom they will tolerate for the money involved, but whom they will not recognize as belonging to the family. Their attitude is a contemptuous one.

Hence, when they are signed up at tremendous salaries, instead of digging in and fighting for something they want to do, they are content to let themselves be kicked around just so long as they are collecting that goodly weekly stipend. When their contracts are up, they are content to return to what they call "white people" and discuss the unbelievable stupidities of the picture industry.

But raise a voice to correct those stupidities? Never! They are probably too good copy for them to destroy. And the sad part of it is, that they have the power to correct many evils. The writer is supposedly an imaginative person. A person who can envision the possibilities of visual movement and good writing. They represent the fundamentals of good picture-making. And they don't care, most of them—the big-wigs who are brought out here on the strength of their reputations as writers, who are in a position because of their independence and the salaries they command, to get some respectful attention for their ideas.

These ideas may not all be practical but surely some of them would help to raise the level of both picture-making and the writers' situation.

There are, of course, notable exceptions to these various prejudices among writers and everyone of them has been successful and happy in the picture industry. The latest one to make good is Nunnally Johnson, who, in two short years in the picture business, has established himself as an invaluable writing asset to that industry, and the real basis for that success has been not alone his writing talent (which is something), but his enthusiasm for the medium in which he works. It is reflected both in the pictures he has written, which are all way above average, and in his own personal success.

be filed with the Code Authority some time between now and Friday, the deadline for appealing the decision.

While the grounds for the appeal were not outlined, the statements from representatives of the companies declared that Fox West Coast and Principal Theatres acted strictly within the letter of the film code in stocking their theatres, and that any producer may license to its affiliated exhibitor all of its motion pictures, as the Fox Company has done, and still be absolutely within the rulings of the code.

Further, the statement asserted that the Los Angeles Grievance Board had acted contrary to the code in taking five of the Fox pictures away from West Coast and Principal Theatres and turning them over to the Garfield.

It was pointed out that Fox West Coast and Principal Theatres must provide a total of 208 feature pictures yearly for the affiliated Alhambra, as that house has a double feature policy. In order to be certain that the theatre has sufficient product, and that it will not be left in the air by unlooked-for under-production, the chain licensed 225 pictures for it. This, it was alleged, is provided for in the code.

The statement further declared that the Garfield theatre, which was the one that alleged it was being deprived of sufficient first-run product to do business, had a total of 283 pictures available for its use. It was indicated that this will be one of the big points brought out in the appeal for a reversal of the decision.

While independent theatre owners throughout the district were rejoicing over the decision, the concensus of opinion was that the case will be fought bitterly, as it will set a precedent that may upset the entire big theatre chain apple-cart throughout the entire country if it is upheld.

Charles Skouras, vice-president of Fox West Coast, is in the East now, and while no statement could be obtained regarding his plans, those close to the situation felt yesterday that he will probably remain there and carry the fight to Washington in case the Code Authority upholds the decision. The Code Authority must pass upon the appeal within fifteen days from the time it is filed.

COMMUNICATIONS CODE WILL EXTEND TO ERPI

Washington.—The new code which the Government proposes to impose on the telegraph industry is said to have so many loopholes in it that it will be perfectly feasible to extend its operations to include Western Electric, Erpi or any other company controlling means of record communication.

According to the announcement, it is aimed at the American Telephone and Telegraph Company, Western Union, Postal Telegraph, R.C.A. Communications and all subsidiaries of any description.

Some of the definitions in the proposed code are also so loosely drawn, perhaps purposely, that they may include sound transmission. This is believed possible, especially as A. T. & T. is mentioned as one of the companies that, up to this time, has refused to submit to the NRA at all.

The announcement of the plan was rather timely, evidently being matched with the pending Senate resolution for an investigation of the A. T. & T. It is taken to mean that, inasmuch as all codes may be amended at any time, if certain facts develop out of the investigation, they could conceivably be remedied in an NRA code in lieu of the proposed Communications Commission.

'JIG-SAW' AN AMUSING FARCE; 'LOVE KILLS' DULL AND TRAGIC

Former Suited For Pix, But Not Latter

"JIG SAW"

Presented by the Theatre Guild at the Ethel Barrymore Theatre, by Dawn Powell; staged by Philip Moeller; settings by Lee Simonson. Cast: Virginia Tracy, Albert Bergh, James York, Cora Witherspoon, Ernest Truex, Spring Byington, Eliot Cabot, Charles Richman, Gertrude Flynn, Helen Westley, Mabel Kroman, Shepperd Strudwick.

New York.—As the sixth and last Theatre Guild production of the current season, "Jig Saw" seemed to be designed to send subscribers off to the country for the summer with a pat on the back for a good season's support and the pleasant taste of a piquant appetizer for good things to come next September in their mouths.

While the play could hardly be construed as worthy of the hitherto serious endeavors for which this producing organization is noted, it has nevertheless a saucy wit and sparkle. Dawn Powell's dialogue and construction cannot top such a farce as "No More Ladies," yet, in full measure of clever good humor, and belly-tickling laughs, it surpasses it. There is enough good material in the first act and even beyond to make more than a satisfactory farce picture.

With such expert farceurs as Ernest Truex, Eliot Cabot, Cora Witherspoon and Spring Byington doing a neat job by Miss Powell, the slight fabric of farce plot scores heavily in its first two acts, but thereafter comes perilously near proving a dud. As the ingenue, Gertrude Flynn mustn't be overlooked for her capable work.

Such action as there is centers around the amours of a romantic lady who maintains a separate menage of her own in a Central Park penthouse—apart from her husband's establishment in the country. This has been going on for a long time. For some fifteen years the lady has kept open house, particularly for her gentlemen friends—one of whom found the lady and her apartment so adequate that he moved in and stayed on. Her daughter, who has been sequestered abroad in various schools, finally arrives home—just in the midst of another of her mother's hectic affairs of the heart.

Mother's long estrangement from her child has hardly prepared her for the resultant shock of discovering that her daughter is no longer a sheltered innocent young lady of 18. Picture also her amazement, chagrin and despair at discovering that young daughter's sophistication has progressed, so much so that Mother is in danger of losing her latest romantic acquisition to the daughter.

In the resultant battle for possession of the male, Mother stands only a ghost of a chance, daughter winning out by sheer persistence and determination. The young unattached bachelor struggles very feebly at the tossing about between the two women and finally succumbs. Nothing is left for Mother but to fall back upon her sugar daddy, who fought so valiantly to maintain his cozy comfortable status in the freedom of the penthouse, and this skilled psychologist in affairs of the heart has a comparatively easy time in giving back to his lady love the self-respect of a good deed done instead of a broken romance.

Cavalcade Wins For Lloyd Second Time

Sentimentality paid for Frank Lloyd. The director of "Cavalcade," two weeks ago placed a bet on the horse that won the Kentucky Derby last Saturday, netting him $1,000.

A Formula Tragedy

"LOVE KILLS"

Presented by Ida Lublenski Ehrlich at the Forrest Theatre; written by Ida Lublenski Ehrlich; staged by Percival Vivian. Cast: Marion Green, Harry Hanlon, John Parrish, Vivian Giesen, Bram Nossen, Hendrick Joyner.

New York.—"Love Kills," written and presented by the author, was, to most of the audience, one of the minor tragedies of the season. Badly written and directed, the play never did reach the point of making the audience sit up.

The actors were terribly miscast and one wonders upon whose judgment the play was presented. Vivian Giesen, the heroine and only female in the cast, gave a perfect example of how not to act and we speculate how she could possibly have been a protege of the late David Belasco. Harry Hanlon and Marion Green did the best they could, but even they knew that it was hopeless.

The plot must have been taken from formula number 9. The father, faced with ruin and disgrace, begs his only daughter to marry the man who could save him. The girl sacrifices herself and marries the rich old banker for her father's sake and lives unhappily with him, until her former lover comes on the scene again and she runs away and lives with him until she can secure her divorce decree. In the meantime her lover has grown tired of her, and when he tells her so, she commits suicide. Nothing in this for pictures.

Zanuck For Big Pix

believed that fair criticism, even if severe, is a benefit to the producer.

Asked about the future of color pictures, he said that he did not believe they would ever become popular. He felt that they could not be as good photographically as black and white.

His predictions as to the public taste in pictures is that, this year, he thinks productions of great scope are desired. He cited, as examples, productions dealing with British rule in India, or war pictures with a definite anti-war slant and with a distinct patriotic angle.

He is not at all worried over the future of the industry. Its troubles now, he said, are due to past huge real estate and theatre committments.

"This resulted," he said, "in producing companies being obliged to make too many pictures, only a few of which were good, and so they lost money both on the pictures and in their theatres."

Vaude For The Lyric Dramatic Stock and

New York.—Chamberlain Brown has taken over the old Lyric Theatre in Forty-second street and will run it as a combination dramatic stock and vaudeville theatre. He opens it under the new policy on May 14.

His plan is to present condensed versions of popular plays with the stock company, performances to be made continuous by the use of vaudeville acts. The bill will be changed weekly.

Mascot Building Up Its Writing Staff

New York.—Mascot has added seven writers to its list, giving it a staff of a dozen scenarists. The list includes: Earle Snell, who is collaborating with Joseph Santley on "Young and Beautiful"; C. Edward Roberts, working on treatment of "Waterfront Lady"; Dore Schary working on "Crimson Romance"; Douglas Doty and George Sayre on "Along Came a Woman"; Marion Orth doing dialogue on "Crimson Romance". Other staff writers are Wyndham Gittens, John Rathnell, Al Martin, Sherman Lowe and Barney Sarecky.

The company has bought a play by John S. Twist and William Worthington, called "The Skeleton in the Closet," which will be produced under the title of "One Frightened Night."

THALBERG AND SHEEHAN EXPERTS FOR GOLDWYN

Irving Thalberg, Lou Brock and Winfield Sheehan were witnesses at the resumption of the trial of Sam Goldwyn's suit against Warners yesterday before Superior Court Judge Frank Smith. The three producers testified for Goldwyn, who is seeking an injunction to prevent Warners from continuing to use Busby Berkeleys services.

Each was asked, as an expert, to define the meaning of "rehearsal." The defense by Warners is that Berkeley had been assigned to rehearse "Dames," on which he is still working, while directing the dances in "Wonder Bar" last December. All three concurred in the opinion that a picture was in rehearsal only after a script had been prepared and a company called. Warners claim that, because Dick Powell sang a song from "Dames" last December for Berkeley, the latter had been "rehearsing" the production.

An effort by Milton Schwartz, of Loeb, Walker and Loeb, Goldwyn attorneys, to place in evidence a deposition taken from Darryl Zanuck before he left for Europe last week, caused an objection from Berkeley's counsel, Milton Cohen. He asked that the deposition be ruled out because it had been taken before the dance director had been made party to the suit as co-defendant with Warners. Judge Smith reserved ruling on this point, but Schwartz stated he would read the deposition into the record in view of Warners failing to object.

The trial proceeds this morning.

18 Months to Make Novel Russian Film

Moscow.—Another six months will see the completion of an animated film novelty, "New Gulliver," which Ptoushko is directing at the Soyuzfilm studio. He has been on it for the past year.

The picture is being made with a combination of living characters and sculptured miniature dolls. There are 1000 dolls in the cast, and some of these wear as many as 100 different masks. The picture is expected to be startling when completed.

Fox Musical Shelved

"Music in the Air," Fox's stock setback, is again on the tentative future list after its latest reconsideration for production. This time is for another six or eight months postponement.

Yohalem to Produce 'Shock' For Monogram

Monogram yesterday signed George Yohalem for the production of "Shock" in place of W. T. Lackey, who is still sick. Roy Pomeroy will direct his own original, which has been scripted by Madeline Ruthven. Ralph Forbes will have the lead when the picture gets into work in the next two weeks.

Nicholls Ill, Minor On Directorial Job

An urgent operation compelled George Nicholls to withdraw from directing "A Hat, a Coat, a Glove" yesterday, with Radio placing Worthington Minor on the production.

Nicholls, whose first break was due on the Barrymore picture that goes into work today, will be out of the running for four weeks. He will direct "Anne of Green Gables" instead.

Connolly Assigned

Bobby Connolly yesterday was assigned to direct the musical numbers in Warners' Technicolor short, "What, No Men?" which Ralph Staub directs with Phil Regan and El Brendel in the leads. Sammy Fain and Irving Kahil have written two songs for the piece.

O. P. Heggie Delayed

O. P. Heggie was due to arrive by plane Sunday night for "The Count of Monte Cristo,' but did not show up at the studio yesterday. The Reliance picture is scheduled to start Wednesday, Rowland V. Lee directing.

Guild Board and New Council Meet

The Executive Board of the Screen Writers' Guild and the new Advisory Council held their first joint meeting at the Writers' Club last night

Most important business was the discussion of a new fiscal plan for the Guild. Several suggestions were advanced, and committees from both groups were named to recommend one of the suggestions. From the Executive Board, Ernest Pascal and Wells Root were appointed. From the Council: William Conselman, Gladys Lehman, Nunnally Johnson, John Grey and Jack Natteford. This committee will meet next Monday evening with the Council and offer their suggestions.

Donald Ogden Stewart was elected chairman of the advisory council to conduct their meetings with William Conselman, vice chairman and Doris Malloy, secretary.

Silent Camera Will Be Academy's Next Task

One of the greatest periods of research activity in the history of the Academy will be undertaken shortly by the Technical Research Council.

Practically 1000 replies to questionnaires, asking for suggestions regarding construction of a really noiseless camera for studio use, have been sent back to the Council. Starting this week, the committee will begin a study of the suggestions, and shortly a program of actual work will be started.

ASC-UNION MERGER OFF

TRADEVIEWS by FRANK POPE

•DID you ever start a snowball rolling down hill and watch it gather not only impetus, but snow on the way? That is what is happening in this country to the revolt against smut in motion pictures. All over the land the cry for clean pictures is being taken up. The churches, educators, bar associations and, most important of all, the great national organizations of women are shouting their disapproval of dirt and their demand for more healthful entertainment for themselves and their children.

This week there was a general motion picture conference in Los Angeles. At the meeting the Rev. Martin McNicholas, head of all the Los Angeles and San Diego Catholic schools, openly accused the motion picture producers of breaking their word to the public. He said:

"When the film code was signed, it was hailed in Hollywood as a great step forward, and statements emanated from that source that the industry was on its way to self-government and that the result would be wholesome, entertaining pictures.

"Since that time, 229 pictures have been released. Of that number, 41 dealt with gangsters, racketeers and the like; 27 portrayed stories of prostitutes and mistresses; 65 depicted illicit relations between men and women, and in three the heroine gave up her virtue to save another.

"If that is the type of wholesome pictures that is a result of the code and the best we can expect, the only way we can combat such productions is through the box-office by staying away from the theatres."

In spite of the fact that representatives of several producing companies have taken exception to Father McNicholas' figures, the conference went on record as recommending a boycott on theatres which ran indecent pictures. Those at the meeting were obviously deeply impressed by Father McNicholas' remarks and also by his statement that 28,000,000 minors attend the picture theatres every week.

It must be remembered that such action in Los Angeles is not an isolated case. Similar talks are being

New York.—The exhibitors of the country are not hurrying any in sending in their film code assessments. So far only about $23,000 has been received, which is far below what was expected. A dunning letter is being sent out.

Kohn May Produce With Zukor Backing

New York. — Ralph Kohn, who recently resigned his positions as vice-president and director of Paramount-Publix and its subsidiaries, is understood to be planning the organization of a new producing company. He has taken offices in the Paramount building, but has made no announcement as to his plans.

It is believed that, if he does go into production, he will have the backing of Adolph Zukor. Mr. Zukor left here for the coast yesterday and would not discuss the Kohn matter before he left.

Butterworth Sick, MGM Gets Ruggles

Charlie Ruggles was borrowed from Paramount yesterday by MGM for the top spot in "Rear Car," Charlie Butterworth being forced out, due to a sinus siege.

Picture started yesterday under Harry Beaumont's direction and Lucien Hubbard's supervision. Russell Hardie, Cliff Thompson and Willard Robertson joined the cast.

Leon Gordon Boosted

Going up still another notch, Leon Gordon was made associate producer on all Reliance productions. Former writer will relieve Edward Small of a portion of the executive duties.

IATSE Members Will Not Go For Plan—Matter Of Location Work Still Studio Headache

The proposed merger of the American Society of Cinematographers and the cameramen's union, Local 659, IATSE, has flopped.

As far as the majority of executives and members of the union are concerned, the merger is dead,and there will be no more discussions regarding it or about the terms on which the ASC is said to have been willing to absorb the union and take over the charter.

If the merger had gone through it would have made the ASC one of the most powerful labor factors ever to operate in the picture iindustry, for the society already has a contract with the major studios where it controls

THE LOWDOWN

The lowdown on the Jean Harlow-Hal Rosson bust-up seems to be that it was far from sudden. In fact, we're told that they had planned a definite rift some months ago, but the powers that be at the stujo persuaded Jean to hold off on any such publicity until her current flicker was finished. Jean really meant to put off the front-page stuff until the last scene had been shot—but there were such hectic goings-on in the Rosson menage over the week-end that the marriage broke up and the news broke out at the same time! We hear, too, that home was just a place to hang his hat to Rosson for the last two months—and even though they dined together, Jean and Hal might just as well have been living miles apart!

When Gene Fowler made his deal with Darryl Zanuck to write the story of "Barnum," he was to get one-third of his huge stipend when he started to work, one-third when the story was finished, and the last third when they started shooting. But when Fowler turned in his "manuscript," Zanuck was so delighted with the thing that he paid the scribe his remaining two-thirds dough pronto and signed him all over again to do the script and dialogue for his brainchild. What's more, Zanuck asked Fowler's permission to have copies of his "Barnum" story made for all the other writers on the lot to get a good healthy glance at—as a perfect example of an A-1 picture story.

A certain young Warner player told the world recently that he was all fed up with Hollywood blondes. In fact, he was sick of Hollywood gals of any type. So just recently there came into his life a debutante from an eastern town—and oh, so nice! She came into his life in more ways than one—and at the moment the actor wishes he'd never laid eyes on her. He made such a startling discovery after they became "engaged"—that he bounced right back to the local beauties—and is doing very well!

New York REVIEWS

"TWENTIETH CENTURY

Columbia prod.; director, Howard Hawks; writers, Charles MacArthur, Ben Hecht and Charles Mulholland.

Radio City Music Hall

Mirror: Everyone concerned in this screen version of the Hecht-MacArthur Broadway hit seems to have been in love with his work. Zest and spirit went into its production and it represents a rollicking actors' carnival, speedy and diverting.

World-Telegram: A wild-eyed, rattle-brained, hilariously amusing picture. It is without doubt one of the most impish, devastatingly satirical, downright amusing films that have come along in weeks. John Barrymore is brilliant and excellent work is contributed by all the supporting players.

News: Charles MacArthur and Ben Hecht have transferred their stage satire to the screen intact. All the screamingly funny situations of the play are retained and a number of new ones added to the picture. Howard Hawks, who directed the picture, keeps his players in action constantly and is responsible for turning out a first class production.

Journal: With an excellent supporting cast and good direction of the amusing Ben Hecht-Charles MacArthur dialogue, the new film is hilarious entertainment. It's grand entertainment, smartly done and swiftly paced.

American: An utterly mad, devastating, uproarious riot of mirthfulness. As a stage vehicle it induced hysterical paralysis among our most hardened theatregoers. As a picture its screaming hilarity tom-toms a tattoo upon the risibilities in a fever of insane fun.

Post: Not in a long while has John Barrymore had a role more suited to his extravagant humors. The picture could stand cutting. It is overdetailed in the opening sequences and it misses the frenzied tempo of the stage play.

Sun: It is one of the most entertaining talkies of the season, thanks largely to the efforts of John Barrymore, who proved that he is as much a surefire comedian as he ever was.

Herald-Tribune: "Twentieth Century," one of the brightest exhibits of last season, has lost none of its sardonic hilarity on the screen. You will find it an extremely funny comedy, distinguished by one of the most brilliant performances John Barrymore has given during a long and illustrious career.

Times: Messrs. Hecht and MacArthur have made certain changes in doing this task, but it seems a pity that they were tempted to stray occasionally too far from the realm of restrained comedy and indulge their fancy for boisterous humor.

Rights of 'Miracle' Still in Legal Tangle

New York.—Joseph Hazen, legal representative in Europe for Warner Brothers, arrives here on the Champlain today to discuss the details of "The Miracle" production with Hal Wallis and Jake Wilk.

Warners have been trying for months to clear the title to this play so that they can produce it, but it is still rather a mess.

Two For Monogram

Monogram puts "Shock" into production next week and, if "Jane Eyre" can be cast in time, will have two starters. Roy Pomeroy will direct "Shock," on which he and Madeline Ruthven completed the script yesterday. Ralph Forbes is starred.

Kelly and Saal in New Producing Firm

New York.—In spite of their denials that they will produce a series of pictures at the Biograph studio with Consolidated backing, Burt Kelly and William Saal have formed the Select Productions Inc. and are scheduling twelve pictures.

The first to go into work will be a Dashiell Hammett story and negotiations are on with Walter Huston to play the lead before he leaves for Colorado next month. Burnett Hershey is doing the adaptation.

Central Labor Council To Discuss Boycott

The Los Angeles Central Labor Council has asked representatives of all the union Locals connected with the picture industry to attend a special meeting of the Council tonight at which the subject of a proposed boycott of Paramount and Columbia pictures will be discussed.

Some time ago the Council passed a resolution calling for the boycott on the grounds that the two studios were unfair to craftsmen of the building trades in connection with new building projects. Paramount issued a statement denying this.

Shumate on 'Tec Yarn

Harold Shumate has been assigned to write the fourth police-detective story, "By Persons Unknown," which Columbia puts into work next week. Ralph Bellamy has the lead and Irving Briskin produces.

'Blind Date' Delayed

Columbia has postponed the start of "Blind Date" until next week and has returned the script to Ethel Hill for revisions. Roy William Neill will direct.

'TWIN HUSBANDS' EFFECTIVE, INTERESTING AND WELL MADE

Story, Direction, Acting, All Good

"TWIN HUSBANDS"
(Invincible)

Direction .....Frank R. Strayer
Authors: Robert Ellis and Anthony Coldewey.
Photography .....Andy Andersen
Art Direction.....Ed Jewell
Cast: John Miljan, Shirley Grey, Monroe Owsley, Hale Hamilton, Robert Elliott, Maurice Black, William Franklin and Winson Benge.

"Twin Husbands" is a distinct triumph for Invincible Pictures and for Maury Cohen, producer. It is a picture that stacks up favorably against almost any film that isn't a million dollar epic.

For originality of story, strength of direction and fluency of acting, it is definitely effective. No amateurish awkwardness or hesitancy in any department is discernible.

It is a charming, sophisticated, civilized story of a gentleman crook, John Miljan, a big guy—called "The Sparrow" by an admiring underworld. A minor crook, Monroe Owsley, is unfortunate enough to shanghai the Sparrow into posing as the husband of a widow he wants to rob. Inasmuch as nobody knows the husband is dead, and the Sparrow bears a remarkable resemblance to him, the job looks like a cinch until Miljan falls in love with his "wife" and manages to outwit Owsley. By a series of clever manipulations he convinces everybody that he really IS the husband, and he saves the large fortune from the designs of the villain. Of course, he reforms and wins Shirley Grey and everything is swell.

John Miljan plays easily and with sure intelligence. His looks, his voice and his subtle humor make his part outstanding. Shirley Grey is charming, and Owsley is sufficiently distasteful as the crooked secretary. Hale Hamilton is splendid as the weak administrator of the estate, who bounces with ease to whatever side seems to be winning; Robert Elliott is well cast as one of the Sparrow's fake policemen, and Wilson Benge has a grand part as the butler. Maurice Black and William Franklin are seen briefly but to advantage in small roles.

Frank R. Strayer directed beautifully. He had good material to work with. The original story is by Robert Ellis and Anthony Coldewey, and Andy Andersen photographed. Ed Jewell's are direction is noteworthy.

Don't be afraid of this independent production. It's OK with no reservations.

Joan Blondell Wins Nash Baby Star Trophy

Joan Blondell last night was awarded the C. W. Nash trophy for the Wampas Baby Star in the past three years who has shown the greatest advance in her profession.

The presentation was made at a party thrown by the Wampas at the Elks' Club. John LeRoy Johnston made the presentation speech, Mr. Nash being unable to attend.

Columbia Declares Dividend on Pfd.

New York.—Columbia Pictures yesterday declared its regular quarterly dividend of seventy-five cents a share on its preferred stock. The dividend is payable on June 1.

New Pictures on B'way This Week

New York.—Five new pictures and four holdovers constitute the menu for patrons of the Broadway picture houses this week. "Change of Heart" goes into the Music Hall tomorrow, with the condensed version of "Madame Butterfly," the first opera at the house, on the stage. On the same day "Crime Doctor" opens at the Rialto.

On Friday "Glamour" comes to the Roxy, "Thirty Day Princess" to the Paramount, and "In Love With Life" to the Casino.

The holdovers are "Manhattan Melodrama," "Hitler's Reign of Terror," "We're Not Dressing" and "Twenty Million Sweethearts."

'Burn 'Em Up Barnes' To Be Made Three Ways

Nat Levine will shoot "Burn 'Em Up Barnes" for three types of release when it goes into work at Mack Sennett's tomorrow. Picture will be a 12-chapter serial, a two-episode short for the start with 10 episodes following, and a regular eight-reel feature. Story has been planned with definite breaks to meet the special requirements.

Bertholon Sells Yarn

"Dames and Dynamite," an original by George Bertholon, has been bought by Robert Welsh for Monogram's August production. Bertholon will supervise his own story.

Moss-Schary at Para.

Paul Moss and Dore Schary joined the Paramount writing staff yesterday. Former goes on "The Big Broadcast of 1934" while the latter will script "Mississippi."

Friedlander Promoted

Anzel Friedlander, former assistant director at Universal, has been elevated to a spot as assistant associate producer on serials for the company.

Agents Sign Three

Tom Moore, John Marsden and Garry Owen have signed managerial contracts with the O'Reilly and Mann office.

Berman After 'Phantom'

Pandro Berman is negotiating for the rights to "Phantom of the Opera" for Radio. Picture starred Lon Chaney in 1925.

Briskin Goes North

Irving Briskin left by train yesterday for Vancouver. He will be gone ten days.

Cut Price Complaint To Grievance Board

H. M. Popkin, proprietor of the Crystal Theatre, 2806 Whittier boulevard, yesterday filed a complaint with the Los Angeles Grievance Board against Abe Levy, a Mr. Mitchell, a Mr. Titus and three South Main street movie theatres, charging them with failing to maintain the minimum admission price specified in their exhibitor-distributor contracts.

Specifically, the charge is that at the Muse, Rosslyn and Wonderland theatres, alleged to be run by Levy, Mitchell and Titus, the admission price has been cut to five cents, whereas the contract calls for a minimum price of ten cents. The shows, the complaint charges, are changed two and three times a week. It was understood that two of the houses play double bills and one triple bills. Hearing of the case is set for next Tuesday.

Beauties Rush For Jobs As 'Goldwyn Girls'

More than 300 girls showed up at United Artists last night, the first day of a series of interviews in an effort to secure a new set of "Goldwyn Girls" for the Eddie Cantor picture.

Bob McIntyre singled out those who most nearly met the requirements and will make his final selections after more are interviewed tomorrow and Tuesday and Thursday of next week.

'People Will Talk' For Ruggles-Boland

Listing it as the third production to team Charlie Ruggles and Mary Boland, Paramount yesterday purchased "People Will Talk," an original by Ralph Spence.

Kent Taylor and Ida Lupino will be in the cast and Norman McLeod will direct.

Gerrard on 'Fountain'

Henry Gerrard, cameraman on "Little Women," has been assigned to photograph "The Fountain," Radio's next Ann Harding starring vehicle. He leaves for Pine Crest today for a week's vacation before starting shooting.

Liam O'Flaherty Here

Liam O'Flaherty arrived yesterday from Ireland and is headed for a try at writing screen plays. He was signed yesterday to an M. C. Levee managerial contract.

Lead For Standing

Sir Guy Standing was set by Paramount yesterday for the leading role in "The End of the World," the Vina Delmar story.

Bing Buys a Fighter

Bing Crosby went from horse-raising to prize-fighting yesterday, purchasing a half interest in Welterweight Freddie Steele for $7,500.

Not that it MATTERS
by Helen Gwynn

The Beverly Hills Community Players uncovered a nice piece of playwrighting when they brought forth "Bitter Harvest" the other night. It's the story of Byron and his great love for his half-sister which succeeded in blighting his life in England. Catherine Turney reveals herself as a writer of excellent dialogue and possessing a good sense of the dramatic. Unfortunately, no one bothered to do much cutting and, as a play, it is slightly too much cluttered up with characters and incidents that cause it to drag considerably in the middle stretches. However, the play has no faults that cannot be easily remedied and there is good reason to suppose that Miss Turney's efforts could be rewarded with a Broadway showing. Byron may have been tough to live with, but the man was always good copy and the incest angle, while it would never get past the Little White Father for pictures, is something to make chatter over the bridge tables.

Leslie Fenton (in the kind of a part John Barrymore used to thrive on in the Vitaphone days) gives a well-balanced performance of a man half mad, half genius. In fact, he did so well in one of his madder moments, that his agent was moved to remark, "And that's for nothing!" Of the other players, Jeannette Nolan was the only one who crashed through with a really professional performance. The gal's very good.

Probably the most nervous performance of the evening was Ann Dvorak's, in an audience role. The poor gal was having the jitters. Herbert Wilcoxon and Frances Drake (who has a cousin in the cast), Arthur Lubin, Eddie Buzzell, Ruth Donnelly and Glenda Farrell gave out with recommendations. Glenda Farrell originally said the show was "swell", then decided she was trying to get away from Warner dialogue and said it was "a delightful evening in the theatre." But the gal is still chewing gum.

Hepburn is certainly making up for lost time with her bright sayings to the press. A New York paper the other day wrote as follows: "When Miss Hepburn returned, she had her traveling companion, Miss Laura Harding, give a reporter a Mexican peso and commanded: 'You give that to Walter Winchell. It's worth thirty cents. That's what I think of Mr. Winchell.'" And Irving Hoffman comments bitterly, "That guy Winchell can't help but make dough!" Arthur Kober is back looking over New York night life once more before coming back to the coast and taking Lillian Kober to the play. Lillian has sold her play to Herman Shumlin .... There's a gal named Marion Martin whose vocation is playing the chief nude at the Hollywood restaurant, who's got the boys commenting on her future possibilities on the screen because she looks so good in the Woolcott short now at the Rivoli.

IATSE LOCAL KILLS OFF PLANNED ASC MERGER

the camera work. The charter would have given it control of location work, which is what has made the union the fly in the picture ointment ever since the strike, when it lost its power in the major studios.

One vital factor responsible for the cooling of the union toward the proposal was the possible reaction that the 35,000 members of the IATSE might have to the turning over of charter to an organization that had fought the union during the strike, and which the members still feel is opposing it at every turn.

"We feel that perhaps the thousands of IATSE men in the locals throughout the country, who have been affected considerably by the loss of our strike, might rightly take an attitude that would be anything but a pleasing one," explained a union man close to the situation. "So, although it is possible that the proposal may be presented to the annual convention in Kentucky next month, I really doubt it. That would be the only way such a merger could ever go through, for the general membership must be considered.

"Then, too, we feel that the demands of the ASC far overbalance any possible benefits that our members might receive by the merger. As a matter of fact, there is a lot of doubt as to whether or not the men would benefit at all, for it has been rumored for weeks that the ASC plan is to try to eliminate a lot of cameramen who are now in Hollywood, on the grounds that there are too many men for the amount of work.

"We of Local 659 are confident that our organization is here to stay. We have given many years of earnest effort to building it up, and just because we lost a strike and are temporarily out of power in the major studios does not mean that we will always be that way."

So the situation is doomed to remain as it has been for some time, with the ASC in command of the camera work in the major studios, the union still working with the independents, and with the location problem a constant headache to the producers, for the A.F. of L. affiliation of the IATSE has made it necessary for cameramen to carry a union card on locations.

White Directing Again

Jules White personally will direct the last of the current series of George Sidney-Charles Murray shorts for Columbia, "Pay Dirt," which goes into work next week. Ewart Adamson has written the script.

Para. Writer Arrives

Charles Brackett arrived by plane yesterday from New York to take up his two picture ticket with Paramount, where he will write dialogue on "Her Master's Voice" first.

DeSylva-MGM Can't Agree on Contract

New York.—Buddy DeSylva and MGM cannot agree on the deal which would bring DeSylva in as a producer of musical pictures because of his insistence on a six months contract. DeSylva has gone to Atlantic City to work on his forthcoming musical with Sid Silvers.

Darrow Board Wants To Become Part of NRA

Washington—The Darrow Recovery Review Board yesterday made a bid to become a part of the NRA when it sent a letter to Alvin Brown, of that organization, requesting the co-operation of the NRA itself and the loan of J. N. Freeman, one of the NRA officers.

Gen. Johnson said this was the first time the Darrow board had sought NRA help.

New Term For Herbert

Hugh Herbert, the reformed writer who has been doing comedy for Warners the past 18 months, yesterday received a six-months extension on his acting ticket. He has just finished in "Dames."

Lipman to Universal

William R. Lipman was signed by Universal yesterday to write the screen play for the Damon Runyon story, "Ransom—One Million Dollars." Eph Asher is handling the production. Harry DeShon set the ticket.

College Head Asks 'Control' of Films

Washington.—Another angle of the "New Deal" hit motion pictures yesterday when Dr. Arthur E. Morgan, president of Antioch College and chairman of the Tennessee Valley Authority, advocated putting the press, motion pictures and radio under some form of social "control" that would represent a trusteeship in the best interests of all the people.

He doesn't mean governmental control, he says, but some means whereby the alleged commercial exploitations of newspapers, pictures and radio could be controlled. Just how this can be done, he doesn't explain.

Pacific National On Wrong Side of Fence

Through an unintentional error, not on the part of the Reporter, this paper yesterday stated that the Pacific National Theatres, Inc., had filed an appeal with the Code Authority from a decision of the Los Angeles Grievance Board ordering them to stop the practice of "two for ones" and the giving of cash inducements at the National theatre.

It was the Pacific National Theatres which made the complaint against the National on behalf of the Seville theatre of Chula Vista.

CODE AUTHORITY MAKE-UP QUESTIONED IN FWC CASE

Speculation was rife yesterday along Film Row as to which members of the Code Authority will and which will not be permitted to hear the appeal of Fox West Coast and Principal Theatres from the decision of the Los Angeles Grievance Board when it is filed and comes up for a hearing in New York.

The Film Code rules in Article 2, Section 9, that no member of the Code Authority shall sit on any matter involving his company's or his own interest directly and not as a class: In such case the Authority shall designate an alternate of the same class, but not of the same company, to replace the member.

It was the concensus of opinion among theatre men yesterday that Sidney Kent will be barred from sitting on the case, due to his connection with Fox, which, they point out, would make the case one of interest to his company.

George Schaefer, of Paramount, Nicholas M. Schenck, of MGM, and Harry M. Warner, of Warner Brothers, are three other Code Authority members about whom the theatre men are wondering. As it is their product, along with Fox pictures, that the theatre chain is accused of over-buying, there is some speculation as to whether or not they will be barred from the case also.

Legal counsel for Fox West Coast and Principal Theatres continued yesterday working on the preparation of the appeal, and it had not been filed at the close of business yesterday.

White Wants Warner House For 'Scandals'

New York.—George White is negotiating with Warner Brothers to take over their Hollywood Theatre in New York for his coming production of "Scandals."

'Monte Cristo' Starts

Edward Small puts "The Count of Monte Cristo" into work today at Pathe, with Rowland V. Lee directing. Robert Donat and Elissa Landi have the leads, with Louis Calhern, Sidney Blackmer, O. P. Heggie, Luis Alberni and Georgia Caine in the cast.

Scott on 'By Your Leave'

Allan Scott has been assigned to write the continuity on "By Your Leave," which H. N. Swanson will produce for Radio. Nils Asther will have the lead. No director has been set as yet.

White Back at Radio

Sam White has returned to Radio after undergoing a tonsil operation. He will direct the Ted Fio-Rito short which goes into work by the end of the month, with Lee Marcus producing.

Haley With Rowland

William Rowland has borrowed Jack Haley from Charles R. Rogers for he lead in his picture for Columbia, "The Girl Friend." Rodgers and Hart are writing new songs for their operetta. Herbert Fields wrote the book.

The New Plays

"MEMORY"

Presented and staged by the author, Myron C. Fagan, at the Biltmore Theatre; settings by Carl G. Cooper and Rita Glover; with Helen Morgan, Jackie Searl, Kay Hammond, Bryant Washburn, Vera Lewis, Leon Waycoff, Mia Marvin, Rafael Corio, Frances Routa, Zezan Anglan and Cyclone.

A good play idea nearly gets lost at the Biltmore in the shuffle of two acts of dull and pointless conversation. Helen Morgan and Jackie Searl come to the rescue of Myron C. Fagan's play "Memory" and in the four short scenes of the last act make the audience forget what it has suffered by trite and boring situations and conversation in the first two acts.

Helen Morgan, with her mop of curly hair and her husky voice, can call Los Angeles home any time she wants to. And with a glow of civic pride we point to Jackie Searl, who gives one of the finest performances that we have seen by a child actor.

The play, however, does not begin to have interest until the first scene of the last act. If it weren't for missing Helen Morgan's second-act song, "A Fool There Was," one might drop in about ten-thirty and catch the best of it. To save you the trouble of the first two acts, here is the situation: Leon Waycoff plays a young playwright and composer, very much in love with his wife, Kay Hammond.

Kay, however, is being lured away from her home and husband by her mother, Vera Lewis, who has social aspirations for her daughter. Into the breach made by the wandering wife comes Helen Morgan, musical comedy star, for whom the playwright writes a show. While he is writing, he falls in love with her, and she with him.

But, meanwhile, she has won the heart of Waycoff's eight-year-old son, made a pal of him, and told him that if he ever was in trouble he could come to her. When the penitent wife returns, at the beginning of the third act, she finds a husband who wants his freedom to marry the actress. The young son finds out that there is to be a divorce, and, not knowing who the woman is, comes to Helen Morgan, his pal, to beg her to talk to his father and not let him break up their home. By this time the play is moving fast, and the situations are human and throat-catching.

"Memory" is well cast. All the players give capable performances, in spite of the fact that they have to struggle with long and lustreless speeches.

Writers to Boulder Dam

Sy Bartlett, adaptor of "The Cinch," leaves for Boulder Dam today with Dan Templin, the former Las Vegas news editor who wrote the yarn. It's a color-absorbing expedition for the Warner writers

Warners Start Two Pictures This Week

Warner Brothers launch two feature productions this week, "Kansas City Princess" today and "The Dragon Murder Case" Friday.

"Princess" is probably Joan Blondell's final pre-baby picture. New members of the cast are Gordon Westcott and Osgood Perkins. The latter was about to return to New York when cast as a French detective for the film.

Late recruits for "The Dragon Murder Case" are Robert Warwick, George Stone and William B. Davidson. Lucky Humberstone directs.

"Hey Sailor!" the current Cagney, is due to wind up this week. Robert Barrat has been engaged for final scenes.

Bletcher and 35 Girls In Warner Two-reeler

Billy Bletcher, comedian, is picked to work in front of the 36 girls in Warners' two-reel Technicolor, "What, No Men?" The short will be made at the old Sunset lot, apparently so the shapely 36 won't disrupt studio routine.

Mrs. Reid to Monogram

Monogram yesterday signed Mrs. Wallace Reid to produce "The Red Head," from a novel by Vera Brown. The picture will not go into production until July.

It's Little Things In Life That Count

Harry Albiez, MGM prop man, accompanied W. S. Van Dyke on his picture expeditions, handled wild animals and came through without a scratch, but he opened a locker yesterday and was bitten on the finger by a mouse.

Appeal Up to Code Authority Friday

New York.—The first hearing to be given by the Code Authority on an appeal will be held Friday. The complaint is that of the Saxe Amusement Co., of Milwaukee, and involves charges of over-buying.

Jane Wyatt Reports

Jane Wyatt, who flew to the coast for a Universal test last January, landed here for the second time last night. She will start work on her contract, probably in the lead of William Wyler's production of "Fanny."

Warners Buy Novel

Erle Stanley Gardner's novel, "The Case of the Curious Bride," a blackmailing twist on the Enoch Arden situation, has been bought by Warners. No assignments mentioned.

Term For Toby Wing

Paramount lifted Toby Wing's option yesterday and the player stays on with the studio for another session.

agents, producers and talent. B. B. Kahane is chairman, with George Frank, Frank Lloyd, Adolphe Menjou and Ernest Pascal as members.

The second committee will study the problem of regulating motion picture employment agencies. It consists of Winfield Sheehan, chairman; Berton Churchill and M. C. Levee. With registration of agents demanded in New York, it was felt that the question should be looked into thoroughly here. Both committees will report back on Tuesday, May 22.

Temporary office space was offered the committee by Jack Warner in the Warner Theatre building, Hollywood. This will be used temporarily until John C. Flinn, secretary of the Code Authority, returns, at which time a permanent office will be selected.

Wells Root acted as chairman yesterday. Starting with Trem Carr, the chairmanship will be rotated among the members alphabetically, beginning at the next meeting. The members of the committee are Berton Churchill, Emanuel Cohen, George Frank, B. B. Kahane, Frank Lloyd, J. M. Nickolaus, Ernest Pascal, Wells Root, W. R. Sheehan and Jack Warner.

PAR. IN KUHN-LOEB CARE

TRADE VIEWS by W. R. WILKERSON

•THE coming production season will witness one of the greatest fights for name draws, for stars whose drawing power at the box-offices means big (or even little) business, that has ever been staged in this business. All because the exhibitor has given up all hope of getting really big drawing pictures, entertainment that will draw even over star names, and has now sent out the word that the pictures he books, as bad as they may be in entertainment qualities, MUST HAVE NAMES, must have casts that are favored by the ticket buyer.

And the ticket buyer is in pretty much the same frame of mind as the exhibitor. As a matter of fact, it is the reflection from that quarter that has caused the theatre men to make their "name" demands. Mr. and Mrs. Entertainment Seeker also have given up all idea of trying to find screen entertainment, so they are making their pictures purchases on the strength of their favorites.

All this will result in the fight for names and in more money being paid to artists during the next twelve months than was ever doled out to them before, because there are too few names, because there has been too little development, because of too few good pictures. There has never been a star made, nor will there ever one be made, except through the medium of good pictures. A star may have everything that any star is required to have, but unless he or she is mounted in good entertainment, the drawing power will always remain nil. And the rise of Katharine Hepburn is no exception to this rule. You may not have liked her pictures, the majority of them, but the stories gave her plenty of opportunities to display attractive qualities, and up to her last picture—"Spitfire"—Katie was one of our greatest headfliners.

So, with the demand for names and the very meagre supply, maybe our producers will set out to develop some new ones through the medium of GOOD PICTURES. Maybe they will forget about that BILLION DOLLARS that will be spent on any kind of screen fare, together with the knowledge that it costs less than ONE HUNDRED AND SEVENTY FIVE MILLION to get that BILLION, and go out with

Loew's Net Expected To Go Over $4 a Share

New York.—The prognostications of Wall Street interests about the showing that will be made by Loew's Inc. in the annual report on August 1 are strongly optimistic. It is confidently expected expected that the net will exceed $4 a share.

Lesser-Zanft Will Do Six with O'Brien

Sol Lesser and John Zanft yesterday announced that they will produce six pictures within the next eighteen months, with George O'Brien as the star. The company is called the George O'Brien Pictures Corporation and the pictures will be released through Fox.

This new project will not interfere in any way with Lesser's connection with Principal Pictures nor with the conduct of the John Zanft agency.

Hecht-MacArthur To Get Savo For Five Years

New York.—The deal between Jimmy Savo and the Ben Hecht-Charles MacArthur producing combination, is all set, although not yet signed.

It involves a five-year contract for the comedian, with three pictures slated for the first year. The first will start in August.

Warners has tossed "Napoleon" on the shelf, fighting shy of laying $750,000 on the line to produce it.

Depinet and Sisk Due

Ned Depinet and Robert F. Sisk, RKO director of publicity and advertising, arrive from New York this morning.

Wiseman Quits Bondholders Committee To Work Out Plan For Reorganization Of Corp.

New York.—Sir William Wiseman, a partner in Kuhn, Loeb and Company and a Paramount director, has retired from the Paramount-Publix Bondholders Protective Committee to work on a plan for the reorganization of Paramount-Publix. This plan is being supported by the committee, which has engaged Kuhn, Loeb to handle the matter.

This information was contained in a letter sent to bondholders yesterday. The letter further states that an agreement has been reached for the withdrawal of the $178,000,000 claim against Paramount, which involves the Paramount building.

If a comprehensive plan acceptable to the creditors can be worked out, retaining substantially all present subsidiaries, data thus far collected warrants the belief that assets and earnings will be adequate to afford a substantial recovery on all provable claims.

In conclusion, the letter indicates that the bondholders committee and other creditors have agreed that the Kuhn, Loeb firm is the best fitted to handle such reorganization plans.

Regan Succeeds Agnew

New York.—Neil Agnew, the new general sales manager for Paramount, has appointed Charles Regan, of Chicago, Western divisional sales manager, the post formerly held by Agnew himself.

Zanuck Buys 'Clive'

New York.—Darryl Zanuck has purchased "Clive of India," a biographical story of the famous British soldier and statesman.

New Union Tries to Sign Theatre Help

New York.—Another union has entered the theatrical and motion picture field to add a few more labor complications. It is called the Association of Theatrical Agents and Managers and it has been chartered by the American Federation of Labor.

The union is not only making a drive to enroll managers, press agents, treasurers and ticket sellers, but it is said to be threatening that any such employees not enrolled by August 1 will be unable to get a job.

Bill Seiter Signs New Contract With Radio

William Seiter is a Radio director on a permanent basis with the signing of an 18-month contract yesterday. He has previously been engaged by the picture.

After "We're Rich Again," which is supposed to be in the cans by May 15, Seiter will direct the Wheeler and Woolsey feature, starting next month.

New York REVIEWS

"MANHATTAN MELODRAMA"

MGM prod.; director, W. S. Van Dyke; writers, Arthur Caesar, Oliver H. P. Garrett, Joseph L. Mankiewicz.

Capitol Theatre

Mirror: A colorful and exciting account of a metropolis and its influence on two youngsters. Admirably acted, skilfully directed and lavishly produced, it is a highly entertaining melodrama.

News: A fast moving picture. It is packed with thrills, love and many spectacular incidents. From the beginning, you know that the picture promises plenty of excitement and it lives up to that promise. W. S. Van Dyke has directed the picture with force.

Times: In "Manhattan Melodrama" one finds a mechanical plot which is scarcely worthy of the cast, which includes Clark Gable, William Powell, Myrna Loy and Leo Carrillo. The story was written by Arthur Caesar, who is evidently a better hand at comedy than such sturdy stuff.

American: A pulsing saga of New York's seething sidewalks, rife with romance, with thrills rampant, this colorful, exciting drama of the Big City is made-to-measure motion picture entertainment, tailored to perfection for popular approval by the expert cinematic craftsmen of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

Post: "Manhattan Melodrama" if you leave out a couple of murders, is actually a love idyll, as tender as "Little Women"; a nostalgic adieu to the good old days of Al Capone and Arnold Rothstein. It is a formula story, however. But the actors do a great deal to make it seem plausible.

Journal: There's grand entertainment at the Capitol Theatre this week. Excellently acted by its three stars and smartly turned out, "Manhattan Melodrama" teems with all the excitement and color that make up the city from which the picture takes its name. The background is vivid, the dialogue crisp and flavorous and action moves swiftly under the expert direction of W. S. Van Dyke.

Times: "Manhattan Melodrama" is gloomy but interesting. It will bring tears to the eyes of even sophisticated movie-goers.

World-Telegram: A keen, adult, exciting melodrama. "Manhattan Melodrama" is one of the hardest hitting and most entertaining examples of that type yet produced. The cast is admirable, all the players contributing excellent performances. And so, too, is W. S. Van Dyke's direction. A fine, electric, arresting piece of entertainment.

Court Denies Non-Suit Asked For by Warners

At the hearing in Superior Court yesterday of Sam Goldwyn's suit by which he is attempting to secure an injunction prohibiting Warner Brothers' continued employment of Busby Berkeley, Judge Frank Smith overruled a motion for non-suit, filed by the defendants.

Warners then opened their defense and entered a deposition from Harry Warren, of the Warren and Dubin song-writing team. It will be read today. Berkeley and Mervyn LeRoy are expected to testify today.

Darrow Report An 'Unknown Soldier'

Washington.—The report of the Darrow Recovery Review Board, which slaps eight industries and the picture business the hardest, seems destined to sink gracefully into innocuous desuetude. In other words, if it ever sees the light of day in the papers, official Washington will be greatly surprised.

The report, which was submitted to the President last week, is now on its way to the Department of Justice, the Federal Trade Commission and perhaps some of the other governmental agencies which are always convenient when burial is desired. The reason given is that the report is too voluminous to be turned over to the press, and digests and abstracts are essential.

The President has not yet accepted the resignation of John F. Sinclair, the minority member of the Darrow Board, but even if Sinclair were out, he could not talk about the report because, under a law passed last year, it is a severe criminal offense to divulge any state secret or any confidential Government business upon leaving Government employ. So, if the report ever becomes public, it will be because the President himself gives it out.

'Scarlet Empress' Has Premiere in London

London.—Paramount's "The Scarlet Empress," with Marlene Dietrich starred, had its world premiere here last night before a distinguished audience which crowded the Carlton.

The company expects to gain considerable prestige by throwing this showing and makes it possible to set an earlier British release.

Double Job For James

Besides supervising two pictures, Rian James has added a writing job to his Universal duties. He is handling the script on "Transient Lady," which Edward Buzzell directs, and supervising "Walking On Air" and "Gift of Gab."

'THE THIN MAN' IS SURE-FIRE; 'MERRY WIVES' DISAPPOINTS

Writing, Direction, Acting, All Grand

"THE THIN MAN"
(MGM)

Direction .....W. S. Van Dyke
Author .....Dashiell Hammett
Screen Play.....Albert Hackett and Frances Goodrich
Photography.....James Wong Howe
Cast: William Powell, Myrna Loy, Edward Ellis, Maureen O'Sullivan, Nat Pendleton, Minna Gombell, Porter Hall, Henry Wadsworth, William Henry, Harold Huber, Cesar Romero, Natalie Moorhead, Edward Brophy, Cyril Thornton.

A smart honey, a sophisticated wow. A murder story with a brilliant cast, a brilliant script, brilliant direction, and photography that tells the story in no mean terms. Don't spare the enthusiasm on this one because if the book had thousands of readers, this picture will have millions of customers—well satisfied and with that well-fed look.

There isn't any sense in going into the murder mystery part of the story. Suffice it to say that all the characters are there and the person you least expect turns out to be the guilty man. BUT let it be shouted from the roof-tops that the writing, acting and direction of those characters all spell movie with a capital "M", and so let us hasten the good work of handing out the bouquets.

Albert Hackett and Frances Goodrich have written a screen play for this best seller that never lets down on the humor or the quality of that humor. For sheer "nut" dialogue and characterization, you'll have to wait a long time before their sustained record is broken.

William Powell has the time of his life as that elegant detective, Nick Charles, who never finds himself sober enough to have it interfere with his work. Powell is great and your patrons will revel with him in the best role he's had since "Manhattan Melodrama," which is by way of informing you that there is no let-down in the man's capabilities or for his fans.

Myrna Loy makes positive the fact that she should stick to being a comedienne. Edward Brophy as Morelli does a scene that stops the show and rocks the house with laughter. Minna Gombell is grand as the one person definitely registered as insane, even though everyone in the cast is a little bit mad. Maureen O'Sullivan, Nat Pendleton, Edward Ellis, Cesar Romero and Porter Hall must each be separately mentioned for their excellent contributions. And Henry Wadsworth is attractive enough to warrant a part that would give him greater latitude.

And now for Mr. Van Dyke, who has yet to do anything slipshod in the way of picture-making. His pace is steadfastly on the move. His comedy sequences are beautifully timed and the last laugh gotten out of them without obvious squeezing. He's a production master. And hand in hand with him is the camera work of Jimmy Howe, which is perfect for the thrills and chills and presents some beautiful portraits.

Fine Cast Balked By Labored Story

"MERRY WIVES OF RENO"
(Warners)

Direction .....H. Bruce Humberstone
Author .....Robert Lord
Art Direction.....Jack Okey
Photography .....Ernest Haller
Cast: Margaret Lindsay, Donald Woods, Guy Kibbee, Glenda Farrell, Hugh Herbert, Frank McHugh, Rosco Ates, Ruth Donnelly and Hobart Cavanaugh.

In spite of the fact that a grand cast gives its all, "Merry Wives of Reno" (Warners) will prove a liability in most houses.

Nothing is worse than a farce badly done, and while this picture has moments that get laughs, the thing as a whole is labored, forced and tiresome. Hugh Herbert is the one bright spot, although his pet sheep muscles in on his fun.

The cast works hard, but each member, usually highly effective, is lost in the general shuffle. Herbert's lines and business are funny, but nothing else rates a nod.

It's all a mix-up involving three couples and two overcoats. Donald Woods, husband of Margaret Lindsay, goes to Glenda Farrell's apartment to sell her a boat. While there, Guy Kibbee, her boy friend, arrives, and then her husband, Hugh Herbert.. Both Kibbee and Woods exit down the fire escape, leaving their coats.

And so their wives go to Reno and everybody involved follows. The rest of the film consists of parties, wrong and right bedrooms with wrong and right spouses, and the quaint machinations of a bellboy, Frank McHugh.

Margaret Lindsay is beautiful, and gives exciting promise of better work to come, in spite of her tough role. And no fault can be found with the attractive Donald Woods. Guy Kibbee and Glenda Farrell are a good team; Rosco Ates is very amusing, and Ruth Donnelly and Hobart Cavanaugh are well cast. It's Herbert's picture, though—what there is of it.

Robert Lord wrote it; H. Bruce Humberstone directed, and Ernest Haller photographed. The gowns, by Orry-Kelly, are really stunning, and the sheep is grand.

Don't be too optimistic about this one. It is definitely disappointing.

Cripples Back So Para. Gets Two Pix Working

The return of two players from the sick list yesterday allowed Paramount one new picture into work and a suspended subject back on the stages.

With Gertrude Michael back from her attack of bronchitis, William Cameron Menzies put "The Notorious Sophie Lang" before the cameras, and the return of Miriam Hopkins, after being away almost three weeks with a sprained ankle, allowed Elliott Nugent to re-start "She Loves Me Not."

'Letter' Starts May 23

Starting date for "The Scarlet Letter" is set at May 23 by Larry Darmour.

Not that it MATTERS
by Helen Gwynn

Now that "Men in White" has won the Pulitzer prize, we might as well make history out of the story of its career as a play. Approximately six years ago, Sidney Kingsley spent a month living with an interne up at Lebanon Hospital in the Bronx. The result of that sojourn was that the interne and Kingsley got together and wrote a play about life in a hospital. The play was then submitted to many producers who, each in his own way, turned it down. By some strange chance, the play fell into the hands of an interne at Mt. Sinai hospital. The interne was so impressed by the utter impossibility of some of the situations, that he decided it would be a swell idea to use it as a basis for the annual internes' show at the hospital. "Men in White" was forthwith burlesqued and scored its first hit as the funniest show ever put on by the internes of Mt. Sinai hospital.

Finally, after Kingsley had spent some time under contract to a picture company, he came back to New York and his play once more went the rounds. It reached the picture producers for backing and fell into the hands of the Warners. They would have none of it, but Doris Warner decided that, even if she had to put up some of her own money, the play would be produced. So she put up the money, the play was produced. It was approved by both public and doctors and the final stamp of approval given to its exposition of the way of an interne with a nurse as an old American custom, by being awarded the Pulitzer prize.

So far as its medical technicalities are concerned though, it is only fair to say that it's impossible to get together a group of doctors as technical advisors on a thing of that kind and get them to agree absolutely as to the proper procedure. It would seem that every doctor has his own technique. And, just as a warning, never go to see a courtroom picture with a lawyer if you want to enjoy a courtroom scene.

A friend of ours writes from New York that, as he was passing a Broadway movie house the other day, he noticed a crowd gathered in front of it. On closer inspection, the crowd turned out to be a group of Boy Scouts waiting for a good deed to happen, all talking away at a great rate. The scoutmaster blew a whistle and, when he had gotten complete silence, started a little speech. "Men," he said, "when we go inside I want you to be quiet and orderly. No talking while the picture is on. You can LAUH when the funny parts come, but otherwise I want complete silence." And the picture with the supposed FUNNY parts was "Forgotten Men!" a complete collection of the more gruesome episodes of war.

FWC FACES NEW CHARGE BY INDEPENDENT THEATRE

cata Corporation, specifically stated that when Fox West Coast went into bankruptcy in 1933, it turned the Colorado theatre back to the Colcata Corporation. However, the charges assert, when they turned back the theatre Fox West Coast retained all the pictures that had been bought for the Colorado, United Artists (Pasadena), and the Strand.

Bard charges that his organization argued that one-third of the pictures really belonged to the Colorado, but that the Fox West Coast officials refused to give them up, leaving his house in a spot that endangered the company's investment.

The complaint further charges that Fox West Coast bought up all the first-run pictures for 1933-34 of all the major companies, with the exception of Columbia and Universal, leaving an insufficient number of Class "A" pictures for a de luxe house such as the Colorado.

"We claim," reads the complaint, "that for the season of 1933-34 Fox West Coast has bought more pictures than it could reasonably use at the United Artists and the Strand, and that in order to absorb this excess they are not allowing sufficient playing time for most pictures in their size houses, and that from November 12, 1933, to April 7, 1934 (21 weeks), they used twenty-eight first run pictures in the Pasadena, a second run house."

The hearing has been set for 11 o'clock next Tuesday morning.

FWC and Principal File Appeal From Alhambra Decision

Fox West Coast Theatres and Principal Theatres yesterday filed an appeal with the Code Authority from the decision of the Los Angeles Grievance Board which found them guilty of over-buying and ordered them to turn over twenty first-run pictures to the Garfield Theatre in Alhambra.

According to a statement from John B. Bertero, counsel for the company, the appeal is based mainly on the ground that the Los Angeles Grievance Board has no authority to pass on the quality of pictures.

Mr. Bertero stated that the code forbids the over-buying of pictures, but says nothing about the quality of pictures. He further declared that it is the assertion of his organization that the Grievance Board took the view that Fox West Coast and Principal Theatres had better pictures than the complaining theatre, and on that based their decision, but that there was no evidence that they had overbough.

Notice of the appeal was formally filed with the Grievance Board, but the brief and arguments will be sent direct to the Code Authority in New York.

Laughton Due Saturday

Charles Laughton is due in town Saturday. He comes to play in MGM's "The Barretts of Wimpole Street."

Interest on Hurd Notes Raises Row

More squawks developed yesterday among members of the cameramen's union when it was learned that the present holder of the notes turned over to Howard Hurd in settlement of his contract with the union is asking interest at the rate of one per cent per month on notes which cameramen signed during the strike and which called for no interest charges.

According to note signers, the union charged interest on money loaned its members before the strike, but on money borrowed during the labor difficulty no interest was to be charged. Some union men yesterday declared that they stand ready to pay their notes as soon as they get work and are able, but stated emphatically that they will fight against paying interest.

Virginia Bruce Gets Lead in 'Jane Eyre'

Virginia Bruce picked up the threads of the past yesterday when she was signed by MGM on a term contract. Actually, the studio picked up her contract where it was dropped when she quit acting to marry John Gilbert.

She was loaned immediately to Monogram to do the lead in "Jane Eyre," which Christy Cabanne starts within the next few days. Adele Commandini wrote the screen play and Ben Verschleiser will supervise.

'Paradine Case' Set For Diana Wynyard

MGM has taken "The Paradine Case" off the shelf again and has assigned Ethel Borden to do a treatment of the story, which is planned as a Diana Wynyard vehicle.

Miss Borden arrived here from the East last week to start her writing contract at the studio.

Leigh on MGM Musical

MGM has assigned Rowland Leigh to develop "Live While You May," a musical idea by Edgar Selwyn. Brown and Freed are on the score. Picture is planned for Jeanette MacDonald and Nelson Eddy to follow "Naughty Marietta."

Santell With Rowland

William Rowland has signed Al Santell to direct "The Girl Friend," which he will produce for Columbia. Director just completed his trick at Radio, where he handled "The Life of Virgie Winters."

New Ross-Sargent Deal

MGM has extended the Ross and Sargent deal into a two-picture ticket. The Kings Club entertainers were set by Ben Lundy.

Wm. Watson to 'U'

William Watson, formerly test director for Fox, has joined Universal in the same capacity.

Up-to-the-Minute CASTINGS

Nat Pendleton for "The Defense Rests," at Columbia.

Lionel Atwill, Alan Mowbray and Reginald Denny by Universal for "One More River."

Grant Withers to "Red Rider" at Universal.

Vince Barnett for "Kansas City Princess," Warners.

Lionel Belmore and Harry Cording for "Count of Monte Cristo," Reliance, by Max Shagrin.

Eddie Gribbon for a Radio short, by Hallam Cooley.

Claudia Coleman by Bernard, Meiklejohn and McCall, and Ray Cook to "Rear Car," MGM.

John Davidson by Kingston-Harris to "Burn 'Em Up Barnes," Mascot.

Ferdinand Munier by Bernard, Meiklejohn and McCall to "Merry Widow," MGM, and "The Count of Monte Cristo," Edward Small. Wilfred Lucas to the latter picture.

Ben Bard to "100% Pure," MGM.

Lona Andre, Eddie Kane and Dorothy and Jerry Noble by Bernard, Meiklejohn and McCall for "Two Heads on One Pillow," Liberty.

Marion Gyron by Bernard, Meiklejohn and McCall for a Pete Smith short at MGM.

Barbara Barondess by Bernard, Meiklejohn and McCall to MGM's "Merry Widow."

Billy Johnson and Roy Duker for "Always Honest," Fox, by Bernard, Meiklejohn and McCall.

Mascot Preparing 14 For Production

With 14 feature scripts being prepared at present for Mascot, the four Mascot producers are jockeying their leading literary entries in a race to the starting line, with the prospect of two or more getting under way simultaneously.

Martin Cohn's No. 1 entry, "Crimson Romance," is the studio favorite in the preparedness race. Milton Krims was assigned yesterday to the final revision of Marion Orth's script. David Howard will direct.

Sig Neufeld's starter, "Came a Woman," is being groomed by Douglas Doty and George Sayre. Neufeld, like Cohn, has three scripts in preparation.

Lou Sarecky has three writers, Norman Houston, C. Edward Roberts and Maurice Hanline, readying "Waterfront Lady." After doing this and possibly "The Marines Have Landed," which Colbert Clark is writing on a by-the-picture basis, he will discuss a deal to make a block.

Louis Baum is producing two exploitation features, Earl Snell writing the first, "Young and Beautiful," the Wampas baby star round-up. Joseph Santley will direct.

'Within the Rock' Goes Into Production Today

"Within the Rock," fifth of Al Alt's dozen states righters branded as Showman Pictures, starts today on location at Crestline, near Lake Arrowhead.

Al Ray is directing a cast including Lila Lee, Creighton Chaney, Edmund Breese, Charles French and Vic Potel.

Green on Runyon Yarn

Howard J. Green, who returned from a six weeks vacation in New York last week, has been assigned to script "The Lemon Drop Kid," a Damon Runyon story, at Paramount.

CRITICS IN 10 CITIES TO SEE 'VANITIES' IN 3 DAYS

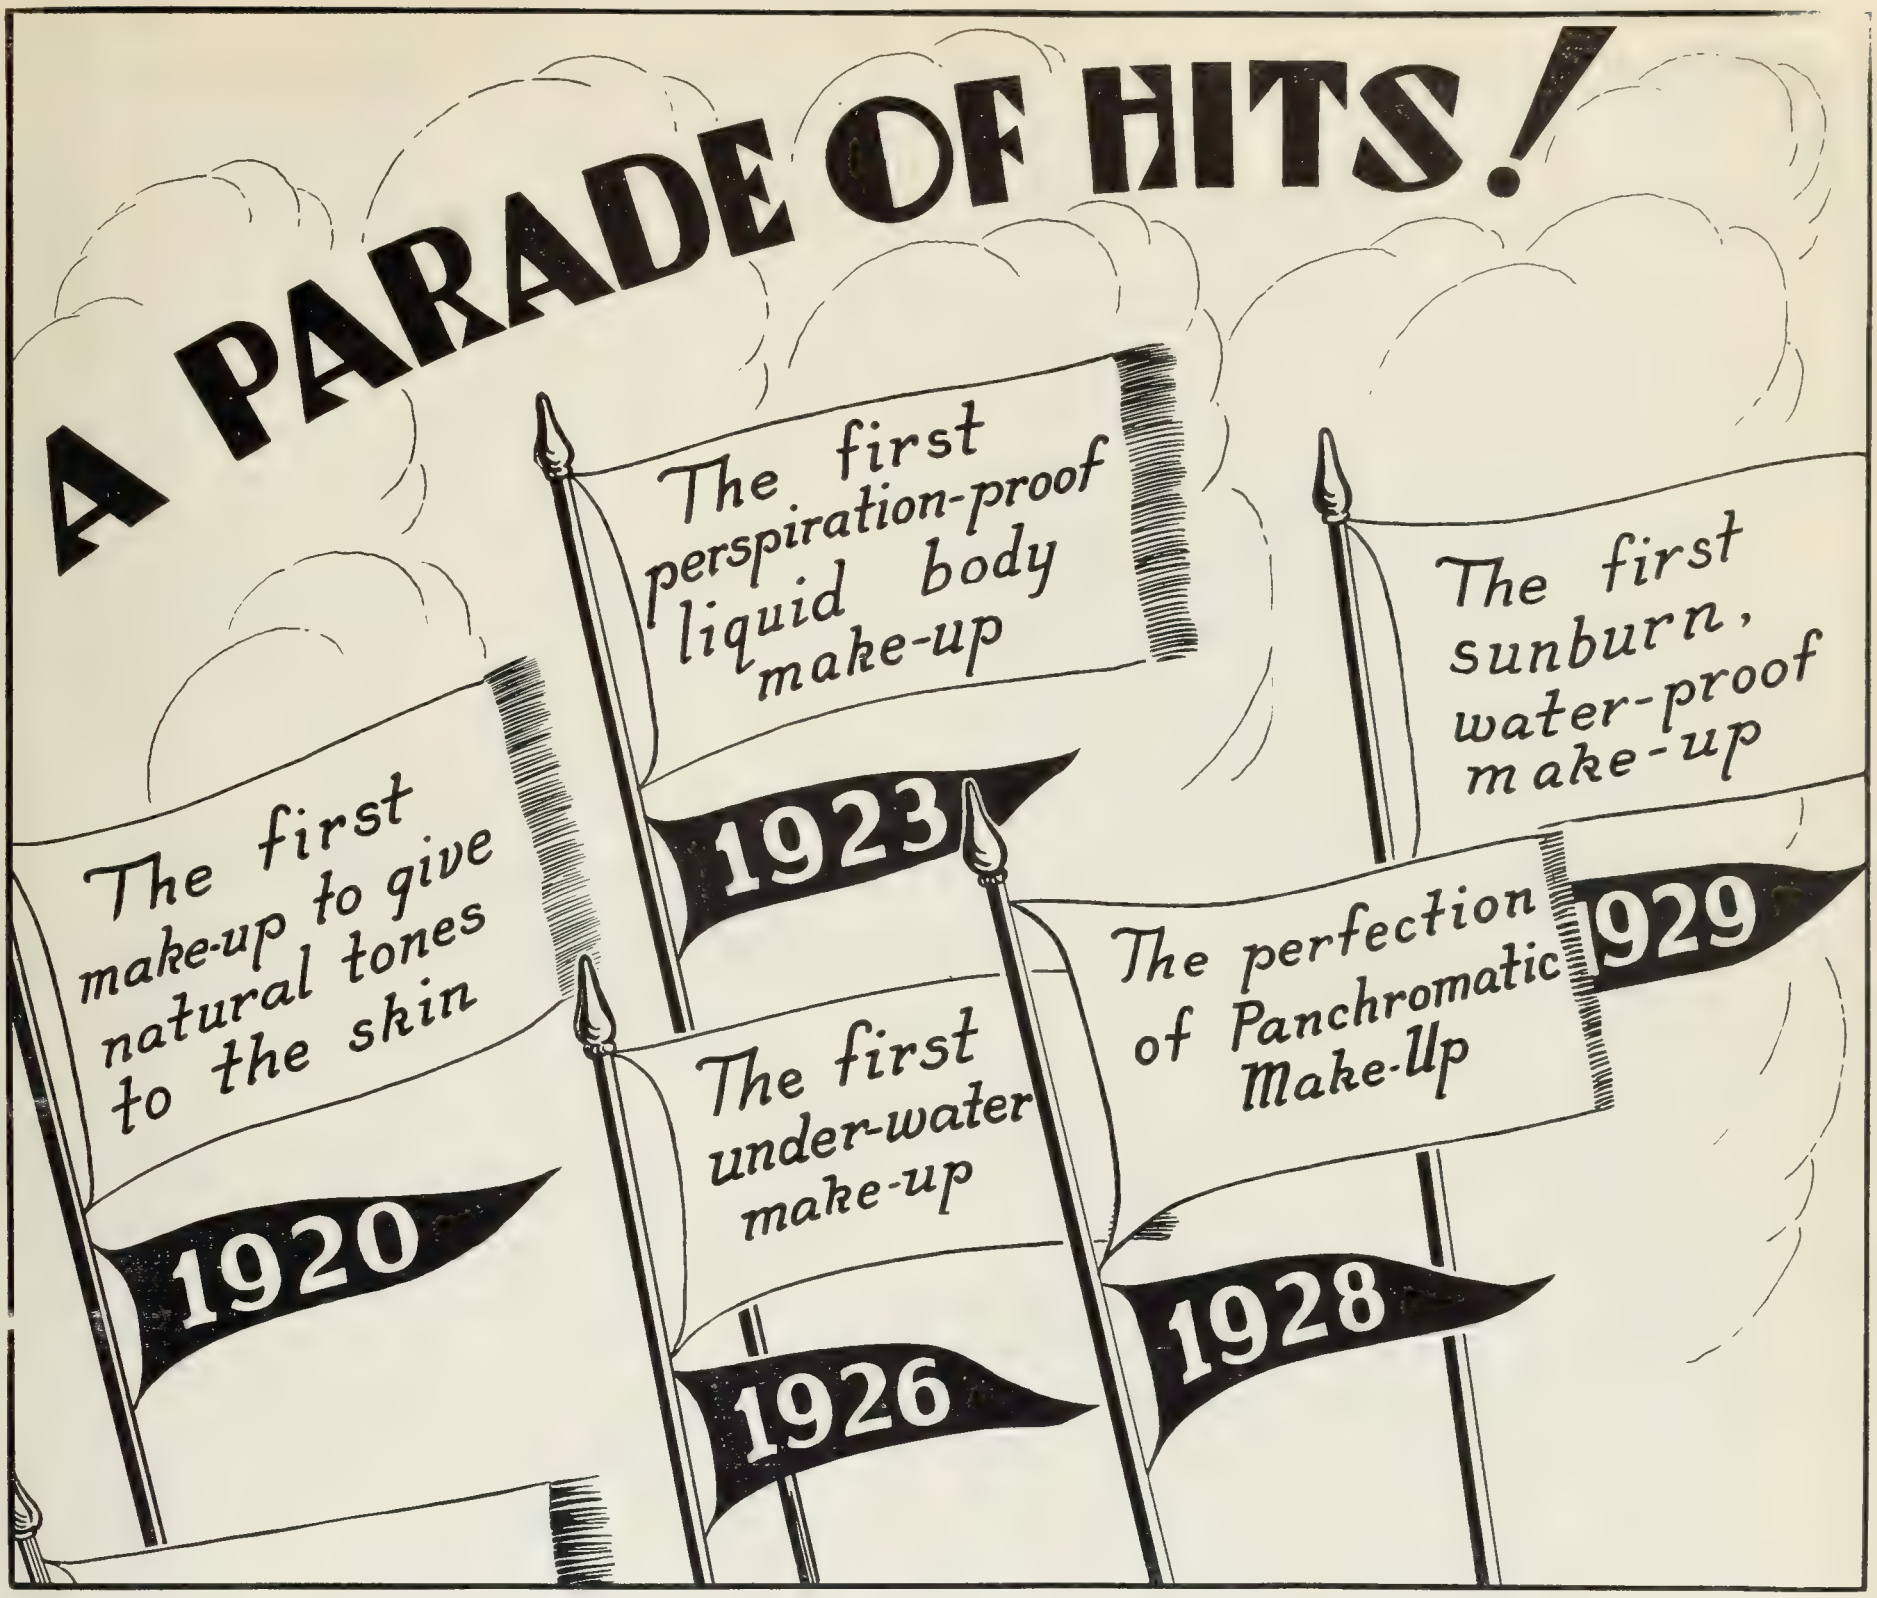
The motion picture critics in ten key cities will get their first look at Paramount's "Murder at the Vanities" within three days next week, the picture being shown by Earl Carroll personally. The final showing of the trip will be next Wednesday night when the picture will open at the Rivoli in New York.

Carroll will show the picture in San Francisco at midnight Sunday and, on Monday morning, will leave in a chartered plane, piloted by Paul Mantz. He will land at Salt Lake, Denver, Kansas City, St. Louis, Chicago, Detroit, Cincinnati and Pittsburgh before reaching New York, remain in each place long enough to screen the picture and then take off for the next stop. His itinerary has been arranged so that he will not be in any place more than three or four hours. Tom Rooney, Carroll's manager, Teet Carle and Bill Pine of Paramount will accompany him.

Carroll expects to remain in New York about a week and then fly back.

Bennie Ray Finishes Jack Perrin Six-Reeler

Bennie Ray wound up his Jack Perrin six-reeler, "Rawhide's Mail," at California studio yesterday. It's the first of four Reliables for William Steiner release.



Next week Ray makes the fifth of the "Bud and Ben" three-reelers, with Jack Perrin and Ben Corbett. This will be followed by the fourth of six Tom Tylers for Reliable.

Allan Here Today

Elizabeth Allan gets in today by plane after a fast return from her vacation in London. She goes into "The Green Hat" immediately at MGM, and later will work in "David Copperfield."

Dunn Option Lifted

Fox yesterday exercised its option on Jimmy Dunn's contract. Player's deal was handled by Ralph Farnum.

TRADEVIEWS by FRANK POPE

•THE motion picture industry in France is greatly upset by the ban that has been placed on "The House of Rothschild" in that country on the ground that it is feared exhibition of it might cause racial disturbances in the theatres, especially in Paris.

Strangely enough, it is reported from the French capital that the ban is largely the result of protest against the picture by the French branch of the Rothschild bank. The heads of this famous institution are said to be afraid that a picture which might be construed as pro-Jewish propaganda would prove dangerous in the present political atmosphere in France.

Perhaps there is some danger, for otherwise it seems hardly possible that a banking house which is as closely connected with the picture industry as is the Rothschild firm would object to showing a film which deals as kindly with the forbears of the family as this one does.

Incidentally, the French censors seem somewhat inconsistent, for they have banned another picture, a French production, called "The Bank Nemo," which is a satirical comedy, based on political and financial corruption, although, as a play, it was a stage success for several months.

However, so far as "Rothschild" is concerned, it is France's loss and Belgium's gain, for the Continental premiere of the picture in Brussels was one of the big events of the year.

One of our reviewers was granted unusual courtesy at a recent preview at the Colorado Theatre, Pasadena. Arriving just as the last frame of the film credits flashed off the screen, the reviewer might have had to postpone the preview notice had not R. K. Sims, the house manager, come to his aid. The studio had no credit sheets available, so Mr. Sims kindly had the first reel rewound for the reviewer's benefit. It is with pleasure that we acknowledge such exceptional courtesy.

Cheer note: Karl Dane, with big roles in big pictures for years and, at times, getting star billing, left an estate of $225, comprising an old automobile and a few personal effects. That ought to point some kind of a moral, but we are not sure just what.

Para. Paying Air Comic $75,000 For Picture

New York.—Paramount has signed Joe Penner, famous radio comic, for "The Big Broadcast of 1934" and is authoritatively reported to be paying him $75,000 for the picture, in which his part will be hardly more than a bit.

Robinson May Get 'Four Walls' Lead

Warners are due to announce today the signing of a new deal with Edward G. Robinson for another series of starring pictures.

The new deal relaxes the exclusive hold that Warners has had on Robinson and he will be allowed to make one picture off the lot. He was in a huddle last night with Lucien Hubbard, of MGM, discussing a possible ticket for the top spot in "Four Walls," which the studio has taken out of the short-budget class and listed as a higher bracket production.

Sam Wood Signed by MGM For Year's Term

MGM yesterday handed Sam Wood a new 52-week contract and granted the director a leave of absence for a vacation in Europe on the completion of "Stamboul Quest," which he puts into work next week. Deal was negotiated by John Zanft.

John Clark on Way

Studio Demands For Talent Giving The Artist-Managers Their Best Time In Months

If the business being done by the agents who handle talent is any barometer, picture production is definitely on the upswing and the production heads are getting their eyes opened to the necessity of corraling some real talent for their pictures.

Practically every agency—and there are eighty-one recognized offices in Hollywood and Beverly Hills in addition to a host of little agents—reports better demand for talent in all lines than they have had in months.

Virtually all the top offices are expanding their staffs of field men to cope with the increased business, the Selznick and Joyce and Small-Landau offices having divided the studio among their staffs, one agency man

Capra Story Shelved

The racetrack story which Frank Capra was set to produce for Columbia has been shelved because of casting difficulties. Capra and Robert Riskin are now working on an original in which the company hopes to star Claudette Colbert.

Mickey Captures Rome

Rome.—The film trade press is acclaiming the latest creations of Walt Disney, following a special showing staged for them by United Artists.

Dave Butler to MGM

David Butler is on the MGM lot to prepare a screen original. He will probably direct it, as well.

MGM Takes Over Presnell Contract

Robert Presnell's difficulities with Warners were washed off the board yesterday when MGM bought the balance of the writer-director-producer's ticket, which has eleven months to go.

Presnell's difficulties, it was said, arose out of tampering tactics which another Warner executive practised on "British Agent" and "Dragon Murder Case," which Presnell had been producing. He takes up his spot at the other studio Monday and starts as a writer, and his first assignment is understood to be on "Sascha Gerhart," the robot play by Harry Thomasheffsky. M. C. Levee handled the deal.

Henry Blanke takes over the producer responsibilities on "British Agent" and "Dragon Murder Case" at Warners.

Ralph Murphy To Direct For Para. Exclusively

Paramount signed Ralph Murphy to an exclusive five-year contract yesterday and will not share him with Charles R. Rogers, as was recently reported.

Murphy leaves Rogers when he completes "The Great Flirtation." Frank and Dunlap negotiated the ticket.

Geraghty With B and D

London.—Tom Geraghty is writing the script of "Sons O' Guns," the Jack Buchanan picture which Sidney Lanfield will direct for British and Dominions. Lili Damita gets the female lead.

Hayward Here Today

Leland Hayward gets in by plane at 7:45 this morning to take charge of the Frank Joyce-Myron Selznick office during Myron Selznick's four weeks in Europe.

VICIOUS ATTACK ON PIX BURIES DARROW REPORT

Washington.—Official Washington and the newspapers are all burned up over the fact that the Darrow Recovery Board report is meeting the same fate as the famous Wickersham prohibition report, which was suppressed by Hoover. It was the main topic of conversation at the Capitol yesterday and the reason is conceded to be the vicious things that the report holds about the picture industry

It has leaked out that the views expressed about the film business are the most poisonous of any of the eight industries which the report slams, and

THE LOW DOWN

Seems like we've been wasting a lot of sympathy on a famous star who's been "confined" in a local hospital about three weeks come next Michaelmas! The fellow went in for a slight operation and really should have been out in a few days. Fact is, he COULD have been out in a few days, but he's still there—and having one swelegant time of it! He hangs around his hospital room during the day—but goes out at night and carouses around town with a freedom he hasn't enjoyed in years! Of course, he can well use each day to recuperate from the night before, and his wife is none the wiser! He's been dismissed by the hospital several times as a cured patient—but he comes right back there to roost every night—such fun!

A major studio lot, noted for its chiseling proclivities, is at it again! Y'know—the NRA code provides for ten dollars a day minimum wage for chorus girls—and this lot uses a great number of chorus girls. Sooooo—instead of paying them the required stipend, they've put a lot of gals under contract—"in stock" as t'were—for thirty-five dollars a week—and the gals work like dawgs! They work in features and they work in shorts—but the weekly salary eliminates even the necessity of paying them overtime—and they do plenty of overtime! Phooey!

The Al Newmans were throwing still another party for Julie Hornblow the other night—and faced a terrifying situation. The Newmans' home is ALMOST furnished. It's brand new, and the living room has yet to be graced by anything but drapes. They asked gobs of people and were faced with furniture shortage, so the day of the party Mrs. N. borrowed Harry Ruby's entire living room ,including the ash-trays, and hired a truck to bring the stuff to her own place. Ruby was among the guests that night and had to leave early. He also had to be forcibly restrained from taking his chairs, sofas, rugs, et al, along with him!

New York REVIEWS

"DOUBLE DOOR"

Paramount prod.; director, Charles Vidor; writers, Elizabeth A. McFadden, Gladys Lehman and Jack Cunningham.

Paramount Theatre

Post: Though it has a climax gruesome enough to satisfy the horror fiends, "Double Door" does not quite manage to qualify as the type of picture to make your blood run cold. The best it can achieve is a lukewarm pulsation. It strives for mood and atmosphere rather than action.

Journal: The story marches grimly toward its climax and Director Charles Vidor sustains suspense admirably, but Miss Morris is the principal reason for the picture.

Mirror: A grim drama, moderately entertaining. Excellently acted, the film is a grim thriller, set in a gloomy background and unrelieved by fun. Designed to induce jimjams in the beholder, it does that with fair success.

World-Telegram: A blood-curdling bit of screen melodrama, based on Elizabeth McFadden's play of the same name. Here are all the perfectly good and staple elements of melodrama and they are managed so skilfully by the director and the players that "Double Door" emerges a thriller that keeps you glued to your chair and that sends chills up and down your spine from beginning to end.

News: Perhaps when you see the picture you will be able to predict the denouement, but to the majority of fans at the premiere of this film the climax came as a surprise—and a very agreeable one it seemed. For that reason this report will conclude with the advice that if you like a dash of restrained horror with your film fare you'll enjoy "Double Door."

Herald-Tribune: A macabre and authentic thriller, "Double Door" constitutes a notable example of what can be achieved in the way of film melodrama from a successful play script. It is superlatively good entertainment. You ought to like it.

Sun: A faithful adaptation of the stage play with Miss Mary Morris and Miss Evelyn Venable in their original roles.

"NO GREATER GLORY"

Columbia prod.; director, Frank Borzage; writers, Ferenc Molnar, Jo Swerling.

Roxy Theatre

Post: An interesting and profoundly touching study of modern youth under the shadow of militarism. The effectiveness of the picture is due immeasurably to the sensitive direction of Frank Borzage.

American: Departing completely from the formula, this unusual picture, wonderfully wrought, is as fine and sensitive a piece of cinema art as ever cameras brought to the screen. Frank Borzage has transferred his story to the screen with a wealth of sympathy and understanding, creating a document at once fragile in its beauty and titanic in its drama.

Sun: A strong harrowing melodrama, with a theme more adult than its plot would promise. Frank Borzage, the director, has managed to build the picture to an exciting and sorrowful climax.

World-Telegram: An astonishing quality of simplicity and sincerity, as well as a tender study in child psychology has been created in "No Greater Glory.' A picture worthy of respect and attention, it is a human and affecting story. I wish to honor Frank Borzage's direction of the film and the heart-breaking performance of young George Breakson.

News: Frank Borzage has made for Columbia a highly sentimental and touching picture from Ferenc Molnars novel, "The Paul Street Boys." The juvenile drama is impressive, but it is done entirely without humor.

Times: Frank Borzage has fashioned a provocative and an unusual picture. It is rather too sentimental at times, but, nevertheless, compelling because of it vitality and the good work of the moys who portray the leading roles.

Journal: A poignant little drama with and about youngsters. Directed with compassionate understanding by Frank Borzage and acted by a cast of boys who play their parts with all the serious concentration of youth, the picture is an unusual and genuinely impressive document.

Herald-Tribune: Its most distinguishing quality lies in the haunting portrayal of a kingdom of children. Never once does the adult point of view obstruct this fanciful, absorbed life of theirs, with its magnified hurts, lilting gaiety and desperate seriousness. The performance is beautiful.

Caruso Jr. on Air

Enrico Caruso Jr. will make his first radio appearance Tuesday over KFWB as a plug for Warners' Spanish talker, "The Fortune Teller." Picture opens at the Filmarte May 18 with a $1 premiere and all the ballyhoo that goes with an American premiere.

Phil Gersdorf gets a month's leave of absence from the Sam Goldwyn aorgnization starting Monday, returning to work with Lynn Farnol on the three productions which the producer has in preparation.

Curtains in Sight For Tony Pastor's

Tony Pastor's, the Sunset Boulevard all-the-beer-and-vaudeville-you-can-stand-for-$1.65 enterprise, is carrying on at least through Saturday night on agreement of employees to be satisfied with the nightly take after expenditures for beer, food and advertising are deducted. The salary kitty Wednesday night was reported around $13, divided among approximately 40 persons.

Original salaries promised the 35 performers ranged from $5.50 to $25 a week. Nathan Friedman, attorney and reputed major angel of the beer garden, held a stormy conference with his personnel in the early hours yesterday, when he informed them the corporation would not be in position to guarantee salaries. John Decker is also said to be interested, a third promoter, J. B. Hall, having disposed of his 25 per cent for $50 cash.

Co-operative continuance of the enterprise has been mentioned, but the employees have so far been differing too strongly among thmselves to get together.

Mae West Gets Some Good News From Texas

Mae West received some box office figures on the set yesterday from John Smith, general manager of the Interstate Circuit of around 90 Texas theatres.

Mr. Smith declared that "I'm No Angel" was a 3-to-1 better draw than "She Done Him Wrong," taking in $24,000 its first week at his Dallas house, compared with $9,000 at the same house for "She Done Him Wrong."

Vicious Attack on Pix

it is believed that the President has thought it wise not to publish these views at this time.

The picture industry itself is blamed for the virulence of the report, because the Film Code Authority was the only one which did not bother to defend itself before the Darrow board.

Senator Nye threatens a senatorial investigation if the report is not made public quickly. He says that the story that the report is too "voluminous" to be given out is ridiculous, because he knows that it does not contain more than 6000 words. It is felt here that Congressional pressure will cause the President to release it, but it probably will be 'deleted' to a great extent.

MARION DAVIES HAS SURE SUCCESS IN 'OPERATOR 13'

Admirable Cast in Fine Production

"OPERATOR 13"
(MGM)

Direction .....Richard Boleslavsky
Novel by.....Robert W. Chambers
Screen Play: Harvey Thew, Zelda Sears, Eve Greene.
Photography .....George Folsey
Cast: Marion Davies, Gary Cooper, Douglas Dumbrille, Katherine Alexander, Ted Healy, Russell Hardie, Four Mills Brothers, Willard Robertson, Belle Daube, Reginald Barlow, Francis McDonald, Jay Lloyd, Fuzzy Knight, Henry Wadsworth, Jean Parker, Sidney Toler, Samuel Hinds, Robert McWade, Walter Lang.

With a production of great beauty, a glamorous performance by its star, Marion Davies, and a thousand and one exploitation angles offered by the story, "Operator 13" simply cannot miss . There are few pictures in recent years that can match the advance word-of-mouth campaign this one has had.

There are those who will quarrel with the screen transcription of Robert W. Chambers' widely-read navel. This fault should not be charged to the script by Harvey Thew, Zelda Sears and Eve Green, but to the subject matter of the novel itself. No amount of lavish prodluction, fine performances or expert direction can disguise the fact that it is the same old spy stuff, this time with a Civil War locale. Like many other novels before it, it reads better than it plays.

The adapters have kept faith with the book, the plot of which sends a Northern girl behind the Confederate lines as a spy. There she meets a dashing officer, also a spy, and there follows a love affair. All is fair in love and war, yet somehow the two do not seem to mix . . . as entertainment.

The recent Hearst newspaper anti-war propaganda has been extended to the picture. The battle scenes are unduly gruesome, with the screams of men and horses in combat being heavily emphasized on the sound track. Several close-ups in montage flashes are reminiscent of the dead men we have been seeing in Sunday supplements, a particularly horrible one showing a soldier being bayonetted through the neck. Much of this should be cut for the picture's benefit. After all, the Civil War is an episode in history of which America is none too proud. Brutalizing it will only result in unfavorable intersectional reaction.

Marion Davies has never been more charming. She is offered a wide range for characterization and takes full advantage of her opportunity. Gary Cooper is given co-star billing, but his role is little more than a conventional lead. He does nicely with what he has which, as may may be gathered, isn't much.

The supporting cast is nothing short of magnificent. They are all incidental characters, yet each manages to make his or her moment count. Especially outstanding are Katherine Alexander as the other woman spy, Willard Robertson as the Confederate intelligence officer, Sidney Toler as the Union spy chief, Jean Parker as the Southern bride and Walter Lang, as the Northern soldier. The Four Mills Brothers are in for three songs. "Sleepy Head" and "Jungle Fever" having hit possibilities. Two other numbers are handled by Miss Davies,, including the lilting "Once in a Lifetime."

Richard Boleslavsky directed with an excellent regard for the pageantry of the Civil War background. In mass movement, he is particularly effective and will be more so if the obvious propaganda is minimized. The picture has all too little humor as it is. Photography by George Folsey is exceptionally fine.

Move to Stop Irving 'Receivership Trust'

Washington.—A petition was presented to the Supreme Court yesterday, asking that the laws of the Southern District of New York be changed so that the Irving Trust Company could not grab off all receivership cases.

Evelyn Laye Signed ForMusical by MGM

London.—Evelyn Laye, blonde English musical comedy star, put her name on a contract in MGM's London office today. She was told to report at Culver City September 1 to be featured in a musical.

Reports that Ramon Novarro will sail from South America for home about the same time Miss Laye leaves led to speculation whether they will appear together.

Miss Laye appeared in Hollywood in "One Heavenly Night" several years ago. She was in the recent British film, "Luck of the Navy."

Hepburn Gets Boost In Pay, Percentage

New York.—Katharine Hepburn's new deal with Radio has been straightened out. While the details will not be made public until her manager, Leland Hayward, arrives in Hollywood, it is certain that she gets a substantial advance in salary as well as a percentage split.

Furthermore, it is understood that she will make three pictures a year instead of two.

Schayer on Script For Beery and Cooper

Richard Schayer has completed his work on the screen play of "Stamboul Quest" for Walter Wanger and has returned to the Harry Rapf unit at MGM.

He is now writing the screen play of "Any Port in a Storm," the Guy Gilpatric story, which is planned for Wallace Beery and Jackie Cooper.

Foy Sterilization Picture is Dull

"TOMORROW'S CHILDREN"
(Foy Production)

Direction .....Crane Wilbur
Author .....Wallace Thurman
Screen Play.....Wallace Thurman
Photography .....William Thompson
Cast: Diane Sinclair, Don Douglas, John Preston, Carlyle Moore Jr., Sterling Holloway.

Taking a leaf out of Ivan Abramson's notebook, Mr. Foy here makes use of a sensational topic to create a dull picture for the booboisie. Flanked by statements from health boards and objections from the Church, the picture gets exactly nowhere in an hour and fifteen minutes and your patrons will be grateful if you soft pedal the whole thing, even if you're tempted to sell it heavy to them on the strength of the obvious exploitation possibilities.

The story that is hung on this eugenic problem of whether children are to be or not to be, is that of a family called Mason. The mother and father are habitual drunkards and their progeny consist of a son in jail, a congenital cripple and two congenital idiots. There is a daughter named Alice who is okay, only she's not really their daughter. The family is finally persuaded by the Welfare Board that the best thing for them to do is to all be sterilized, including the supposed daughter Alice. But a young, idealistic doctor takes an interest (purely professional) in Alice's plight, gets the truth of the situation and saves the gal from a fate worse than poverty, so's she can marry the boy and have kiddies.

Crane Wilbur shows up as the director of the film and contributes no more than his title to that great work. He isn't given much help by the screen play by Wallace Thurman, who evidently read about such things in a newspaper and decided it was a timely subject, and then let it take care of itself.

Diane Sinclair is a very lovely looking Miss who could learn a lot about acting if she had the chance, and there's no reason why she shouldn't get it. The rest of the cast does no more than required of it and, in Sterling Holloway's case, the requirements were just one small scene.

First Two Productions Are Set by Kelly-Saal

New York—Select Productions, the new Burt Kelly, William Saal producing organization, has set the first two of the program to be produced.

They will be "Woman in the Dark," a story by Dashiell Hammett, which Sada Cowan has been engaged to adapt, and "The Corcorans," on which Burnet Hershey is doing the adaptation.

Gaudio on 'Dragon'

Tony Gaudio has been assigned to do the photography on Warner Brothers' "The Dragon Murder Case," which starts today.

Not that it MATTERS
by Helen Gwynn

We've been puzzling and puzzling over what comment to make on the following article, or rather item, fresh from Germany. It seems to us that it should be brought into the bright glare of cold print, and perhaps the best thing to do is just to print it and let the reader see if he can figure out what makes the wheels go round in that narrow corner of the world.

"What Germans Consider a Provocation in American Films. Berlin: Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Film, of Berlin, laid down a complaint against prohibition of film in which Max Baer (who defeated German idol Schmeling) is playing one of the leading roles. After film having first been allowed in English version by censor board, it was afterwards forbidden in Germany and at the same time license for English version withdrawn.

"The case was brought before the court in Berlin, which, after advice received from the Propaganda Ministry, rejected the plaint of MGM. Decision is based on the fact that Max Baer, being a Jew, this picture is considered to be a provocation for the German people and, in order not to injure the feelings of German race according to article seven of the film-act of February sixteenth, authorization cannot be granted for its exhibition in Germany."

It is interesting and rather amusing to read further the reasons on which the decision is based: "Baer is, according to the highest censor board, not only a Jew but he is a negroid type." Further, it is said that, on account of Germany animosity to the Jews, the censor board has to be extremely severe in this respect to films in which Jewish artists are playing one part or another. In the case of Max Baer's film it is further said that the "national socialistic feeling is injured by the fact that a Jewish negroid type like Baer is glorified as a Sport Hero."

Another reason offending Nazi feeling is the fact that in this film a "Jew has love affairs with non-Aryan women, endangering therefore the continuity of a clean race!" Well, Baer may be just an actor to some people now, but we'd put all our money on him as a fighter after he'd read a report like that.

Have you seen the twenty-four sheet poster on "Finishing School"? Take a look at it and, if that isn't the last word in finishing off a nice gal, it's at least the beginning of a beautiful friendship!

For a fascinating half hour, read "The Camera Does Lie!" by Robert Eichberg; if you want a ghost story, there is "I Was Terrified" (Pert Kelton), by Dorothy Spensley; and about Tom Brown's experiences in gangland, read "He's a 'Right Guy'."

Alyce Curtis has a swell yarn on Muriel Kirkland, "Without Beauty"; Charles Grayson is amusing in a story on Douglass Montgomery, "I'm Sure He's Nuts!" Fred Rutledge tells how "Janet Gaynor Rebels" and isn't lonely any more; Clark Warren has Claudette Colbert's life story in "Stepping Stones to Fame"; Ned Williams tells about two little boys back home in "The Men in Mae West's Life," and Mary Watkins Reeves gets Fifi Dorsay to give a "Prescription for Personality." New Agency to Spot Screen Stars on Air

Morton Milman, one of the big figures in the world of radio and the man who handles the "Hall of Fame" hour, is opening offices in the California Bank building in Beverly Hills to handle air appearances of screen personalities.

Milman, formerly with NBC, is given credit for bringing out and developing many of the leading radio names, including Joe Penner, and with having been the means of putting Jimmy Durante on the air.

'U' Finishes Two and Now Has Two in Work

Universal yesterday wound up "Let's Talk It Over" and "I Give My Love," and now has only two in work. Karl Freund, who directed "I Give My Love," leaves next week for a month's vacation in Honolulu.

Paul Lukas, the lead in the same picture, hops off Saturday in his own plane for Yucatan, for a three-weeks vacation.

David Hertz to Adapt Own Original Yarn

Universal yesterday signed David Hertz to do the script on his own story, "Storm Without Thunder." William Anthony McGuire is the associate producer. Deal was set by Jerry Horwin.

Hertz has set his play, "Waltz in Fire," for Fall production by Harmon and Ullman, the producers of "Men in White."

THREE NEW PLAYS FAIL TO PLEASE BROADWAY TASTE

Old Ibsen Tragedy With Happy Ending

"THE LADY FROM THE SEA"

Nathan Zatkin presents "The Lady from the Sea," by Henrik Ibsen; directed by John Houseman; production designed by Donald Oenslager; with Rose Keane, Margaret English, Richard Whorf, Moffat Johnston, Roman Bohnen, Mary Hone and Clem Wilenchick. At the Little Theatre.

New York.—Nathan Zatkin and John Houseman have re-written Ibsen's "The Lady from the Sea" and in so doing have speeded it up considerably and done a very good job with one of Ibsen's weakest plays.

The story is laid in a small Fjord town of Norway, and concerns itself with Dr. Wangel and his second wife, Ellida. Ellida confesses to her husband that the reason she has been a stranger to him during the last three years of their wedded life is due to the fact that she had previously contracted a symbolic marriage with a sailor named Johnson, who had taken a ring from his finger and one from her own and, after coupling them, had thrown them into the sea, saying that they were both now wedded to each other and to the sea.

Johnson, because he had murdered the captain of his ship, was compelled to flee and vowed he would return. Ellida had received word from a shipwrecked friend, which convinced her that Johnson was still alive and was going to claim her as his bride. That she is really the wife of Johnson and must go with him anywhere has become an obsession with her. All Wangel's pleadings apparently have no effect, and when Johnson finally makes his appearance she is ready to go with him.

The big scene occurs in the fifth act when Wangel, realizing that nothing he can do will hold her, and loving her in spite of all, renounces his claim to her and tells her she can go freely. This renunciation breaks the spell and Ellida at last realizes that she is really Wangel's true wife and that Johnson has no claim on her. Johnson, his hold over Ellida broken, leaves, claiming that in the future she will be as a stranger to him The play ends with Ellida's step-children accepting her into the intimacies of the family circle.

Portrayed by a fairly competent cast, the outstanding performance is that given by Richard Whorf in a lesser role, that of Lyngstrand, a would-be sculptor. Mary Hone, as Ellida, "The Lady from the Sea," gives a compelling performance as the suffering, hypnotized heroine.

At best it is an old-fashioned play, with little real merit, and would make a heavy and lumbering motion picture.

Liberty Starting One

Liberty starts production Monday on "Two Heads on a Pillow," Miriam Jordan and Neil Hamilton in the leads. William Nigh directs.

'Delayed by Storm'

Leo Carrillo was invited by officials of Maddox Airline to ride to New York in the maiden trip of a new plane Tuesday. It took Leo so long to get his wife's permission to fly that the plane was gone when he reached the airport.

'Picnic' Is Crude And Badly Written

"PICNIC"

Arthur J. Beckhard presents "Picnic," a play by Gretchen Damrosch; staged by Kaye Lowe; settings by P. Dodd Ackerman, at the National Theatre; with Jean Adair, Esther Dale, Marvin Kline, Frieda Altman, Olive Corn, Jan Ullrich, Fred Lislie, Percy Waram, Millard Mitchell, Joanna Roos, Hugh Rennie.

New York.—Miss Damrosch has pointed a way out of all our troubles. Just take all the Communists and give them a week-end in a pleasant country house—and by Monday morning everything will be hotsy totsy and Capitalism and Communism will be ready to be joined in holy wedlock.

Of course—and this is most important—there must be a picnic. A fresh air, Sunday picnic, in the second act, where there can be a lot of talk about the grandness of nature, and a few remarks, not too many, about freedom, the real freedom, of life. To wit, the right to fall in love with anyone you please. After all, love is love, and a gal from Union Square can fall for a Wall Street lawyer—especially if there happens to be the right kind of moon and he knows how to grab her.

The trouble with Miss Damrosch is twofold: she doesn't know her subject, nor does she know very much about the writing of plays. Which is unfortunate, for her heart seems to be in the right place, and one got the feeling that there was really something interesting in what she was trying to convey.

It is worth mentioning that the mere presence of Joanna Roos, as Vera, the Communist spellbinder, indicated the possibilities of the idea which Miss Damrosch muffed. Which is praise for Miss Roos, and so intended. Because Miss Roos can be recommended for pictures, even if "Picnic" cannot.

English Actor and Beauty Winner in 'Shock'

Alex Courtney, English juvenile who appears in the Pasadena Community Theatre's production of "Cavalcade" next week, gets his first film break with an engagement for "Shock" at Monogram. Ralph Forbes is also added to "Shock."

The only girl in the otherwise all-male line-up is Gwenllian Gill, the Scotch prize beauty, a Paramount loan to Monogram.

'These Two' Sombre And Unsatisfactory

"THESE TWO"

Presented by Leslie J. Casey and James W. Liddle at the Henry Miller Theatre; by Lionel Hale; cast: A. E. Mathews, Hilda Spong, Howard Emery, Bramwell Fletcher, Helen Chandler, Kay Strozzi and Egbert Jones.

New York.—A rather sombre tragedy of marriage was unfortunately marred by indecision in its writing. The author seems confused with the issue at hand and does not know what he wants to say, or so it seemed to this reviewer. His hero is too negative and inconsistent in his emotional outlook and, after practically insisting upon the performance of a noble deed in rescuing the fair lady from her troublesome sex life, later turns around and scorns her love which was not his in the first place and which he demanded.

While much of the play held interest, the plot is old-fashioned and hardly up to the demands of present-day screen audiences. Such seasoned performers as Mathews, Spong, Strozzi, Chandler and Bramwell Fletcher do swell jobs.

Our foolish heroine finds she is to have a baby and the scoundrel refuses to marry her. She goes to the man's best friend with her troubles and he insists on marrying her to save her the disgrace. They can be divorced later. The baby dies. For a year the boy and girl live together, with Simon discovering in time that he cannot endure his enforced intimacy while the girl he really loves won't have him.

The time comes when the girl he rescues really falls in love with him. The barriers go down when he gets a good job and they have high hopes for the future. They are rapturously happy, until she makes the mistake of giving up her work. The husband gets bored and takes up with a few sidelines in fluff. His wife learns about his amours and he lies to her about them. She begs him not to allow the flame of their love to die and to give up his other women. He thinks otherwise and cannot decide whether he will ever come back to her. She threatens suicide, but this doesn't phase him, and the curtain rings down on the approaching end of our young heroine.

Thespian Writers Get An Agent All Their Own

Sol Blanc, interested for several years in a company operating three boulevard gown shops, is branching out as a story broker, working from Beverly Hills with Stanley Morgan as associate. Blanc expects to specialize on originals written by actors and actresses.

Darling-Eby Start

Anne Darling and Earl Eby start their new Universal contracts in "There's Always Tomorrow." Edward Sloman directs.

Monogram to Make Two Porter Novels

Monogram yesterday concluded negotiations with the estate of Gene Stratton Porter for "The Keeper of the Bees" and "The Girl of the Limberlost," two best-seller novels for a number of years.

Studio has retained Mrs. Jeanette Porter Meehan in an advisory capacity and assigned "The Girl of the Limberlost" to W. T. Lackey for June production. Both books were made as silents by F. B. O. around ten years ago, but ownership reverted to the estate.

Lilian Ellis Maybe Set For Todd Spot at Roach

Lilian Ellis, Hal Roach's Danish blond import, is due to reach Los Angeles May 18 by train. Her first assignment is tests, no spot being preordained for her.

She is a possible threat to Thelma Todd, whose contract terminates next week with no mention yet of continuance. If Roach decides against using the newcomer in comedies, he will probably farm her to some major.

Hall For 'Rear Car'

Porter Hall, who was brought here from New York by MGM for "The Thin Man," has been signed for a spot in "Rear Car," which Harry Beaumont directs. Deal was negotiated by Al Kingston.

Adams Novel For MGM

MGM has optioned "The Glorious Hussy," a novel by Samuel Hopkins Adams. Story deals with Peggy O'Neil Eaton.

Cluett Radio Writer

Jack Cluett joins the Radio writing staff today to work on shorts under Lee Marcus' supervision.

Agencies Cashing In

being responsible for two studios each day. Other offices are falling into line on this plan.

Since the agents are always the first to complain and the last to admit growing grosses, the expressions of satisfaction are regarded generally as a reflection of production conditions. Many agents have changed their tune of six months ago, when they deprecated the failure by the majors to sign promising players to term deals. The agents declare that the past few months have seen more term deals signed than any similar period in two years.

"It looks as if this year will be the biggest we've ever had," one important agent said. "The growing volume of business has forced us to take larger quarters and add four men to our agency staff. This was done against our own desires, for it appeared last year that we would be shunted off the production scene entirely, so bad were the indications at that time.

"Codes, restrictive measures such as agency rules and all other controlling devices will not affect the field. The need for more and fresh talent makes the agent essential."

PARA. OUTLOOK BRIGHT

$3,000,000 Gross Is Believed Sure For 'Rothschild'

New York.—The staggering business that is being done by Twentieth Century's "The House of Rothschild" at every engagement has led experts to the belief that the picture is headed for a gross of at least $3,000,000.

The picture has played or is now playing in approximately 150 theatres throughout the country and is being held over for a second week in at least fifty per cent of these places.

It has opened in five cities in Canada and has been held over in each of the five. The London opening is set for May 27 and it is expected that its success in England will duplicate if not surpass that in this country.

Darryl Zanuck, who is sailing for Europe today, believes that the ban in France is only temporary and that it is largely due to the resentment felt by the French Rothschilds against the Napoleonic angle.

Marshall Garbo Lead In 'The Painted Veil'

Herbert Marshall was announced by MGM yesterday for the spot opposite Greta Garbo in "The Painted Veil," which Richard Boleslavsky directs.

John Meehan and Salka Viertel are finishing the screen play of the Somerset Maugham story, under Hunt Stromberg's supervision.

Cooper Back to Radio

Meriam C. Cooper returned to Radio yesterday after being away since he relinquished the reins of the studio to Pandro Berman last February. He immediately closeted himself in story conference and hung out the "Don't Disturb" sign.

Cromwell With Harding

Radio yesterday assigned John Cromwell to direct "The Fountain," which will have Ann Harding in the lead. Pandro Berman is producing.

Beery to Fly to Mexico

Wallace Beery is set to fly in his own plane to Mexico City early next motnh to appear at the opening there of "Viva Villa."

Leisen to Honolulu

Mitchell Leisen leaves tonight on a four-weeks vacation in Honolulu, getting a leave from Paramount.

'Men in White' Has $2600 Opening Day

Clicking $800 better than the opening day of the preceding picture, "Stand Up and Cheer," Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's "Men in White" did the unexpected on its opening day at the Loew's State, Los Angeles, reaching the $2,600 mark, according to MGM.

Shake-up Scheduled At Radio Studios

New York.—From those close to the inside workings of Radio Pictures, it is understood that the conferences that are now being staged on the coast between J. R. McDonough, B. B. Kahane and Ned Depinet will result in a shake-up that will not only change the production seat in the studio, but will bring in at least two important new production faces.

It is believed that one last effort will be exerted to swing Merian C.

'Lottery Lover' First For Hellman at Fox

Sam Hellman gets "Lottery Lover" as the first assignment on his new Fox long-term ticket and will write the screen play under Al Rockett's supervision.

Picture was once slated for Lilian Harvey, but now has Pat Paterson in the leading role, with Lew Ayres and Sterling Holloway in other spots.

Zukor Due Tomorrow

Adolph Zukor arrives tomorrow by train and will remain in Hollywood for several months.

Kuhn-Loeb Auditors Report Obligations Can Be Met And Common Stock Equity Left

New York.—The preliminary report of the Kuhn, Loeb and Company auditors at work on the Paramount reorganization plan under the instructions of the bondholders is very optimistic. The earnings for the first quarter of this year are estimated at $1,500,000 before the deduction of the interest charges, which, incidentally, are not being paid.

The cash on hand of the trustees and the operating subsidiaries amounts to more than $12,000,000. But, to offset everything, the auditors admit that the actual liabilities of the corporation are approximately $50,000,000, which includes bond obligations,

Si Fabian Gets 20 Manhattan Houses

New York.—Si Fabian yesterday closed negotiations to take over twenty theatres of the Manhattan Playhouses chain in New York.

Although he insists that he is acting for himself alone, it is generally believed that he is playing the game for the Warners as part of that company's effort to increase its New York theatres.

Pecora A.T.& T. Prober

New York.—Ferdinand Pecora, who conducted the recent investigations of financial institutions, is said to have accepted Senator Dill's invitation to handle the probe of the A.T.& T.

Can't Cut Hours of Labor, Says Board

New York.—It is impractical further to reduce hours of labor in the picture studios to aid the spread of employment, according to the committee, composed of George Schaefer, H. S. Bareford and Charles O'Reilly, which has been investigating.

The committee finds that there is no substantial unemployment in the industry, which has gone as far as it can go in the matters of reducing hours of labor and increasing wages. If an added financial burden is inflicted, the committee feels, production would suffer. There are probably some thousands in Hollywood who would not agree about "no substantial unemployment."

March or Colman Set For 'Clive of India'

New York.—The "Clive of India" story which Darryl Zanuck has just purchased, is a play, now running in London, with Leslie Banks in the leading role.

When Twentieth Century produces it as a picture, it probably will have either Fredric March or Ronald Colman in the title role.

'Viva Villa' Opening

In view of Governor Rolph's proclamation that May 18 will be Mexico Day, MGM has set "Viva Villa" to open at the Loew's State the same day.

Mayer to Frisco

L. B. Mayer, accompanied by John Zanft and Howard Strickling, flew to Frisco yesterday and will stay in the Bay City until Monday.

'U' Buys 'Eric Dorn'

New York.—Universal has purchased the Ben Hecht novel, "Eric Dorn," and Thomas Mitchell is doing the adaptation.

CODE HEADS BACK LOCAL BOARD ON OVER-BUYING

New York.—The motion picture Code Authority last night stepped heavily and decisively on the practise of over-buying pictures on the complaint made by the Saxe Amusement Company, of Milwaukee, against the Ashley Theatre Corporation and Vitagraph Inc.

The charge was that Ashley had over-bought 30 Warner pictures and Saxe asked that it be awarded that product. The local Milwaukee grievance board decided in favor of Saxe

Fox Sued By Writer, Asking $1,500,000

Walter S. Lawrence, writer, yesterday filed suit in Federal court against Fox Film Corporation, charging it with infringement of copyright and asking damages of $1,500,000.

Lawrence claims essential parts of his book, "The Marathon Dancer," were used in "Sailor's Luck." He charges he submitted his manuscript to the Fox studio in 1932, but that it was rejected.

'Viva Villa' Going Very Big in London

London. — "Viva Villa," which opened at the Empire last week, has caught on with a bang and is doing terrific business. Columbia's "It Happened One Night" goes into its third week with business undiminished, and Bob Flaherty's "Man of Aran" is also a sell-out.

"Fashions of 1934" at the Regal, and "Roman Scandals" at the Leicester Square, are getting much better than average grosses. The newcomers for the week are "Scarlet Empress" at the Carlton; "The Trumpet Blows" at the Plaza; "Mick, the Miller," a Gaumont dog picture, at the Capitol. The weather is getting hot and the week-end business is expected to fall off.

MGM Will Plug Its Product Over the Air

MGM is going in for extensive radio exploitation. Studio has set Robert Young on the Shell hour Monday to broadcast a plug for "Men in White," with thirty-six other broadcasts on the picture slated for the ensuing five days.

From KFAC each Monday night the studio will air a fifteen-minute picture chatter program, "Air Pockets."

Lee Tracy Switched To Star in 'Florette'

Discarding other plans previously announced for Lee Tracy, Paramount yesterday decided upon "52 Weeks for Florette" as the player's first starring assignment. It was originally set for W. C. Fields.

Helen Mack will have the opposite spot to Tracy and Alfred Werker directs.

George Brent Lead in MGM 'Stamboul Quest'

MGM yesterday put through a definite commitment from Warners on George Brent for "Stamboul Quest," first announced a week ago.

Also signed are C. Henry Gordon, Douglas Dumbrille, Christian Rub, Rudolph Amendt, Robert Gleckler and Reginald Barlow. Sam Wood directs the Leo Birinski story.

Para. Buys Original By Stephen M. Avery

Paramount bought Stephen Morehouse Avery's original story, "Target," yesterday and set Sir Guy Standing, Richard Arlen, Evelyn Venable, Roscoe Karns and Gail Patrick for the principal roles. No director or writer assignments have been made as yet.

Jed Buell Promoted

Jed Buell was made assistant general manager of the Mack Sennett studio this week, a promotion from rental manager. Buell was drafted into publicity work by Mr. Sennett soon after the studio opened in 1928.

Karloff Buys Estate For Pet Kangaroo

The real reason why Boris Karloff bought a three-acre estate in Cold Water Canyon a week ago was revealed yesterday when Karloff disclosed that the Australian Cricketeers are sending him a kangaroo, and he wants a place for it to play.

New York Grosses Lowest of Season

New York.—The hot weather took its toll of the picture house grosses this week, receipts dropping to the lowest point of the season.

At the Music Hall, "Twentieth Century" got $65,000. "Manhattan Melodrama" drew $65,400 at the Capitol, and "Rothschild" got $18,000 for its eighth week at the Astor. "No Greater Glory" grabbed $18,000 at the Roxy, "Double Door," at the Paramount, took $16,000, and "Twenty Million Sweethearts" grossed $14,800 for its third week. The Rialto got $7000 with "Success at Any Price," the Casino took $6500 with "Whirlpool," and the last three days of "Hitler's Reign of Terror" drew $2800.

New Play For Universal

Carl Laemmle, Jr. yesterday purchased "Take My Hand," a play by Jacques Lardin, which opened in France last week. He plans it as a Gloria Stuart vehicle.

Over-buying Slapped

and the case went to the Code Authority on appeal.

The Code Authority upheld the ruling of the local board and the Code Authority legal committee was authoized to draft the decision, with proper safeguards for Warners for faithful performance of the pictures awarded to Saxe.

F. H. Fallas, attorney for the Saxe interests, suggested that the Code Authority should, as a matter of policy, discourage the hearing of appeals and allow decisions of the local boards to stand. The exhibitors, he pointed out, often are at a disadvantage through not being able to send representatives to New York.

This decision is taken to indicate that the Code Authority will take the same attitude when the case of the Garfield Theatre, of Alhambra, against Fox West Coast and Principal Theatres comes before it.

Pickford Triumph In Her Home Town

Toronto.—Mary Pickford opened yesterday at the Imperial theatre in a tabloid version of "The Church Mouse," with Harland Tucker in support, after a triumphal entry to this city Thursday that almost outdid the enthusiasm at the last visit of the Prince of Wales.

Thousands viewed the official greeting on the city hall steps, after which a procession formed to escort her to luncheon, where she made a speech. Thirty schools were closed to permit children to watch her pass on the way to visit the military hospital and Red Cross headquarters.

This was Miss Pickford's first official visit to her birthplace, although she has made many quiet personal trips to Toronto.

Still Wrangling Over Warner-Goldwyn Case

The largest part of yesterday's session at the Goldwyn-Warner trial before Superior Court Judge Frank Smith was devoted to a wrangle between opposing counsel on the contract which the two prdoucers had made for Berkeley's services.

The dance director finally took the stand in his own defense late in the afternoon. He re-appears Monday morning when the case will be resumed.

DeMond Assigned

Albert E. DeMond is assigned to write the screen play for "Dames and Dynamite," Monogram original by George Bertholon.

Para. Prospects Bright

loans from bankers, stock obligations and general creditors.

As the auditors see the problem, the primary difficulty will be the settlement with the general creditors, which will run between $12,000,000 and $15,000,000. Most of this, they believe, can be taken care of out of the cash now on hand and to come within the next six months .

In view of the current earning power of the company, the auditors believe that there will be a considerable equity left for the common stock if a favorable reorganization can be effected. This being purely a cut-and-dried financial report, the prospects of such a reorganization are not considered, but from other sources it is learned that these prospects are extremely bright.

Darrow Report Row To Force Release

Washington.—The uproar that resulted when it was hinted the Darrow report would not be released has altered the official minds here, and the report probably will be given to the public on Monday.

General Johnson told reporters yesterday that he had requested the report be withheld until he and his divisional code administrators could prepare their answers to the Darrow charges in the report. He said he thinks they will be ready by Monday and will be released simultaneously with the report.

Sol Rosenblatt is giving all his time to his answer, and it is believed that both the charges of Darrow and the reply of Rosenblatt will be more than hot.

New Society of Sound Men Elects Officers

Officials of the Society of Sound Engineers, Inc., the organization of top sound men formed some time ago, yesterday announced that they are going to ask the newly formed American Society of Sound Engineers to change its name.

Recent election of officers of the Society of Sound Engineers resulted in the election of Carrol Pratt, of MGM, as president; Harold Bumbaugh, first vice president; E. C. Ward, second; Harold Lewis, third; Joseph Aiken, secretary, and Robert Shirley, treasurer.

Actors Guild to Elect

The Screen Actors Guild yesterday announced that the results of its annual election tomorrow night at El Capitan Theatre will be announced immediately after the last ballot has been tabulated. Eddie Cantor presides.

Sackheim Starts at 'U'

Jerry Sackheim starts his new duties as Universal story editor Monday. This will be the first time Universal has had such an official in five months, Leonard Spigelgass having combined its duties with scenario editing.

Strausberg Expanding

New York.—Sam Strausberg, former head of the Strausberg circuit, has taken over the Nelson and Renner chain in Brooklyn, which brings his holdings up to 16 houses. He is planning to build six more.

Pendleton Borrowed

Columbia yesterday borrowed Nat Pendleton from MGM for "The Defense Rests," which Lambert Hillyer directs. Jack Holt and Jean Arthur are in the top brackets.

Murder Yarn For Col.

Columbia yesterday purchased "Murder Island," by Leland Jamieson, and will use it as an action feature. Story was printed serially in Blue Book.

Para. Buys Original

Paramount yesterday purchased "Outrage," an original story by Bertram Milhauser. Story has a gangster-kidnapping angle to it.

Walter Walker, by Freddie Fralick, to "The Count of Monte Cristo," for Reliance.

Gwendolin Logan and Helena Grant, by Sackin, to "One More River," Universal.

Ernest Hilliard to "Merry Widow," MGM, by Bernard, Meiklejohn and McCall.

Batcheller-Cohen East For Exchange Confabs

George Batcheller and Maury Cohen, producers of Chesterfield and Invincible pictures respectively, will leave for New York May 24 to confer with the exchanges and to line up next year's program.

Chesterfield wound up the current schedule with "Green Eyes" completed this week, and Invincible will wash up with two more on the return of its executives.

Binnie Barnes Sails

London. — Binnie Barnes, who played in "Henry VIII" and has just finished a role with Fairbanks Sr. in "The Private Life of Don Juan," sails today for New York en route to Hollywood, where she will join the cast of Universal's "There's Always Tomorrow."

Radio Shake-up Looms

Cooper back to his old duties, and by that is meant all the production duties in the studio. If this fails (and many believe that it will) it is whispered that two top men in two competing studios will be drafted to give Pandro Berman a lift with the output. One of these men, it is said, will head production, the other and Berman becoming his chief assistants.

Radio has no intention of permitting production to slip. It had a taste of good pictures and money last year and realizes how easy it is to get ahead with anything resembling good pictures.

Before Depinet returns here here he expects to have his whole yearly folio filled with Radio's production activities in order to place it in the sales book announcement.

'MOMENTS' CLEVER COMEDY; FINISH SAVES 'CALL IT LUCK'

Morris is Swell, Direction Capital

"EMBARRASSING MOMENTS"
(Universal)

Direction .....Edward Laemmle
Original.....Wm. Anthony McGuire
Screen Play: Gladys Unger, Charles Logue.
Added Dialogue.....Dickson Morgan
Photography .....Charles Stumar

A dandy little comedy, guaranteed to hold its own on any program. Laughs and thrills are deftly intermingled for the type of entertainment we used to have before pictures began talking so much. There is action in "Embarrassing Moments" and plenty of it.

The plot has to do with a practical joker who simply is unable to resist any opportunity to perpetrate a gag. His girl and his best friend plan a cure after he has worked a telephone rib on the friend, a particularly hilarious sequence, by the way. The friend feigns suicide so that the joker may be accused of murder, but the frame-up goes wrong when the lad flees town.

Thrown into association with a band of counterfeiters, he is made an innocent dupe and nearly lands in jail across the border. An escape by plane makes a neat chase finish.

Only one sequence mars the smooth unfolding of the story. That is the duel wherein the joker bests his opponent, a revolutionary general. The idea is definitely slap-stick, even to the point of the general losing his pants. It just isn't funny enough and the improbability of the situation interrupts the air of reality the rest of the yarn has built.

Chester Morris is nothing short of swell as the practical joker. He plays with fine authority a role that can only be described as exacting because it combines so many conflicting moods. Marian Nixon acquits herself capably as the girl in the case. Walter Woolf is ill at ease as the friend, although handling the several songs well. Alan Mowbray is outstanding in the supporting cast.

Direction by Edward Laemmle maintains a fast tempo. The script, from an original by William Anthony McGuire, has all the appearances of being a tight job of writing. The several loose ends and false leads are cutting faults. Photography and lighting a bit spotty.

Get behind Morris in your campaign, not so much because of this release as because of what his name will mean to you in subsequent films. This trouper is headed right for the top.

Brown Buys Original

Clarence Brown personally has purchased "Contact," an original by Lieut. John Hildegard. Story deals with an aviatrix.

Laird Doyle Makes $1410 Profit on Ford

Laird Doyle no longer owns his 1910 Ford—having sold it yesterday to a dealer for $500 for display purposes. Writer bought the automobile a year ago for $90 to attend a class reunion in Pomona. Since that time he has received $1,000 renting it to studios as a prop.

Liberty 'Bachelor' Formula Picture

"ONCE TO EVERY BACHELOR"
(Liberty)

Direction .....William Nigh
Author .....George Waggner
Photography .....Harry Neuman
Cast: Neil Hamilton, Marion Nixon, Raymond Hatton, Aileen Pringle, Kathleen Howard, Ralf Harolde, George Irving, Don Alvarado.

In spite of the fact that the Liberty picture, "Once to Every Bachelor," adheres too closely for entertainment to a very familiar formula, the acting of Neil Hamilton almost makes the picture worth considering.

Originality in treatment, direction and photography is conspicuous by its absence, with the result that Hamilton's willing and capable shoulders sag under the weight. Almost any audience, unfortunately, will be two jumps ahead of those little celluloid strips that wind through a projection machine.

Hamilton plays the young rake of a nephew (you've met him before, although not in such charming guise, perhaps), who is about to be disinherited by his aunt (you've met her before, too, although in a more distinctive guise). As he is out strolling one afternoon he rescues a young woman in distress, who is the object of the attention of the entire New York Police Department. She seems to be mixed up in a gangster killing. In order to retain his inheritance and to allay his aunt's suspicions as to his relationship with a certain married woman, Hamilton marries the gal, who is persuaded into the step by the wails of police sirens.

And then what do you suppose happens? Why, he falls in love with her and has one heck of a time getting any reciprocation, dodging the irate married lady and rescuing his wife from the jaws of justice.

Marian Nixon is easy to look at as the girl. Aileen Pringle is miscast. Raymond Hatton will draw laughs in a comedy role. Kathleen Howard is the aunt, and Ralf Harolde, George Irving and Don Alvarado have small parts. William Nigh directed; George Waggner wrote it and Harry Neuman photographed.

This one is not for the discriminating metropolitan audience. Small towns might like it to while away an evening. (The love scenes are rather well done).

Mundin High Spot In Horsey Comedy

"CALL IT LUCK"
(Fox)

Direction .....James Tinling
Original: Dudley Nichols, George Marshall.
Adaptation: Joseph Cunningham, Harry McCoy.
Screen Play: Dudley Nichols, Lamar Trotti.
Dance Direction.....Sammy Lee
Photography .....Joseph Valentine
Cast: Herbert Mundin, Pat Paterson, Georgia Caine, Gordon Westcott, Charles Starrett, Theodore von Eltz, Ernest Wood, Susan Fleming, Ray Mayer.

If it were not screamingly funny race finale in which a retired cavalry plug wins for his cabby owner, "Call It Luck" would be merely moderately amusing. There was a great comedy idea in a London cabby winning the £25,000 sweepstakes, only to come to America to fall prey of slick confidence men. Unfortunately it took five credited writers to get the idea on the screen and the outcome is somewhat muddled. Couldn't they have thought of any more novel racket than a variation of the badger game?

A part of the cabby's winnings are taken from him by the sale of a broken-down cavalry nag which he believes to be "Sabre," one of England's finest. He comes to race the horse in America and is met by a gang of slickers representing themselves to be city officials. When they have taken his letter of credit, all that is left for him is to turn cabby again, driving the fictitious "Sabre." Blowing "Charge" on the bugle for Boy Scouts, he learns that the horse responds. The knowledge becomes valuable on the day of the big race. "Sabre" is hopelessly behind when the cabby seizes a bugle to blow him to victory.

Interwoven with the comedy plot is the slight romance of the cabby's niece and a young American.

Herbert Mundin's characterization of the cabby is the high spot of the picture. It is a walkaway for Mundin and he gives the role its share of pathos. Pat Paterson is the niece and has a chance to do several musical numbers as a cabaret entertainer. She scores pleasantly with what she has to do, especially in a horsey floor-show number staged by Sammy Lee.

Gordon Westcott is splendid as the leader of the crooks, never once overplaying a role that many would have performed too heavily. Theodore von Eltz is able as another confidence man, and Georgia Caine is very good as the landlady. A conventional leading man was handed Charles Starrett.

The direction by James Tinling is evenly paced and makes the speedy finish a delight. Joseph Valentine's photography is excellent.

Avoid overselling this picture or your audiences may feel disappointment that the comedy possibilities were not more fully realized. Teaser campaigns based on the winning of the sweepstakes are probably the best.

Not that it MATTERS
by Helen Gwynn

Migoodness, guess what's being dragged off'n the shelf again. None other than "Lives of a Bengal Lancer." Which is about to stack up quite a career for itself. First it was found well nigh impossible to cast. Then they decided that the story wasn't right, so they got together eighty or ninety scripts on the darned thing, and finally called in that great Syrian or Armenian expert on things East Indian, Rabindranath Tagore, and there the matter was dropped. Now it develops that England has stepped into the matter by making it known that there will be vehement protests and proscribings if there is anything in the story that comments adversely on British rule in India.

Ho, hum, they probably thought it was the story of a tiger hunt when they bought it and it turned out to be about an Englishman who wanted to turn Hindu, so they'll most likely make an Indian epic out of it, and Paramount can put a new "Nautch" in its gun for a big killing.

Lynn Farnol is back in town fresh from England and Ireland. You'll have to get him to tell you about the English Hunts Ball, but we can tell you about the circulating movies they have in Ireland. Seems as how, over in Ireland, they actually have innumerable towns that are too small to maintain a movie house and most people can't afford to travel too far to go and see a movie, so the movies come to them. They come to them in ox-carts. One ox-cart is for the screen and one for the projector, and canvas makes a roof between the two and the audience sits under that roof. It costs them thruppence, or six cents to you, and they're that anxious to see pictures that they sit outside in all kinds of weather just to get a look. The pictures are all silent.

Just because we wrote a squib in defense of criticism, don't be misled into thinking we have any love for picture critics. We're not getting that soft As a matter of fact, we object strongly to most of them on the grounds that they don't know what they're talking about and that they, too, suffer from the fact that most of them have no genuine love for pictures. We think they ought at least to take time out to learn the correct picture terms and then some day, if they're really interested, learn how to apply them. Mostly though, they just don't like pictures. In fact, one metropolitan critic definitely took his job with the firm conviction that even if pictures were good, he wouldn't like them. And that attitude doesn't do anyone any good. The one time they really have fun is when a picture is made from a book they have read or a play they have seen and then they become book and play critics.

'ACAD. MUST GO'-CANTOR

TRADE VIEWS by W. R. WILKERSON

•THIS code thing has the major studios in a tough spot, one of the toughest they have ever experienced.

To sell contracts for those block booking deals they must have a list of pictures to present to the exhibitor. In former years this was easy. They could grind out a beautiful sales announcement, giving four pictures to Sadie Glutz, six to Horatio Stephens, etc., etc., knowing at the time the announcement is made that neither of those players will appear in those pictures or under the direction of that big director or with a supporting cast of the many important names listed. But the distributor would get some idea of what his studio was going to make and then cause that beautiful announcement to be printed and have the salesmen sell from that announcement.

Not so this year. If Mr. Distributor announces Sadie Glutz in a story, if he designates Horatio Stephens in a given yarn and, yes, even if he announces the director or some of the supporting cast for those stars, HE WILL HAVE TO DELIVER JUST THAT or Mr. Exhibitor can, by the code, cancel the pictures. And you know those exhibitors with their cancellations. Boy, they will use every item on the code list to get out of a picture if it is bad.

Add to the above ten per cent of the list that the exhibitor can cancel, even though no misrepresentation has been made, and you have a pretty tough situation for the producers and a reason for doing damned little announcing this year until they KNOW where they are at.

And how many studios do you think, have any idea where they are situated regarding their next year's production? Maybe MGM, with its tremendous big name list and just as many competent producers, writers and directors. But with MGM you have to stop.

So there is worry in the production camps, and plenty more with their distribution quarters in New York. And Mr. Exhibitor is rubbing his hands, awaiting the results. What will they be? Certainly an astounding situation.

K. of C. Demand That Films Be Censored

New York.—The Knights of Columbus of New Jersey have sent a demand to Governor Moore for a film censorship board, asserting that all producers are in a contest to see who can produce the most vicious picture.

Monogram's Entire Group Set For Japan

New York.—The entire output of Monogram Pictures has been set for distribution in Japan through a deal just closed by Norton Ritchey. All will be shown with Japanese superimposed titles.

A survey made by Ritchey shows that, of the total pictures shown in Japan last season, twelve per cent were American, 85 per cent Japanese and the other three per cent European.

Wanger Will Produce 'Five Days' As Musical

Walter Wanger has taken over the production reins on "Five Days," the Eric Hatch novel, and will produce it as a musical.

Picture was shelved when Lou Edelman left the MGM lot to go to Warners. No writers or director assigned as yet.

Al Green Will Direct Stanwyck in 'Lost Lady'

Al Green was elected by Warners to direct the next Barbara Stanwyck picture, "Lost Lady."

It is the Willa Cather story for which Gene Markey and Katherine Scola are writing the screen play.

Tells Actors The President Killed Bad Features Of The Code When Told About Them

Declaring that the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences is a "company union" and operates only to prevent the actors from accomplishing moves for the betterment of actor conditions, Eddie Cantor last night brought the annual meeting of the Screen Actors Guild to its feet with wild applause when he declared that the Academy must be destroyed.

Cantor led up to his attack on the Academy by briefly outlining what the Guild has done for the actor in connection with the NRA film code. He declared that "the Academy last October had sold the actors down the river for the benefit of the producer," and that, if it had not been for the Guild, the code would in all likelihood have contained provisions for the control of actors' salaries, anti-raiding provisions, which he said would have

Rogers May Drop One From His Para. Schedule

Indications are that Charles R. Rogers will shelve "Lizzie Skerritt" and round out nine pictures for Paramount instead of ten as originally planned.

Deals for Irene Dunne and Ann Harding have both gone cold, with casting making it a practical impossibility to make the picture on this season's slate.

Wellman For 'Barbary'

William Wellman has the directorial assignment for Sam Goldwyn's "Barbary Coast." Screen play is in the writing by Dwight Taylor.

Donovan Aims To Speed Code Work

With the appointment of Major Joseph O. Donovan as Coast Executive Secretary of the Film Code Authority, indications are that there will be a general speeding up of all code matters in the production end of the industry.

Major Donovan received official appointment Saturday by telegraph, and stated yesterday that full instructions are following in a letter from John C. Flinn, secretary of the Code Authority.

"Until the letter arrives," explained Major Donovan, "I cannot say much

New York.—The following alternates have been named for the Code Agency Committee members:

Nat Levine for Trem Carr; Joseph M. Schenck for Emanuel Cohen; Louis B. Mayer for B. B. Kahane; Harry Cohn for Jack Warner; Carl Laemmle Jr. for Winfield Sheehan.

Nancy Carroll Will Do One Picture For Small

Nancy Carroll has been set by Schulberg, Feldman and Gurney to make one picture for Edward Small's Reliance company before she starts her four-picture deal with Columbia.

Adolph Zukor Here

Adolph Zukor, president of Paramount, arrived on The Chief last night and is at the Ambassador. He had nothing to say about business, except that Paramount would continue production straight through the Summer without any lay-off.

Bickford-Para. Closing

Paramount is closing a three-picture contract with Charles Bickford, announcement on which will be made this week.

INDIES TO FIGHT MAJORS BY INCREASING PROGRAMS

The plan of the major producers to make a number of short-budget pictures to compete with the indies and for cancellation purposes has not had the effect of frightening the independents a little bit. On the contrary, they are planning to fight back by increasing their own production schedules.

Chesterfield, Invincible and Mascot are leading the field in this respect, the former two having announced

THE LOW DOWN

Hmmm-mmm, just discovered why it takes so extra long for a certain blonde Paramount star's pictures to be made. Her pictures are never super-epics—nor are they supposed to be. Yet they always take epic time to make—and here's why: The star doesn't get paid every week in the year—and she hasn't one of those forty week guarantees. BUT her deal calls for her to go on salary the minute work on the script of her pictures starts. Her contract also calls for her to approve the story, cast, script, etc., and everything else that happens to be lying around, so she takes plenty of time to approve of anything! Also the star writes a great deal of the material that goes into her pictures and she takes plenty of time for that too! Nice work—if you can get it!

Another prize crack from our own pet maker of cracks: The producer in question was discussing a certain actor and wound up with, "That guy is the drollest fellow I've ever known! NO sense of humor at all!" (!)

Hearing that Barbara Blair was on her way back here reminds us that the last time she hit town she had sixteen trunks with her. Actually! But don't get excited, because the trunks didn't hold much to make other femmes gasp with envy. We're told that the luggage was jammed full of clothes ranging anywhere from two to five years old, and that when someone suggested to Miss B. that she give some of the antiquated stuff to someone who might be able to use it, she was horrified and wouldn't part with the garments because they all had swank labels in them! So maybe she just lugs the clothes around for their reading value!

Hear that the Memory Productions Company, Inc., filed charges against Helen Morgan with the Actors' Equity last week. They say they had to close the show, "Memory" in which La Morgan opened here only a week or so ago, because they had no understudy to replace her, and that she was continually absent from rehearsals and the direct cause of the show's flop.

New York REVIEWS

"THE WHIRLPOOL"

Columbia prod.; director, Roy William Neill; writers, Dorothy Howell, Ethel Hill, Howard Emmett Rogers.

Casino Theatre

World-Telegram: A heavy thriller, a thriller that never quite comes off. It is just a little too much to believe in.

Post: "Whirlpool" would be rather a dull affair if it were not for the lovely Jean Arthur. Her charm and sincerity keep the picture from being merely a hodge-podge of improbable events.

Mirror: Jack Holt, of the heroic chin and the mighty right, has another of his two-fisted roles in this production. It is an action drama of the type characteristic of the popular.

Journal: A routine action film with an agreeable cast.

Sun: The picture, like most film melodramas, makes no attempts at realism. It simply skims the surface of a tale that, because of its treatment, loses its true element of tragedy. "Whirlpool" belongs pretty definitely in the ranks of routine, competently produced and acted melodrama.

American: Rather entertaining little picture. The star is the best of the cast, but receives wonderful help from his associates. Roy Neill's direction keeps the drama moving.

Herald-Tribune: If "Whirlpool" fails to entertain you completely, it is the fault neither of the backgrounds nor of Jean Arthur. Miss Arthur gives a brilliant and thoroughly plausible portrayal of a difficult role.

Times: The actors are present for a lively bit of melodrama, but "Whirlpool" does not give them much of a workout.

News: For the most part the film deals with effects which proceed from very fanciful causes. The bright spots of the photoplay are contributed by Jack Holt and Allen Jenkins.

"THE CRIME DOCTOR"

Radio prod.; director, John Robertson; writers, Israel Zangwill, Jane Murfin.

Rialto Theatre

American: One of the best murder yarns recently wrought into a picture. The story is keenly suspenseful from the very first sequence, and it holds gripping interest right through to the thrilling denoument. Otto Kruger is superb.

Herald-Tribune: The work achieves horror and suspense, while remaining always credible—an excellent film celebration of homicide. Most of the credit for the mood must go to Otto Kruger in the title role.

Post: It has the supreme virtue of holding your interest right up to the surprise climax, and its entertainment value is no little enhanced by the flawless work of Otto Kruger.

Sun: Not an ambitious work, but in its way, diverting. It is a detective melodrama, screened with a careful eye to movie effects. Never very exciting, it still manages to hold the interest until that faked ending.

World-Telegram: An ingenious and irresistible tale of homicide that is full of excitement. The cast is precisely right and the direction is so restrained that the film becomes a fascinating game of wit and out-wit.

Daily News: The plot, being somewhat intricate, is better left untold. But it can't spoil anyone's enjoyment of the story to know that, along with the absorbing detective work, a thrilling love drama is woven.

Mirror: Highly entertaining and splendidly played.

MGM's Talent Lab Has Debut Tonight

MGM inaugurates its little theatre talent laboratory tonight at the Hawthorne High School in Beverly Hills. Five one-act plays will be performed before an audience composed exclusively of executives, producers, directors and writers—all from MGM.

The tryout plays are "The Road of Poplars," by Vernon Sylvaine: "The First and the Last," by John Galsworthy; "Another Way Out," by Laurence Langner; "The Critic," by Val Clarke; "The Badger," by Lawrence Rising. The talent laboratory is Maurice Revnes' idea.

Para. Signs Westman

Nydia Westman, completing a group-picture deal with Radio, goes to Paramount for a featured role in "Ladies Should Listen." Rebecca and Silton set the ticket.

Indies to Make More Pix

twenty-eight features, while Mascot has announced fourteen.

One of the leading independents asserts that this move is a measure of self-defense.

"The answer is," he said, "that where indies were formerly satisfied to supply part of a year's product to an exhibitor, they are going out after larger sales contracts with those exhibitors they have been servicing. Those theatre men who have been using the indie product and can be sold again this year, will buy more pictures.

"The really important money comes from the large circuit buys. Few indies get in, but a larger number of pictures increases their chances for individual bookings. One good picture that gets in pays for several that are forced to play the independent houses."

Hill Brings Back Props From China

George Hill returned Friday night from four months scouting in China for the atmospheric work and native props required for "The Good Earth." He brought back 250 cases of props for the MGM picture.

Frank Messenger, production manager, Charles Clarke, cameraman, John Miller, property man, and their staff of 19 are still working in China.

Frances Marion, who is preparing the screen play, met Hill at Honolulu and returned with him.

OPEN FORUM

Hollywood Reporter:

As an exhibitor I read your Hollywood Reporter regularly and find that you are opposed to double programs. So is every other legitimate exhibitor.

Enclosed herewith you will find newspaper advertisements of a Warner theatre in St. Louis whereby they play two of the biggest money making picturestures of the year on a joint program for 25 cents: "It Happened One Night" and "David Harum." If that continues, God help the business.

It's bad enough to pal two "cluck" pictures, but when a major producing company permits its theatres to run two of the best money getters of the year, what can the poor little independent exhibitor do? Probably run four pictures to combat this.

'MIDNIGHT ALIBI' EXCELLENT; 'SMARTY' CORKING COMEDY

Barthelmess Has Best Pic in Months

"MIDNIGHT ALIBI"
(Warners)

Direction .....Alan Crosland
Author .....Damon Runyon
Screen Play.....Warren Duff
Photography .....William Rees
Cast: Richard Barthelmess, Ann Dvorak, Helen Chandler, Helen Lowell, Henry O'Neill, Robert Barrat, Robert McWade, Purnell Pratt, Henry Tyler, Paul Hurst, Arthur Aylesworth, Vincent Sherman.

Here is a gangster film, "Midnight Alibi," that has a brand new angle and a swell role, besides, for Richard Barthelmess.

Excellently written and directed, the entire cast has a good chance to speak credible, meaty lines and to give performances that ring true in every instance. Entertainment in this film rates high, and there is just enough sentiment and drama, neatly balanced, to please any audience.

Barthelmess is a minor gangster who falls in love with the sister (Ann Dvorak) of Robert Barrat, the biggest and meanest racketeer in New York City. Barthelmess escapes from his machine-gun wrath one night by scaling the wall that surrounds the mansion of the ancient Abigail Ardsley, an old lady who lives all alone in million dollar loneliness.

While Barthelmess waits until it is safe for him to venture forth again, the old lady tells him the story of her thwarted love (with Barthelmess in a flash-back taking the part of the lover of the olden days) and begs him not to let anything stand in the way of his love. Encouraged by her, he goes to see Barrat and endeavors to explain his good intentions to the gangster. Barrat pulls a gun on him, but, before he can shoot him, Barrat is killed by a Barthelmess henchman.

Then the trial—and the first appearance of the little old lady in fifty years, and her surprise testimony that smoothes the way for the young lovers.

Sentimental—yes. But so expertly written, played and directed that it never goes out of bounds.

Helen Lowell, as "the old doll," is excellent and sympathetic. Miraculously she re-creates the atmosphere of the old days in New York and the tender, deathless love she felt for her old sweetheart. Her superb, hilarious appearance in court is something to be remembered.

Barthelmess is better than he has been in some time, and Ann Dvorak is well cast as the girl. Helen Chandler is charming and utterly convincing as the "old doll" when she was young and in love. Henry O'Neill is the mean old father. Barrat is perfect as Angie, the gangster. Robert McWade makes the most of a good part; Purnell Pratt is a baffled lawyer, and Harry Tyler, Paul Hurst, Arthur Aylesworth and Vincent Sherman have lesser, but important roles.

Alan Crosland directed sensitively; Warren Duff made a bang-up adaptation of the Damon Runyon story, and William Rees photographed.

5000 To Be at Party For Birthday of MGM

'House of Mystery' Strong on Comedy

"HOUSE OF MYSTERY"
(Monogram)

Direction .....William Nigh
Original .....Adam Hull Shirk
Screen Play.....Albert E. DeMond
Photography .....Archie Stout
Cast: Ed Lowry, Verna Hillie, Brandon Hurst, John Sheehan, Laya Joy (Joyzelle), Clay Clement, George Hayes, Dale Fuller, Harry Bradley, Irving Bacon, Mary Foy, Samuel Godfrey, George Cleveland.

Involved mystery melodrama, liberally enlivened with broad comedy that will afford an interesting hour for not too critical audiences. A lack of name strength in the cast automatically relegates the picture to the program class for smaller theatres.

The plot concerns an Asiatic curse, called down upon the head of an exploring archaeologist who kills a sacred monkey. He schemes to use the "Curse of Kai" to defraud his backers of the expedition and is successful in murdering two of his English associates. Twenty years later, he is discovered hiding out in America. The surviving backers and their heirs are assembled for the split of two million. But first they must spend a week in the explorer's house that they may decide for themselves whether they want money with a curse upon it. Three murders quickly occur and there would have been more had not Scotland Yard intervened to solve the case.

In its comedy, amounting to burlesque, the picture is more successful than in its mystery. Plausibility is not one of the stronger points and many details are left unexplained. The use of an ape practically trademarks the original as the work of Adam Hull Shirk. Dialogue by Albert DeMond offers frequent amusing highlights. Direction by William Nigh stresses the humor. It would have been better if the whole affair had been a parody on mystery mellers.

The cast works hard and first rate performances are delivered by Clay Clement as the explorer, Harry Bradley as an absent-minded professor, John Sheehan as a comic plumber, Irving Bacon as an equally comic detective and Joyzelle, now rechristened Laya Joy, as a Temple dancer. Verna Hillie and Ed Lowry carry the romantic interest, Lowry having a bit of comedy, too.

Director, Cast and Writers Win Honors

"SMARTY"
(Warners)

Direction .....Robert Florey
Author .....F. Hugh Herbert
Screen Play: F. Hugh Herbert and Carl Erickson.
Photography .....George Barnes
Cast: Joan Blondell, Warren William, Edward Everett Horton, Frank McHugh, Claire Dodd, Joan Wheleer, Virginia Sale, Leonard Carey.

One of the most intriguing of the Warner output of the past few months is "Smarty."

It is a light, happy, irresponsible little comedy, that twinkles and grins and occasionally even gets a little slapstick. It's lots of fun and is as inconsequential as the foam on a beer glass.

Not inconsequential, however, is the keen, clever direction; the wholehearted, humorous acting, and the perfectly swell dialogue. There's not a line in the thing that doesn't get a laugh, and they are lines that are very human and credible.

Joan Blondell is cast as a silly, flighty, exasperating, maddening woman who drives her husband, Warren William, to distraction, and finally into giving her a good, hearty sock on the jaw. Instantly, with one eye on her lawyer, Edward Everett Horton, and the other on the possibility of Williams' retrieving jealousy, she gets a divorce . . . and marries Horton.

Horton finds, in due time, that living with her is a perfectly good excuse for extreme cruelty, and one evening, exasperated beyond endurance, he also gives her a good sock.

There's not much more to the plot than that—except that the whole thing is handled for the maximum of entertainment. Miss Blondell is expertly maddening as the flighty wife; William does good work as her first husband, and Edward Everett Horton is extremely amusing as her second. Claire Dodd is utterly charming as a friend; Frank McHugh is funny, Joan Wheeler makes a good deal out of a small role, and Virginia Sale and Leonard Carey are well cast.

Robert Florey directed lightly and easily; F. Hugh Herbert and Carl Erickson made a beautiful adaptation of the story by Herbert; and George Barnes photographed with his usual taste.

Don't worry about this one. It starts intriguingly and gets better.

Claudette Colbert For Lead in Stahl Picture

Claudette Colbert will have the lead in "Imitation of Life," which John M. Stahl will direct for Universal. Picture will not start for several weeks.

Before the picture starts she goes on the Lehn and Fink hour on the air, doing scenes from "Cleopatra," her current Paramount picture. Schulberg, Feldman and Gurney set both deals.

Not that it MATTERS
by Helen Gwynn

One thing we can't understand about Hollywood is why it hasn't got the finest theatrical fare in the country. When you stop to consider, practically all the best playwrights, actors, actresses and directors in the country manage to spend the best part of their time in Hollywood. Ever since the talkies came in ,the majority of these people have come from the stage. And once you've ever had anything to do with the stage, that form of Art never quite releases its strangle hold on the people who have contributed to it.

We hear talk all the time of how soandso would like to go back East for a season on or with the stage. But why go East? Why shouldn't all the desire for audiences and applause be gratified in the first place in the territory to which it eventually comes back anyway?

We also constantly hear talk of how this major company or that major company is seriously considering backing a number of plays each year on Broadway because audience reaction is so valuable in determining a play's screen possibilities. Why should Broadway be the first and final judge? Why should producers be so anxious to spend their money on Broadway productions, with casting difficulties being even worse than they are here, when eventually there must be an exchange of opinion between the East and West coast story departments on whether or not they are good buys? It is thought necessary in many instances to send people from West to East to look the plays over and, then when they are bought, in the majority of cases, picture companies put their own contract players in the movie version, use their own directors and have their own writers doctor up the script.

Why shouldn't all this heavy production get its best chance here? If it's new talent the producers are seeking, heaven knows the woods around these parts are full of talent awaiting its chance, and since movies are no longer in a position to build their own star material, surely the stage in Hollywood should offer a good cultivating ground.

Surely the audience reaction in Hollywood or Los Angeles should have every bit as much value as that of Broadway. Perhaps even a bit more, because the population of Southern California is native to the whole wide world and is one of the most amazing combinations of big town and small talk in the world. Why not recognize Los Angeles as one of the greatest centers in the country, give it a stage that is worth supporting instead of treating it as a sort of outhouse stock company and waiting for Broadway to dictate the price of entertainment and the type of entertainment?

Why not the best theatre in the country in Hollywood at much less expense and trouble?

SENNETT AS INDIE WILL MAKE FILM OF OWN LIFE

Mack Sennett will move back into his former office at the Mack Sennett studio Monday, this time as an independent producer, leasing space in the studio that bears his name.

Sennett was discharged from bankruptcy last week by Federal Judge George Cosgrave, having complied with all requirements of the bankruptcy laws.

Walter C. Durst, trustee for Mack Sennett Inc., yesterday made the third payment to preferred claimants, making a total of 62½ per cent of the $7,600 labor claims that has been paid off. Approximately $5,000 in preferred claims remain to be settled. Other liabilities listed in the bankruptcy proceedings last December totaled $150,000.

Sennett, on re-entering the studio, will bring in Ralph Graves to prepare a feature story, tentatively called "The Cavalcade of Motion Pictures." This will be based on the same Hollywoodiana being compiled for Gene Fowler's "Custard Pie Epic," for Covici-Fried's October publication. Fowler has had a staff of five research ghosts collecting Hollywood lore and anecdotes for the last month, and expects to go east a week from today to start actual work on his book.

Sennett hopes to start work on his picture in July. He will personally supervise, but, although the work is ostensibly his biography, he is not likely to appear in it.

With the current phobia toward biographical pitfalls, Fowler will preserve the anonymity of many characters in his book. This will likewise be the rule for the picture, with no likelihood that any players will be engaged to impersonae themselves.

Jackie Searl Washed Up With Mean Kid Roles

Jackie Searl has turned down Sol Lesser's deal for the part of Horace in "Peck's Bad Boy," which is the heavy role opposite Jackie Cooper.

Jackie's manager has found it to the boy's disadvantage to enact nasty characters, has lost a number of other parts and radio bookings owing to it, and has determined to stop it definitely.

Bookings For Foy Pic

The local division of Foy Productions Ltd. has "Tomorrow's Children" booked May 23 in Bard's Colorado Theatre, Pasadena. The sterilization picture also has its bookings for Long Beach, San Pedro, San Diego and other Southern California spots.

Sabin Joins Columbia

Charles Sabin, whom Columbia signed in New York, arrived yesterday in Hollywood and checks in at the studio today to take up his new long-term contract as a featured player.

Keighley Assigned

Warners assigned William Keighley Saturday to direct "Kansas City Princess," also setting Maxine Doyle and Arthur Hoyt in featured roles in a cast topped by Joan Blondell and Glenda Farrell.

23rd Psalm Being Made By Texans

Bill Farnum appears as Tubal Cain in a Cinecolor version of the 23d Psalm, titled "The Song of the Shepherd," which National Pictures Corporation of San Antonio is producing at the Sennett studio. Others in the three-reeler, first of a series planned by the Texas firm, include Jean Houghton, and Paul Durst, four-year-old son of the Sennett, Inc., trustee, W. C. Durst.

A. H. Phillips and W. J. Kerr, heads of the San Antonio company, have returned to Texas to prepare exterior locations after seeing interiors completed at the Ventura Boulevard lot. Max Stengler, cameraman, will follow the first of the week, and Babe Stafford, who is directing, will go later. The screen adaptation is by Gene Luder.

National operates the Gulf Coast Studio at San Antonio, where six westerns were produced last year.

Emerson and Loos on Script of 'Biography'

MGM has assigned Anita Loos and John Emerson to write the screen play on S. N. Behrman's "Biography." No cast or director set as yet, though Alice Brady will probably do the same role in the picture as she did in the local stage play.

Sarecky-Mascot Split

Lou Sarecky and Mascot split Saturday, the associate producer bowing out after story difficulties on "Waterfront Lady," which he was to produce. Picture has been shelved.

Horsley in 'Rear Car'

John David Horsley is in MGM's "Rear Car," playing a bodyguard to Mary Carlisle. Horsley just completed a part in "100% Pure."

American Pix Lead 10 to 1 in Budapest

Budapest. — American pictures are the greatest favorites in all the Budapest houses. At present the ratio is about ten American for one German picture, which is just the reverse from two years ago.

Personnel Changes At General Service

A number of changes have been made in the official personnel at the General Service Studios, the idea being to build greater efficiency in the conduct of the plant and increase the rentals for Erpi.

S. E. Hawkins, who has been in charge of the Eastern Service Studios at Long Island, has been made studio manager and is in charge of all departments except sound. Dr. E. M. Honan continues as sound director.

C. Bardwell has been made chief electrician, W. MacDonald is the new construction superintendent, and Oscar Wright is the purchasing agent. The last two are formerly of the Harold Lloyd organization.

Paramount Getting Rodgers and Hart Back

New York.—Paramount is polishing off a deal to return Dick Rodgers and Larry Hart to Hollywood. The music men are considering writing the numbers for "Mississippi," which Arthur Hornblow is producing.

Charlie Ray To Write

Charlie Ray will return to the picture scene, after a long illness, via the writing route. He has completed a novel, "Deep Night," and has sent it east to a New York publishing house which is negotiating for it.

Stephani on Script

Frederick Stephani has been assigned to script Alice Duer Miller's play, "The Charm School," which the studio will make as a musical. William Le Baron produces.

Cantor Says Acad. Must Be Destroyed

accomplished the same end, and a provision whereby the actors' agents would be licensed by the producers.

"I conferred with the President of the United States," said Cantor, "and left him a brief stating our case. In a few days he suspended the three objectionable provisions which would have controlled our salaries and put our agents in the producers' hands."

Cantor then outlined some of the plans of the Guild. One is to get a new contract for the free lance actor containing a provision giving the actor a 36-hour rest period between the time he finishes work Saturday night and when he returns Monday. Another move on foot is to change the "day player' basis so that an actor won't have to wait three weeks for one day's work after he has been signed.

Cantor brought another cheer when he declared the Guild does not intend to plunge its members into a strike, but intends to accomplish its ends by quiet, patient and co-operative methods of negotiation and use of the code. He also declared the Guild is going after a new minimum basic contract which will take the settlement of disagreements between actors and producers out of the Academy's hands and put them within the Guild.

Following Cantor's speech the annual election of officers was announced. Cantor was re-elected president. Other officers were: Robert Montgomery, first vice-president; Ann Harding, second vice-president; James Cagney, third vice-president; Kenneth Thomson, secretary; Richard Tucker, assistant secretary; Lucile Gleason, treasurer, and Jean Hersholt, assistant treasurer.

The following were elected to the Executive Board: George Arliss, Mary Astor, Arthur Byron, James Cagney, Joseph Cawthorn, Berton Churchill, Dudley Digges, Leon Errol, C. Henry Gordon, Jean Hersholt, Miriam Hopkins, Boris Karloff, Jeanette MacDonald, Noel Madison, Ralph Morgan, Alan Mowbray, Edward G. Robinson, Ivan Simpson, Spencer Tracy, Richard Tucker, Arthur Vinton and Warren William.

Actors Play Better Polo Than Bosses

The actors beat the producers by nine goals to three at the match played yesterday afternoon at the Uplifters Field, the proceeds—and the place was packed—going to the Marion Davies clinic.

Will Rogers came back from San Francisco to play, and the others on the actor team were Leslie Howard, Johnny Mack Brown, James Gleason and Spencer Tracy. The producers were Jack Warner, Walt Disney, Lucien Hubbard, Ray Griffith and Frank Borzage.

They played eight chukkers, which were more fun than polo and, at the conclusion, each of the winning team was presented with a Marion Davies trophy—a cocktail shaker—Carole Lombard making the presentations.

Jack Holt refereed the match, Barbara Stanwyck was the time-keeper and Leo Carrillo, in a weird costume, announced the results polylingually. Also Fred Stone did stunts with a whip between the Blondes and Brunettes match and the big event.

'U' Making 'Red Rider' Extra Length Serial

Universal serial, "Red Rider," gets under way Thursday and will be stretched three chapters more than the regular serial of twelve episodes.

Buck Jones is starred, Louis Friedlander directs and Henry MacRae produces. Ella O'Neil made the screen play from the W. C. Tuttle story.

But, from what I do know about it, my job will be to speed things up and straighten out matters that at present have to go by wire or mail back to New York and there take their turn in being handled. My office will be a general clearing house for all the production code committees and I hope that I shall be able to get action in a speedy fashion."

Major Donovan has been here for the past two months. He has been located in the offices of the Studio Labor Committee in the Guarantee Building. He will continue his office there for the present, although he says he will probably change after Flinn returns.

'MILKY WAY' JOYOUS FARCE; 'I, MYSELF' PLAIN DRIVEL

Would Be Fine Bet For Film Purposes

"THE MILKY WAY"

Sidney Harmon and James R. Ullman present "The Milky Way," a comedy by Lynn Root and Harry Clork; directed by William W. Schorr; setting by Sointu Syrjala; with William Foran, Brian Donlevy, Gladys George, Leo Donnelly, Hugh O'Connell, Emily Lowry, John Brown, Edward Emerson and Bernard Pathe. At the Cort Theatre.

New York.—"The Milky Way" is a new farce which looks as though it was destined for a long and successful run. It compares favorably with the best of the successful rowdy farces of the current season.

The story concerns itself with one Burleigh Sullivan, a milk delivery man, who, through an accident, is credited with a knockout of the middleweight champion. This makes Sullivan a big figure and the champion's manager builds him up by fixed fights as a potential contender for the championship. Sullivan is no fighter and does not want to be, but, in spite of himself, achieves the crown. His sister and the real champion fall in love and this provides the dramatic interest in the play.

Hugh O'Connell, as Burleigh Sullivan, the man who did not want to be a fighter, had the audience hanging to the sides of their seats every moment he was on the stage and he was in evidence for a major portion. Leo Donnelly as Gabby Sloan, the fighter's manager, played his part wih gusto, and Brian Donlevy as the champion was all that could be asked for. The outstanding feminine character was played by Gladys George, who portrayed the role of the sweetheart of the manager. Her wisecracks and comedy helped considerably to enliven the evening. The rest of the cast were competent in their roles.

The actual fight between the champion and the contender was conveyed to the audience by means of lowering the curtain during the third act and having the reports apparently come over radio broadcast.

It is most interesting to know that Gladys George has been signed by MGM for pictures. She is a sort of combination of junior May West and Glenda Farrell rolled into one. She plays her part for everything there is in it and MGM is to be congratulated.

"The Milky Way" was written a year before "Palooka" hit the screen. This may affect its picture value somewhat, as the character portrayed by Stuart Erwin in "Palooka" is somewhat similar to that created by O'Connell as Burleigh Sullivan. However, "The Milky Way" is a much better situation farce for picture purposes and filled with more gags. It should make a much better and funnier screen farce with its burlesque on prize fights actually shown on the screen, than the stage offering.

Brandt Getting 11 More; Chain Now 35

New York.—The Brandt Circuit of New York is closing for eleven more theatres in the New York territory. These additions will make the holdings of the circuit 35 houses.

Ginger Rogers and NBC Settle Suit

Ginger Rogers, who filed a $100,000 suit against the National Broadcasting Company, Radio Station KFI, Madame Sylvia, Health Bread Company and others, on charges that she had been impersonated over the air without her consent, settled the suit Saturday.

A part of this settlement was Miss Rogers' insistence that all interested parties make a public apology in the effort to dispel any damaging impressions the broadcast may have caused. Ginger Rogers was not played on the radio program by the star, but by an impersonator hired by Madame Sylvia.

New Distrib For Duce And Carnera Pictures

New York.—"The Black Shirt," the picture of his own life supervised by Mussolini, will be distributed in this country by Samuel Cummins and Jack Koerpel instead of by the H. H. Rogers Fairhaven Productions.

Cummins and Koerpel have also acquired a picture on the life of Primo Carnera for distribution.

Russian Due in N.Y. to Buy Sound Equipment

New York.—M. Usievitch, Russian film executive, is due here today to purchase sound equipment and to arrange for showings of American films in Russia.

M. Verlinsky has just been made American head of Amkino, replacing M. Gordiev.

Just Another Bad One to End Season

"I, MYSELF."

Malcolm L. Pearson and Donald E. Baruch present "I, Myself," a new play in three acts by Adelyn Bushnell; staged by Charles Hopkins; setting by Adrian Cracraft; with Eleanor King, Regina Wallace, Edmund MacDonald, Frank Wilcox, Charles Trowbridge, Harry M. Cooke, Walter Baldwin, William Bonelli, Larry Bolton, Robert J. Mulligan, Warren Trent, Frank Roberts, David Bern, Frank Verigun, Martin Howe, David Hughes, William David. At the Mansfield Theatre.

New York.—At the Mansfield there was unfolded another alleged drama to join the parade of bad plays that usually closes the season.

In brief the story concerns itself with one William Trent, an unsuccessful New England lawyer, who turns to selling insurance, in which he also proves unsuccessful. To a bum soliciting a handout, he reveals the fact that he has a $50,000 policy and induces the hobo to bump him off, in the belief that the money will prove a boon to his family. The shooting is successful, with the exception of the fact that his ghost must stick around, and stick around it does for the rest of the three acts, raving and ranting all over the stage.

As a companion ghost he has a former service man, who was in the same regiment with him and who committed suicide. This second ghost is supposed to show him the way to belief in the Great Spirit. Several complications occur. Trent's wife is accused of the murder; his daughter has an affair with a millionaire's son, who marries her to do right by Nell, and finally the tramp comes back and confesses to clear up the situation.

A short play, of two hours duration, played in one set, it seemed never ending. The applause at the finish was probably the audience's thanks that the funeral service was at last over. Any motion picture producer that would attempt to film this should have his head examined.

There is very little one can say for the actors in a play of this kind, as it is most unusual for a very bad play to reveal any potential picture stars in its cast. This is particularly true of this play, which did not reveal any personages who might lend glamour to the silent drama.

Lionel Atwill Signed For 'Stamboul Quest'

Lionel Atwill gets the third important spot in "Stamboul Quest" at MGM, next to Myrna Loy and George Brent.

The picture is due to start today, Sam Wood directing.

L. B. Mayer Guest of Notables in North

Louis B. Mayer's flying trip north Thursday night, with John Zanft and Howard Strickling as planemates, was to address the congregation of the Presbyterian Church at Richmond, Cal. He discussed motion pictures and censorship.

Mayer took the opportunity to visit his friend, Governor Rolph, who is ill in San Francisco, and himself was given a surprise testimonial luncheon, attended by 40 jurists, civic leaders and political notables, including John Quinn, one of the gubernatorial candidates.

Mayer, Zanft and Strickling landed at Los Angeles Saturday after a bumpy return ride.

Paramount Buys Four 'Superstition' Shorts

Paramount purchased Saturday for release four "Superstition" one-reelers made last November by Borden Pictures at General Service Studio.

The deal was made by W. C. Durst, trustee for the production company, who will personally complete production on "Rabbit's Foot," last of the series. The others are "Black Cat," "Three On a Match" and "Walking Under a Ladder." Ray Nazarro wrote and directed the series.

Warner and Monogram Fail to Get Together

H. B. Warner and "Jane Eyre" decided to skip it mutually, when the actor and Monogram failed to agree on details connected with production.

Colin Clive has been mentioned for the part, but no decision had been made Saturday.

'THIRTY DAY PRINCESS' AN EXCITING, AMUSING COMEDY

VARIETY

Thirty Day Princess

B. P. Schulberg production for Paramount release. Directed by Marion Gering. Original, Clarence Budington Kelland. Screen play, Preston Sturges and Frank Partos. Adaptation, Sam Hellman and Edwin Justus Mayer. Art directors, Hans Dreier and Bill Ihnen. Photographer, Leon Shamroy. Cast: Sylvia Sidney, Cary Grant, Edward Arnold, Henry Stephenson, Vince Barnett, Edgar Norton, Ray Walker, Lucien Littlefield, Robert McWade, George Baxter, Marguerite Namara. Previewed at the Alexander, Glendale, April 26. Running time, 75 mins.

Thirty Day Princess,' an amusing variant of the royalty and commoner theme is of that whimsical comedy type with farcical emphasis which may be counted on to stimulate the box office over wide territory

Story is ideally suited to Sylvia Sidney's talents. With Cary Grant agreeably playing opposite and supported by an exceptionally well selected cast, Miss Sidney's following will be amply satisfied with her dual role as the princess and the American ingenue actress who impersonates her

Light fantastic plot deals with the machinations of an American banker, Edward Arnold, and the king of a mythical country to float a bond issue, and to use a hungry little actress to double for the crown princess as an exploitation front when the regal femme contracts a case of mumps upon her arrival in the U S A

Cary Grant puts conviction and zest into his romantic part, while Edward Arnold gives the banker character excellent proportion. Henry Stevenson plays the king very humanly, a bewildered baron in the regal entourage is well handled by Edgar Norton. Robert McWade clicks as a cynical wise cracking managing editor, and Vince Barnett develops a fresh comedy character for a farcical standout as the yokel scout who considers himself affianced to the princess. Others are sharply played bits.

Marion Gering's direction is smartly pitched for laughs and amusing character relations, with here and there a fine bit of relieving pathos. The five writers who share credit for the yarn, adaptation and screen play—Clarence Budington Kelland, Sam Hellman and Edwin Justus Mayer, Preston Sturges and Frank Partos — give the direction and playing a fine structural and dialog underpinning.

Photography is exceptionally good, and the art direction and mounting are class

Even with the impressive list of good mythical kingdom pictures for competition, Paramount's "Thirty Day Princess" makes a swell showing.

It is a lovely bit of hokum—unbelievable, exciting, romantic and gay. Its fantastic plot is embellished with dialogue that is witty, impudent and meaty, and with acting that is hyper and with direction that is super.

Occasionally the film verges on the satirical, but throughout it never loses its sense of humor or its spirit of good, honest fun.

Miss Sidney is very, very charming as the Princess, and very, very funny as the little actress. Cary Grant has never put more genuine spirit and vitality into a part than he does here. Arnold is good as the banker, Henry Stephenson is the King of Taronia, Vince Barnett is extremely amusing as the Princess' dumb fiance, Edgar Norton is well cast as the prime minister, Lucien Littlefield is amusing, as is Robert McWade, and Ray Walker, George Baxter and Marguerite Namara contribute a lot to the picture in smaller roles.

Marion Gering directed cleverly and with a keen sense of comedy; Preston Sturges and Frank Partos wrote the screen play, based on a Clarence Budington Kelland story, and Sam Hellman and Edwin Justus Mayer made the totally amusing adaptation. Art direction by Hans Dreier and Bill Ihnen is notable, and Leon Shamroy's photography is artistically outstanding.

No exhibitor in any town in the country will have difficulty selling this picture to his patrons. It is squawk-proof, and will make any audience happy.

MOTION PICTURE DAILY

"Thirty Day Princess"

(Schulberg-Paramount)

HOLLYWOOD, April 26.—Rarely has the Cinderella formula failed, nor does it in the case of "Thirty Day Princess," in which Sylvia Sidney takes all possible advantage of a light role and kicks in with the best performance in the best picture she has done in many moons.

What goes on here whirls around the flotation of a fifty million dollar loan for one of those tucked away, miniature kingdoms, called Taronia this time. To put on the necessary show, Miss Sidney goes to America, contracts the mumps and almost wrecks the national ballyhoo deemed necessary to stimulate the American public into a bond buying orgy. Her double, also played by Miss Sydney, is dug up from somewhere in the American scene and a pleasant subterfuge is carried on. Complications threaten exposure, and finally love comes to the thirty day princess with Cary Grant at the receiving and delivering end.

Charming treatment aimed at, and successful in striking a high comedy note, plus excellent performances by all hands, place this attraction high on the list of releases just in the offing. The picture is not big in concept, but is wholesome, frothy entertainment of the kind that may not break records, but which will do generally gratifying business up and down the land.

'MISS MARKER' CERTAIN HIT

MOTION PICTURE DAILY

"Little Miss Marker"

(B. P. Schulberg-Paramount)

HOLLYWOOD, April 29.—Chalk up a box-office bullseye for B. P. Schulberg's "Little Miss Marker," adapted from Damon Runyon's story. Packed with human interest, tenderly sentimental, sparkling with topical comedy, capitalizing on dramatic suspense, the production, motivated by colorful dialogue, zooms Shirley Temple to stardom.

The yarn rotates around Runyon, racetrack and Lindy Cafe characters. Adolphe Menjou, sorrowful, gets Miss Temple for a bad I. O. U. The baby knows only King Arthur legends and draws Menjou and Claudia Dell together, upsetting the menacing Charles Bickford romance. A slangy, tough gang is horrified as the child takes on its manners and speech, and masquerades as medieval knights to make her dreams come true. Miss Temple, hurt in a fall from a horse as Bickford busts up a party, is saved from death by his blood transfusion, making the villain a hero and clearing the way for a Menjou-Dell wedding and the child's adoption.

Menjou and Miss Dell are outstanding. Bickford is convincing as the menace to the child. Lyman Overman, Tammany Young, Sam Hardy, Warren Hymer and John Kelly excel in comedy contrast.

It is a natural for first runs. The picture, teeming with personality and production story values, also is a strong family attraction for re-creating children interest. Alexander Hall directed with sympathetic understanding from a screen play by William Lipman, Sam Hellman nd Gladys Lehman.

Screen Play: William R. Lipman, Sam Hellman, Gladys Lehman.

Cast: Adolphe Menjou, Dorothy Dell, Charles Bickford, Shirley Temple, Lynne Overman, Frank McGlynn Sr., Jack Sheehan, Cary Owen, Puggy White, Sleep 'n Eat, Tammany Young, Sam Hardy, Edward Earle, John Kelly, Warren Hymer.

Here is a large helping of sentimentality, served with a lavish hand. Based upon the same formula, in fact, by the same original author, Damon Runyon, it should appeal to the same audiences that laughed and cried at "Lady for a Day." And you know what that means to the box-office. This is the second B. P. Schulberg production on successive evenings and the second hit.

That amazing four-year-old, Shirley Temple, delivers a truly astounding performance.

It is to the distinct credit of the adult members of the cast that they were not all merely feeders for Shirley. Adolphe Menjou, stripped of every familiar mannerism, contributes probably his finest characterization as the bookie. Dorothy Dell looks better and better with each picture. Her screen success is assured. Charles Bickford plays a gangster with his usual assurance, and Lynne Overman scores heavily with every line. The others all have their moments, and all good, with Warren Hymer and John Kelly particularly outstanding as nursemaids, nee prizefighters.

The screen play by William Lipman, Sam Hellman and Gladys Lehman, contains some fine dialogue, and Alexander Hall's direction does not miss a trick. Several times obvious situations threaten, only to be avoided by a deft twist. Camera work by Alfred Gilks excellent.

Your campaign will have to explain the title, which should not be difficult. Once explained, it will intrigue and the rest is clear sailing. "Little Miss Marker" is sure-fire sentiment

Little Miss Marker

B. P. Schulberg production for Paramount release. Directed by Alexander Hall, from original by Damon Runyon. Screen play, William R. Lipman, Sam Hellman, Gladys Lehman. Music, Ralph Rainger. Lyrics, Leon Robin. Camera, Alfred Gilks. Cast: Adolphe Menjou, Dorothy Dell, Charles Bickford, Shirley Temple, Lynne Overman, Frank McGlynn, Sr., Jack Sheehan, Gary Owen, Sleep 'N Eat, Puggy White, Tammany Young, Sam Hardy, Edward Earle, John Kelly, Warren Hymer. Previewed April 26, Alexander, Glendale. Running time, 75 mins.

Little Miss Marker goes a long way in catapulting Shirley Temple to stardom as the four-year-old actress gives a freshness and poignancy to the yarn that is bound to pull them in at all houses. She speaks without hesitancy in argot either of racetrack touts or elves.

In the story, really suited to the little actress, her chief helpmate is Adolphe Menjou, who does a hard, wizened characterization of a race track bookie. Yarn concerns the exploits of the child left by her father as collateral on a bad bet. The father kills himself, and the bookie, with the youngster on his hands, is forced to seek aid from Dorothy Dell, a cabaret torcher and girl friend of Charles Bickford, horse owner.

The romantic theme of the story is spiraled around the three adults, with Shirley Temple pulling the wisecracking strings. Her childish simplicity breaks down the harsh manners of the trio, and finally brings Dorothy Dell and Adolphe Menjou together.

Authors of the screen play, William R. Lipman, Sam Hellman and Gladys Lehman have kept a sufficiency of Damon Runyon's original wisecracking language to make the dialog unusually marked. Characterization of Shirley Temple is spaced for laugh getters, but yet is filled at times with pathos.

Lynne Overman plays the part of a track cashier and the con science burdened gambler with finesse. Sam Hardy, as Benny the Gouge, member of the gambling circle. John Kelly and Warren Hymer give good characterizations. Others are bits.

Alexander Hall's direction is smartly welded and the photography by Alfred Gilks is satisfactory.

• EDWARD ARNOLD •

"FORCEFUL" ~ "VIRILE" ~ "VERSATILE"

"Edward Arnold . . . all but wraps the picture up and walks away with it." (Sadie McKee) He is the drunken, party-loving millionaire who marries Joan (Crawford) in a moment of sentimental bibbing, only later to love her deeply and lose her. Arnold's drunken screen moments are classics, and the scenes in which they occur are comedy highlights of the picture, but he matches his own comedy talents with equally swell dramatic ability in later scenes."—Hollywood Reporter.

"Edward Arnold, as the playboy stew, wraps the picture up and carries it out the door."—Daily Variety.

• JACQUELINE WELLS •

WAMPAS BABY STAR OF 1934—
"LOVELY" ~ "ATTRACTIVE" ~ "TALENTED"

"Jacqueline Wells is so lovely."—Grace Kingsley in Los Angeles Times.

". . . Attractive young Jacqueline Wells . . ."—Jerry Hoffman in Los Angeles Examiner.

"Jacqueline Wells is attractive."—Mordaunt Hall in New York Times.

"Jacqueline Wells has a sweet singing voice."—Hollywood Reporter.

• RAY WALKER •

"FUNNY" ~ "LIKEABLE" ~ "PEPPY"

"If a composite photograph were made of Jack Oakie, Lee Tracy, Spencer Tracy and James Cagney, the resultant likeness would have a pronounced resemblance to Ray Walker. I do not mean by these statements to indicate that Walker is a paragon of all the movie virtues, or, contrariwise, that he has no personality of his own. I mean only that he appears to be an unusually valuable handy man to have about the studio—an actor who seems capable of enacting almost any kind of a role, and one who ought to be reckoned with in prognostications of who is going to be who in the movies in the days to come."—Hollywood Citizen-News.

• JEAN CHATBURN •

'THE INGENUE FIND' OF THE YEAR!

NEW STORY

"UNUSUAL BEAUTY AND BRAINS combined brought film triumph to Jean Chatburn yesterday, when she was given a featured player's seven-year contract by B. P. Schulberg, independent producer at the Paramount studios."—Los Angeles Illustrated Daily News.

• LEON SHAMROY, A.S.C.

"ARTISTIC" ~ "DEPENDABLE" ~ "ECONOMICAL"

"Leon Shamroy's photography is a lesson in that art." (Good Dame)—Hollywood Reporter.

"Camera is well handled." (Good Dame)—Daily Variety.

"Leon Shamroy has delivered a most satisfactory job from behind the camera." (Three Cornered Moon)—Hollywood Herald.

"Photography is exceptionally good." (Thirty Day Princess)—Daily Variety.

"Leon Shamroy's photography is artistically outstanding." (Thirty Day Princess)—Hollywood Reporter.

WHO'S WHO

the REFLECTOR

Artie Miller says "thank you" to the boys who called at Hollywood Hospital . . . he's home again now and feeling great . . . back on the job in a coupla weeks. . . . Here's a fine expression of confidence in the intelligence of a cameraman—Director George Hill (MGM) arrived home this week and left Charlie Clark, his photographer, in Peking and Shanghai where the lenser will use his noodle as well as camera equipment in completing shots and scenes for "Good Earth." . . . 'Nother MGM camerchief ported from a big liner last week when Dan Clark returned from Honolulu where's wickie-wackie-hoola-hoola to make things at least interesting when the "liquid sunshine" prevents procedure with the cameras . . . but Dan's most enthusiastic and allows that between showers he did get some lovely shots.

Bert Glennon finished first picture under his new contract with Fox at Movietone City and everybody seems glad the deal was made. . . . Bert and Mike Leshing got through the picture without a single argument . . . magician, this guy Glennon. . . . At the same big stoojo the sound department will continue along under Eddie Hanson without interruption because Ed's vacation to Alaska has been moved up several notches . . . looks like late July, now. . . . Our old friend Harry Jackson is doing a swellish job on Sol Wurtzel's outfit. . . . "She Learned About Sailors" is his latest. . . . Henry Sharp completed at Paramount . . . ditto Milt Krasner . . . and Charlie Lang is called in off the Bel-Air course to resume his picture account of Miriam Hopkins' "puppy" is okey-dokey again. . . . At Radio a resting spell allows Roy Hunt to tinker with his radio receivers while Teddy Tetzlaff, Jack Mackenzie and Tad McCord turn final fadeouts on respective assignments.

Nothing's confidential or private in Hollywood . . . dailies here last week told the world that George Barnes will soon be pacing the corridors waiting for the announcement as to whether it's another cameraman or another dainty star like mamma Joan Blondell. . . . And we know a certain major studio where the head of camera department is also expecting old Doc Stork's arrival at his Hollywood home any SECOND now. . . . Ernie Haller's up and back at work after giving the flu-bugs a kick under the wing stern. . . . Sid Hickox keeps a straight face while relating tales of TWELVE one pound trout caught by HIM at his place EVERY day since season opened. . . . Art Todd says his next production will be Merry-Go-Round . . why NEXT(?) . . Cecil Meyers off to the golluf tournament at Caliente and we're layin' dollars to doughnuts he cops plenty of honors and so forth and so forth . . . !

Jimmy Howe Set

"Stamboul Quest," M. G. M. production starring Myrna Loy and directed by Sam Wood, throws the camera job into the lap of Jimmy Howe, contracted photographer at the Culver City Studio.

A. S. C. Answers S-O-S

Late last week John Arnold, President of The American Society of Cinematographers, received a long letter from Charlie Clark (Cameraman for M. G. M. on the George Hill unit producing "Good Earth") telling all about Fred Jackman's visit to the company in Peking (China) and advising that they'd held an official session of the A.S.C. which is probably first meeting called in the Orient. Closely on top of this message came another letter from Jackman to Arnold telling interesting highlights of his world journey. Same day he received Jackman's letter, Arnold received a wireless from Fred advising he'd just heard that Paul Perry is stranded about forty miles from Shanghai. Arnold radioed back officially instructing Jackman to spare no expense in making thorough investigation and if rumor confirmed to go to rescue and relief of Perry in behalf of the A.S.C., of which the reported strandee is a charter member. President Arnold is awaiting further advice, news of which will break in the local daily trade papers before the next issue of The Brulatour Bulletin.

Van Trees to Metro

Deal made by Bill Dover, Twentieth Century executive, with M. G. M. sends Jim Van Trees and his crew into the Culver City plant, where they're given the job of photographing "The Rear Car," under the directorship of Harry Beaumont. Lou Jennings, operative cameraman, and Jim Van Trees, Jr., assistant.

Second unit in charge of Len (Big Moose) Smith, with Harry Waters, has gone to Tucson, Arizona, where runaway trains, smashing box cars and other types of rail ripping will be photographed.

Planck on "Shock"

Bob Planck, for past several years one of Sol Wurtzel's favorite photographers, comes back into General Service Studios, rejoining Monogram staff, where he will photograph "Shock," starting tomorrow morning. Production will be personally directed by Roy Pomeroy, famous for his work during early years of sound.

Polito Commuting

Frequent trips carry Sol Polito and his family to Lake Arrowhead, where popular Warner cameraman is building a new summer home. Sol's getting a chance to give plenty of time and attention to his personal project while his director, Bus Berkeley, is tied up in the litigation between Sam Goldwyn and the Warners.

Edeson Completes

The James Cagney-Warner Bros. production, "Hey, Sailor" completed, and Artie Edeson taking a well-deserved rest at his Malibou Lake home.

Time Out For Gibson

George Gibson of the Brulatour sales and service staff, confined home last week—Doctor says lumbago—Gibby says its just a pain in the back—Due to return on job this morning.

Columbia Clicking

Schedule of the Gower Street plant swinging along at top speed, as reported in these columns several weeks ago.

"Black Moon" finished by Joe August, who has started on another with Lambert Hillyer in the director's chair.

Scheduled to start this morning, Al Siegler, with Director Roy Neill on "Blind Date."

Henry Freulich making good in a big way as first cameraman and continuing in that spot on the All-Star comedy. Starting another this mid-week.

Joe Walker is assigned to the Frank Capra picture, which it is hoped will get under way before the week is out.

Boyle at Paramount

John Boyle, globe-trotting cameraman, who is now completing deal for showing of his Swedish (Multicolor) feature in Southern California, pauses in theatre booking negotiation long enough to step into Paramount, where he's doing photography on special scenes of the Mae West picture, "It Ain't No Sin."

Sponable Here

E. I. Sponable, sound director, Movietone News, Inc., Fox subsidiary, in Hollywood for a few days, looking over new developments in the studio sound field, which may be applicable to news work.

Bill Rees Flits

(Following item should establish good reason for strengthening reportorial staff of the Bulletin—get this):

"Bill Rees of Warner Bros. camera department, has left town for four weeks. Destination Ioway or Washington, I couldn't find out which."

When Bill returns we'll send a special reporter to ask him just where he's been.

Pomp and Circumstance

Pulling away from in front of a fire hydrant where he'd been defiantly parked for three or four hours on Hollywood Boulevard, Tony Gaudio drove his big sedan deliberately through the red light at Vine and Hollywood and was promptly nailed by one of those be-goggled boys on a white motorcycle. Copper yelped and raved and wrote a ticket which carried so many charges that he might as well have "thrown the book" at Tony. . . . Gaudio laughed like a demon as he tore up the tag and threw it in the cop's face. . . .

By the way—maybe you hadn't heard about it—Tony's oldest son (Tony, Jr.) passed the Caliornia State Bar examination on the first try and he's now a full-fledged lawyer. Ethics or no ethics—Tony's out to see that his boy gets plenty of business. . . . !

the BUZZER

(NOTE: Each week, sales and service representatives of J. E. Brulatour, Inc. will ask a number of cameramen the same question. The question will be given and then the answers verbatim.)

QUESTION: DO YOU PREFER TO WORK GENERALLY IN A HIGH OR A LOW KEY OF LIGHT?

GIL WARRENTON: I prefer a moderately low key of lighting as to me it is easier and certainly much simpler to handle the modelling and balance with our present types of very light sets and highly sensitive negative emulsions. However, I think you should point out that too many people confuse the phrase of low key lighting with effect lighting. There is a vast difference, as every photographer well knows.

HENRY SHARP (Paramount): A moderately high key of lighting is my preference because I feel that there are so many general inconsistencies under ordinary production conditions, especially in theatre projection, that one achieves a better all-round projection quality with the high key type of illumination.

ROY HUNT (RKO): I enjoy working with any type of lighting, and am influenced largely by the character of the scene and setting.

GEORGE ROBINSON (Universal): My personal preference is for the so-called low key types of lighting. I feel that the photographic effect can be achieved much better in this key. There are a number of reasons for this, most of them too obvious to even mention.

TONY GAUDIO (Warner Bros.): A reasonably high key of lighting seems to me to be more satisfactory in general than the low key, which is sometimes carried too far to meet commercial requirements. We've got to consider theatre projection and we've got to bear in mind that to meet all of the ups and downs in this latter field we must produce a fairly rich negative for the average good type of screen presentation.

LOU O'CONNELL (Fox): I broadly prefer low key lighting because the artistic effects which every photographer strives to achieve are more striking and impressive with this method. However, sad to relate, we can't always follow our fullest inclination because we must not lose sight of the projection bugaboo in the theatres.

SID HICKOX (First National): My preference has always been for low key photography wherever and whenever possible. When negative is intelligently handled in the laboratory, low key photography gives me just the effect that I consider most pleasing in any picture.

Warren's Vacation

Dwight Warren, chief photographer for Educational, will take longest vacation in his entire career when he leaves the studio next week on a fun and frolic expedition, booked for six weeks and threatened to run eight.

WRITERS TO BE GUARDED

TRADE VIEWS by W. R. WILKERSON

•THE largest part of this industry that has been worrying about Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer and its product for these last eight, ten or twelve months, can now pack up their worries and put on a few smiles, for that organization has come back with a bang, has found the key to its old HIT formula and is clicking off the type picture that kept this business going for the past few years.

For months we have tried to analyze the flop of MGM, how a company with all the natural resources it had and has, with all the HIT experience that is packed in its studios, could turn out such stupid screen entertainment.

Of course, the illness of Thalberg had a lot to do with it, but that's not the answer, as it would take a long time for the production organization that Thalberg created to flop in the manner that it did. Louis Mayer is no slouch in production matters, nor are Eddie Mannix and the gang of producers working under them anything to be sneezed at; and they were all working as hard or harder than they ever worked before. Maybe they were working too hard. The whole thing was a mystery then and now, especially now that they are dynamiting the industry with the kind of picture that keeps the customers standing in line for a look.

And it's a great thing. It is almost impossible for anyone to reckon what MGM's flop cost this business, but a BILLION or TWO would not be very far wrong, and those losses were in the wrong places. They were mostly with theatre owners, but all the industry shared them.

And while on the subject of production progress, Warners MUST be mentioned for their consistency in the type picture that caused that organization to more than uphold its end in furnishing entertainment for this business to sell and the movie patrons to enjoy. Of course, Warners make a different brand of picture than MGM. They grind them out faster and at a smaller cost. They do not take such expensive chances. So, the more reason for a pat on the back for that organization.

If MGM will maintain its late sea-

Arliss Gets $300,000 For Gaumont Picture

London.—George Arliss has accepted the Gaumont-British offer of $300,000 for a picture to be made here. He turned down the bid of $175,000 made by British International although that included transportation and enough to pay his income tax.

'Buccaneer' Next DeMille For Para.

Cecil B. DeMille's next production for Paramount will be "Buccaneer," a story based on the life of the British pirate, Sir Henry Morgan.

Paramount yesterday engaged Maxwell Anderson and Laurence Stallings to do the screen play. Cast will be all-star, and production will be on a spectacular scale, with the budget announced as $1,000,000.

Incidentally, Paramount has in Frances Drake an actress who claims lineal descent from Sir Henry Morgan.

'Are Men Worth It?' Set For Tracy and Colbert

New York.—Paramount is to produce a picture called "Are Men Worth It?", based on the Tiffany Thayer novel, "One Woman," with Lee Tracy and Claudette Colbert in the leads.

Marian Marsh Returning

New York.—Marian Marsh arrives here on the Aquitania Friday and will proceed directly to Hollywood. While abroad Miss Marsh did three pictures and was offered two others by Gaumont, but decided the Hollywood offers held more attractions.

Participation By America In International Copyright Pact Favored By President

New York.—International copyright protection for American authors, playwrights and scenario writers, for which the Authors' League has been fighting for ten years, took a long step toward realization yesterday when Dr. Robert Underwood Johnson said that President Roosevelt favored the plan.

Dr. Johnson announced that the President had advised him that he would support the proposed bill which gives the writers automatic protection under the Rome copyright treaty of 1928. This protection extends to 53 countries. It was also announced that it will be necessary to abolish the non-importation clause in the present copyright statute.

There has been severe criticism for years because the United States is not a signatory to the International Copy-

'U' and Stuart Walker Closing Deal For Three

Universal is drawing up contracts today for three picture deal with Stuart Walker, who was set by Bren-Orsatti and Marx.

The director will handle "Romance in the Rain," under Stanley Bergerman, as his first.

Fowler Going East

Gene Fowler leaves Friday for his Fire Island home to complete his biography of Mack Sennett He just completed his script of "The Great Barnum" for 20th Century.

Hepburn To Star In 'Forsyte Saga'

London.—Radio is expected to star Katharine Hepburn in "Forsyte Saga" as her next picture.

Company's office here is closing a deal with Mrs. John Galsworthy for the property. Radio will get it for about $25,000, taking an option pending Mrs. Galsworthy's approval of the screen play made from the book.

Barney Glazer Denies He Will Quit Paramount

The report current that Barney Glazer is washing up with Paramount at the expiration of his present contract is vehemently denied by him.

Glazer says that he has not signed a new contract yet because there are one or two details to be ironed out, and Emanuel Cohen has been away. He has a couple more pictures to do before he leaves on his vacation and expects the contract matter will be settled before he goes.

Publicity Dragged Into Berkeley Suit

With the Goldwyn-Warner trial scheduled to wind up today, J. R. Files, the Warner attorney, said yesterday that Warners will seek to show that Goldwyn violated his contract for Busby Berkeley's services. The contention, according to Files, is based on the lack of exploitation given the dance director during past services for Goldwyn.

The dance director, continuing on the stand yesterday, summed up the substance of his formal answer to Goldwyn's complaint, reiterating his claim that the United Artists producer had acted unethically in securing his contract with Warners for the loan of Berkeley. Ed Selzer, Warner publicity man, was put on the stand and goes on again this morning. Through him Files is entering evidence of the extent to which Warners claim they went in publicising the dance director.

CREEL DUE TODAY TO SETTLE LABOR COMPLAINT DISPUTES

Lindsey Decisions All Ready For Him

With the arrival here today of George Creel, director of the National Emergency Council and chief of NRA activities for the State of California, the final decision is expected to be reached on whether or not complaints of alleged studio film code violations, filed with Judge Ben Lindsey, are to be turned over to the Studio Labor Committee, or whether Judge Lindsey will render decisions on the cases and forward them to Washington.

The appointment some time ago of Judge Lindsey as Special Labor Compliance Officer for Southern California let loose a bombshell in the film production circles. Judge Lindsey announced that he would hear the complaints that studio labor had filed with the NRA Studio Labor Committee, which board had not functioned at that time.

The studios refused to recognize the authority of Judge Lindsey, so he heard the complainants' testimony in more than a score of cases. More than 100 additional complaints were on his docket. Sol Rosenblatt then discharged the Studio Labor Committee and appointed another, which, to date, consists only of Pat Casey and Ed Smith, and ordered Judge Lindsey to turn all complaints over to them. The Judge refused, and was backed by Creel, who had appointed him to his position.

It was learned last night that Judge Lindsey has his decisions on the cases ready and will take up future action on them and the unheard complaints with Creel. The various labor unions have told Judge Lindsey they will not have their complaints turned over to the Studio Labor Committee because of the presence of Casey upon the committee. Scores of telegrams and letters from studio workers have been sent to Rosenblatt and the Code Authority, asking that Judge Lindsey be retained to hear these cases, and stating they will not file complaints with the Casey committee.

As Creel has backed Judge Lindsey and the workers in their stand, speculation last night was rife as to whether or not he will order Judge Lindsey to render his decisions and let the matter be finally fought out in Washington.

Warners Sign Lead of The 'Shim Sham Revue'

Warners yesterday signed Wini Shaw, now in the "Shim Sham Revue," for the lead opposite Phil Regan and El Brendel in the Technicolor short, "What, No Men?" Studio has an option on her for the lead in "Sweet Adeline," depending upon her work in the short.

Jean Parker to Star

Jean Parker goes to a starring spot in her next assignment for MGM. It will be the David Butler story, "Have a Heart," which the studio closed for yesterday through Bren-Orsatti and Marx. John Considine produces.

Lederer Receives Bid To Go Stupid

Charlie MacArthur and Ben Hecht have wired Charlie Lederer an offer to become General Supervisor in charge of production for the Hecht-MacArthur productions at a salary of $25 a week. Charlie has not replied to the wired offer, but is flying East tomorrow to investigate it.

Para.-Wesco Settle $2,000,000 Claim

New York.—The $2,000,000 claim of Paramount-Publix against Wesco is said to have been settled, with Wesco getting renewals of leases on theatres in San Francisco, Portland and Seattle, and Paramount getting ten-year franchises for product.

Although all details of the agreement have been settled, the actual fixing up of the deal will have to be approved by the Federal courts.

Penner, Comedy Lead In 'College Rhythm'

Joe Penner has been assigned the comedy lead of "College Rhythm" by Paramount, instead of the part in "Big Broadcast of 1934" for which he was originally signed.

"College Rhythm" is a George Marion Jr. original, the screen play now being prepared by Walter De Leon and Jack McDermott. While set for July production, no director has been assigned. Co-featured with Penner will be Lanny Ross, Joe Morrison, Lyda Roberti, Ida Lupino.

Tracy Starts Thursday

Lee Tracy returns from Lake Arrowhead Thursday to start his first Paramount picture, "52 Weeks for Fleurette," which Alfred Werker directs. He went there Sunday to recover from a bad cold.

Complaints Pile Up Against FWC

Two more complaints against Fox West Coast Theatres were filed over the week-end with the Los Angeles Grievance Board. One was filed by the Cosmo Theatre in Glendale, the other by the Egyptian Theatre of Maywood.

The Egyptian complaint was that the Alcazar theatre in Bell cut its 25 cent admission price to fifteen cents and then flooded Maywood with handbills, thus allegedly drawing trade from the Maywood house. Further it is alleged that in one instance, the Alcazar ran the same picture as the Egyptian at the same time and cut the price.

The other complaint was against United West Coast Theatres Corporation, United Artists Theatre Circuit, Inc., and Fox West Coast, and charges that the respondents have bought up all major product for four runs, and that it is impossible for the Cosmo to secure pictures until they have had 63 days clearance in Glendale. It is also charged that the respondents have only six houses there and cannot use all the product they have bought. Price-cutting is also alleged.

Both cases have been set for a hearing Thursday.

Lesser Moves to Pathe; Oliver Art Director

Sol Lesser today moves his entire production staff from the Mack Sennett studio to RKO-Pathe, where he will make his series of pictures.

One of the first pictures on his schedule is "Peck's Bad Boy," for which he has hired Harry Oliver to design the sets.

Felix on 'Ziegfeld'

Seymour Felix will stage the dances in "The Great Ziegfeld" for Universal on a ticket set yesterday by the Bren-Orsatti and Marx office. William Anthony McGuire is handling the production.

Writers To Be Guarded

right law. It has meant that American writers were forced to get separate copyrights to protect their works in foreign countries, just as foreign authors had to get them here.

If the proposed bill passes, it will mean that the mere act of writing a story, novel, play or scenario automatically copyrights it in every country affected and that all the red tape which has tied up the copyright problems of American authors will be cut and thrown away.

Furthermore, it will lessen the number of plagiarism suits that have been brought for years and will give the American author a sense of protection he never has had.

Not that it MATTERS by Helen Gwynn

Whew, we've never heard so many protests as were called forth by the article mentioning the fact that Hollywood should ought by rights to be the theatrical center of the country. The greatest argument against the claim being that Hollywood is not a theatre town. Evidently we didn't make the main point quite clear.

If Hollywood is not a theatre town, it's because it's never had anything much in the way of theatre. It's quite true that Broadway productions have been brought out here, but, by the time they get on the stage in Hollywood, they're hard to recognize as Broadway productions. And the reason for that is because no one has seen the sense in putting up enough money to make a production pay.

Occasionally, a show has come to town here that has been well produced and carefully done and its reward has been a good, healthy run. The same thing goes for the stage as for pictures; if it's entertainment, well done, there will always be an audience for it. But when shows are brought in and expected to run merely on the strength of the reputation they made for themselves on Broadway, with cheap productions, slipshod direction and complete distortion of the author's original idea, there's no reason why any town should become theatre-conscious, particularly Hollywood, which is overrun with cheap movie houses showing A.1 productions on the screen for a quarter or less.

However, we still insist that it's a damned shame that Hollywood hasn't got good theatre. That Hollywood doesn't encourage good theatre by backing it instead of sending the money east for production and letting the home office fight it out with the coast boys, when the coast boys should have had first crack at it.

Dick Rowland could have had a lot of fun at the Academy Awards Dinner if he'd wanted to illustrate "the irony of it all." Rowland was in town at the time and still carrying the letters he got from the coast and from Harley Clarke on his "ridiculous, absurd, and crazy" purchase of "Cavalcade." He was told at the time that the thing was sooo British that even the English wouldn't like it. So the picture just scooped up a mess of prizes and, so far, has grossed over four million dollars, with everybody taking the big bows for its success, except Dick Rowland.

Thanks to Dr. Nolan for thanking us for mentioning his "frosted breath" invention because it seems it made the producers breath-conscious and by the end of the week, you'll all know the name of the major company that is buying it.

Oxnard Theatre Case Up to Code Authority

New York.—The Code Authority on Friday will hear the complaint made by John T. Rennie against Felstein and Dietrich, involving the lease of the Oxnard Theatre, at Oxnard, California. Rennie declares the firm unfairly competed for the lease of the house while he was negotiating.

The appeal of Fox West Coast and Principal Theatres from the decision favoring the Garfield Theatre in Alhambra has been set for May 26.

Lamb Not in Club For 19 Years, But Pays Dues

Bill Conklin, in charge of actor-producer relations at the Academy, claims the distinction of being the oldest "absentee" member of the Lambs Club. It is nineteen years since he has entered the portals of the club, but he keeps up his dues.

Bergner Pic Great Hit in Budapest

Budapest.—The Elizabeth Bergner picture, "Catherine the Great," opened here to one of the biggest hits of the season. The house has been a sell-out ever since the opening.

"Island of Lost Souls," with Charles Laughton, was held over at the Palace, and "Dancing Lady," with Joan Crawford, is doing tremendous business in its second week at the Radius. "Invisible Man" and "Queen Christina" also going big, but the Al Jolson picture flopped.

Earl Baldwin and Al Jolson have gone to Lake Arrowhead to work on the Warner story for Jolson.

IRV COBB, COMEDY ACTOR, IS STILL A PHILOSOPHER

After the ordeal of his screen and voice tests for the series of Roach comedies in which he plays a retired sea captain, Irvin Cobb yesterday relaxed with a few remarks about pictures, Pepys, and advertising

"What impresses me as a picture-goer is not that there are so many bad pictures, but that there are so many good ones," he said.

He declared that the smell of film stock and lab dip could not replace in his affections the smell of printers' ink and damp paper.

He remarked that the finest newspaper writing was usually done under pressure, and suggested that an interesting anthology would be "The 25 Best News Stories of All Time."

But from the standpoint of news or historical interest, "the modern syndicate columnist talks too much about himself and with insufficient frankness to have the fascination in future years that we feel about Pepys, because he wrote about the extra row of buttons on his coat and the misdoings of his maids."

Cobb looks upon conventional history as mere gilding. "Show me what people want to buy, or sell, or give away at any period, and I will write their real history," he said. "Advertisements are the picture of a people."

Then he went out on the lot, back to work.

'Jane Eyre' Starting At Monogram Today

Signing a number of players yesterday, Monogram today puts "Jane Eyre" on the stages for two days of rehearsals before actual shooting starts Thursday.

Christy Cabanne directs, with Virginia Bruce and Colin Clive in the top brackets. Those spotted yesterday are Jamison Thomas, Aileen Pringle, Doris Lloyd, Lionel Belmore, Ethel Griffies, David Torrance, Joan Standing, Olaf Hytten, William Burress and Desmond Roberts. Ben Verschleiser supervises.

Albright and Walthall For 'Scarlet Letter'

Larry Darmour yesterday signed Hardie Albright for the lead opposite Colleen Moore in his first Majestic picture, "The Scarlet Letter," which Robert Vignola directs when it starts May 23.

Henry B. Walthall has been signed for the same role he played in the MGM silent version.

Wera Engels Set

First assignment for Wera Engels, European actress signed by Reliance, will be "Transatlantic Showboat." This picture and "Catalina" are both in writing, with a toss up for which will follow "Count of Monte Cristo" into production. Dick Whiting is at the studio writing musical numbers.

Italy Financing Its Own Hollywood

Rome.—Financed principally by government funds, the Forzano Company has laid plans for the creation at Terrenia, between Pisa and Livorno, of an "Italian Hollywood."

The enterprise will be the biggest film venture in the history of the country. A tract of 200,000 square meters will be used. New studios will be erected, streets laid out, and laboratories and administration buildings be constructed that will make this one of the most complete and modern plants on the Continent.

Swanson Files Suit To Divorce Farmer

Gloria Swanson yesterday filed suit for divorce from her fourth husband, Michael Farmer. She charged him with mental cruelty, alleging that he nagged her, made her extremely upset, and often quarreled with her throughout the night. She said he also found fault with her and her friends.

There is no community property involved, and Miss Swanson is not asking for alimony.

Ed Griffith Working With Emerson and Loos

Edward H. Griffith, who has been assigned by MGM to direct "Biography," is working on the treatment and screen play with John Emerson and Anito Loos, who have just been set on the job.

Victor Moore Signed For Universal Picture

Stanley Bergerman yesterday signed Victor Moore, of the cast of "Let 'Em Eat Cake," for a spot in "Romance in the Rain," the new title for "A Sin for Cinderella," which Stuart Walker will direct.

'MIDNIGHT ALIBI' EXCELLENT; 'SMARTY' CORKING COMEDY

Barthelmess Has Best Pic in Months

'MIDNIGHT ALIBI'
(Warners)

Direction .....Alan Crosland
Author .....Damon Runyon
Screen Play.....Warren Duff
Photography .....William Rees
Cast: Richard Barthelmess, Ann Dvorak, Helen Chandler, Helen Lowell, Henry O'Neill, Robert Barrat, Robert McWade, Purnell Pratt, Henry Tyler, Paul Hurst, Arthur Aylesworth, Vincent Sherman.

Here is a gangster film, "Midnight Alibi," that has a brand new angle and a swell role, besides, for Richard Barthelmess.

Excellently written and directed, the entire cast has a good chance to speak credible meaty lines and to give performances that ring true in every instance. Entertainment in this film rates high, and there is just enough sentiment and drama, neatly balanced, to please any audience.

Barthelmess is a minor gangster who falls in love with the sister (Ann Dvorak) of Robert Barrat, the biggest and meanest racketeer in New York City. Barthelmess escapes from his machine-gun wrath one night by scaling the wall that surrounds the mansion of the ancient Abigail Ardsley, an old lady who lives all alone in million dollar loneliness.

While Barthelmess waits until it is safe for him to venture forth again, the old lady tells him the story of her thwarted love (with Barthelmess in a flash-back taking the part of the lover of the olden days) and begs him not to let anything stand in the way of his love. Encouraged by her, he goes to see Barrat and endeavors to explain his good intentions to the gangster. Barrat pulls a gun on him, but, before he can shoot him, Barrat is killed by a Barthelmess henchman.

Then the trial—and the first appearance of the little old lady in fifty years, and her surprise testimony that smooths the way for the young lovers.

Sentiment—yes. But so expertly written, played and directed that it never goes out of bounds.

Helen Lowell, as "the old doll," is excellent and sympathetic. Miraculously she recreates the atmosphere of the old days in New York and the tender, deathless love she felt for her old sweetheart. Her superb, hilarious appearance in court is something to be remembered.

Barthelmess is better than he has been in some time, and Ann Dvorak is well cast as the girl. Helen Chandler is charming and utterly convincing as the "old doll" when she was young and in love. Henry O'Neill is the mean old father. Barrat is perfect as Angie, the gangster. Robert McWade makes the most of a good part; Purnell Pratt is a baffled lawyer, and Harry Tyler, Paul Hurst, Arthur Aylesworth and Vincent Sherman have lesser, but important roles.

Alan Crosland directed sensitively; Warren Duff made a bang-up adaptation of the Damon Runyon story, and William Rees photographed.

Screen Play: F. Hugh Herbert and Carl Erickson.
Photography .....George Barnes
Cast: Joan Blondell, Warren William, Edward Everett Horton, Frank McHugh, Claire Dodd, Joan Wheeler, Virginia Sale, Leonard Carey.

One of the most intriguing of the Warner output of the past few months is "Smarty."

It is a light, happy, irresponsible little comedy, that twinkles and grins and occasionally even gets a little slapstick. It's lots of fun and is as inconsequential as the foam on a beer glass.

Not inconsequential, however, is the keen, clever direction; the wholehearted, humorous acting, and the perfectly swell dialogue. There's not a line in the thing that doesn't get a laugh, and they are lines that are very human and credible.

Joan Blondell is cast as a silly, flighty, exasperating, maddening woman who drives her husband, Warren William, to distraction, and finally into giving her a good, hearty sock on the jaw. Instantly, with one eye on her lawyer, Edward Everett Horton, and the other on the possibility of William's retrieving jealousy, she gets a divorce . . . and marries Horton.

Horton finds, in due time, that living with her is a perfectly good excuse for extreme cruelty, and one evening, exasperated beyond endurance, he also gives her a good sock.

There's not much more to the plot than that—except that the whole thing is handled for the maximum of entertainment. Miss Blondell is expertly maddening as the flighty wife; William does good work as her first husband, and Edward Everett Horton is extremely amusing as her second. Claire Dodd is utterly charming as a friend; Frank McHugh is funny, Joan Wheeler makes a good deal out of a small role, and Virginia Sale and Leonard Carey are well cast.

Robert Florey directed lightly and easily; F. Hugh Herbert and Carl Erickson made a beautiful adaptation of the story by Herbert; and George Barnes photographed with his usual taste.

Don't worry about this one. It starts intriguingly and gets better.

CREEL DEMANDS ACTION

TRADEVIEWS by FRANK POPE

•WHAT influence do the kids have on the box-offices of the country and what kind of pictures should be made to make that influence financially beneficial? In other words, what do the kids want?

Of their influence, there can be no doubt. The fight being made against dirt in pictures by the Catholic Church and women's organizations all over the nation revealed the other day that, of the 77,000,000 people who go to the movies every week, about one-third are minors. Many of those, of course, go where they please and see what they please, but even that leaves a good many millions of youngsters to whom "sophisticated" pictures mean little. What are the producers doing to get and hold the trade of those millions of kids? Apparently, not much.

Recently State Superintendent of Instruction Kersey made the statement that children prefer healthy pictures, but do not like the "namby-pamby" type. They want action. Many of them go for the horror pictures, but those old enough to attend without parents are not at all frightened by the "Frankensteins" and "Draculas." Such pictures are more or less of a joke, especially to boys.

Clean comedies, Westerns, adventure pictures of any kind always hit the boys, and most of them please the girls too. Surveys have shown that such stars as Janet Gaynor, Richard Dix, Charlie Farrell, George O'Brien, Jackie Cooper and the outdoor players always appeal. Dirty black-outs such as are injected into many musicals, salaciousness of any kind, "other woman" stories, suit only a very small percentage of the youngsters. Even if they understand what it is all about —and plenty of them do—they prefer stories with action, with a thrill.

It is out of the question, of course, to pick any particular type of picture with the idea that it will be for the kids, but it should be easy to select stories that will not offend them and will not make immorality or indecency glamorous.

And, leaving the moral question entirely to one side, it certainly should be worth while to make a play for the

Pathe Shows Profit For First Quarter

New York.—The report of Pathe Exchange Inc. shows a net profit of $14,148 for the quarter ended March 31, the increase being credited by President Stuart Webb to more business at the Bound Brook laboratories.

Loew's May Lose Warners' Product

New York.—The quarrel between Warner Brothers and the Loew circuit, which has been simmering for some time, has broken into the open with Warners planning to take their product away from Loew's next season.

No definite announcement of any other hook-up has been made, but it is considered probable that the Warner product will go to the RKO first runs.

The trouble dates back to the time Warners held "Golddiggers" over at the Strand Theatre beyond the date on which they had promised it for release to the Loew theatres.

Ralph Doyle Due From Australia Saturday

Ralph Doyle, for years with United Artists and now managing director of RKO for Australasia, arrives here Saturday. He will hold conferences with J. R. McDonough and Ned Depinet at the Radio studio regarding the new program and sales angles.

'U' After Cummings

Uinversal is discussing via cable a three-picture deal with Constance Cummings.

Wires Washington For Ruling On Disposition Of The Labor Complaints Held By Lindsey

George Creel, State Director of the NRA for California, yesterday sent a communication to Professor Altmeyer, Chief of the Compliance Division of the NRA at Washington, demanding an immediate decision on the jurisdictional battle between Judge Ben B. Lindsey and the Studio Labor Committee.

The decision to carry the battle for a showdown to Washington and over the head of Sol A. Rosenblatt, administrator of the Film Code, came at a conference yesterday between Creel, Judge Lindsey and Attorney B. P. Calhoun, legal counsel for the NRA in Southern California.

While no statement was forthcoming from Creel, it was learned that he has not backed down an inch from his decision to defy Rosenblatt, who ordered Judge Lindsey some weeks ago

Ginger Rogers Gets 5-Year Term at Radio

Radio and Ginger Rogers went into a huddle yesterday, and when they came out Ginger had been signed to a new contract, reported to call for a much larger salary than she has been receiving.

The contract is for 52 weeks, and yearly options for the next five years.

Sidney Kent Due Today

New York.—Sidney R. Kent, president of Fox, left by plane yesterday in answer to a hurry call from the coast. He is due there this morning.

Radio Holds Brock; To Handle Musicals

Lou Brock, abandoning his independent production plans, yesterday signed a new term contract with Radio, negotiated by John Zanft. The new agreement takes effect May 21 and covers a two-year period.

Under it all Radio musicals will be in Brock's charge and will be designated as Lou Brock Productions. Radio also takes over his independent assets, including Gregory Wortsen's story, "Johnny Loves Mary," and Jimmy Base, who has been writing the score for it.

Brock is cutting and assembling "Cock-Eyed Cavaliers." On its completion he leaves for Europe with Mrs. Brock on a six-weeks voyage of discovery and inspiration. Brock started with Radio about six years ago making shorts, and broke into big-time with "Flying Down to Rio."

'Lafayette' Is Headed For Stage and Screen

New York.—Lafayette is to be the next historical character to be seen on both stage and screen, Denis King having announced that he will play the character next season in a drama by Austin Strong.

It is understood that several film companies are already considering the piece as picture material.

Garmes May Be Director

New York.—Lee Garmes, who is handling the camera for "Crime Without Passion," the first Hecht-MacArthur production for Paramount, is expected to become a director for the firm at the finish of this picture.

MGM Signs Christians

MGM yesterday signed Mady Christians to a three-year contract and will probably spot her in the lead of "The Wicked Woman" as her first American picture. Charles Brabin directs.

SENATE PASSES RIGID COMMUNICATIONS BILL

Washington.—It took the Senate just four hours to pass the extremely rigid Communications bill yesterday, and Government regulation of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company drew a step nearer.

The measure consolidates the powers of the Federal Radio Commission and the jurisdiction of the Interstate Commerce Commission over them into one unit, and definitely broadens the Government's power to regulate the A.T.&T. monopoly. It provides for the regulations of all forms of communication, including sound pictures, and

Just got a card from Arthur Kober—from Spain. He says (among other things) that "Spain is a wonderful place. You can walk up to people and say 'Lou Schreiber,' and nobody knows what you're talking about! Spanish people are crazy about pictures too and am now on my way to see 'The Ten Commandments,' one of the latest releases! Having a wonderful time—wish you were here—instead of us!" (!)

From what we gather, Jean Muir is one of the hardest- working of the younger actresses—in fact, she always has been. For years she has studied the theatre and its people religiously, with a terrific determination to proceed. And she's doing well. But we also gather that if and when La Muir gets to the very top, the studio will have plenty of headaches with the lass, because already she has exhibited several signs of terrific temperament. We hear that, on more than one occasion, Jean, playing only a secondary part in a picture, has put on "the works" and stormed around (and off) the set in a flood of tears. Hmm-mm and at THIS stage!

Another Mrs. Pat Campbell yarn: Seems that, a certain point in her career, Mrs. Pat decided to economize—in fact, she found it quite necessary. But she didn't know where to begin. A friend suggested that she could do with just one servant instead of the several she had been accustomed to.

"What!" exclaimed Mrs. Campbell, "just one servant? Do you mean I am to turn down my own bed when I come home at night? Migod! Do you mean I should live in SQUALOR???"

The dock workers' strike sort of interfered with the plans of some of the picture folk when the Santa Elena arrived from New York Monday night. Irving Thalberg went down to meet his mother and couldn't get near the landing stage, and T. Netcher was in the same fix when he tried to find his brother, Irving, and Mrs. Irving (Rosie Dolly). However, the strikers didn't pull any rough stuff on the visitors, confining their maiming activities to their own gang, and everyone got home safely.

New York REVIEWS

"CHANGE OF HEART"

Fox prod.; director, John G. Blystone; writers, Kathleen Norris, Sonya Levien, James Gleason and Samuel Hoffenstein.

Music Hall

Mirror: Their vehicle is up-to-date and it provides a delightful hour of entertainment. The picture is splendidly directed and played by an excellent cast. The New York background has authority and color.

Times: It is an innocuous little romance which steadfastly refrains from indulging in any suggestion of subtlety, but nevertheless a tale which probably will meet with the approval of sweethearts and wives. It can boast of its excellent photography and expert direction.

Herald-Tribune: It is with regret we report that "Change of Heart" does not help either Miss Gaynor or Mr. Farrell. In a saccharine romance of youth's struggle in the big city, Kathleen Norris again embroiders another of their little doilies.

World-Telegram: All the staple elements of the conventional happy-ending romance have been crowded into "Change of Heart." Every sure-fire bit of hokum is brought into the narrative so that, in spite of the film's fine direction and the neat playing of an expert cast, the whole thing has an air of staleness.

Post: "Change of Heart" would have been a good title for this current picture if, in the middle of the production, they had decided not to go through with it. For it is not in a long while that any film of major pretensions has proved so witless. It is a weakly plotted story told with a high degree of banality and saturated in saccharine.

Sun: A pretty bit of wholesome candy that will raise no temperature, cause no indignation and probably please millions who crave no stronger fare. It is utterly inconsequential as drama, a little tedious at times, but cheerful and wholesome enough in mood.

American: The play is ferociously frail, and the burden rests entirely on the four youngsters who have the leads and on Director Blystone. The personnel of the picture is far more interesting than the work itself.

News: The picture is a sweet unsophisticated story of young love in a big city.

Journal: A romantic little narrative. The four principals play their parts nicely, and the story unfolds in a leisurely, whimsical manner.

"THIRTY DAY PRINCESS"

Paramount prod.; director, Marion Gering; writers, Clarence Budington Kelland, Preston Sturges, Frank Partos, Sam Hellman.

Paramount Theatre

World-Telegram: A sufficiently light and attractive little Cinderella romance that often turns upon itself in a chiding fashion. Witty, gay, unpretentious, it further enjoys the benefit of some deft direction, neat writing and expert acting.

Mirror: It is a pretty little tale, a pleasant fairy story. The film makes no severe demands upon the real acting talents of its star, but it is a pleasant and amusing little light comedy.

Times: It is a film which gives Miss Sidney a busy time, and also one which has its fund of amusing incidents. This amiable light affair has a generous share of imaginative turns, and it is further endowed with a highly competent supporting cast.

News: The picture is a Cinderella story of the type that is generally used for musical comedy productions. It needs a musical score. Without music the farcical situations grow a little strained at timse.

Herald-Tribune: For some reason the piece misses, possibly because it soon ceases to be surprising, and because its dialogue consists of such rare inquiries. The picture seems to waver, in Mr. Gering's mind, between a straight Graustarkian treatment and a half-hearted attempt at burlesque.

Post: The inexhaustible possibilities of the mythical kingdom theme are well nigh exhausted once more in "Thirty Day Princess," a picture which almost succeeds in recovering from a dull and obvious beginning. What the picture needed more than anything else was a swift pace.

Journal: A charming little romance, a gay piece of fluff. It is, as a matter of fact, Miss Sidney's most diverting picture in some time.

American: Paramount has a winner in Sylvia Sidney, that sly, crinkly-eyed, infectiously appealing and talented young actress, and the Paramount Theatre has a winner in her latest screen vehicle, as amusing a romantic comer as recent weeks have disclosed, and oh, what a relief from the current sultry doldrums! The dialogue is bright, the situations fraught with wit and romance, the cast excellent, the star superb and the direction just about all that may be desired by an entertainment hungry public.

Universal May Delay Hull's First Picture

New York.—The producers of "Tobacco Road" are negotiating with Universal, which has Henry Hull under contract, to defer the start of his first picture until the play shall have completed its run.

Meyer Synchronizing Service, with headquarters at eneral Service Studio, last week opened a branch at the RKO-Pathe lot in Culver City. Abe Meyer announces a second branch for the Mack Sennett lot on Ventura boulevard, to be established next week.

Christie on World Tour For Mitchell

Charles H. Christie left for the north last night to sail May 19 from Vancouver on the Empress of Asia on a globe-girdling mission of goodwill for Mitchell cameras.

Christie, who is sales vice-president of the Mitchell Camera Corp., carries with him two cameras and a complete line of Mitchell equipment. He will operate the cameras for demonstrations but will work with local Mitchell representatives in Asia and Europe in making contacts.

He will establish a Mitchell branch in England, and possibly may open branches in the Orient if conditions warrant. His first stop is Yokohama, starting his two weeks in Japan. His itinerary includes India (with 10 days at Bombay), Russia, Germany, and England. He returns by way of New York.

Robbins Sets Record For Music Shipments

Jack Robbins set a transcontinental record for music publication, having 200 copies of 'The Loveliness of It All' delivered by air express in Los Angeles five days after he was handed the manuscript of the "Shim Sham Revue" number.

The music had been sent to New York, piano arrangement made, plates engraved, cover designed, the edition printed and shipped back. Number is by A. C. Lewis, Jr.

BRITISH 'ORDERS IS ORDERS' LAUGHS FROM START TO END

Gleason, Greenwood Great Comedy Team

"ORDERS IS ORDERS"
(British-Gaumont)

Direction .....Walter Forde
Authors.....Ian Hay and Anthony Armstrong
Add. Dialogue.....James Gleason
Cast: James Gleason, Charlotte Greenwood, Cyril Maude, Finlay Currier, Percy Parsons, Cedric Hardwicke, Donald Calthrop, Ian Hunter, Jane Carr, Ray Milland, Eliot Makeham, Ray Plumb, Glennie Lorimer, Sydney Keither.

The British picture, "Orders Is Orders," is important for three reasons: first, it's swell entertainment; second, it is an eloquent comment on the oversight of American producers who never thought to team James Gleason and Charlotte Greenwood; and, third, it is a grand example of good taste in ribbing.

With a little cutting, and a stronger ending, the picture will be one, long, loud laugh. The story is funny; the dialogue is amusing; the action is hilarious, and the direction has it all under control.

James Gleason plays a haywire, nervy, loud, crazy American film director, who, aided by Charlotte Greenwood, manages to upset the entire British army. Miss Greenwood gets the colonel of the regiment to agree to loan his barracks and men for a big film epic, by beating him at billiards. The minute the victory is won, the film company takes possession. The barracks are turned topsy-turvy. The mess hall is converted into everything from the interior of a palace to a dive in Arabia before Gleason can make up his mind what kind of an epic he wants to make. The soldiers trot around in every kind of costume that Gleason can imagine, and the Colonel is drafted into playing an important role.

Gleason and Greenwood, both arrayed in loud, checkered suits, make an unbeatable team. Their timing and cooperation are flawless. And no one will resent their travesty on American film technique. It's too funny. Cyril Maude, as the stiff Colonel, is, of course, perfect.

Walter Forde directed the picture, which is based on a London stage play by Ian Hay and Anthony Armstrong.

Don't worry about this film. It has a wide range of appeal.

Dean Jagger Reports

Dean Jagger, Theatre Guild player whom Paramount signed in New York, arrived in Hollywood yesterday, reported at the studio and goes into "52 Weeks For Fleurette" as his first assignment.

Warner Sales Meetings

Cooper-Radio Deal Is On Or Off Today

Merian Cooper and Radio are reported not yet at an accord, with the departure of tonight's Owl for San Francisco thought to be the final deadline.

B. B. Kahane declared last night that negotiations with Radio's former production executive would still be open today. The grapevine report is that, if no deal today, Cooper proceeds to San Francisco and sails to Honolulu to spend the Summer and Fall with his wife and children, leaving Gower Street to glower.

Universal Starting Jones Serial Tomorrow

"The Red Rider," 15-chapter serial starring Buck Jones, goes into production tomorrow at Universal. Grant Withers, Janet Chandler and Margaret LaMarr are cast for it. Lewis Friedlander directs.

Ella O'Neill prepared the script from a novel by W. C. Tuttle.

Sarah Mason to 'U'

Universal yesterday borrowed Sarah Y. Mason from Radio to do a rewrite of Fannie Hurst's "Imitation of Life," necessitated by the spotting of Claudette Colbert in the lead. John Stahl directs and produces.

Start For 'Showboat'

June 5 is the tentative starting date for "Transatlantic Showboat," Leon Gordon's original and screen adaptation for Reliance. Nancy Carroll, Gene Raymond and Wera Engels are set for it.

Sutherland Returns

Eddie Sutherland returned from a three weeks vacation in Panama yesterday, feeling completely recovered and ready to return to work at Fox. He will handle the Joe Cook picture.

More For 'Operator 13'

Richard Boleslavsky today puts "Operator 13" back on the stages at MGM to shoot a new ending. Work will be rushed so that Marion Davies may leave for Europe early next week.

Writers Out of MGM

Harry Hervey and Leo Birinski have completed their MGM writing tickets and are off the studio payroll. Former turned in his work on "Indo China," Birinski finishing an original.

New Pictures on B'way This Week

New York.—Broadway gets a large crop of new pictures this week, eight being scheduled for the eyes of the critical New Yorkers. The list comprises:

"Murder in Trinidad" at the Mayfair yesterday; "He Was Her Man" at the Strand, and "Beyond Bengal" at the Gaiety today; "Stingaree" at the Music Hall, with "Madame Butterfly" holding over on the stage, tomorrow; "Little Miss Marker" at the Paramount, "Sadie McKee" at the Capitol, and "The Black Cat" at the Roxy, on Friday; "Murder at the Vanities" at the Rivoli Saturday.

"Hollywood Party" opens at the Rialto next week.

'Shock' in Production; 'Eyre' Starts Tomorrow

Monogram put "Shock" into production yesterday and started rehearsals of "Jane Eyre," with tomorrow set for the shooting date.

R. N. Bradbury starts picking his cast today for "Happy Landings," Ray Walker's seventh starring film for Monogram.

Arlen in Tracy Spot

Richard Arlen is again slated to head the cast of "A Son Comes Home," which was originally placed on the schedule for him, switched to Lee Tracy and then back again to him. Bayard Veiller is producing it for Paramount.

Sloane and MGM Dicker

Paul Sloane and Lucien Hubbard had a huddle yesterday, discussing the possibility of the director handling "All Good Americans" on a one-picture ticket for MGM. Wells Root is writing the screen play.

Lebedeff at Warners

Warners yesterday signed Ivan Lebedeff through Al Kingston for a spot in "Kansas City Princess." When he completes his role, June 15, he leaves for New York to negotiate for a stage play.

Retakes For 'Virgie'

Al Santell brought "Virgie Winters" back to the stages at Radio yesterday for added scenes and retakes. Picture was completed two weeks ago with Ann Harding and John Boles in the top brackets.

Mercer in 'Jane Eyre'

Beryl Mercer went into the cast of Monogram's "Jane Eyre" yesterday, replacing Doris Lloyd. Miss Lloyd was obliged to answer a call for a six weeks engagement at Fox.

Howard Sails May 26

New York.—Sydney Howard, British comedian, who is being loaned to United Artists by British and Dominions, sails from England on the Bremen, May 26.

Not that it MATTERS
by Helen Gwynn

Our own foreign department writes in to say that London is now Hollywood's gift to the King of ngland. Seems as how the Dorchester Hotel has been entirely taken over by Americans and Jack Kirkland, honeymooning there with his bride, says that Ratoff helps them all out with their English. Ratoff, by the way, won't hit these shores again until August, "Redheads on Parade" having been shoved off until that time. He figures to toss off at least fourteen more reels of English film while the pounds are still rolling in.

Sooo, to get back to the good old U.S.A. (New York), Clifton Webb is happily back at work in "As Thousands Cheer" after an absence of two weeks. He was laid low by a "crease" in his tummy and a well known wag says he'll bet it's what every well dressed man will wear. Dorothy Stone's husband subbed for Webb while he was ill. . . . Lillian Kober and Dashiell Hammett gave out with a cocktail party over the week-end that rated the presence of Arthur Kober (come on home, all is forgotten!), F. P. A., Buck Crouse, Ira Gershwin and Herman Shumlin. . . . Jimmy Cannon sent Winchell one of the best wires of the season when W. W. opened his act in Chicago. It read: "Booking you there at seven thousand per week is the biggest Chicago crime since the Loeb-Leopold murder. The only way they can fill the theatre is if the posse chases Dillinger in. Stick a flag on that balcony and claim it for America."

"The Milky Way" seems to be the tag end-of-the-season hit for the Broadway stage and, if you can go by the bidding, it will be an early season movie in no time at all. Broadway is pulling for Paramount to buy it because Paramount has Jack Haley under contract and everyone wants him to get the break . . . and we'd like to see that, too. He's one grand comedian whose name should have been plastered on movie marquees long ago and much oftener. . . . And while we're on the subject of Paramount, Bayard Veiller is going around the lot looking like a green salad and making the boys dizzy with his bright green double-breasted coat and spotless white pants. Swank, we calls it, spotless white pants on a week day. . . . And to get back to New York once more, the prize marquee signs of the week were: " 'Hold That Girl,' 'Bottoms Up' and 'She Made Her Bed' with Richard Arlen." Which just about lays New York low for the week and we'll be seein' ya in Hollywood tomorrow. It breaks down a column something fierce to get mail.

CREEL DEMANDS ACTION ON LABOR'S COMPLAINTS

to turn all complaints from studio workers, charging the studios with code violations, over to the Studio Labor Committee, headed by Pat Casey. It was also learned that he has expressed himself as fully determined never to permit these complaints to go to the Studio Labor Committee until he has been convinced that the committee was appointed fairly and is functioning fairly.

Both he and Judge Lindsey have sent numerous letters and wires to Washington, trying to get the matter of the complaints settled, but to date no satisfactory replies have been received. Most of the communications have found their way into the hands of Rosenblatt. So, yesterday, wishing to get the matter settled before he gives up the reins as State NRA Director to run for Governor, Creel decided to go to the highest authority in the NRA enforcement division.

Creel, it was learned, feels that the men who filed the complaints against the studios should have protection, and that their names should not be disclosed to anyone connected with the studios. Therefore, according to those close to him, he feels that their complaints should not go to the Studio Labor Committee, inasmuch as the complainants have all sent him definite word that they are opposed to such a move.

At present more than 100 complaints are in the hands of Judge Lindsey. He has heard the complainants' testimony, but the producers have refused to recognize him. Rosenblatt has declared Judge Lindsey has no jurisdiction. Now it will be up to Professor Altmeyer, one of the President's "Brain Trust" and formerly from the University of Wisconsin, to decide.

Judge Lindsey has his decisions ready, but what to do with them is the problem. As Professor Altmeyer heads the division of the NRA that is supposed to enforce the code, Creel feels that perhaps a final decision can and will be rendered by him.

In the meantime, a number of the men whose complaints are in Judge Lindsey's hands, have written him saying they wish to withdraw their complaints in case the final decision is that the Studio Labor Committee is to get them.

Hobart Henley to Wed Girl From New Orleans

Hobart Henley, who has been quiescent the past two years, and Dorothy March, New Orleans socialite, plan to be married Friday, according to friends. They will sail Saturday for Honolulu.

Henley on returning from his honeymoon intends to resume his directorial career in pictures.

Robinson to Warners

Casey Robinson has completed his Charles R. Rogers contract and checks in at Warners to work on an original, which will be Harry Joe Brown's first as an associate producer there. Brown leaves this week for Honolulu, returning in time to start his contract on July 1.

'U' Sets Spigelgass As Associate Prod.

Universal yesterday signed Leonard Spigelgass to a long term contract, replacing his present ticket which had two weeks to go.

Under the new set-up, he remains as scenario head and becomes an associate producer, with "Princess O'Hara" being the first picture under his wing. Nat Ferber is scripting the Damon Runyon yarn.

'Bitter Harvest' Will Be Moved to Hollywood

Because of the great popularity of the play at the Beverly Hills Community Playhouse last week, Melville A. Brown, former picture director, yesterday purchased "Bitter Harvest," by Catherine Turney, with the intention of opening it at the Hollywood Playhouse May 28. He will produce it in New York early next fall in collaboration with a well known producer. Deal was negotiated by Jerry Horwin.

Leslie Fenton and Jeanette Nolan, the leads in the Beverly Hills production, have been signed for the Hollywood showing.

Brown's Father to Act

Tom Brown's father, Harry Brown, has become tired of being just the parent of a motion picture player, so he has decided to try the picture game himself. Henry Willson, of the Joy and Polimer office, set him for his first part in King Vidor's "Our Daily Bread."

One For Invincible

Invincible's production, "The House of Strangers,' is supposed to start Friday or Saturday at Universal under direction of Frank R. Strayer. The story has an Austrian border military setting. Cast not yet chosen.

all in which wires are used, radio broadcasting being put in. Television will also be supervised under the same commission.

No specific reference is made to motion pictures, but it is thought certain that the transmission of sound pictures will include supervision of companies manufacturing equipment, inasmuch as reference is made to all forms of licensees, manufacturers of equipment, subsidiaries, holding companies, interlocking directorates, etc.

It is believed that the House will pass the measure swiftly and that it will be signed by the President. The church and reform groups took a licking on a proposed amendment which would require all radio stations to devote one-fourth of their time to non-profit programs of religious or educational nature, but an amendment was put in which gives the new commission power to revoke any broadcasting license if it constitutes a monopoly in any locality.

Lillian Drew to "Old Fashioned Way," Paramount.

Charles E. Arnt for "Ladies Should Listen," Paramount.

Academy's Research Council Meets Tonight

The Academy's Research Council will hold its monthly business meeting tonight. It will also check up on the work of the various sub-committees and their progress to date on the numerous technical projects now in the hands of the Council. Of particular importance will be the presentation of a report showing how much the various studios have saved as a result of the recent revision of the standard release print brought about by the Council.

New Paramount Title

Paramount yesterday decided that "Now and Forever" will be the final title on "Honor Bright," the Gary Cooper-Carole Lombard story, which Henry Hathaway directs. Sylvia Thalberg's screen play was supervised by Louis Lighton.

Break For Extras

Michael Curtiz poured extras yesterday into the four city blocks of Moscow constructed at Warners for "British Agent," and the official tally showed the mob to total 571, all in Moscovite and Cossack costumes.

John Gueron Resigns

John Geuron, head of the Consolidated Laboratory, has handed in his resignation after refusing to take a salary cut.

Beebe on Original

Nat Levine yesterday signed Ford Beebe to write an original for the feature Ken Maynard will make for Mascot. Marty Cohen is the supervisor.

Keefe With McGuire

Jim Keefe has been engaged on William Anthony McGuire's personal staff at Universal.

3 Houses Accused Of Price-Cutting

The Los Angeles Grievance Board yesterday heard the evidence in the complaint of the Crystal Theatre, 2806 Whittier boulevard, against the proprietors of the Muse, Rosslyn and Wonderland theatres, charged with cutting prices.

Double bills for a nickel were alleged, which is below the minimum price called for in the exhibitor-distributor contracts. The decision of the Board will be given tomorrow just before the start of hearings of two cases against Fox West Coast.

Singing Not Speaking, Says Code Authority

One of the few decisions from the Code Committee for Extras that has been in favor of the studios was handed down yesterday when thumbs were turned down on the complaint of a group of players who took part in a group song in a picture at Fox and then asked that they be paid $25 per day for speaking lines.

The Grievance Sub-Commitee of the Extras' Committee referred the complaint to the Code Authority, which decided that group singing, even though the lines of the song do have to be memorized, is not the speaking of individual lines. The singers received $15 per day.

Caruso Jr. in Singing Debut Over the Air

Enrico Caruso Jr. made his first public appearance as a singer last night over KFWB when he appeared for an interview by George Fischer.

"La Buenaventura," Spanish production of "The Fortune Teller," in which Caruso stars, will be given a standard Hollywood premiere when it opens at the Filmarte Theatre Friday, with studio lights and the attendance of the contract lists in person.

Garrett to Europe

New York.—Oliver H. P. Garrett, who arrived here from the coast last week for a vacation, is planning on hopping off to Europe for a three-months ramble before returning to Hollywood for the writing grind.

Pickford Coming Home

New York.—Mary Pickford, who has been making personal appearances and who wound up her tour with a triumphal reception at Toronto, her home town, leaves for Hollywood Friday.

Three For Bevan

Billy Bevan has a trio of contracts lined up for him. From "Caravan," at Fox, he goes to "Shock" at Monogram and "One More River" at Universal. Tickets were set by Beyer-MacArthur.

MGM Decorator Back

Edwin Willis, head of the MGM interior decorating department, returned from New York Monday. He was there three weeks buying materials and searching for new ideas to use in future pictures.

UNIVERSAL STARTS MAKING ALL RELEASE PRINTS HERE

Plant Will Handle All Work Hereafter

Production of Universal's release prints here instead of in the East started yesterday at the Royal Laboratories at Universal City, when Roy Hunter ordered the printing of footage that this week will exceed 2,000,000 feet.

It is the first time since the $500,000 laboratory's completion three years ago that it has been used for its intended purpose or has been operated anywhere near capacity.

The first pictures being printed for release are Frank Borzage's "Little Man, What Now?", Eddie Laemmle's "Embarrassing Moments," a Doane comedy, "Pleasing Grandpa," and a Lance cartoon, "Annie Moved Away."

With the exception of a few weeks twelve years ago when new machinery was being installed at the Fort Lee Laboratories, release prints have never been made at the studio lab. Hereafter it will handle all but news shots and foreign version titles.

The laboratory was planned for the handling of Universal's entire developing and printing requirements, but, before it was completed, Universal sold its eastern lab to Consolidated and guaranteed its print business for four years as part of the deal.

Result here was the incorporation of Royal Laboratories to operate the expensive new Universal City property, and the engagement of King Charney, then Agfa representative, as outside man to bring in independent business for the plant superintended by Roy Hunter.

The lab was shut down completely in February, 1933, by a forced operating economy, and for a year Universal's production dailies were handled by Consolidated. Charney remained to the end of the year and then was released.

Since the laboratory resumed printing dailies on February 25, it has been averaging about 500,000 feet weekly, or one-fifth its capacity. Hunter, who has been in Universal laboratory continuously since February, 1916, estimates that normal output from now on will be one to one-and-a-half million feet weekly.

Novarro's Next Set

Ramon Novarro will star in "Her Excellency's Tobacco Shop" as his first picture on his return to MGM. The studio has closed a deal for the purchase of the continental play by Bus Fekete.

Prinz in Demand

Paramount has assigned Leroy Prinz to handle the dance numbers in "52 Weeks for Fleurette' 'and "The Big Broadcast," while Edward Small is negotiating with him to direct the numbers in "Transatlantic Showboat."

Lord-Swerling Leaving

New York.—Pauline Lord leaves for the coast today to appear in Paramount's "Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch." Jo Swerling also leaves today for the Columbia studios.

Rosy To Hold Job In Spite of Darrow

Washington.—The reports that Clarence Darrow, chairman of the now famous Darrow committee, asked that Sol Rosenblatt be dismissed from the motion picture code are true, but it is not believed this will be done because of the strong in that Rosy has with Johnson and the administration.

Laurel and Hardy Get Together Again

Stan Laurel and Oliver Hardy resume work together Monday after four months off the Roach lot They start the fourth of their series of six shorts, interrupted after "Oliver the Eighth" last January by Laurel's domestic affairs.

Charles Rogers and Frank Terry were assigned yesterday by Henry Ginsberg to work with Laurel on the story.

Berkeley Has Several Weeks to Go on 'Dames'

The first of Busby Berkeley's dance numbers or "Dames" has been completed, and three more dancing sequences remain to be staged in special sets.

Berkeley is directing Dick Powell, Ruby Keeler and 60 girls in the numbers, with an estimate of three to four weeks yet required at Warners for completion.

Mitchell and Durant Get Bid From Cochrane

Mitchell and Durante yesterday had a wire from the English producer, C. B. Cochrane, offering to star them in a revue he plans to open at the Palace, New York, next August.

The slapabout team, currently in "She Learned About Sailors" at Fox, is indicating willingness if picture obligations permit.

Delmar Yarn For MGM

Schulberg, Feldman and Gurney yesterday sold Vina Delmar's new story, "Man Crazy," to MGM as a possible Joan Crawford vehicle. The story comes out in Liberty magazine soon.

Kid Actress For 'Eyre'

Eight-year-old Edith Fellows has been signed by Monogram for "Jane Eyre," while Paramount is setting her in "Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch." Beyer-MacArthur represents her.

Stage Actress Coming

New York.—Charlotte Granville, for years a noted stage actress, left for the coast today to appear in "You Belong to Me" for Paramount.

Bulgakov to Columbia

New York.—Leo Bulgakov, stage director, leaves for the coast tomorrow to direct pictures for Columbia.

Radio Pix Set For All Scandinavia

New York.—Phil Reisman, vice-president of the RKO Export Corporation, has closed a deal with Gloria Films, of Copenhagen, for the distribution of all the Radio Pictures product in Denmark.

This deal completes 100 per cent distribution for this product in all Scandinavian countries.

MGM Golf Tourney Set For Palos Verdes

MGM's sixth annual golf meet will be held at the Palos Verdes Club, June 17, with more than 400 entries already registered.

Committee includes E. D. Smith, D. J. Gray, Fred Gabourie, Lou Kolb, F. M. Harris, George Schneider, D. W. Robinson, Bill Newberry and W. P. Henly.

Butterworth O.K. Again

Charles Butterworth has recovered from the illness which kept him out of the lead of "The Rear Car" and is returning to MGM for his co-starring role with Jimmy Durante in "Student Tour." Chuck Reisner directs when the picture starts in two weeks.

Decision Due Today In Berkeley Case

Sam Goldwyn and Warners yesterday engaged in demonstrating the extent to which each had publicized Busby Berkeley, Goldwyn and Lynn Farnol going on the stand before Superior Court Judge Frank Smith to refute allegations made by J. R. Files, defense attorney, that the contract which Goldwyn made with Warners for the periodical loan of the dance director had been voided.

A judgment, either granting or denying Goldwyn his petition for an injunction against Warners continuing to use Berkeley, is due to be handed down today by Judge Smith.

Dorothy Arzner Set For Fox 'Captive Bride'

Dorothy Arzner is slated to direct the next Jesse Lasky production at Fox. Formerly called "Proud Princess" the new title is "Captive Bride" and will have Charles Boyer heading the cast list. Schulberg-Feldman-Gurney set the deal.

With this assignment, Sonya Levien joins the Lasky unit as a regular member of the Lasky staff. She collaborates on the script with Salisbury Field and Sam Hoffenstein.

McGuire With S-F-G

William Anthony McGuire yesterday signed a five-year managerial contract with Schulberg, Feldman and Gurney office.

TEST CODE AUTHORITY

TRADEVIEWS by FRANK POPE

•"PRODUCERS who make indecent pictures, who inject dirt into pictures without excuse, should be driven out of the business."

That was the opinion expressed by Adolph Zukor, president of Paramount-Publix, who, with the reorganization of the company on in New York, has come to Hollywood to sit in with Emanuel Cohen on the production of the coming program.

"But," he went on, "it is a terrible thing that the whole industry should be condemned by the church people and the reformers just because a few producers have lost, if they ever had, any vestige of good taste. If these reformers want to 'clean up' pictures, let them name the pictures to which they object. Let them post the title of the picture, the names of the producers, the writer, the director, the players. Place the blame, the responsibility where it belongs and do not malign an entire industry for the faults of a few."

Mr. Zukor obviously feels keenly the criticisms that have been leveled at pictures by the Catholic Church and various women's organizations.

"Paramount does not and will not make dirty pictures," he continued. "I have been in this business 25 years. I have made a thousand pictures and I am not ashamed of any of them. I can make 'Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch' or 'One Sunday Afternoon' and make it just as attractive to the public as any picture with smut in it. If Paramount wants to make 'Anna Karenina,' it will be made according to the story, but it will not be offensive. It doesn't have to be.

"Of course, pictures must reflect life, and life is not always as beautiful and moral as the reformers would like to have it. But neither does it have to be offensive to clean-minded people.

"The church and the reformers yell, 'Pictures are a menace.' All right, I admit that some of them are. But if the people who make these 'menaces' are pilloried, if the blame is pinned right where it belongs, if the title, the producer, the director, the writer and everyone concerned is shoved into the spotlight, they will think seriously before they repeat the offence."

Warners Have Sixty Set; 30 More Planned

Warner Brothers declared yesterday that the company has sixty stories actually set for the new program and that thirty more will be set for production before the new line-up is made public.

Owners Say Cowan Won't Produce 'Sun'

The statement, emanating from Lester Cowan's publicity agent, that he would produce "The Sun Also Rises," was denied last night by E. H. Griffith, one of the syndicate reported to have bought the story from Radio, and by Harry Edington, who is handling the deal.

The syndicate was said to consist of Griffith, Ann Harding, who was to

Von Stroheim Lead In Invincible Picture

Erich von Stroheim was set yesterday by Lichtig and Englander for the lead in the Invincible picture, "House of Strangers," which Maury Cohen starts tomorrow. He is also trying to borrow Wera Engels from Reliance.

Bill Goetz Returns

William Goetz, vice-president of 20th Century, returned to Hollywood by plane last night. He accompanied Darryl Zanuck east.

Indies Of Iowa And Nebraska Retract Assents In Spite Of The Threat Of Product Loss

New York.—What may prove to be the first test of the power of the Motion Picture Code Authority started yesterday when a group of independent exhibitors in the Iowa and Nebraska territory retracted their code assents and their financial obligations. This was done as a protest against the appointment of four MPTOA members to the local boards in Omaha. Added protest was made by C. E. Williams, president of the MPTO of Iowa and Nebraska, who resigned from the local zoning and grievance boards.

When the Code Authority sent out notices of assessments to exhibitors, it notified them that non-payment of the assessments would result in their not getting product for their houses. The Iowa and Nebraska rebels are now waiting to see just what the Code Authority can do about it, if anything.

Dana Burnet At Para.

Dana Burnet, nationally known author, arrived yesterday to start his term writing deal at Paramount. Writer has not been given an assignment as yet.

Morris Small Ill

Morris Small dropped out of his spot at the Small-Landau office yesterday with an attack of laryngitis.

Rogers Gives Notice To Half His Staff

Having wound up his Paramount contract with the two pictures completed last week, Charles R. Rogers yesterday gave two week dismissal notices to half of his production organization and prepared to close up shop temporarily. He leaves for a vacation in Europe the middle of June, as soon as his son finishes school, and returns August 1.

In the meantime, the half of the organization remaining will go ahead with preparations for the next series of features Rogers will make at an as yet unrevealed major studio.

Para. and U.A. Houses Install Golden Rule

Seeking to better downtown theatre business for each other, Marco's Paramount theatre and Grauman's United Artists put into effect today a pact to run trailers boosting pictures running in each other's houses.

This is said to be the first time that opposition houses have plugged each other's screen offerings.

Yates to Direct Cobb

Henry Ginsberg yesterday signed Hal Yates, formerly a writer on the lot and more recently in the same capacity at Paramount, to direct Irvin Cobb's first comedy for Hal Roach, "Fisherman's Luck," which starts a week from today. Frank Darien also spotted in the short.

Larry Weingarten Back

Laurence Weingarten, MGM producer, returned yesterday by train from New York. He was away about a month.

Mike Shea Passes On

New York.—Mike Shea, of Buffalo, one of the oldest and best known showmen in the United States, died yesterday, after a long illness.

FOX MET. PLAYHOUSES PLAN REORGANIZATION

New York.—The bondholders of the Fox Metropolitan Playhouses, representing $14,000,000 in outstanding bonds, filed their reorganization plan with the Federal Court yesterday.

The plan provides for the payment to bondholders of $5 cash for each bond held, a new $50 bond bearing five per cent interest, and $45 worth of common stock. This would total 100 per cent settlement of each bond.

The idea is to issue $7,000,000 in new bonds for the $14,000,000 outstanding, and the report states that there is sufficient cash on hand and current income to pay the interest on the new issue. The main trouble with the plan seems to be that the common stockholders are left out in the cold and probably will take action to block the deal.

Para. Buys Dialogue Rights To 'Ruggles'

New York.—Paramount has closed for the dialogue rights to "Ruggles of Red Gap," which it made as a silent about ten years ago, with Edward Everett Horton.

The talkie version probably will have Charlie Ruggles in the title role and will be called "A Gentleman's Gentleman."

'U' Wants Carrillo

Universal yesterday asked MGM for the loan of Leo Carrillo for a top spot in "Ransom—One Million Dollars," which Eph Asher produces and Murray Roth directs.

New York REVIEWS

"GLAMOUR"

Universal prod.; director, William Wyler; writers, Edna Ferber, Doris Anderson, Gladys Unger.

Roxy Theatre

World-Telegram: Paul Lukas, Constance Cummings, Philip Reed and Joseph Cawthorn act with fine skill and understanding so that it emerges a highly effective piece of entertainment. The story is a simple and effective one, filled with natural dialogue and keen character observation.

Mirror: The complicated emotions of actors are exposed in this drama. The performers play their roles competently, though the leading roles are trying.

Times: Several brainy persons have had a hand in the making of "Glamour," but the final result is somewhat disappointing. It is the sort of story which could go on and on, so long as the good looks of the leading feminine player last.

Herald-Tribune: A haphazard and utterly unconvincing entertainment that leaves one with a feeling of mingled bewilderment and ennui. The handsome settings and calculated tempo of "Glamour," even the occasionally fine acting that has gone into it, serve only to make the badly managed narrative more incredible.

Sun: Constance Cummings is forever getting herself miscast. She manages, nevertheless, very nicely with her role. William Wyler has directed the film shrewdly, keeping the general atmosphere as light as possible.

News: "Glamour" is excellent entertainment for any adult, but it is designed especially to appeal to women. Constance Cummings plays the role of Linda Fayne as she has never played before.

Journal: Miss Cummings' role isn't exactly a sympathetic one, but it's a fair program offering with nice work by Mr. Lukas.

American: A little on the dull side as to story, the strictly blue-print plot of the picture is nonetheless lent sufficient semblance of life by players and director to draw a passing mark from teacher.

Times: If you are a consistent movie-goer, if you see, say, three or four pictures a year, you have doubtless run across this theme before.

Hubbard Will Finish Three By End of June

Completing the one picture now in work and the three in preparation by the end of June, Lucien Hubbard, MGM producer, plans to leave for a vacation in Europe by the middle of July.

He will finish "The Rear Car," "Four Walls," "All Good Americans" and "Death on the Diamond" before he leaves. "The Rear Car' is now in work, with the other three hitting the stages soon.

Claudette Colbert Won't Do 'High Yaller'

Claudette Colbert was greatly upset yesterday over the report that she is to play a "high yaller" in John M. Stahl's next picture at Universal.

Mr. Stahl's search for a colored actress who could look like a white girl started the story.

Joe Ruttenberg Here

Joseph Ruttenberg, one of New York's best known cameramen, arrived in Hollywood yesterday for a brief vacation.

McGuinness Patching

James K. McGuinness is writing some scenes that are to be added to "Operator 13" at MGM.

Jurisdictional Row To Land in A.F.of L.

According to information received by IATSE members in Hollywood this week, an effort is being made to bring the jurisdictional fight between the IATSE and the IBEW to the floor of the next convention of the A. F. of L.

The fight came to a head last summer when IBEW men stepped in at the studios at the time of the IATSE studio strike . The IBEW had been trying to swing all studio electricians and sound men into its group. When the strike came and the IBEW carried on, efforts were made to get the jurisdiction settled, but to no avail.

Now that IBEW is a signatory to the Basic Agreement and the IATSE is out as far as the major producers are concerned, it is understood that other locals throughout the country have started to put the pressure on in official circles in an effort to get the locals of the production field back in the picture.

Mainwaring An Author

Dan Mainwaring, formerly publicity man for the Academy, now on the Herald-Express, sold a fiction story this week to Harpers magazine. It is called "Fruit Tramp," with the locale laid in Northern California.

Struss Assigned

Karl Struss, who has just completed the photographing of Mae West's "It Ain't No Sin," has been assigned by Paramount to photograph "52 Weeks With Fleurette."

'DR. MONICA' DISTINCTLY BAD; 'I CAN'T ESCAPE' SMALL-TIME

Kay Francis Sunk By Role; Jean Muir Fine

"DR. MONICA"
(Warners)

Direction .....William Keighley
Author: Marja Morozowicz Szczepkowska.
Screen Play.....Charles Kenyon
Photography .....Sol Polito
Cast: Kay Francis, Warren William, Jean Muir, Veree Teasdale, Phillip Reed, Emma Dunn, Herbert Bunston, Ann Shoemaker, Virginia Hammond, Hale Hamilton, Virginia Pine.

After seeing the new Kay Francis vehicle for Warners, "Dr. Monica," one is apt to remark, with a deep sigh of relief, "Well, that's over!" or "So what?" or "What of it?" or even just plain "What"?

This picture is a lot of to-do over nothing. The story itself isn't at all interesting and it certainly isn't palatable; the writing is pretty dull; Warren William is so bad in a bad part that it is pitiful; Kay Francis has one or two minutes when she is able to be her own charming self, but the rest of the time she is hampered by clothes, dialogue or the story; the director must have had a tough task to make what he did out of it; the ending is positively the poorest, weakest, most senseless and thoroughly ridiculous ending ever tacked onto a film—especially the very last line; and—oh, well, let it go at that.

Miss Francis plays a very successful woman doctor, who has two ruling passions. One is her love for her husband, and the other is her desire to have a baby. When she finds out that she never can have a baby, it is a terrible blow, but that is nothing compared to the sock on the jaw she gets when she discovers that one of her best friends is going to have a baby and that her own husband is the papa.

Anyway, the poor lady brings the baby into the world; plans to leave her husband and then is stopped by the baby's mother, who, very dramatically and bravely, kills herself a la Hepburn in "Christopher Strong," so that the little cheeild can bring the couple together again.

Kay Francis struggles heroically but futilely; William, as mentioned before, is pitiful; Veree Teasdale is well cast as a friend, but it is really Jean Muir, with her sorry young fright, her hysteria and her sincerity, who keeps the picture from falling to pieces.

William Keighley directed; Charles Kenyon made the adaptation from the play by Marja Morozowicz Szczepkowska; and Sol Polito photographed. Anton Grot's art direction is really distinctive.

So, if you can sell your audiences a picture on its art direction and one performance, go ahead. But if they demand entertainment, avoid this one.

Lang Finishes One

Walter Lang finished "Whom The Gods Destroy" Tuesday at Columbia after 28 shooting days.

Reynolds Too Good

Ben Reynolds, cameraman on the W. C. Fields picture, "The Old Fashioned Way," yesterday was bawled out by a producer because his photography is too good. One scene calls for photography of the type of twenty years ago, and Ben doesn't know how to do it so badly.

Rosenblatt Goat In Darrow Report

Washington.—The much discussed Darrow report is slated to be released today or tomorrow. With its release those close to the siutation here expect to see the wrath of the entire Administration fall upon the board because it has singled out one man, Sol Rosenblatt, for personal insinuations.

It is understood that neither the White House nor anyone connected with the Administration expected the board to make any personal references when it had heard only one side of the case. As a result, General Johnson has prepared an answer, Rosenblatt has written a 67-page report, and Donald Richberg, chief NRA counsel, has written what is said to be the most vitriolic report ever penned by a government official. Betting here is that the White House will take no action on the findings, due to the personal attack on Rosenblatt.

Leigh Jason To Direct Radio Musical Shorts

Lee Marcus has engaged Leigh Jason to direct short musicals for Radio. The first one will star Walter Woolf.

"La Cucarocha," short Spanish musical featuring Steffi Duna and Don Alvarado, is now shooting after a week's rehearsals. This gives Radio three shorts in the make. Marcus reports that by Saturday his 1933-34 quota will be finished and he will have six subjects ready on the 1934-34 list.

MacMahon and Kibbee Will Be Teamed Again

Warners like the Aline MacMahon and Guy Kibbee team and is on a hunt for stories in which to continue co-starring them. Decision to bracket them came after the reviews on "The Merry Frinks." Their next will be "Big Hearted Herbert."

Binnie Barnes Due

New York.—Binnie Barnes, one of England's favorite screen actresses, arrives on the Aquitania tomorrow and leaves at once for Hollywood to take a role in "There's Always Tomorrow" for Universal.

Presnell on 'Benefit'

MGM has assigned Robert Presnell to write the screen play on "The Big Benefit," an original by Milton Raison and Jack Harvey. Harry Rapf produces.

Onslow Stevens Is High Spot of Film

"I CAN'T ESCAPE"
Beacon Productions
(Universal Release)

Direction .....Otto Brower
Story: Jerry Sackheim and Nathan Asch.
Continuity .....Faith Thomas
Photography .....Jerome Asch
Cast: Onslow Stevens, Lila Lee, Russell Gleason, Otis Harlan, Hooper Atchley, Bill Desmond, Eddie Gribbon, Kane Richmond, Clara Kimball Young, Nat Carr, John Elliott.

He wore rented dinner clothes. She was on call for parties. He was on parole. She claimed that her profession gave her a life sentence. He broke his parole in her defense. She announced that she would wash dishes for a square guy. So dawned love among the well-dressed derelicts.

"I Can't Escape" is the title chosen by Max Alexander for his Beacon production. The title is a bit baffling, considering that the ex-convict escapes, not only a murderer but a frame-up.

Onslow Stevens plays Steve, who was a fall guy for a crooked stock deal. His pride demands that he get a job to keep Mae, played by Lila Lee, washing dishes quietly at home. His record defeats him, until he falls into the hands of a second set of crooked brokers.

Things are complicated by a boy who thirsts for his blood. A good old chase to beat the crooks escaping with ill-gotten gains leads up to explanations of all suspicions.

Onslow Stevens holds the film together. He has a number of excellent moments, especially when he is looking for a job. Russell Gleason deals adequately with the boy who is struggling with desire for revenge, for his best friend's wife, and food. Hard job. Clara Kimball Young appears only momentarily. Others in the cast are defeated occasionally by dialogue which bristles with sentimentality.

The film will be speeded by some judicious cutting, particularly of a long dance sequence. Dance team is all right, in itself, but the spotting at the first of the film, before characters are established, is bad judgment.

Considering the low cost of the film, it will do for market at which it is aimed.

Eyre-Lovett Teamed

MGM has signed Lawrence Eyre to collaborate with Josephine Lovett on the script of Victor Herbert's "Naughty Marietta," which Irving Thalberg will produce. Jeanette MacDonald and Nelson Eddy have been bracketed in the top spots.

Ruskin On 'Broadcast'

Harry Ruskin yesterday finished the script of "52 Weeks With Fleurette," Al Werker's next directorial subject at Paramount, and was assigned to the treatment of "Big Broadcast."

Not that it MATTERS
by Helen Gwynn

We've just about decided that, next to the people who know everything, our pet hate against the world is people who expose everything. We really don't see why pictures, of all things, shouldn't be allowed to make their illusions and keep them too. And by that statement we do not refer to anything that may be said about actors. One never gets the truth about them anyway, because even if the truth were good, no publicity office could see the sense in giving that out. No, actors are not what's troubling us today. It's the technical side of picture.

As a consistently avid movie fan whose tastes cover a wide range from East to Mae West, we must admit that we'd just as lief not have anyone destroy the magical properties of pictures by explaining to us in detail just how a certain effect is produced. It is sufficient to us that the effect has been produced and produced well enough to make us believe that it's genuine. And when someone "in the know" goes deliberately out of his way to tell us how cleverly something has been faked, we don't thank him for it. We think it's just a piece of dirty snitching on the part of an old meanie whose indigestion won't let him enjoy anything but nightmares. And we believe there are many thousands of people who feel the same way about it.

For instance, in the case of animal pictures. Practically any person of average intelligence knows, deep down in his heart, that at least a miracle a day would have to occur for a cameraman to be on the spot every time an animal acts up in the jungle. Well, he knows it's not real and he knows you know it's not real but it's entertaining, and it's exciting until the moment some smart aleck is unkind enough to remind them and prove to them what they knew all along, but weren't admitting because it was more good fun not to.

Remember those ads that ciggie company ran about, "It's fun to be folled, but it's more fun to know?" Well, they were wrong about that, too. The protests on that campaign came not only from the professional magicians, but from audiences who enjoyed being fooled and couldn't get any kick at all when they no longer had to puzzle their brains out as to how it was done.

Pictures, too, have to rely in great part on "magic," magic that makes the world wonder and marvel at that wonder, and it's decidedly unfair to the enjoyment of any picture for anyone to come out in cold print and take away the magic from the spell that pictures cast. After all, if a beautiful girl walks down the street, no one wants to be reminded of the fact that underneath is just another skull and bones, and it isn't right that skeletons should stalk the illusions of beauty created by pictures.

star in the picture, Horace Jackson, the writer, and possibly Sidney R. Kent. The picture, according to earlier stories, was to be released by Fox.

Cowan is moving into offices at the General Service Studios today and is understood to have authorized the story that he would produce the picture. Griffith said he knew nothing of such a plan, and Edington said that not only was the story untrue, but the deal for the property was not even completed. Cowan, he said, had negotiated with Fox for the release.

Hecht-MacArthur Start First Monday

New York—Ben Hecht and Charles MacArthur, having completed casting for "Crime Without Passion," their first for Paramount release, will start shooting Monday. In addition to Claude Rains, the cast includes Whitney Bourne, Stanley Ridges, Margot—a dancer—Leslie Adams, Esther Dale and Greta Granstedt.

Hecht and MacArthur will do their own directing, with Art Rosson as associate director, Slavko Vorkapich in charge of technical effects, Joe Nadel as production manager, and Harold Godsoe as his assistant. The story is of a noted criminal lawyer and the locale is New York.

June Knight To Star In 'Castles in Air'

June Knight's first assignment since her return from Florida will be opposite Russ Columbo in "Castles in the Air," the John Meehan Jr. original which B. F. Zeidman produces for Universal.

Kurt Neumann is up for the directorial assignment. Russ Brown, Henry Armetta and Andy Devine have featured roles.

Goldwyn Signs Comic From 'Shim Sham' Revue

Cully Richards, the "dead pan" comic in the "Shim Sham Revue" at the Music Box, was signed yesterday by Sam Goldwyn for the cast of "Barbary Coast." He will have the role originally intended for Buster Keaton.

Lois Wiss Promoted

Tom Baily, head of publicity at Paramount, yesterday promoted Lois Wiss to the spot vacated by Virginia Wood when she became fan magazine contact. Miss Wiss has been with the department for two two years, recently as Kenneth Whitmore's assistant.

Rogell Starts At Col.

Al Rogell starts "Criminal Within" at Columbia tomorrow with Richard Cromwell featured and Charles Wilson, Bradley Page and Guy Usher in supporting parts. The girl lead is to be picked today.

'Within The Rock' Done

"Within the Rock," Showman picture, finished at Alexander Brothers studio yesterday after seven days shooting.

Extras Get Strikers Off Columbia Job

Ten striking longshoremen from San Pedro, hired by Columbia this week for scenes in "Whom The Gods Destroy," were let go by the studio at the end of their first half day's work when the Screen Actors' Guild protested that the men were taking the place of ten regular extra players.

In explaining the matter, an executive of the studio stated that the men were hired for a scene in which they took the part of sailors handling a lifeboat, and that the studio felt that their technical ability in this line warranted their employment. However, he explained the studio paid the longshoremen a full day's check and immediately replaced them with ten extra players when the complaint was made.

Chapter of Jewish Actors' Guild Planned

More than 50 prominent Jews in the industry yesterday attended a luncheon at the Hillcrest Country Club for the formation of a California chapter of the Jewish Theatrical Actors' Guild, a charitable organization. Eddie Cantor acted as chairman of the meeting and outlined plans for a membership drive.

Para. Completes Its Theatre Service Bd.

New York.—The national advisory board of the Paramount Theatre Service Corporation has been completed by the appointments of Martin Mullin to represent Paramount's New England partners, and M. E. Comerford for the Middle Atlantic territory.

The board will hold its first meeting in connection with the Paramount convention in Los Angeles in June. E. V. Richards, N. L. Nathanson, Karl Hoblitzelle and A. H. Blank are expected to attend.

Ryerson-Woolf Team On MGM's 'Have a Heart'

Florence Ryerson and Edgar Allan Woolf have been teamed again by MGM, this time to write the script of "Have a Heart," the Buddy De Sylva and David Butler original, which the latter was borrowed from Fox to direct.

Jean Parker has the lead and John W. Considine Jr. produces.

WANGER QUITS M. G. M.

Resigns And Mayer Accepts; Understood To Be Rejoining Para. After Trip To Europe

Walter Wanger walked into Louis B. Mayer's office yesterday morning and asked to be relieved of his contract that had two years to go. He is understood to have reasoned that it was impossible for him to work under the burdens that MGM places on all its producers (with the exception of Thalberg), and when Mayer realized the sincerity of the request, he tore up Wanger's contract and gave him a clean bill of health.

The move back of Wanger's resignation, prompted first by the supposed production limitations at MGM, was •ONE of the•main fights which the motion picture industry has on its hands right now is that against the Patman bill, which would establish a Federal Motion Picture Commission or, in other words, Federal censorship, and which is now before Cngress.

The agitation by the church people and reformers against indecent pictures is doing much to strengthen sentiment for this measure, which would be a heavy blow to the industry if passed. There are so many common-sense objections to it that to try to list them would be futile, but the arguements were summed up very convincingly by Charles C. Pettijohn recently in his brief against the measure. He cited 23 arguments in opposition, some of them especially trenchant.

Primarily, Mr. Pettijohn says, the measure repudiates the NRA and creates a conflict of authority, the NRA having already set up machinery to do what the bill is designed to do. It would not prevent State censorship nor would it eliminate the six boards already operating. Moreover, there is nothing in it that would prevent the other 42 states from forming censor boards in addition to the Federal.

The censorship it would establish, according to Pettijohn, would be identical in principle with the European censorship of news. So far as its effect on salacious films is concerned, it would place a premium on them. We would have producers boot-legging such pictures without any control, even by the industry itself.

The cost would be staggering as it would require constant Federal supervision, both of all studios and all theatres. The power of any commission established under such a measure would even extend to newsreels, which means censorship of a pictorial press. Still another serious objection is that it would attempt to exercise supervision over all motion picture advertising which, of course, is impracticable, and also unnecessary, as the industry does fairly well at that job itself.

Under any ordinary conditions there would not be much danger of the bill passing because the American people, as a body, are opposed to censorship,

Heirs of Zola Move To Suppress 'Nana'

Paris.—The heirs of Emile Zola have applied to the French courts for permission to sue United Artists on the ground that the novel in that company's production of "Nana" is "disfigured to a point where it is unrecognizable." The heirs want damages and the suppression of the picture.

Barrymore Out; Radio After Kruger

Radio will re-make three days work on "A Hat, a Coat, a Glove," owing to John Barrymore's withdrawing from the starring assignment. Player, according to the studio, decided he did not want to go through with the role.

Releasing him from his contract, the studio will get him for one picture on its new program instead. Negotiations are on with MGM for the loan of Otto Kruger to replace him. Worthington Minor is directing.

Theatre Workers in New York on Strike

New York—Ushers, ticket takers and out-front announcers of Loew's and KAO theatres in New York City went on strike yesterday. The union claims 2000 walked out, but Charles Moskowitz, of Loew's, says the strikers number just 53.

He also says that a check-up by the Federal Department of Labor showed that 84 per cent of the 2200 theatre workers opposed joining the union.

Schulberg-Erpi Dicker on Big Deal

New York.—B. P. Schulberg and Electrical Research Products Inc. are working on a deal that will provide for the latter to finance the former in eight pictures to be made next year, with the release going to either Paramount or Radio.

Schulberg has two more pictures to make on his old Paramunt deal and, it is understood, will not renew.

'Stingaree' Opens Big

Opening to a gross of $2,750 for its first day, Wednesday, at the Golden Gate in San Francisco, Radio's "Stingaree" barely missed repeating the business pulled into the house on the run of "Little Women."

Cooper-RKO Deal 2 Or 4 Pictures

Radio Pictures and Merian C. Cooper have worked out their agreement and it calls for a minimum of two pictures a year, and a maximum of four a year for the next five years.

This deal removes Cooper from any activity in the management of the studio, an occupation he has abhorred from the start, and although those in the know on the lot will tell you that J. R. McDonough is not going to bring in a production head, but will run the plant himself on a unit production set-up, don't be surprised if a very important producer now connected at another plant will be designated production head before June 1.

Douglas MacLean Signs New Para. Contract

Completing his first year as a Paramount producer, Douglas MacLean has signed for another year, with six to make on the new ticket.

His first group this past season included "Mama Loves Papa," "Tillie and Gus," "Six of a Kind" and "Melody in Spring." MacLean has now in work, "Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch" and "Ladies Should Listen."

FWC AND SEVEN PRODUCERS NAMED IN ANTI-TRUST SUIT

THE LOWDOWN

Prince Alexis Thurn-Taxis, now in Hollywood, sold his original story, "Me and the King," to Paramount for Mae West, as you know. But the Prince, who is full of charm, is also full of bright ideas so far as that story is concerned. Alexis is a good friend (nay, we might even say, a pal) of the ex-King Alfonso of Spain, and he thinks it would be simply elegant if Alfonso came over to Hollywood and appeared in the picture! Not in the leading role, mind you—just in a small part. And strangely enough, there is more than a slight possibility that Alfonso, who is a swell sport, may actually do it. Anyway, Alexis has Paramount's permission to "negotiate" with the King—and that's exactly what he's doing! Think of the poobleeecity!

An ironical situation (not without its laff side) came to pass a coupla weeks ago, when the wife of a prominent actor decided to sue him for divorce. The woman's daughter (herself a picture actress) visited her, and by turns demanded and begged that there be no scandal connected with Momma's proceedings. The reason that the visit struck the suing lady rather funny is the fact that the daughter never paid the least bit of attention to her while she was married to the actor—and also the fact that the daughter's life has been anything but pure, either in private or in print! The daughter was sooo afraid that any scandal connected with Poppa would injure HER career. Imagine!

Film Stars Frolic at New Stadium Tonight

The Film Stars Frolic is all set to get under way tonight at the newly-erected Gilmore Stadium. Proceeds of the five performances will go to charity, and it is expected that the net will be nearly $50,000. Eddie Cantor has the most important part in the proceedings.

'Serenade' For Harvey

Lilian Harvey's next picture at Fox, in place of "Lottery Lover," will be the Rex Beach story, "Serenade," with a Viennese background. Paul Martin directs under Sol Wurtzel's supervision.

Chotiners Demand $300,000 Damages

H. W. and M. C. Chotiner, owners of the Chotiner Parisian and the Chotiner Ravenna theatres, today will file suit through Attorney Nat C. Recht in the United States District Court against Fox West Coast Theatres and seven major picture producing organizations, charging violation of the Sherman and Clayton Anti-Trust Acts, and asking damages of $300,000.

The picture companies named in suit are: RKO-Radio, Fox Film Corporation, Warner Brothers-First National, United Artists, Universal Pictures, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer and Columbia.

The Chotiners charge that Fox West Coast and the picture companies, through their distributors, entered into a conspiracy about August, 1932, to monopolize the picture film industry in this section of the country, and to ruin and put the Chotiner theatres out of business, and that they have put the conspiracy into effect with the result that, whereas the two Chotiner theatres previous to the alleged conspiracy earned a profit of $1000 a month, now they are running at a loss.

The complaint alleges that the defendants agreed among themselves to sell all of their pictures for first run showing to Fox West Coast and agreed also that these pictures could not be shown in the Parisian until 14 days and the Ravenna 21 days after they had been shown in the Belmont, a Fox West Coast theatre.

Then, according to the complaint, Fox West Coast ran the pictures in all the other theatres it owned or controlled before showing them in the Belmont, thus making it impossible for the Chotiner theatres to show the pictures until long after most of the other theatres had run them, and preventing the Chotiner theatres from showing them in competition with theatres of Fox West Coast. The Chotiners allege that this conspiracy has put them in a spot where they cannot play the pictures of the companies complained against until from 60 to 75 days after they have been shown in down-town Los Angeles.

Due to these allegedly unfair tactics, the Chotiners now claim that their theatres, which were reasonably worth $100,000 before the conspiracy, are now practically valueless. So they ask $300,000 damages and $10,000 attorneys fees, and that the Fox West Coast Theatres and the picture companies named be enjoined by the court from continuing their "present illegal practice."

Tradeviews

but the danger lies in the recent agitations against certain types of pictures that have been released and in the possible demands made upon members of Congress by the reformers who back such agitations. The business has fought Federal censorship for years, but the present situation with regard to that evil needs constant watching and concerted opposition.

Barthelmess and Para. Negotiating

Richard Barthelmess and Paramount have been negotiating a deal, which is said to be about ready for signing and which will take the star to that company for one picture at least. The choice of story is the only thing holding up the agreement.

Dave Allen Is Held On Morals Charge

Dave Allen, head of the Central Casting Bureau, was held in $2500 bail yesterday on a morals charge, having been indicted by the Grand Jury for alleged violation of section 288A of the penal code. A girl named Gloria Marsh is named in the indictment.

The accusation against Allen was made by an extra girl, named June De Long, and the offense is said to have been committed in her apartment.

Allen, whose hearing is set for May 24, declares the case is a "frame-up."

Another of 'Shim Sham' Cast Gets Film Break

Paramount yesterday outbid every studio in town and signed Maebelle Lewis of the "Shim Sham Revue" cast to a long term deal.

Two studios have already lodged bids with Paramount for the loan of the player. Deal was negotiated by Jerry Horwin.

Skouras Bros. Lose In Overbuying Case

New York.—The first complaint of over-buying to be brought before the New York Grievance Board resulted in a decision against Skouras Brothers, the respondents.

The complaint was filed by Rogowsky Brothers, of Portchester. The board found in favor of the complainants and ruled that Skouras must turn over to the competitor 22 pictures at the rate of two a week. All companies except Paramount are affected.

OPEN FORUM

To the Author of The Lowdown column:

You remarked in your column that I "stormed around (and off) the set in a flood of tears."

I've "stormed," yes; but I am offended at the "tears." I just wanted you to know that I prefer to "storm" with a little more dignity.

To be really truthful about the whole thing: I am usually put in my place before I even can do much storming—

But—thank you for the publicity!

JEAN MUIR.

'THE KEY' WELL DIRECTED BUT HURT BY POOR WRITING

Colin Clive Takes The Acting Honors

"THE KEY"
(Warners)

Direction .....Michael Curtiz
Authors.....R. Gore-Browne and J. L. Hardy
Screen Play.....Laird Doyle
Photography .....Ernest Haller

Cast: William Powell, Edna Best, Colin Clive, Hobart Cavanaugh, Halliwell Hobbes, Donald Crisp, J. M. Kerrigan, Henry O'Neill, Phil Regan, Arthur Treacher, Maxine Doyle, Arthur Aylesworth, Gertrude Short, Dawn O'Day.

Dublin, Ireland, in 1920, is the locale for "The Key," and it's the best thing about the picture, with the exception of some splendidly directed scenes of encounters between the English and the Sinn Feiners, and the acting of one or two minor characters.

Unfortunately, the story that is played against this tense, dramatic background is so familiar that it can't even draw any strength from its surroundings, and doubly unfortunate is the fact that William Powell is just too utterly debonair and heroic and suave for any use. The preview audience, a little weary of his high-handed "charm" at the beginning of the picture, tittered openly toward the last at an especially obvious swagger.

Powell plays the ex-lover of Edna Best, married to Colin Clive, who is in the intelligence department of the British army in Ireland. She thinks she is still in love with Powell, and when Clive finally captures the leader of the Sinn Feiners and learns on the same night that his wife loves the other man, he wanders forth and is instantly captured by the Irish, who swear to hang him the day their leader is hanged.

In the meantime, Miss Best finds out that she loves Clive after all and not Powell, so there is nothing left for Powell to do but jeopardize his career and his life to return Clive to the arms of his wife. Which he does—Ooooh, so gallantly.

Clive brings a tremendous sincerity to his part and a warm humaness. Miss Best has little to do and Powell does too much. Halliwell Hobbes is grand as the general; J. M. Kerrigan makes a small part stand out strongly, as does Gertrude Short as a barmaid. Donald Crisp is well cast as Conlan, the Sinn Feiner leader.

Michael Curtiz directed a lot of action and color into the film, but no suspense. The story, by R. Gore-Browne and J. L. Hardy, adapted by Laird Doyle, doesn't allow for suspense. Photography by Ernest Haller is as outstanding as the direction.

It is too bad that Powell is so unbelievable in this picture and that the story and writing are weak. For everything else is there to make a good film. Small boys may like some of it.

Business of Circus Shows Better Times

New York.—Better times are here, if the circus business is any criterion. The Al G. Fields show reports 65 per cent increase over 1933, Hagenbeck-Wallace reports 45 per cent increase, and the Ringling Brothers about 40 per cent.

Warner Bros. Win In Goldwyn Suit

Sam Goldwyn was yesterday denied his petition for an injunction against Warners on Busby Berkeley's services and the dance director will continue his work on "Dames."

Superior Court Judge Frank Smith overruled Goldwyn by deciding that the contract made by the producer with Warners for the periodical loan of Berkeley failed to provide for the dance director as a party to the deal. The court's action voided the two-year-old contract.

'Peck's Bad Boy' May Be Serialized on Air

A national air sponsorship of a 52-record radio transcription of "Peck's Bad Boy" is being worked on by Walter Dahlquist, of American Radio Features Syndicate.

As in the "Tarzan" air tie-up, Dahlquist hopes to line up sponsors on both sides of the continent.

'To the Ladies' Dialog Rights Bought by Para.

New York.—Paramount has bought the dialog rights to the George S. Kaufman-Marc Connelly play, "To the Ladies." It will star George Bancroft under the title of "Ladies First." Gil Pratt will direct.

Lowe in 'Gift of Gab'

Universal yesterday set the Jerry Wald story, "The Gift of Gab," as the next Edmund Lowe vehicle and started negotiations with MGM for the loan of Madge Evans. Picture is not scheduled to get under way until July 1. Rian James is writing the screen play and producing.

Para. Seeks Colbert

Paramount is paging Claudette Colbert, who went holidaying after "Cleopatra" finished and left no forwarding address. Studio wants her urgently, possibly for retakes.

Marion Dix Assigned

Marion Dix has been assigned to work on the set of "Afterwards" at Radio, writing dialogue as James Cruze directs the production.

Brown With Goldstone

Karl Brown has been engaged by Phil Goldstone to write the screen play for "20,000 Leagues Under the Sea," the Jules Verne story.

Soviets to Spend $40,000,000 on Pix

New York.—V. A. Usievich, chief of the Foreign Trade Division of the Soviet film industry, stated today that the Soviets plan to produce 100 major features this coming year at an average cost of $435,000. They are also going after distribution of their films in this and other countries.

The Soviets will try to interest American producers in sending actors to Russia to make English versions simultaneously with the Russian. Usievich says there are 32,000 theatres in Russia, but only 2000 are wired.

Weingarten Looking Over Pollock Play

Lawrence Weingarten, who returned Wednesday from a short stay in New York seeing plays, brought back an untitled Channing Pollock play that is to be produced in New York in the fall.

Weingarten is now reading the play and MGM is considering its purchase as a Robert Montgomery vehicle.

Two New MGM Writers

Two writers moved in at MGM yesterday. Lynn Riggs signed to work on "Wicked Woman." John Russell, author of "Pagan," comes on to write an original for Ramon Novarro.

Change Role For Searl

Sol Lesser yesterday agreed to change the characterization of the part in "Peck's Bad Boy" for which he wanted Jackie Searl, eliminating the mean taint in order to have Searl in the picture after all.

Wanger Quits MGM

accelerated by the knowledge that he will return to Paramount in one of the top production spots when the reorganization of that company is announced in about two weeks.

This reorganization of Paramount, it is understood, will include both Sam Katz and Jesse Lasky in addition to Wanger, returning much of the production force that made the slogan, "If it's a Paramount picture, it is the best show in town."

Wanger denies the Paramount hook-up, stating: "I am leaving for New York Monday to confer with my attorney, Nathan Burkan, pass on one of three deals he has ready for me, and I will then take the first boat for Europe for a month's search for material for my new production job. All that I can say is that I will be back to Hollywood in one of three spots."

Wanger had charge of six productions, only one of which, "Stamboul Quest," is in work. The other five are "Duchess of Delmonico's," "Vanessa," "Timberline," "Five Days" and "Movie Queen." These will be distributed among the other producers on the lot.

Not that it MATTERS
by Helen Gwynn

Honestly, if a person feels called upon to rush into print with his opinions on any given subject, it's all right by us. But when that person does it in the guise of an expert, then he has already thrown himself to the wolves and deserves to be torn apart for any exhibition of ignorance. For instance, in this month's "Screen Book," one Dr. Louis E. Bisch, M.D., Ph.D., who wrote a couple of plays, once, takes it upon himself to write an article entitled "Why The Stars Don't Know How to Act" and comes out with some pretty phoney statements about the picture industry.

First of all, he blames the movies for the fact that screen players are mostly not very good on the stage and, of course, cites the example of Katharine Hepburn. He claims, along the same lines, that the director on a picture does all the thinking and timing for the actors and thus renders them incapable of thinking for themselves.

To us, he's wrong in both instances. In the first place, stage technique and movie technique are two separate and distinct schools of thought and action. There may be a happy combination of the two on a co-operative basis, but it is obvious that they must be different. And a movie director does no more thinking for an actor than a good stage director does. That's any director's job—the timing and the correct interpretation of the author's idea.

He also claims that the screen actor becomes stereotyped. Tut, tut, Dr. Bisch, an actor may be typed, but if he becomes stereotyped in his acting, it's his own fault. Surely the screen cannot be blamed for that when the actor is going through a new part every few months and doesn't have to fear going stale in a part he must go through night after night on the stage. One of the screen's greatest assets is the fact that, no matter how many times a picture is shown, the performances cannot falter. Only the best gets into the can. Whereas on the stage any producer, author or director will tell you a cast needs constant looking after in order to make each performance of a play, good.

He says that the biggest legitimate acting names are deserting the screen and wonders what will happen to pictures. Well, by his own arguments, this cannot hurt the screen one bit since in order to be a picture star it is not necessary to have had stage experience because picture technique is so different it can make its own stars.

And then the good doctor wonders what the poor picture star will do when pictures no longer want him, and the stage just can't use him. Pity the poor actor, my children, who has been making thousands of dollars a year for at least five years, and then ask yourself why he can't retire with good grace and good income and write articles about the good, old days.

LABOR BOARD REINSTATES OUSTED UNION USHERS

Washington—One of the most momentous decisions in the history of the conflict between employer and labor in the theatre was handed down here yesterday by the National Labor Board when it ruled that nine ushers discharged from theatres in Elkhart, Ind., because they had former a union and had applied for an A.F. of L. charter, be restored to their jobs.

The decision means that employers must not try to prevent their employees from forming unions subsidiary to the American Federation of Labor, and it cannot be appealed. The ruling affirmed a similar one made by the Indianapolis Regional Labor Board.

The ushers involved were employed by the Warner and Bucklen Theatres. Last August they planned to apply for a charter, but were persuaded to refrain, and from then until December a company union prevailed. In December they applied for their charter and were fired at once, allegedly for union activities, and girls were put in their places.

Fenton and Engels For 'House of Strangers'

"House of Strangers," Invincible's story of the Austro-Italian war front, goes into production next Tuesday at Universal, with Frank R. Strayer directing.

Leslie Fenton was engaged for it yesterday through Selznick & Joyce. Maury Cohen's deal borrowing Wera Engels from Reliance also went through. Both support Eric von Stroheim.

'Spanky' a Hero

"Spanky" McFarland, Roach baby gangster, got back Wednesday from a three weeks visit to his home town, Dallas, Texas. The 5½-year-old is now a hero in his family, having fished his 6½-year-old brother out of the water when he tumbled off a yacht's gangplank during the vacation.

Fan Mail For Caruso Jr.

As a result of Enrico Caruso, Jr's. first radio broadcast Tuesday, KFWB received 470 letters from listeners, a record for any one personality at the station. Most of the letters came from foreigners, 28 of whom were named Caruso.

Falkenstein to 'U'

Fritz Falkenstein joins the Universal staff today to write with Julius Klein the script for Carl Laemmle Sr.'s production of "My Mother," inspired by the Whistler painting. The MacQuarrie office set the deal.

Gordon and Revel Back

Harry Revel and Mack Gordon are back at Paramount after shopping on Broadway for musical suggestions for numbers for "Big Broadcast of 1934." Production starts the first week of July.

Thew Out of MGM

Harvey Thew finished his end of "The Rear Car" script and left the MGM lot yesterday. He teamed with Al Boasberg on the adaptation.

Swanson In Person Causes Extra Shows

Chicago.—The personal appearance of Gloria Swanson at the Chicago Theatre Wednesday and yesterday caused the house to run five shows each day, the first time in over twelve weeks that this has happened. It was the same story in Detroit, crowds storming the theatre.

After the fiasco at the New York Paramount, she started on tour under the management of Dan Winkler and the results have proved that she is still one of the great drawing cards of the screen world.

Bill Cagney Signed by Monogram For Three

Monogram yesterday signed Bill Cagney to a three picture deal and will spot him in "The Redhead," a novel by Vera Brown, as his first. Script has been written by Betty Burbridge under Mrs. Wallace Reid's supervision.

He then goes into "Dames and Dynamite," which Al DeMond is scripting and George Bertholon supervising. His last subject will be "Reckless Romeo," based on an original by N. Brewster Morse, "Ten Minute Eggs."

Paramount to Start 'Mrs. Wiggs' May 28

"Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch" is on Paramount's production sheet to start the week of May 28. Pauline Lord is on the way from New York for it.

The screen play is being prepared by William Slavens McNutt and Jane Storm. Norman Taurog directs.

Gorney-Hartman Set

Stanley Bergerman has signed Jay Gorney and Don Hartman to write two musical numbers for "Romance in the Rain," which Stuart Walker directs when it starts June 1. Studio is negotiating with Harold Hecht to stage a musical number in the picture.

New Term For Meins

Gus Meins yesterday had the pleasure of tearing up his old Roach contract and receiving a new deal from the hands of Henry Ginsberg. Meins has directed the Todd-Kellys and Our Gang for several months.

Wald Story For MGM

MGM is concluding a deal with Jerry Wald for the purchase of his original story, "Night School." Studio has no definite plans for it as yet.

Air Yarn For Grant

Paramount has acquired an aviation story by Nell Shipman for Cary Grant. The title is "Eye of the Eagle." Frances Drake will have the girl lead.

Genevieve Tobin Sails

New York.—Genevieve Tobin sailed for Europe yesterday on the Mauretania. She will be there two months.

Marjorie Rambeau May Do 'Klondike Kate' Yarn

Willard Mack and Edward Paulton are writing a story around the life of Kate Rockwell Natson, better known to the world as "Klondike Kate."

Harry Weber plans to produce it with Marjorie Rambeau in the role of Kate. He is negotiating for a major release.

Referee Settling Paramount Cases

New York.—Referee Ehrhorn, sitting in for Referee Davis in the Paramount bankruptcy hearings, yesterday approved the plans of the trustees to effect a reorganization of the Goldstein Brothers circuit and the Olympia Theatres, both in New England. There was no opposition.

He also approved the settlement of the claim of the Artfilm Studio Inc. for alleged infringement of the Stambaugh patent on the blue transparency method. Paramount is to pay Artfilm $500 and buy the patent for $2000.

'High Yaller' For Stahl

John Stahl yesterday tested Freddie Washington, colored actress, for the "high yaller" role in "Imitation of Life" and so far she has the inside track for the role.

FWC Exonerated On Two Complaints

The Los Angeles Grievance Board yesterday decided that Fox West Theatres were not guilty of charges brought against the corporation by the Egyptian Theatre, of Maywood, and the Cosm Theatre, of Glendale.

The Egyptian charged a violation of the film code in that the Alcazar, a Fox West Coast house, in Bell, had cut prices and had flooded Maywood with advertising that cut into the Egyptian's trade. The Cosmo charged over-buying by FWC.

A third case yesterday was that of the Crystal Theatre, charging that the Muse, Rosslyn and Wonderland theatres, on Main street, had cut prices. This was referred to the Code Authority.

Paramount Publicity Will Move Next Week

Paramount studio publicity department moves one block west to a new one-story building at the end of next week. The move will concentrate the publicity, fan mail, publicity stills and foreign departments under one roof, with Tom Baily chief mogul.

Irving Briskin Back

Irving Briskin returned to his supervisor's desk at Columbia yesterday after a nine-day trip to Victoria, B.C.

ZANUCK WOULD LIMIT SCOPE OF CRITICISM

New York.—Darryl Zanuck, who, ten days ago, came out in favor of criticism of pictures, stating that he did not care how severe it was, now feels that the criticism should be confined to what is in the picture and the reviewers should not go beyond that.

This later opinion grew out of a review of "The Affairs of Cellini" in one of the local picture trade papers. Reviewer included in his notice a warning to exhibitors not to play the picture if they did not want to encounter censorship troubles. This, Zanuck believes, is not within the province of any reviewer and he expressed his opinion in an admonition to the paper.

"I do not question the right of reviewers to express any critical opinion they see fit on the merits of what is in the picture," he said, "but I feel that such remarks do not come within the province of a critic."

Two New Ones Start at Para; Six Now in Work

Paramount started two new features this week, "Ladies Should Listen" going in first, and "Ladies First" following yesterday. Frank Tuttle and Gil Pratt are the respective directors.

Rosita Moreno was added yesterday to the "Ladies Should Listen" cast, headed by Cary Grant and Frances Drake.

Wesley Ruggles wound up the Jack Oakie picture, "Shoot the Works," Tuesday, leaving six features active at Paramount.

Bars Put Up at 'U' Against All Visitors

Because the lot was over-run with salesmen, agents and many other people who bothered the employees, Carl Laemmle Jr. yesterday put stringent pass regulations into effect at Universal.

Hereafter, non-employees will be admitted to the lot only by appointment, okayed at the information desk.

Chester Hale on 'Tour'

Jack Chertok, head of the MGM musical department, yesterday assigned Chester Hale to direct the musical numbers on "Student Tour," in which Jimmy Durante and Charles Butterworth have the leads. Charles Reisner directs the Monta Bell production.

Tupper Finishes One

Tristram Tupper has completed his script of "The Healer," a novel by Robert Herrick, and will be given another assignment by Monogram. Story is planned for Lionel Atwill, with no supervisor or director set as yet.

Shumate With Rogell

Sid Rogell has borrowed Harold Shumate from the Irving Briskin unit at Columbia to write the screen play for "Produce the Body."

Mind Reader Picking Pay Spots For Frolic

The Screen Actors' Guild isn't missing a bet in the handling of its Film Stars Frolic. It has even hired a professional "mind reader" to spot the places where it will stake out its concessions, hoping he picks paying spots.

Lawrence Re-opens Para. Claim As Test

New York.—The claim of Vincent Lawrence against Paramount for $113,000 for contract services, which was disallowed recently by Referee Davis, was re-opened yesterday. The claim has been amended to $24,500, covering only the period of services from May 24, 1933, when the contract was disaffirmed, to September 6, 1933. During this time, Lawrence alleges, he was unable to get employment.

The trustees see in this claim a test case, and their answer sets up that the New York corporation laws permit contracts to become invalid whenever the employer desires, under bankruptcy. Additional briefs will be filed within a week.

Edward Arnold Gets Lead in 'U' Picture

Edward Arnold breaks into starring ranks in Universal's "Ransom, One Million Dollars," the studio failing to put through its deal with MGM for the loan of Leo Carrillo. Murray Roth directs under Eph Asher's supervision.

The deal was set by Schulberg, Feldman and Gurney through an arrangement with B. P. Schulberg, to whom Arnold is under contract.

Raphaelson Assigned believed that both brothers would welcome the Briskin purchase.

The Columbia-Briskin contract has expired and Briskin has let it be known that he is not interested in signing a new deal unless there are a lot of changes in the ticket, especially in view of the fact that at least three other major plants have offered him better working conditions and more pay. Consequently, permitting Briskin to buy into the company will be the one way to cinch his services.

If the deal goes through, one of the best sales managers, now connected with a major outfit, will go over to Columbia to handle the sales.

ZUKOR PRODUCING HEAD

TRADE VIEWS by W. R. WILKERSON

•THE boys around New York are still talking about that exploitation blast Sam Goldwyn put behind the Music Hall showing of "Nana." Sam spent $48,000 for that blast, took 50 per cent of every dollar that was paid at the Music Hall box-office, over $60,000, and checked about even on the deal for the two weeks showing. Even so far as the engagement was concerned, but he SOLD "Nana" all over the country as a result of the campaign and launched Anna Sten as a star, in fact, a star who is much better than the picture she was in.

But where Goldwyn came out even on his big belch, many other producers have shot—and LOST—the wad in their effort to sell New York and America on a picture that did not meet with favor. Witness the case of Fox recently with "Stand Up and Cheer" in the same house in New York. Fox figured it had a bet (and so did this paper) and decided to help chase people over to the Music Hall for that engagement. They splashed $28,000 in the papers and on the billboards, to no avail. As a consequence, when RKO said the picture was not doing sufficient to stick for a second week, Fox said IT MUST STAY, and stay it did, but it cost the Fox organization a pretty penny.

In order to keep "Stand Up and Cheer" for a second week at the Music Hall, Fox agreed to take four Fox pictures that RKO had contracted for, but did not want to play, back from RKO at a cast of $7,500 a picture—$30,000 for the four, in addition to not taking a dime for the play of "Cheer" for the second week. In short the two weeks engagement cost Fox around $58,000. A pretty expensive venture.

And on the thought of getting rid of "shelved" pictures, the past year will probably go down in the record books as setting forth more pictures put on the shelf and PAID for than any other year in this business. Exhibitors have been up against a pretty tough proposition during the year, what with the quality of the product sent them by Hollywood. When they did get a picture that had any resemblance to entertainment, they held it for the limit and shelved other pic-

MGM Profit Three Times Last Year's

New York.—The financial report of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer for the twenty-eight weeks ended March 15 showed a net profit of more than three times that shown for the corresponding period last year. The figures are $3,037,088 as against $966,173. This is after deductions for amortization, depreciation and Federal taxes.

The report shows a net operating income of $16,147,265 and miscellaneous income of $452,453.

Wanger Buys Two Yarns By Transatlantic Phone

Walter Wanger, by transatlantic telephone with London agents yesterday, closed for the purchase of "There Goes the Groom," a novel by Gardin Layton, and optioned "Sir Humphrey," Austin Murdock's novel.

He will use the stories in connection with his new production set-up, either as an independent or with some major here.

"Adolph Zukor Presents" To Appear On Main Titles Of All Paramount's Pictures

New York.—Adolph Zukor is now in charge of production at the Paramount studios. This became known yesterday when an order went through that the main titles of all future Paramount pictures should read "Adolph Zukor presents," instead of crediting Paramount or any producer.

This also goes for all pictures made by independent producers for Paramount release, because the first picture which will carry the new-style title is "Kiss and Make Up," a B. P. Schulberg production. The names of Schulberg, Rogers or any other independent producer will be on the main title, but secondary to Zukor's.

This brings the Paramount president directly into the branch of the industry in which he always has been the French Ask 3-Mos. Ban on U.S. Films

Paris—Representatives of American film companies were amazed yesterday when it was learned that French producers are pushing a move that will virtually spell ruin to American films here, if the effort is successful.

The French producers are asking the government to prohibit importation of all American films for a period of three months; to increase the tariff on negative copies of films by more than 3000 per cent; and to grant a favorable tariff to French versions of films made in Germany, which would give German films the inside track here.

'COME WHAT MAY' OUT DATED; 'EVERY THURSDAY' AMUSING

Mary Philips Is Good Picture Bet

"COME WHAT MAY"

Hal Skelly presents "Come What May," by Richard F. Flournoy; directed by Leo Bulgakov; settings by Clement M. Williams; with Hal Skelly, Mary Philips, Stanton Bier, Granville Bates, Sara Perry, Robert Mayors, Robert Sloane, Alfred Corn, Harry Clancy, W. W. Shuttleworth, Nancy Evans, John Bennethum. At the Plymouth Theatre.

New York.—Hal Skelly demonstrates in "Come What May" his versatility as an actor, in an almostplotless play, which starts in 1896 and ends thirty-two years later. We behold the transition of Hal Skelly from a small-town typesetter in his early twenties, to a man in his late fifties. Skelly is ably abetted by Mary Philips, who plays his wife.

The play is an old-fashioned drama that lacks punch. It is another "Cavalcade" type of play without the pageantry, and concerns itself with the marriage of the two principal characters—Chet Harrison, played by Skelly, and Eve Hayward, played by Mary Philips—Skelly's call to arms during the Spanish-American war, and the birth of their son. After a ten-year lapse we are again introduced to the family, with Skelly losing his job and their boy, now ten years of age, getting his first position. There is another lapse of ten years and we find the son called to the colors during the great war and his subsequent death. After the war, a nephew whom the couple have raised and who has taken their son's place in their affections, announces his desire to leave them and make his way in the world, leaving them all alone. The play ends with the elderly lovers commenting on the fact that the world has used them very decently and things look very happy and prosperous.

Leo Bulgakov, who directed this play in a manner reminiscent of his earlier success, "One Sunday Afternoon," handled the direction with consummate skill. The characterizations of the cast were done with artistry and restraint, and particularly is the performance given by Mary Philips, as Eve Hayward, to be commended.

Because of the absence of plot "Come What May" apparently would make a weak picture. Hal Skelly's performance was excellent; Mary Philips got everything that was possible out of a very human role. If she photographs well, she should be a fairly good bet for pictures, as she is a dramatic artist of ability.

Kind Heart Leads Cobb To Refuse Personals

tures they knew would do nothing but hurt the business.

A big chain operator told us recently that his chain had shelved (and PAID for) over a third of the product it contracted for, and even with that big luxury in booking, had the best year in some time. All of which proves what a great business this picture business really is and what just a few good pictures will do in earning profits for all concerned. Consequently, why is there so little effort put forth in making BETTER PICTURES?

Has Possibilities For Film Purposes

"EVERY THURSDAY"

Presented by Wee & Leventhal Inc. at the Royale Theatre; written by Doty Hobart; staged by Theodore Viehman; settings by Martin Turner; with George Carleton, Ann Dere, Queenie Smith, Leon Janney, Tucker McGuire, Frederick Forrester, Jack Davis, Sheila Trent.

New York.—Queenie Smith came back to town in a mildly amusing comedy by Doty Hobart, called "Every Thursday" and presented by the amazing Wee and Leventhal, who have already shown themselves to be among the most alert showmen of the season.

Leon Janney, of the pictures, makes his debut as a legitimate stage actor, taking the part of the adolescent boy who is always getting into jams with women, only to be rescued by Miss Smith.

The plot of the play itself is very amusing and easily adaptable for pictures: The Clarks cannot imagine their son growing up, and consequently still treat him as a child. Sadie, the hired girl (Miss Smith) is always getting the boy out of jams and eventually develops a crush for the boy. Things between Sadie and the boy are kept a secret until Mrs. Clark overhears a conversation which leads her to believe that Sadie is going to have a child by her son, and then the fireworks begin.

However, it is all straightened out when Sadie explains that she was just trying to get back five dollars from the boy that she had loaned him some time before. Sadie plays the martyr and gives the boy up to the girl next door, who also loves him.

Miss Smith does the best that she can with the part of Sadie and often stirred the audience with her eccentricity.

Possibilities in this one for pictures.

Picture Folk to Form Naval Militia Branch

Hollywood will soon have its own special Division in the California State Naval Militia. Yesterday authorization was given Lieut. Gene Owen Hagberg, of the C.S.N.M., to organize the special Hollywood Division which will become a part of the 1st Regiment.

There will be 100 men in the division, of which four will be commissioned officers and 16 petty officers. Lieutenant Hagberg is a cemarman, and expects to recruit most of the division from the picture industry.

'FOG OVER FRISCO' CORKING; 'LET'S TALK IT OVER' FINE

Dieterle Direction Novel, Enthralling

"FOG OVER FRISCO"
(Warners-First National)

Direction .....Wilhelm Dieterle
Original .....George Dyer
Adaptation.....Robert N. Lee and Eugene Solow
Screen Play.....Robert N. Lee
Photography .....Tony Gaudio
Cast: Bette Davis, Donald Woods, Margaret Lindsay, Lyle Talbot, Hugh Herbert, Arthur Byron, Robert Barrat, Henry O'Neill, Irving Pichel, Douglas Dumbrille, Alan Hale, Gordon Westcott, Charles Wilson, Harold Minjir, William Demarest, Douglas Cosgrove, William Davidson, George Chandler.

If "Fog Over Frisco" doesn't start a vogue for mystery pictures, we miss our guess. The mystery formula, so successful in modern-day novels, has long eluded satisfactory screen transcription—unless based upon a central character of a detective, as are the Philo Vance stories, among others. Producers have claimed that the literal minds of movie audiences reject the far-fetched situations generally employed without criticism by novelists. These producers are invited to view "Fog Over Frisco."

The picture is almost entirely a directorial triumph. Wilhelm Dieterle has evolved a treatment as distinguished as it is distinctive. He tells his story in a series of only slightly related incidents, almost montage, and does not pause to explain anything until the finale when, in one fell swoop, he explains everything. The treatment achieves a tempo of furious intensity. We are quite aware that this is an inept simile, but the effect is like a top that spins madly at first, to take shape only as it begins to stop. But then you must see the picture, so make your own similes.

In comparison to the direction, the story is relatively unimportant, being a more or less conventional mystery yarn. The racket concerned is the disposition of stolen securities, and several people are murdered in the course of the plot. Adaptation by Robert N. Lee and Eugene Solow is workmanlike, leaving no loose ends in the solution. Explanations for a few mysterious happenings are merely indicated and the audience is thereby given credit for intelligence enough to figure things out for itself.

And did the patrons love to figure? They were still talking about it as they came out of the preview and probably continued all the way home. It was the first opportunity they had had to talk, for they sat more than ordinarily tense in the theatre, almost afraid to breathe lest an important point in the story be missed.

Performances in the main, very good. Bette Davis has a strange character to perform, skirting upon the pathological, and she acquits herself splendidly. Margaret Lindsay is at all times charming and more than usually competent. Donald Woods seems a bit too determined a hero, and Lyle Talbot has nothing to do. Hugh Herbert carries all of the comedy, working hard. He has a couple of lines in photographing a corpse that could be eliminated to advantage. The other members of the cast are uniformly good, with Douglas Dumbrille, Robert Barrat, Arthur Byron and Alan Hale particularly outstanding. Lighting and photography by Tony Gaudio exceptionally fine.

Your only difficulty with "Fog Over Fricco" will be in turn-over. Too many of your audience will want to sit through it a second time. It's that kind of a picture.

Play it up as a really intelligent mystery thriller.

Charwomen Strike in New York Theatres

New York.—The janitors and charwomen of the Loew's and RKO Radio City theatres have joined the strike started Thursday by the ushers, doormen and ticket takers, members of a new employees' union.

New York Grosses Show No Animation

New York.—There is no apparent improvement in the grosses of the big New York picture palaces. Good receipts are scarce.

At the Music Hall, "Change of Heart" could get only $67,300. "Manhattan Melodrama" grabbed $48,475 for its second week at the Capitol, and "He Was Her Man" at the Strand, for its second week ending next Tuesday, will take about $27,500. The Paramount was poor with around $20,000 for "Thirty Day Princess," "Glamour" gave the Roxy about $19,000, and "Murder in Trinidad" took $10,500. "Rothschild" in its tenth week at the Astor held up with nearly $17,000.

Lloyd Nolan Gets Term Contract With Para.

Paramount is closing negotiations on a long-term contract for Lloyd Nolan, who starred in the Broadway edition of "One Sunday Afternoon."

He is due here in ten days from New York. The ticket is being handled by Small-Landau in conjunction with Jane Broder.

Kahn-Donaldson Set; Goldwyn-Felix Dicker

Gus Kahn and Walter Donaldson have been engaged by Sam Goldwyn to write songs for the new Eddie Cantor picture.

Goldwyn is dickering with Seymour Felix to stage the dances, the attempt to get Busby Berkeley having failed.

Term For Jean Parker

Jean Parker's option was exercised by MGM yesterday. The player, headed by the company for stardom, goes into "Have a Heart," the Butler-De Sylva picture which John Considine produces as her next.

Chester Morris Does Extraordinary Job

"LET'S TALK IT OVER"
(Universal)

Direction .....Kurt Neumann
Authors .....Dore Schary and Lewis Foster
Screen Play.....John Meehan Jr.
Photography .....Charles Stumar
Cast: Chester Morris, Mae Clarke, Frank Craven, Irene Ware, Andy Devine, Anderson Lawler, John Warburton, Goodee Montgomery, Russ Brown, Henry Armetta.

Chester Morris gives one of the finest performances of his career as the gob, Mike McGann, in the Universal picture, "Let's Talk It Over."

His keen sense of dramatic value, his timing, his simplicity and utter honesty to type, his superb sincerity—these all make his characterization a miracle of emotional lights and shadows. His Mike McGann is an extremely interesting human being.

Direction is strong and vivid and the writing is exceptionally smooth. With bouquets going to all departments, "Let's Talk It Over" is one of Universal's best. But why the title?

Morris is a sailor who accidentally rescues Mae Clarke, heiress to twenty millions, from drowning. Taking full advantage of the situation, he calls on her and, because he is such a cocksure, impossible, boastful young upstart, she introduces him to her friends, who all watch to see what the freak will do next. Taking her interest in him seriously, he quits the navy and goes to work in her uncle's bond house. Mae gets him the job on a bet—a hundred dollars that she can make something out of him. Instead, he makes something out of himself, and she finally falls very much out of love with her idle, restless, scatter-brained existence, and very much in love with him.

One of the beauties of Morris' characterization is that he never quite gets over being the gob. The polish is there, but his essential SELF remains the same. It is a great performance. Miss Clarke is more than acceptable as the rich, unthinking girl; Frank Craven has a swell part as her very understanding uncle; Andy Devine is a comic sailor; John Warburton is the snobbish fiance of Miss Clarke; Irene Ware makes a small role memorable; Goodee Montgomery has a vamp part, and Russ Brown and Henry Armetta are well cast.

Kurt Neumann directed; John Meehan Jr. made the screen play from the story by Dore Schary and Lewis Foster, and Charles Stumar photographed.

Young and old will like this picture. It's good, reliable stuff, made extraordinarily entertaining by Morris' performance.

Berkeley Starts 300

Busby Berkeley set 300 girls at work yesterday on a special set for "Dames" that required 30 tons of steel in construction. Happy conclusion to the Goldwyn-Warner suit was the signal for on with the dance numbers.

Not that it MATTERS
by Helen Gwynn

Still one of the most astonishing things about Hollywood to the visiting foreigner is the thousands of people who are lured to the Cinema Capitol in the fond hope that they will be stars some day. They tell us that they've heard about and read about Hollywood in the foreign prints, but that nothing they've said can compare to the vastness of the picture industry and the terrible feeling of discouragement it engenders in the stranger. They cannot quite fathom the terrific attraction that Hollywood has, the enormity of the possible reward, in the face of what looks like the complete impossibility of attaining that reward. They cannot understand why steps haven't been taken to keep people out of Hollywood. They can't understand that such a thing is impossible.

Not until the glamour of existence in Hollywood is completely taken away; not until fame and fortune become meaningless words to beauty that is struggling for a livelihood, will it be at all possible to assure anyone of the futility of trying to crash the gates. It's too much worth while for the one who does, by some queer trick of fate or luck or accident, become a star to convince the thousands of there's that it's of no use, because there's no guarantee that the same thing cannot happen to them.

That's a right expensive experiment that Radio is conducting with that two-reeler in color, but definitely, if anything is to come out of color photography at all, it's worth spending the money to get it just right and finally find out just what it is that they're working with and how to use it. To date, so far as color films are concerned, not enough time has been spent on the study of lights and colors and their relation to each other. That's where stage training comes in and that's where Robert Edmond Jones fits in so helpfully; Robert Edmond Jones and a staff of experts that should be able to turn out an artistic masterpiece in color. Being somewhat of an old die-hard, we hope that the black and white medium will not be entirely eliminated. But if color is successful, it will be grand to see pictures that require a great deal of outdoor shots and atmospheric beauty, done in color, and other types of pictures can still use the effective black and white. Who knows, there may be a whole new school of cinema art evolved from it. The black and white to belong to the etcher's group and the color photography sort of portraits in oils or something.

At any rate it seems proper and fittin' for Radio to try the experiment, because it has a piece of property on the schedule that cries aloud for color photography, and that is "Green Mansions."

U's 'LITTLE MAN' IS SLOW; ACTING BETTER THAN STORY

Sullavan Shines, As Does Montgomery

"LITTLE MAN, WHAT NOW?"
(Universal)

Direction .....Frank Borzage
Novel .....Hans Fallada
Screen Play....Wm. Anthony McGuire
Photography .....Norbert Brodine
Cast: Margaret Sullavan, Douglass Montgomery, Alan Hale, Catherine Doucet, DeWitt Jennings, Bodil Rosing, Muriel Kirkland, Donald Haynes, George Meeker, Paul Fix, Carlos de Valdez, Hedda Hopper, Fred Kohler, Mae Marsh, Sarah Padden, Tom Ricketts, Frank Reicher, Monroe Owsley, G. P. Huntley Jr., Christian Rub, Alan Mowbray, Etienne Girardot, Earle Fox, Max Asher.

There is a far greater chance that the individual performances in this picture will give more pleasure than the entertainment value of the story so carefully and thinly spread across the screen. It is a tale so elaborately simple, so carefully casual, so much the picturization of every day tragedies, deliberately underwritten and underplayed, that most of the dramatic values and entertainment values come out slightly underdone.

Play up the appearance of Margaret Sullavan, Douglass Montgomery and a fine supporting cast, and the fact that the title was a best seller, but don't bank too heavily on the tears or laughs.

A boy and a girl get married because they are in love and the girl is going to have a baby. They go to a small town where the boy gets a job because he says he is a bachelor. The boy is fired when he is forced to confess he is married because his employer's daughter wants him for a husband. The boy and girl go to Berlin, to the boy's stepmother. The stepmother is a not so nice gal, running a not too good establishment, and when the boy finds it out, he and the girl move out. The boy loses his job. The baby is born. The boy is about to get a good job as the picture ends.

Just like that—it all happens just like that and, despite, the fact that there are moments that could have been incisive and dramatic, moments to wring the heart and moments for laughter through tears, nothing is done with the cause to bring about the effect. It's all quite true to life, but it isn't especially good theatre, and somehow Mr. Borzage's garret doesn't seem to have as much charm as it once possessed.

Margaret Sullavan is very lovely and completely good, but for a gal who rose to sensational stardom in her first picture, her role is hardly big enough for her—she's out of the picture for far too long at a time and the star part is really Douglass Montgomery's. Montgomery is excellent in a role that makes him a fairly dull and slightly stuffy person.

The really interesting performances and people are the minor characterizations, headed by Alan Hale and Christian Rub. Hale goes out of the picture all too soon and Rub comes in far too late, but in between is a good scene by Alan Mowbray that is a joy because he gives it so much pace. Muriel Kirkland is soooo annoyingly good as the girl trying to get a husband, and Catherine Doucet, G. P. Huntley, Jr. and Monroe Owsley win individual mention for their performances.

The photography by Norbert Brodine is excellent throughout.

Bill Daniels Set Up As Ace Cameraman

MGM in its house organ has just announced a list of what it calls the thirty best pictures the studio has produced in its history. Out of this thirty, Bill Daniels has photographed nine.

'U' Has Seven Ready To Start In June

"Walking on Air" is the next starter on Universal's production schedule, set for June 1, Rian James on the screen play, and it is Dick Thorpe's first Universal direction.

"Fanny," William Wyler directing; Bennie Zeidman's production, "Castles in the Air"; and Stanley Bergerman's "Romance in the Rain" are also supposed to start in June.

John Stahl's production, "Imitation of Life," and Eph Asher's "Ransom—One Million Dollars," may also get under the lights the same month.

Connolly Will Stage Dances in 'Flirtation'

Bobby Connolly, Broadway dance director imported by Warners as an ace in the hole during the Busby Berkeley litigation, will stay on his merits.

Result of his Technicolor short, finished Wednesday, is assignment to do the dances for "Flirtation Walk," the Dick Powell-Ruby Keeler musical, on the June schedule. Meantime he starts another color short next week.

New One For Caruso

Warners yesterday optioned Enrico Caruso Jr. for another short Spanish musical. This time it may have an English version. William McGann again directs for Manuel Reachi.

MGM Borrows Regan

MGM is borrowing Phil Regan, Warner's radio name, for "Student Tour." MGM originally tested Regan as a Crawford lead, but Warners signed him.

Hyman Takes 'Quest'

Bernie Hyman has taken over the production reins on "Stamboul Quest," which Walter Wanger had in work at MGM.

Vicki Baum to S-F-G

Vicki Baum yesterday signed a managerial contract with the Schulberg, Feldman and Gurney office.

Heavy Guards Set On Johnson Reply

Washington.—Due to the "leak" on the famous Darrow film code report, an ironclad censorship was placed around the reply of General Johnson here yesterday while it was being printed.

Special guards were thrown about the section of the printing plant handling the reply in order to keep reporters and others from obtaining advance tips on its contents. Government employees leaving the printing room were searched, and every possible precaution taken to keep the reply secret until it is officially released.

Eugene Walter To Do McGuire Screen Play

Eugene Walter has been engaged by William Anthony McGuire to write the screen play of the Universal producer's story, "A Saint in the Cellar."

McGuire is undecided whether he will add this picture to his list of four under his Universal contract or produce it independently.

New England Village Built For 'Letter'

Splurging on his first Majestic picture, Larry Darmour has constructed a complete New England village in Laurel Canyon for exteriors of "The Scarlet Letter."

Robert Vignola puts the picture before the cameras next Wednesday. Interiors will be shot at the Darmour studio.

Bancroft and Karns To Sing in Para. Pic

"The Tattooed Lady" will be sung by George Bancroft and Roscoe Karns in Paramount's "Ladies First." The Robbins number, Walter O'Keefe sequel to "Man on the Flying Trapeze," was sold for the picture by Abe Meyer.

Martin-Lowe Finish

Al Martin and Sherman Lowe have completed their original, "Crimson Romance," for Mascot, and Milton Krims is now writing the continuity and screen play. Dave Howard probably will direct. Marty Cohen is supervising.

Ceballos With Small

Edward Small signed Larry Ceballos yesterday to direct the dances in "Transatlantic Showboat," Leroy Prinz dropping out owing to prior assignments. The Small-Landau office made the deal.

Fox Signs Morgan

Ralph Morgan was signed yesterday by Fox for a part in "She Was a Lady." Morgan finishes work Monday night in "Afterwards" at Radio, and starts work in the Fox picture Tuesday morning.

Court Won't Kill Para. Libel Suit

New York.—The Appellate Division of the Supreme Court yesterday denied the request of Paramount-Publix for permission to carry to the Court of Appeals its motion for the dismissal of the $150,000 libel suit brought against the corporation by Mrs. Minerva Brown, of Norwich, New York.

Mrs. Brown's suit is based on the picturization of Dreiser's "American Tragedy," which Paramount made. The plaintiff is the mother of the girl who was killed by Chester Gillette.

Seven Seas Corp. Head Here For Production

William Fisk III, president of the Seven Seas Corp., is due from New York today or Monday after five months absence.

Fisk has been arranging release for "Cane Fire," Hawaiian feature directed by Lois Weber last fall, and is expected to have new production plans. The company quarters at General Service Studio.

Monogram Starting Production With Rush

Monogram finished "The Star Packer" Tuesday, started "Jane Eyre" Thursday, and has "Happy Landings" set for a start next Wednesday. Bill Cagney's first for Monogram, "Redhead," starts some time in June. Guy Robertson also arrives in June for "King Kelly of the U.S.A."

Pierson Back to Para.

Arthur Pierson, recently under term contract to Paramount, returned to that organization yesterday for a featured role as a free lancer in "52 Weeks for Fleurette." Al Werker directs.

Frances Drake Set

Frances Drake was handed the role opposite Herbert Wilcoxon yesterday by Paramount in "Shoe the Wild Mare," the Gene Fowler story.

Exhibs Hit Percentages

per cent of the independent buying power of the entire country.

The problem of buying film this coming season, the independent leaders say, is the most pressing they have to face. Philadelphia exhibitors are primarily responsible for this campaign because of their squawks that Fox is insisting on booking thirty of its pictures for next season at rates ranging from 25 to 35 per cent. Such demands, they say, will put them out of business.

The principal result of yesterday's meeting was a determination to hold a mass gathering, probably in Madison Square Garden, which will be addressed by leaders from all sections. The sentiment of those who met yesterday indicated that, on this alleged grievance at least, the great bulk of the independent exhibitors will stand together, being convinced that they must do so for their own protection. Another meeting will be held shortly.

Mitzi Green Wins $5000 Agency Suit

An agent must prove himself directly responsible for securing a position on which commission is disputed, ruled Superior Judge Parker yesterday in dismissing the $5,000 commiission suit brought by William Meiklejohn and Arthur Esberg against Mitzi Green and her father, Joe Keno.

Judge Parker's decision is in line with recent New York court rulings. Mitzi Green and her father were represented by F. B. McCarthy and J. F. Rosen. Meiklejohn and Esberg, who sued on a contract in which they were engaged to secure Mitzi for a Ward Baking Co. broadcast transcription were represented by Martin Gang.

Joe Keno convinced the court that he and the program sponsor had put over the $50,000 deal with World Broadcasting Co. The case has been under submission since the trial two weeks ago.

Irish Sweepstakes Basis of MGM Picture

The stamp of approval was placed by MGM yesterday on a Robert Hopkins idea to make a picture based on the Irish Sweepstakes, and the studio schedules it for immediate production under the title, "The Winning Ticket."

It will be a comedy and Ray Doyle has been assigned to write the screen play. Harry Rapf produces it. Other production plans are not set.

One Play Good and One No Good For Pictures

New York.—Of the two plays that opened on Broadway this week, "Invitation to a Murder" is favorable for pictures and "Come What May" is unfavorable.

Inez Courtney Here

Inez Courtney, comedienne of Joe Cook's "Hold Your Horses" on the New York stage, arrived yesterday from the East on the steamship Pennsylvania to start her term deal at Columbia. Player has not been given an assignment as yet.

Gloria Shea at Mayfair

Mayfair yesterday signed Gloria Shea for the lead opposite Buster Crabbe in "Alice Takes a Hand," an original by Rex Taylor. Picture goes into work Monday at the Darmour studio, with Spencer Bennet directing.

Lee With Mamoulian

Sam Goldwyn has signed Bob Lee to be Rouben Mamoulian's assistant director on "Resurrection," which goes into work June 1. Leonard Praskins is completing his job of polishing up the script.

George Rosenor East

George Rosenor, accompanied by his wife and son, left on an automobile trip to New York yesterday. Actor-writer will return to the Shubert fold.

New Staub Comedy

Ralph Staub is starting in a few days on another Warner short, featuring El Brendel and Phil Regan. Staub is both producer and director.

Up-to-the-Minute Casting News

Arthur Hoyt and Edward McWade for "Notorious Sophie Lang," for Paramount.

C. Aubrey Smith for "One More River," Universal, by Small-Landau.

Margaret Seddon into "Jane Eyre," Monogram, by Hallam Cooley.

Charles Coleman for "Shock," Monogram, by Hallam Cooley.

Gloria Shea in "The Vicious Circle," Mayfair, through Lichtig and Englander.

Vernon Downing to "Treasure Island," MGM, through Max Shagrin.

Charles French and Solidad Jimenez to "The Red Rider," Universal serial, by Bill Charney, of the Harry Wurtzel office.

Frank Moran to "Three Chumps Ahead," Todd-Kelly short at Hal Roach.

Lionel Belmore for "Caravan," Fox, by Leo Lance of Max Shagrin office.

Clarence Muse to "Count of Monte Cristo," Reliance, through MacQuarrie.

Keith Kenneth for "Grand Canary," Fox, by MacQuarrie.

New Play For Arthur

London.—George K. Arthur, over here on business, has taken a six months option on Temple Thurston's new play, "The Wandering Jew," and will produce it on Broadway next Fall. He has started negotiations with Paul Muni and Philip Merivale for the lead.

Mrs. Farnol Arriving

Mrs. Lynn Farnol, wife of the Sam Goldwyn publicity diretcor, gets in today from Austin, Texas, where she stopped off to visit on her return here from New York. She has been on her parents' ranch near Austin for the past two weeks.

Zukor Production Head

most deeply interested. Some years ago, when Jesse L. Lasky was in the company, the pictures were split in the matter of presentation credits. Zukor would present one, and the next would carry Lasky's name. Now, however, Zukor will have the title field to himself.

"I have always taken a great interest in production," he said the other day to a representative of the Reporter. "Nothing gives me keener pleasure than to lay out in front of me a story and then visualize the writers, directors and cast who should handle it. To me it is the most fascinating part of the business.

"Now that the reorganization of the company is under way in New York, I can be relieved of some of the duties that have kept me there and can do what I have always wanted to do—make pictures."

There have been few outside of the Paramount organization who have realized what a keen production mind Adolph Zukor has. In the past it was his advice, his hints which made vast improvements in many Paramount pictures. His presence at the studio should make for greatly improved Paramount product.

DARROW PUT ON THE PAN

Servicing Firms To Go After 'Slickers'

Aroused by the "confidence man" tactics of two independent production companies, which have since vanished in thin air, the Hollywood service men are uniting in a plan to eliminate this type of producer. In both cases, last week the life savings of elderly widows were lost and it is out of indignation against the unscrupulous persons involved that the servicing group is determined to eradicate the "confidence man producer."

In the first case a woman posted $23,000 to make a group of short subjects She was "promoted" by a man who had never made a picture

Cooper To Produce 'Pompeii' For Radio

Merian Cooper's first production for Radio under his new arrangement will be a spectacle, based on Bulwer-Lytton's "Last Days of Pompeii." He is also to do a second spectacle, the nature of which has not been announced.

Mr. Cooper is returning to Honolulu tomorrow. He expects to make a trip to Italy for material on the "Pompeii" picture and will start production on it about September 1.

Fleet Visit Brings War Films to Broadway

New York.—The visit of the United States fleet to New York has caused the Broadway houses to concentrate on war films.

The Globe Theatre has booked "War's End," the Columbia will revive "Forgotten Men," and the Mayfair will show "The Unknown Soldier."

No Rogers-Warner Deal

Charles R. Rogers' negotiations with Warners were called off last week when satisfactory percentage arrangements could not be worked out. Negotiations were exclusively reported in the Reporter a number of months ago and later denied by Rogers, who was then still under contract to Paramount.

Pabst-Radio Split

G. W. Pabst and Radio are separating by mutual consent after the studio and the director could not agree on an assignment for him. He moves to another major studio, where a deal is being closed today.

Sol Rosenblatt, Richberg And Johnson Say His Suggestions Mean Facism Or Communism

Washington.—Five of the most important government reports ever issued concerning the motion picture industry were released by the White House last night. They consisted of two reports by Clarence Darrow and his Review Board, one by J. F. Sinclair, minority member of the Darrow board, one by Donald Richberg, NRA chief legal counsel, and the combined replies of General Hugh Johnson and Sol A. Rosenblatt to the charges by Darrow

In Darrow's two reports, he and his board attack practically everything in the film code, advocate the ousting of Sol Rosenblatt, call for sweeping changes in the entire code set-up, declare the NRA is futile, shock advocates of true democracy by declaring that we must have either monopoly by government or a planned economy which demands socialized ownership and control, and wind up by stating that hope for American people lies in the latter plan.

In biting and vitriolic phrases, Johnson, Richberg and Rosenblatt attack Darrow and his board, defend the film code and those connected with it, and charge the Darrow board with being unfair, prejudiced, ignorant of the meaning of the code, and advocates of either Fascism or Communism, and demand that the board be abolished.

In other words, Johnson, Richberg and Rosenblatt defend self-government of industry, while Darrow and his Review Board declare that the only thing that will work is absolute government ownership of all industry.

Darrow's advocacy of government monopoly of the film industry was contained in the supplemental report which has been kept secret while the first report of his board was being discussed and its contents were leaking to the press. This report was written by Darrow and W. O. Thomson.

"Fascism or Communism The Choice"

It was to this report that General Johnson issued his most vitriolic replies. He declared that "stripped of shadowy verbiage, this means that the choice of the American people is between Fascism and Communism, neither of which can be espoused by any one who believes in our democratic institutions of self-government. Nor can any public official who has taken oath to defend the Constitution of the United States adopt or officially advocate such a program. The supplementary report demonstrates completely the propriety of my recommendation that the Review Board should be abolished."

Summed up, the Darrow report favors double bills, opposes fixing minimum admissions, calls for a sweeping revision of the film code, a complete change in the make-up of the Code Authority, changes in trade practices, immediate ousting of Rosenblatt as administrator of the film code, development of a new leasing system for films, establishment of the right to buy, the abolition of block booking, and the giving of equal powers to the independents, majors and the government in the code.

The ousting of Rosenblatt is called for on the grounds that he was formerly associated with "a lawyer, many of whose clients were and are now, engaged in the theatrical and motion picture industries. This attorney is a member of the Board of United Artists." This refers to Nathan Burkan.

Continuing, the report says: "It would appear from the testimony before this board that the Deputy Administrator may be prejudiced against the independent exhibitors." One witness, the report states, "testified that at a meeting of independent exhibitors held with the Administrator the objection was made that the Deputy Administrator was biased and prejudiced against independent exhibitors, and he admitted it was so."

The report further states, "because of the defiance by the Deputy Administrator of this board, and because of testimony to the effect that he is prejudiced against the independent exhibitors, distributors and producers in the industry, this board recommends that the Deputy Administrator be removed from all connection with the motion picture code and another Deputy Administrator be appointed."

In declaring the film code is monopolistic, the report says that Section

Columbia Declares Common Dividend

New York. — Columbia Pictures Saturday declared a dividend of 25 cents a share on its common stock, payable July 2. This is the first dividend on this issue since October, 1931, when it paid 18¾ cents a share. The company also declared a 2½ per cent semi-annual payment in stock on the common, payable August 2.

This action is thought to have been the result of the stockholders' suit brought by Mrs. Cohen, in which she complained because of the lack of dividends on the common stock in the face of the company's statements of continued prosperity.

Menjou in Barrymore Role at Radio Studio

Adolphe Menjou was reported closed Saturday for the John Barrymore role in "Hat, Coat and Glove."

At the same time, Universal was said to be polishing off a deal for the player in "Human Side," which comes off the shelf for Edward Buzzell's direction. Eph Asher produces.

All-Star Cast Set For 'Ruggles' at Paramount

Paramount will produce "Ruggles of Red Gap" with an all-star cast headed by Charles Laughton, Charles Ruggles and Mary Boland. Studio has also spotted Sir Guy Standing, Evelyn Venable and Kent Taylor in the cast. No director, writers or a definite production date set as yet.

Carole Lombard Ill

Carole Lombard was sent home Saturday with an attack of intestinal flu and, as a result, Henry Hathaway is shooting around her in "Now and Forever" at Paramount. Picture started last week with Gary Cooper in the other lead.

Hammerstein to MGM

Oscar Hammerstein II. arrives tomorrow from New York with a contract to work on MGM musicals. He has just finished collaboration with Jerome Kern on "Three Sisters," London musical show.

Sedgwick to MGM

Edward Sedgwick returns to MGM to direct "King of the Diamond." The deal was set by Phil Berg.

THE LOW DOWN

The other night a big production exec went to one of the newer night-places and played himself a few games of chance. For the first time in his long career of gaming, he won a little over ten thousand dollars! He was that excited! But not as upset as the management. Because they couldn't pay him off! They gave him a check for twenty-five hundred and notes for the balance owed him. So now the question arises as to whether the exec will ever get the rest of his winnings —or be offered the club itself as a gift instead! (And its not the Colony.)

Rumors of an engagement between Lothar Mendes and Pamela Ostrer, whose pappy is one of the biggest stockholders in British Gaumont. But's there's lots more to the story. Seems Lothar, when he started romancing with Pamela, also suggested that the lass take the feminine lead in "Jew Suss" which he was about to direct. Now, the company had no intention of spending a vast fortune on this picture, but when Pamela stepped into the cast, the whole aspect changed. Maybe Mendes changed it—or maybe it was love, but when the thing got into production it went on for months and months and has cost close to a million dollars.

Rufus LeMaire got back to town Saturday night just in time for the big party thrown by the Ned Marins. Inez Courtney just made the soiree too and is here for a spell. LeMaire left the party early—but might just as well have stayed to the bitter end—because the guests who remained made him feel like a bridegroom by calling him up every five minutes until dawn. Others at the party were the Al Rocketts, Ernst Lubitsch, Jeanette MacDonald, the Felix Youngs, Eddie Mannix, the Richard Rowlands, the Harry Rapfs, Mrs. Jack Warner, Edgar Allan Woolf, Dick Powell, the Mike Levees and many more.

'DU BARRY' WEAK ON HISTORY, BUT GRAND ENTERTAINMENT

Dieterle, Chodorov, Owen, Highlights

"MADAME DU BARRY"
(Warners)

Direction .....Wilhelm Dieterle
Original Screen Play..Edward Chodorov
Photography .....Sol Polito
Cast: Dolores Del Rio, Reginald Owen, Veree Teasdale, Osgood Perkins, Helen Lowell, Victor Jory, Henry O'Neill, Ferdinand Gottschalk, Virginia Sale, Dorothy Tree, Hobart Cavanaugh, Arthur Treacher, Anita Louise, Camille Rovelle, Maynard Holmes, Halliwell Hobbes, Jesse Scott, Nella Walker.

It isn't history, but it's awfully good company, this celluloid account of the doings of the famous Madame DuBarry. Wilhelm Dieterle has crashed through with a comedy version of the story of this famous favorite of a king that leaves nothing to be desired in the way of laughs and lavishness. He obviously directed for laughs, and he certainly was successful in creating them.

The story is built around the escapades of DuBarry (Dolores Del Rio) at the French court. She has a fertile imagination when it comes to thinking up ways of making trouble for everyone concerned and of taking care of her favorites. Her word is law and she can make or break a minister by raising her finger. The king and the courtiers are her slaves and she drives them mercilessly, although usually good-naturedly.

The story, an original by Edward Chodorov, is a brilliant piece of writing and both cast and director catch and maintain the spirit. Chodorov obviously has remembered the last lines of a lot of good stories and has adapted them in the French bedroom manner, which gave the preview audience plenty of enjoyment.

The whole offering is charming and made even more so by the excellent playing of the cast. Miss Del Rio never has been more beautiful, and she brings to her role a freshness, a grace and a sense of comedy that are delightful. Reginald Owen, as the king, is superb. He never has done a better piece of work during his entire career.

Osgood Perkins gives the type of performance for which he is noted, which means that no one could possibly have played better the role of the great Cardinal Richelieu. Veree Teasdale as a sister of the Duc de Choiseul, and Ferdinand Gootschalk as a master of ceremonies are also admirable.

The photography, by Sol Polito, is nothing short of stunning. Some of the scenes are breath-takingly beautiful.

Exhibitors should have no trouble selling this one. With the names in the cast and the interest that the Du Barry story has always had, it ought to be in the bag. It is a picture which stresses the laughs and plenty of them, even if it is not a perfect historical document.

Wanger Planning To Sign Up Noted Stars

Walter Wanger has postponed his departure for New York until Wednesday in order to complete his negotiations with two noted stars whom he anticipates signing to contracts for his coming production venture.

New Producer Will Present Plays Here

New York.—Thomas H. Wilkes, who has been out of the play production field for the past seven years, is returning to the game and will produce both in New York and in Los Angeles.

He plans to offer the Eugene O'Neill play, "Mourning Becomes Electra," on the west coast with Judith Anderson, Alla Nazimova and Earle Larimore in the cast. The tentative opening date is June 18, and Frank Reicher will direct.

Elissa Landi Brings Her Suit For Divorce

Elissa Landi has filed suit for divorce from John Cecil Lawrence, according to an announcement made yesterday by her attorney, Roderick Johnston. The suit is filed in Los Angeles and the cause given is mental cruelty.

Miss Landi and Lawrence were married in England in 1928. She came to this country in 1930 and has been here ever since, while he has remained in England.

Hull's Arrival Stops Brook-Universal Deal

Negotiations between Universal and Clive Brook have been placed on ice. Deal was originally in work to have the player take the top spot in "Great Expectations," which was placed on the production schedule at his suggestion. However, assigning of Henry Hull to the star role changes this.

Max Gordon To Produce DeSylva-Silvers Show

New York.—Max Gordon will produce the Buddy DeSylva-Sid Silvers musical show in October. Music for the production will be furnished by Koehler and Victor Arden.

Seiter on 'By Your Leave'

William Seiter was set by Radio Saturday to direct "By Your Leave" and Frank Morgan will be borrowed from MGM for a leading role.

Sheridan on Script

Oscar M. Sheridan has been assigned by MGM to do the script of "Indo China."

Agency Signs Wood

Sam Wood signed a managerial contract Saturday with Berg, Stebbins, Allenberg and Blum.

Festival Proposed To Find New Talent

Through the efforts of the Women's Community Service Auxiliary of the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce, all of the would-be scenario writers, photographers, make-up artists and costume designers who have an eye on the picture field, will have an opportunity to show their wares to picture judges next month.

The WCSA is conducting a competitive Festival of the Allied Arts in an effort to bring out latent talent in Southern California. In this competition are the picture activities outlined above. The committee that will judge these efforts will include John Boles, Fred Beetson, Max Parker, Julian Johnson and Mabel E. Kinney.

Mankiewicz and Young Wedding Celebrated

Joe Mankiewicz and Elizabeth Young were married yesterday at Herman Mankiewicz's home in Beverly Hills, Judge Billings officiating.

Mrs. Herman Mankiewicz was the matron of honor, Gail Patrick the maid of honor, and Phillips Holmes best man. The couple drove north on their honeymoon.

Tribute to Schencks At Palisades Opening

New York.—Governor Harry Moore, of New Jersey, participated in the tribute to Nicholas and Joseph M. Schenck at the opening of Palisades Park for the Summer.

The occasion was the twenty-fifth anniversary of the Schencks' control of the amusement park.

London Paper Praises Jaffe and Lodge Acting

London.—The London Daily Express, commenting on the Dietrich picture, "The Scarlet Empress," says it is "an essay in brave film pageantry and braver nonsense."

The paper remarks that Sam Jaffe and John Lodge give the best performances.

Julie Lang East

Julie Lang, wife of Dick Hunt, left Saturday by train for New York to set contracts for her free lance fan magazine articles. She will be gone a month. Miss Lang formerly was in charge of fan magazine contacts for Paramount.

Stu Erwin Assigned

Stu Erwin gets one of the important cast spots in MGM's "Sacred and Profane Love," the Crawford-Gable picture which Clarence Brown directs.

Lesser After Alexander

Sol Lesser is negotiating a deal with MGM for the loan of Katharine Alexander for a top spot in "Peck's Bad Boy."

Robertson Assigned

John Robertson will direct "Wednesday's Child" as his next assignment for Radio.

'TERROR' THRILLY MYSTERY; 'I GIVE MY LOVE' HACKNEYED

Marked By Good Writing, Direction

"RETURN OF THE TERROR"
(Warners)

Direction .....Howard Bretherton
Author .....Edgar Wallace
Screen Play.....Eugene Solow and Peter Milne
Photography .....Arthur Todd
Cast: Mary Astor, Lyle Talbot, John Halliday, Frank McHugh, Robert Barrat, Irving Pichel, George E. Stone, J. Carrol Naish, Frank Reicher, Robert Emmett O'Connor, Renee Whitney, Etienne Girardot, Maude Eburne, Charles Grapewin, George Humbert, Edmund Breese, George Cooper, Cecil Cunningham, Frank Conroy, Howard Hickman.

There's an icy chill in every reel of "Return of the Terror." While the solution of the thing at the very end, with such a lot of names bandied back and forth in the explanation, is not as clear as it might be, the terrified shrieks of the audience throughout make such a criticism seem puny.

Laid as it is against the background of an insane asylum, the picture is rather unpleasant to watch, but it is undeniably effective and exciting.

John Halliday, a doctor engaged to Mary Astor, is accused of murdering a few inmates of his hospital. False evidence against him makes a conviction certain, so he pleads insanity and is sent to an asylum. In the meantime, other murders take place in his hospital, which is run by Lyle Talbot, a doctor-colleague of Halliday.

All the murders are committed by a fiend who signs himself "The Terror," and it isn't until all the patients are driven crazier than ever, and Halliday escapes from the asylum, that the mystery is solved.

Frank McHugh and Robert Emmett O'Connor are amusing as they work together to find the fiend. Mary Astor has very little to do; Halliday is splendid as Dr. Redmayne; George E. Stone and Robert Barrat are a couple of minor gangsters; Frank Reicher has a swell characterization, and Irving Pichel is a grand lawyer. Maude Eburne is funny, and so is Charles Grapewin.

Howard Bretherton directed for gasps; Eugene Solow and Peter Milne didn't skip a chill in their adaptation of the Edgar Wallace yarn, and Arthur Todd helped it all along by good photography.

If your audiences go for mysteries—especially the creepy kind—here it is.

Presnell Assigned To 'Blonde Countess'

Robert Presnell has completed his polishing job on "The Big Benefit" at MGM and has been assigned to write the screen play of Herbert Yardley's "The Blonde Countess," which is planned for Clark Gable.

C. Gardiner Sullivan and the author have completed their treatment of the story. Lawrence Weingarten produces.

Earmuffs on Welcome Committee Stop Arlen

Richard Arlen and family returned from Europe Saturday, with Dick full of stories about the trip. When they stepped off the train the entire Toluca Lake gang was waiting to welcome them—and every one of them wore earmuffs.

Warners Lead For Control of Fox Met.

New York.—The question of who shall get the Fox Metropolitan Playhouses is expected to be settled on June 20 when the hearing will be held on the reorganization plan of the bondholders. Bids are expected from Warner Brothers, Walter Reade, and interests represented by Attorney D. W. Kahn who, in some quarters, is suspected of being a Warner agent.

In view of the apparent desire of several concerns for this chain, the consolidated corporate and receiver's income report is interesting. For the period from June 4, 1932, to December 31, 1933, the net loss, after interest and other charges, was $2,095,226.

Jack Benny Arriving For Reliance Picture

Jack Benny arrives in Hollywood next Saturday and will make this his national broadcasting headquarters during the production of "Transatlantic Showboat," Edward Small's musical, in which he gets a top spot.

Ben Stoloff gets the megaphone on the production, set to start the first week of June.

Hervey and Muse For 'Count of Monte Cristo'

Irene Hervey is being borrowed from MGM by Edward Small for "The Count of Monte Cristo," current Reliance production at the Pathe lot.

Small also engaged Clarence Muse Saturday for the part of Ali, the mute.

Lindsey to Talk on NRA

Judge Ben Lindsey will speak on "The Relation of the NRA to the Future of the Office Employees" next Wednesday night at a mass meeting of white collar workers, sponsored by the Office Employees Association of Los Angeles.

Cormack on 'Buccaneer'

Paramount has assigned Bartlett Cormack to write the script on "Buccaneer," which will be Cecil B. De Mille's next for the studio. Story is based on the life of Sir Henry Morgan, famous pirate.

Beauty Set in 'Tour'

Dorothy Short, who won transportation to Hollywood last year as an Atlantic City beauty prize, gets a part in "Student Tour." Chuck Reisner starts production at MGM today or tomorrow.

Acting, Direction, Good; Story Stale

"I GIVE MY LOVE"
(Universal)

Direction .....Karl Freund
Original .....Vicki Baum
Screen Play.....Doris Anderson
Photography .....George Robinson
Cast: Paul Lukas, Wynne Gibson, Eric Linden, John Darrow, Tad Alexander, Sam Hardy, Anita Louise.

Even if Vicki Baum did write it, as is modestly attested by the 50 percent billing above title, "I Give My Love" is still variation number 162 of the "Madame X" theme. Or is it 163?

The basic formula must still be a good one, for the final scenes are undeniably powerful, however maudlin. The mother, by now a drink-sodden hag on the streets of Paris, attracts the attention of her artist son, who sees in her face the perfect realization of a character portrait he decides to title "Defeat." In posing for him, the mother learns his identity and there is a pitiful moment when she arrives at his studio, attempting to look her best in a stolen lace collar. The painting is nearly finished when the arrival of the man the boy calls Father leads to revelations, so long delayed. The painting is exhibited, but the face wears a different expression. It is now titled "Sacrifice."

This much and little more than this much of the story is excellent. The rest is a hodge-podge of situations, by turns sensitive and just penny-dreadful. An obvious effort has been made by all concerned to remove the stigma of familiarity from the treatment, but not until the climaxing sequence is anyone very successful.

Wynne Gibson does yeoman service as the mother, suffering long and valiantly. It is a much more convincing performance than her material deserved. Paul Lukas' work is of the pattern he has made distinctly his own, the quiet romantic, the understanding friend. Eric Linden is wellnigh perfect as the grown-up son, a keenly etched portrayal. John Darrow does the despicable husband, a role broadly written and performed to the hilt, but it should lead to better things for this thoroughly capable young actor. Anita Louise is appealing in a brief opportunity which she makes count. Tad Alexander contributes a canny youngster of twelve, and Dorothy Appleby is in for only a flash. Photography by George Robinson is standard.

The direction of Karl Freund is splendid when it has a chance to be splendid—meaning again the latter scenes. He can be commended for several nice touches that unfortunately are lost in the welter of an inadequate, painfully slow and even more painfully familiar story. The audience that can't call every turn of this plot is an audience that has never seen a picture before. It hasn't a chance in the larger metropolitan houses, which automatically relegates it to small communities, where tear-jerkers may still be liked.

Not that it MATTERS
by Helen Gwynn

Every dog has his day and these are the dog days in Hollywood production. Summer is upon us and the season is practically over, BUT there is still a schedule to be filled by every company to complete this season's program and so the "dogs" are having their day.

Now is the time to sell something you've had lying around in your trunk for the last few years. The price you get may not be too high, but in order to gather in the three or four hundred thousand dollar grosses that represent the summer colonies out for an evening's entertainment, the major companies go in for making what they laughingly call "quickies," or keeping their negative costs down to a very low level.

Or, better yet, the producing companies do a little Spring cleaning of their shelves and dust off a few old ones that they couldn't make a go of on their regular season's program. Now, if by any chance, one of these quickies should turn out to be a "wow," you can rest assured it will be quickly jerked and saved for the new season splash and another "quickie" hastily substituted.

The strange part of it all is that the same thing happens every year, in spite of all the beautiful planning. In the marvelous press books, (that are even now being prepared to help the high pressure salesman), will always be the glowing accounts of anywhere from fifty-two to sixty-four feature pictures a year. These are divided into two groups, the specials and the program pictures. But you will notice that only a small percentage of these coming attractions are fully described as to type and casting, etc.

Just why it never occurs to them to cut down on the number of scheduled pictures in the first place is one of the wonders of the picture industry. However, having sold the exhibitor a set of pictures, the producer cannot afford to leave gaps in the schedule because of the bad effect it will have on the sale of his next season's product. And that sale is always just about to start at the same time that the producer has run out of material. And, of course, the other consideration is the three or four hundred thousand dollars that even a bad picture can gross because some of the people have to have their movies all the time.

Somehow, it seems to us that the better part of production valor would be more discretion in the number of pictures they agree to turn out each year. It seems to us that, if the pictures were fewer but of better quality, that is, in entertainment value, they'd never have to worry about picking up that "small change" in the Summer time but would keep the grosses at a high average all through the year. The public soon gets wise to the fact that for a couple of months they can expect nothing much, and so the ones that could be persuaded to go see a good picture stay at home, while fans cut dow nto once a week.

SOL ROSENBLATT DEFENDS HIMSELF AGAINST DARROW BOARD ATTACKS

Johnson, Richberg, Also Justify Him

ten is so worded that it gives affiliates the opportunity to lease theatres to "straw men" and have them classed as independent exhibitors.

Another recommendation is that the Code Authority be changed so that it represents all divisions of industry, claiming that the present set-up represents eight to two against the independent. Also claiming the Code Authority is self-perpetuating under the present system, it is suggested that this be made impossible. And it is recommended that government representatives be given the right to vote.

The new Code Authority set-up recommended is: five representatives of affiliates, five unaffiliates and five representatives to be chosen by the President; all members have the right to vote, with a majority vote ruling. Not more than two of the unaffiliates shall be producers, distributors or exhibitors who belong to the Hays organization, and neither shall they be members of any trade association supported in whole or part by affiliates. This hits the MPTOA.

No Forcing of Shorts

The report demands that the forcing of shorts with features be banned and recommends the cancellation provision of ten per cent be increased to fifteen per cent.

In rapid succession the report hits at the make-up of clearance boards, selection of clearance board secretaries from film boards of trade, and hits at grievance boards, saying the code gives them no power to hear cases involving pictures of producers going to their own theatres. It also hits at the right of the Code Authority to hear additional evidence when a case is appealed from a grievance board, stating this is contrary to law.

The right to buy in the open market and the problem of block booking next come, with the explanation that the problem is too big to set forth in the report. A committee is suggested to come from within the industry to handle the problem and work it out so block booking will be eliminated and the right to buy be granted, this committee to be appointed by Darrow, and render a report to the President by August 1, 1934.

If its report is not in by then, Darrow suggests that a clause be inserted in the code to the effect that "it shall be an unfair method of competition to deny to any exhibitor the right to buy in free and open competition whatever run or runs of pictures he requires for the operation of his theatre."

Socialization Urged

In his supplemental report Darrow comes out flatly with the assertion that "the choice is between monopoly by government and a planned economy which demands socialized ownership and control, since only by collective ownership can the inevitable conflict of separately owned units for the market be eliminated in favor of planned production. The hope of the American people lies in the planned use of America's resources following socialization."

In attacking the Darrow report, General Johnson declared: "The board was established at my suggestion to supply fair and constructive criticism. It is clearly incapable of fulfilling this function and therefore I recommend that it be abolished forthwith."

Rising to the defence of Rosenblatt, General Johnson declares that Darrow's attack on the film code administrator "impugns the motives of the Divisional Administrator because he formerly worked for an attorney who has clients in that field, and asks for his removal. Nobody here has rendered more public-spirited, disinterested and intelligent service than this Divisional Administrator."

Richberg takes up the club in defence of Rosenblatt when he declares that irrefutable evidence shows that Rosenblatt not only offered to testify before Darrow, but offered to make all of his records available to Darrow's board.

Discredited Witnesses

Richberg declared that the code, which Darrow attacks, was assented to by 9039 members of the industry, but that Darrow's board heard only 21 witnesses, representing but 15 out of 7500 theatre operators, and made its rulings on evidence such as that. He pointed out that Darrow took only 14 hours and 21 minutes of hearings to condemn a code that required more than 1200 hours in drafting, and which was drafted only after 206 witnesses had been heard.

"The board," says Richberg, "acted solely on the basis of a disorderly mess of sworn and largely false testimony of a few malcontents (many of them discredited by previously illegal practices) covering only 8 out of 288 subdivisions of the code, and arrived at sweeping conclusions upon the entire code founded on obvious ignorance of the code, of the industry and the law. The detailed analysis of the board's action shows conclusively that the investigation was carried on with utter disregard for fair play, and that the conclusions of the board are unworthy of the slightest consideration."

Richberg then points out that it is plainly evident to anyone that the film code is of incalculable benefit to the small enterprises and affords great relief from monopolistic effects of the copyright laws and other property rights which have previously given legal advantages of an oppressive nature to large enterprises. He declares that a return to the "savage, wolfish" competition advocated by the Darrow board would mean an enlargement of monopolistic power sanctioned by the law.

Richberg accuses the Darrow board of refusing even to receive correct information, citing the fact that seven producing companies filed a brief which was not considered.

Rosy Defends Himself

Rosenblatt, in defending himself and the film code, declared that the Darrow attack upon him is "wholely unwarranted, unjust, prejudiced and ignorantly contrived." Speaking of the recommendation that he be removed from office he said: "The report itself does not even pretend to justify this recommendation, which is totally unsupported by even the slightest proof of any kind, and is based solely upon the vicious mouthings, innuendos and conjecture of a few disgruntled and disappointed enemies of the National Industrial Recovery Act and particularly of the motion picture code."

He then cites the fact that while for thirty years no agreement ever could be arrived at between the contending film forces, through his efforts an agreement (the code) has been reached which is substantially satisfactory to all but an insignificant, raucous minority.

Speaking of the hearing of the Darrow board, Rosenblatt says: "It was not even a star chamber proceeding. It was no proceeding at all. The statements of a few discredited and disgruntled witnesses, some of whom have been found guilty by the Supreme Court of New York of being violators of the code provisions with respect to labor, and who, it will be demonstrated later, brazenly misstated facts, constitute the basis of the report."

Rosenblatt then introduced a letter showing he had offered to testify before Darrow at any time, and make his records available to the Review Board. He cited court decisions declaring block booking legal.

Code Boards Defended

He further stated that distributors cannot force exhibitors to purchase more shorts than they need. Designation of play dates, he says, is taken care by grievance boards. Likewise minimum price fixing. He hit the suggestion of a board to study block booking, and vigorously defended the various code boards.

Going further into the attack upon himself by the board, Rosenblatt declares that, if anything, he really favors the independents, citing that it was his law firm that won the celebrated Singer case that made new law in the industry. He also cited fake telegrams sent last Fall against him, and declared that racketeering "leader" got $9000 from Detroit exhibitors and others and came to Washington in an attempt to impugn his character, but to no avail.

Those close to the Administration here predict that the Darrow board will soon be abolished by Executive order, first because it heard mostly one-sided testimony, and second because what it proposes is nothing more or less than socialism.

It is believed doubtful that there will be any radical changes in the film code, and unless General Johnson resigns under Congressional fire, Rosenblatt will not leave, either.

Highlights Of Reports

Clarence Darrow says: Rosenblatt should be ousted; film code is monopolistic; indies, majors and government should have equal powers; Recovery Act futile, and socialization of all industry with collective ownership is only solution.

Gen. Johnson says: Darrow supplemental report means choice between Fascism and Communism; Darrow board should be abolished as it is prejudiced and partisan and unfair in its methods.

Donald Richberg says: Darrow board acted only on basis of largely false testimony of a few malcontents; is ignorant of contents of the code and gave findings contrary to fact and conclusions contrary to intelligent opinion.

Sol Rosenblatt says: Darrow report wholly unwarranted, unjust, prejudiced and ignorantly contrived. Attack on me based on vicious mouthings, innuendos and conjecture of few enemies of NRA and picture code.

Ousting of Review Board Is Expected

Todd and Kelly Finish; Laurel and Hardy Start

Thelma Todd and Patsy Kelly wound up their Hal Roach series Friday. Today Laurel and Hardy resume their interrupted series, starting "Public Enemies" with Charles Rogers directing. Walter Long, Harry Dunkinson and Mae Busch play in it with the comedians.

It is a directing debut for Rogers, who has previously worked with Laurel and Hardy as writer and actor. He replaces Lloyd French, who went east to make Warner shorts recently.

World Broadcasting Outfit to New Offices

The World Broadcasting Company has moved its offices from the General Service studios to the Richfield Oil building at Sixth and Flower.

The recording will still be done at the General Service plant, but the manager, P. W. Campbell, explains that the office move is needed so that he may be closer to advertisers and agencies.

Dick Diggs Promoted

Richard Diggs, who has been handling matters pertaining to censorship at the Paramount studios, has been promoted to be assistant to Bayard Veiller, associate producer.

'Nell Gwynn' Premiere

New York.—"Nell Gwynn," a print of which was brought from England by executives of British and Dominions will have a Broadway premiere, but the house is not yet picked.

New One For Bellamy

Next feature into production at Columbia will be "By Persons Unknown," fourth of the police-detective series featuring Ralph Bellamy. Director yet unassigned.

STEPS PROPOSED TO CURB DISHONEST 'PRODUCERS'

before. He managed to keep within the law by making a few pictures which finally went to a receiver and were sold for less than their cost, leaving the woman without the only funds she had for the support of herself and her family.

The second case involved a producer who also promoted a widow into backing a group of features. With no distribution set, the pictures are out somewhere in the state right field, with no chance of recouping the original investment. The backer was also taken for everything.

The service men who supplied the materials for the producers were acquainted with both cases and voluntarily pooled funds to keep the women from want.

John Jasper, business manager for the Davidge laboratory, said: "The tragedy left in the wake of the confidence man type of producer is beyond the power of even the District Attorney to remedy. In each case, recently, investigation showed that the producers could not be touched on any sort of charge that would hold. There was no chance of getting back the money for the helpless widows and their children and, rather than seek a means of bringing the producers to book, the cases were dropped and charity raised for the women from the service men.

"The only way to put a stop to it will be the close co-operation of all servicing companies which, even at a cost to themselves, will refuse to service this type of producer. Before granting credit, or even if on a cash basis, every newcomer to the independent field must be carefully investigated and, if he has no authorized release or any prospects of earning back the cost of his film, service will be refused him. It will cost us something, but it will be worth it to avoid having the tragedies we have recently seen."

Milliken in Europe On Good Will Mission

London.—Carl Milliken, of the Hays office, is in London on behalf of the organization.

The London press believes that his visit is connected with Hollywood's concern over the change in British taste about pictures and that he has plans for an interchange of ideas and personalities to promote closer co-operation.

Max Manne Bankrupt

New York.—Max Manne, former director of sound effect for Hugo Riesenfeld and Paramount's Long Island studio, has filed a petition in bankruptcy, listing liabilities of $2852 and no assets.

Steele Starts June 1

Bob Steele's first picture for Sam Katzman's Supreme Pictures goes into work June 1, with a deal on for space at Talisman Studios. Bob Hill directs a story by Jack Natteford.

Harris After Muni To Play Nijinski

New York.—Sam Harris is after Paul Muni again. This time he wants him for the leading role in a play about Nijinski, the famous dancer, which he will produce this Fall. Nijinski is now in a sanitarium in Switzerland and interest in him has been re-created recently through the biography written by his wife.

New York Operators To Fight 'Request System'

New York.—About 250 members of Motion Picture Operators Local 306 have organized the "Progressive Club" within the union to fight the Harry Sherman regime.

They also seek the end of the "request system," whereby chief operators on theatre chains keep their favorites working. Lester Isaacs, of Loew's, and Harry Ruben, of Paramount, are named as the principal offenders.

Team to Warners

Albert J. Cohen and Robert Terry Shannon register today at Warners to write the screen play for their original story, "King of the Ritz," under Sam Bischoff's supervision.

Donald Woods to Fox

Donald Woods was borrowed from Warners by Fox Saturday for the role opposite Helen Twelvetrees in "She Was a Lady," which Al Rockett is producing.

Code Heads Worried Over Exhibs' Revolt

New York.—The Film Code Authority is worried over the recent revolt in Iowa and Nebraska, where many exhibitors retracted their code assents and their assessments, charging that the distributors dominated the local boards. Charles O'Reilly has been sent to pacify them.

The authority is also concerned over the attitude of the local boards about whose interests shall come first in their decisions and has notified all members that the "best interests of the nation and the industry" shall be regarded as the primal obligation.

Musical Completed by Mentone in New York

New York.—Mentone Pictures has just completed a two-reel musical for Universal at the Fox Movietone studio here. It is called "Soup to Nuts" and was directed by Milton Schwartzwald and Joe Bannon.

In the cast are Donald Brian, Vivienne Segal, Bob Hope and Al Goodman's orchestra.

Para. Calls Roberts

Marguerite Roberts, who prepared the screen treatment of Vina Delmar's original, "End of the World," is being called back to that picture by Al Lewis to work on the dialog and screen play. First she completes her adaptation of "Intimate," also to be an Al Lewis production for Paramount.

Most Played on Air

To familiarize the rest of the country with the tunes most on the air around New York, the following is the compilation for last week.

Plugs are figured on a Saturday-through-Friday week, regularly.

Only the chain stations are listed as indicative of general plug popularity.

Cast: Chester Morris, Marian Nixon, Walter Woolf, Alan Mowbray, John Wray, George Stone, Henry Armetta, Gay Seabrook, Herman Bing, Jane Darwell, Charles Coleman, Virginia Sale, Edward Earle, John T. Murray, Wallis Clark.

A dandy little comedy, guaranteed to hold its own on any program. Laughs and thrills are deftly intermingled for the type of entertainment we used to have before pictures began talking so much. There is action in "Embarrassing Moments" and plenty of it.

The plot has to do with a practical joker who simply is unable to resist any opportunity to perpetrate a gag. His girl and his best friend plan a cure after he has worked a telephone rib on the friend, a particularly hilarious sequence, by the way. The friend feigns suicide so that the joker may be accused of murder, but the frame-up goes wrong when the lad flees town.

Thrown into association with a band of counterfeiters, he is made an innocent dupe and nearly lands in jail across the border. An escape by plane makes a neat chase finish.

Only one sequence mars the smooth unfolding of the story. That is the duel wherein the joker bests his opponent, a revolutionary general. The idea is definitely slap-stick, even to the point of the general losing his pants. It just isn't funny enough and the improbability of the situation interrupts the air of reality the rest of the yarn has built.

Chester Morris is nothing short of swell as the practical joker. He plays with fine authority a role that can only be described as exacting because it combines so many conflicting moods. Marian Nixon acquits herself capably as the girl in the case. Walter Woolf is ill at ease as the friend, although handling the several songs well. Alan Mowbray is outstanding in the supporting cast.

Direction by Edward Laemmle maintains a fast tempo. The script, from an original by William Anthony McGuire, has all the appearances of being a tight job of writing. The several loose ends and false leads are cutting faults. Photography and lighting a bit spotty.

Get behind Morris in your campaign, not so much because of this release as because of what his name will mean to you in subsequent films. This trouper is headed right for the top.

Chester Morris Does Extraordinary Job

"LET'S TALK IT OVER"
(Universal)

Direction .....Kurt Neumann
Authors .....Dore Schary and Lewis Foster
Screen Play.....John Meehan Jr.
Photography .....Charles Stumar
Cast: Chester Morris, Mae Clarke, Frank Craven, Irene Ware, Andy Devine, Anderson Lawler, John Warburton, Goodee Montgomery, Russ Brown, Henry Armetta.

Chester Morris gives one of the finest performances of his career as the gob, Mike McCann, in the Universal picture, "Let's Talk It Over."

His keen sense of dramatic value, his timing, his simplicity and utter honesty to type, his superb sincerity—these all make his characterization a miracle of emotional lights and shadows. His Mike McCann is an extremely interesting human being.

Direction is strong and vivid and the writing is exceptionally smooth. With bouqets going to all departments, "Let's Talk It Over" is one of Universal's best. But why the title?

Morris is a sailor who accidentally rescues Mae Clarke, heiress to twenty millions, from drowning. Taking full advantage of the situation, he calls on her and, because he is such a cocksure, impossible, boastful young upstart, she introduces him to her friends, who all watch to see what the freak will do next. Taking her interest in him seriously, he quits the navy and goes to work in her uncle's bond house. Mae gets him the job on a bet—a hundred dollars that she can make something out of him. Instead, he makes something out of himself, and she finally falls very much out of love with her idle, restless, scatter-brained existence, and very much in love with him.

One of the beauties of Morris' characterization is that he never quite gets over being the gob. The polish is there, but his essential SELF remains the same. It is a great performance. Miss Clarke is more than acceptable as the rich, unthinking girl; Frank Craven has a swell part as her very understanding uncle; Andy Devine is a comic sailor; John Warburton is the snobbish fiance of Miss Clarke; Irene Ware makes a small role memorable; Goodee Montgomery has a vamp part, and Russ Brown and Henry Armetta are well cast.

Kurt Neumann directed; John Meehan Jr. made the screen play from the story by Dore Schary and Lewis Foster, and Charles Stumar photographed.

Young and old will like this picture. It's good, reliable stuff, made extraordinarily entertaining by Morris' performance.

REELING around LONDON

Most of movieland's big shots were at Frances Day's second home the other night; we refer to the Savoy Grill! Edna Best, Richard Norton, Claude Allister, Cyril Gardner, Rufus LeMaire, Alfred Drayton amongst them. . . . Gregory Ratoff with Christopher Mann, Gregory hoping to stay over for another picture. . . . Benita Hume was wearing this week's craziest and biggest hat. . . . Connie Sparks looking very well—and a host of others. . . . The latest line here is "Come up and see me some time, I'm no agent!!" . . . Ernest Betts and Paul Holt, British movie critics, talking it over in Piccadilly. . . . Even if Sidney Lanfield is here to meg the new Jack Buchanan pic, it's little daughter, Sheila Lanfield, who is getting all the press breaks. . . . Bert Ambrose, the Diamond Brothers and Cyril Gardner discussing Elstree at three-thirty a.m. at the Mayfair. . . . The Jannings pic for Sam Speigal is definitely off.

R. C. Sherriff, Dave Bader and Lloyd Knechtel grabbing backgrounds for Jimmie Whale's next Universal opus. . . . Eddie Cahn in town and sore because his "Blackshirt" deal is cold here—no fault of Eddie's; the company just gone out of the business and that's that! . . . Lee R. Loeb here and all pepped up about it. . . . We liked your golf short commentary, Pete Smith, on that Leo two-reeler. . . . Ah me! with stage and screen Shots grabbing themselves titles (if there are any left after the Midnite Folly Gals have had their fill) it's getting difficult to know who dons the grease paint for lurve and who for, well, whatever-goes-with-it. . . Jack Kirkland is busy on a new play, leastways that's what he says. . . . Jack Votion at British tradeshows. . . . Tush, tush, Bob Kane, Georgie White, Harry Lachman, John Blystone et al (who is that guy Al?), that was a meanie—re-running some of those early numbers again later in the pic in "Scandals."

Billy Hornbeck will probably edit a biggie this side before he heads back for Hollywood, that land of milk and honies. . . . There are six good reasons for "Rip Tide" being a hit here, apart from the swell production, of course—Shearer is four of them, Montgomery and Marshall are the other two. . . . Teddy Joyce, formerly of the Pantages on the Boulevard, is staying on at the Kit-Cat; they like him that way. . . . John MacDonnell, former B.B.C. chieftain, is British Production Contact for Fox; whatever that may mean. . . . T. Hayes Hunter favors the Capitol Grill for lunch. . . . Arthur Dent doing his best to seat all the many clamoring for tickets to see the B.I.P. "Bulldog Drummond" pic.

Suit on Ownership of 'Within the Rock'

Filing of an action in Superior Court against Davidge Laboratories by Screencraft Productions Saturday disclosed a battle among the defunct production company's board of directors for the ownership of their last picture, "Within the Rock," which Al Ray directed. Davidge is holding the film until the owner is determined.

Dispute started with Sam Katzman and Al Alt, founders of the company, which operated last season through Dave Mountain's Showmen's Pictures in New York. The two other board members are Abe Prall and A. W. Hackel.

Katzman and Hackel started the suit against Davidge with the purpose of getting a legal interpretation of the situation, Katzman maintaining the picture has been sold to Showmen's and claiming he wants to deliver it in order to get his portion of the finances out of it.

Hazard to Warners

Lawrence Hazard signed a long term deal with Warners over the week-end, M. C. Levee handling the ticket. Writer's first assignment is "Pickwick Papers."

Maxine Doyle on Loan

Maxine Doyle was borrowed from Warners by MGM Saturday for the bracket spot with Phil Regan, also from Warners, in "Student Tour."

UP-TO-THE-MINUTE CASTING NEWS

Eric Mayne and Caryl Lincoln to "The Merry Widow" at MGM.

Herman Bing by Menifee I. Johnstone to "Merry Widow," MGM.

Sir Guy Standing to "Shoe the Wild Mare," Paramount.

George Irving for Mayfair's "Alice Takes a Hand," by Menifee I. Johnstone.

Dell Henderson to "The Notorious Sophie Lang," Paramount.

White and Fowser Plan Siam and Indo-China Trip

Tom White and Hugh Fowser are planning a picture expedition this Fall into Northern Siam and Indio-China, White specializing on picture-making and Fowser on the capture of wild animals.

The ten shorts White made for the Huntington Expedition are now being released, and he has his latest picture, "Dusturan," nearly ready for distribution. "Dusturan" is seven reels of his Ceylon adventures last Spring. A United Artists release for it is aimed at.

Goodrich-Hackett Set

Francis Goodrich and Albert Hackett are doing the adaptation of "Hide Out," Mauri Grashin gang story in which Robert Montgomery will star for MGM. Direction is assigned to W. S. Van Dyke. The picture is on the June production schedule.

WHO'S WHO

the REFLECTOR

Playboys (at times)—these lab-chiefs—summer sunshine does funny things to them same as the rest of us. . . . Roy Hunter, majordomo of Universal, spends his noon hours pulling the bright sun through intricate lenses on a specially prepared Leica for the registration of natural-color stills . . . and they're sooo beautiful, too. . . . Jawnem Nicholaus slinking into his second young-manhood as a golf-o-maniac and bravely trudging the canyons at Bel-Air to reduce his waist-line and enlarge his smile. . . . George Seid of Columbia finds his newest hobby in split-bamboo casting rods and shiny smooth-running reels with silky lines and gaudy lures designed to attract the poor fish. . . . . Mike Leshing of Fox thinks in the same direction and will start a fishin' trip justlikethat. . . . Harry Ensign at Paramount sticks to the mountain stuff when he's not playing off some sort of golf finals . . . and Charlie Levin at Roach shoots a mean game of croquet.

Louiewilliamo'connell putting the finishing touches to "Baby Take a Bow" at Fox. . . . At the same studio a newcomer in the camera department, George Schneidermann, comes in off'n his boat to do a few added scenes for Jack Ford, "The World Moves On." . . . Earlier in the year out at EMgeeem a young fellow named Ollie Marsh started shooting with Ernst Lubitsch directing "The Merry Widow" . . . and still going strong, thankyuh . . . and a coupla hundred yards away on another stage Jimmy Howe is busy outshooting himself with Sam Wood on "Stamboul Quest." . . . Pev Marley runs the camera in and out of synthetic tunnels as he keeps busy rolling the footage on Eddie Small's production of "Monte Cristo" at Pathe, and he's getting plenty of exercise for a boy who's had only four idle days in eight months. . . . Jim Brown of Larry Darmour is off on a long career today and will do a dozen in a row for his old boss.

Art Lloyd just waiting the starting gun at Roach, which will go off this week sometime. . . . Roy Hunt at RKO actively in production on "A Hat, A Coat, A Glove." . . . Ray Rennahan and Bill Skall turning the cameras on a Technicolor short for the same studio. . . . Harold Wenstrom finishing up on his current production, and will then have a few weeks off to enjoy his new beach house. . . . . According to advices most of the boys at RKO are going to have a short vacation, and the studio expects to be going again in full swing about the end of June.

Errata

In last week's Bulletin we published a story to the effect that Bob Planck was to take over the cameras on Roy Pomeroy's picture, "Shock," with Monogram.

However, about the time this story was being printed Trem Carr made a few magic passes, and switched his program, which sent Jack Mackenzie into the spot which we had announced for Planck. Mackenzie will complete production late this week.

Thanks From Tannura

Phil Tannura, one of the old timers from the camera ranks, has returned to his British post after a month's visit with his old pals and associates here.

Writing to George Gibson of the Brulatour staff, Tannura says: "I wonder if it would be asking too much for you to publish a few lines in your Brulatour Bulletin, telling the boys in the camera departments, laboratories and sound departments of my sincere appreciation for the kindness everyone has shown to me during my visit in Hollywood. Particularly am I grateful to the heads of the camera departments at every studio on the Coast. What they showed me and told me was a delightful revelation and has made my vacation a real pleasure from which I expect to profit greatly. I enjoyed very much your interesting Bulletin, and in case I find any news which I consider sufficiently important in our studio in London, I'll send it on to you.

"I wish also you would publish my address, because from time to time many of the Hollywood cameramen have questions regarding conditions in Europe, and I'd be very glad to answer any of these to the best of my ability. Address me at: 9 Arcade House, Hampstead Way, N.W. 11, London, England."

Mellor Elevated

Again it's happened. Another operative cameraman steps from the ranks and up to the top in his profession.

Bill Mellor, who for the past several years has been associated with Paramount as operative cameraman for Victor Milner, now gets the big break on his home lot, and is in work on his first production, "Ladies First," starring George Bancroft. Picture got under way during the past week, and while Bill was as nervous as the proverbial bride—(he'll probably deny this)—his first day's work (and every day's since) clicked like a clock with the front office bosses, the cast, the lab and even Bill himself.

Seitz Does It

Some very interesting things happen without a bit of warning at the Movietone Studios. Not the least of these was brought to light late last week, when a contingent from the camera department came marching in with a large wedding cake, placed it in Johnny Seitz' lap with cheers and congratulations.

Then came the general studio broadcast of the news that Seitz and Miss Mary Boyle took a quick run out of the state and had the ceremony performed about six weeks ago, and until middle of last week were wholly successful in keeping the happy event an absolute secret from even their most intimate friends.

Jerry Best East

Major Levinson at the Warner Bros.-First National Studio, temporarily lost his right hand man, Jerry Best, who left for New York and other points East of the Mississippi. Best will visit his family in New York, and is also scheduled to spend several days in the Bell Laboratories in New York.

Viva Gaudio

Tony Gaudio, the stormy petrel of the camera, loudly declares he wants everybody to know that it was he who conceived the idea of the disc and filter combination in the same piece of glass.

In the disc itself, Gaudio states, he has had Eastman Kodak Company place the filter, instead of having separate pieces for each.

It's an accepted fact that Gaudio has pioneered many important factors in improvement of camera technique, and he promises to announce very shortly another one of great importance to every cameraman.

Ruttenberg Here

Joe Ruttenberg, one of the outstanding cameramen of New York, arrived in Hollywood early last week, and is spending his time visiting the major studios where he has many friends in the photographic, laboratory and other technical departments. Ruttenberg is very much interested in new equipment. Ht is also inspecting and devoting long hours to rigid investigation of projection background systems employed by all studios. He will remain in Hollywood for some time before returning east to resume his work there.

Starts at Fox

Hal Mohr has been assigned to the camera and is scheduled to start work this week with Frank Lloyd on the new Janet Gaynor production, "Servants' Entrance."

Bert Glennon draws immediate assignment for Number Two under his new contract, and starts with Hamilton McFadden on the Helen Twelvetrees picture, "She Was a Lady."

The Sol Wurtzel unit, "Charlie Chan's Courage," is being given finishing touches by Joe Valentine.

False Alarm

Follow-up on last week's story regarding Paul Perry, reported by Fred Jackman to be stranded in China, now indicates that even in the land of laundries they experience exaggerations.

Jackman has radioed Hollywood that Paul Perry is fine and dandy, has practically finished his work in China for Chester Bennett; and further advises that Bennett has signed Perry to a new contract and will continue on 'round the world.

Sorry if our story upset some of Paul's friends, and we unite with them in giving three cheers that the rumor was just that.

the BUZZER

(NOTE: Each week, sales and service representatives of J. E. Brulatour, Inc. will ask a number of cameramen the same question. The question will be given and then the answers verbatim.)

QUESTION: WHAT ARE YOUR OPINIONS CONCERNING THE USE OF SHORT FOCAL LENGTH LENSES SUCH AS 24, 28 and 32?

HAL ROSSON (M.G.M.): These lenses should never be used in full shots unless the set is designed especially for them. Their value generally is nil and should be used only for effect and the distorted perspective shots.

PEV MARLEY (U.A.): Except in special cases where one is cramped for space and must use this type of lens, they should only be used where grotesque effects are desired.

JACK MACKENZIE (Monogram): I find it necessary to hide these lenses from most directors, as, having achieved an odd effect with one at some time or other, they insist on trying to use them too much. They have no value except when used as effect lenses.

HARRY JACKSON (Fox): I find these lenses useful sometimes in photographing musical numbers to give certain desired effects, but unless they are very high type I find that they fall away at the edges, both in exposure and focally.

SOL POLITO (Warners): I have had some success in using these lenses for certain types of shots in musical pictures, but would not advise their use without very definite thought and planning in building the set and spotting the people.

HAROLD WENSTROM (RKO): If the set is properly designed and sufficient space given to the cameraman to use the longer focal length lenses, I know of no time in regular production when these lenses should be used. They are effect lenses or for distorted perspective shots only.

Noffka Arrives

George Noffka, who has been a top production executive with M.G.M. and Fox for many years, arrived in Hollywood from New York mid-week as American representative for DeBrie Camera Company, Paris.

Accompanying Noffka is a mechanical technician from the Paris plant.

Latest model of the DeBrie Super Parvo is being exhibited by Noffka, who is making his headquarters at the General Service Studios.

RKO PULLING OUT OF RED

TRADEVIEWS by W.R.WILKERSON

•MR. G. A. ATKINSON does us the honor of reprinting in his London Era one of our tradeviews that had to do with our remarks that the doors are always open here for good British pictures, that there should never be any misunderstanding or arguments between America and Great Britain regarding their pictures. Mr. Atkinson in rebuttal states:

"Strange, isn't it, that British producers should still continue to miss that wide-open door, but the facts can be easily tested.

"Hollywood produced about 500 films last year, and it is safe to assume that practically all these films were shown in Britain.

"London produced nearly 200 films last year, of which about 100 were made for purely quota purposes.

"How many of the remaining 100 were shown in America, or seen in Hollywood?

"The truth is, of course, that America will only take from us pictures that are better than her own best, which is reasonable; but why should we take from America pictures that are inferior to our own average—or even our worst?"

And if Mr. Atkinson is right in asserting that England takes American pictures that are inferior to those of her own make, then the only answer is that the American pictures, good or bad, must draw more money than those made by the British studios.

That can be the only answer, for certainly if our exhibitors found pictures of another country better box-office than those made here in Hollywood, that's the product they would buy. Patriotism or sentiment will not sell theatre tickets and the picture business is based on selling tickets.

It is, of course, true, as Mr. Atkinson says, that most of the 500 pictures he mentions as having been made in Hollywood were shown in Great Britain, and it is also true that few of Britain's pictures were shown in this country. Obviously the British exhibitors think along the same lines as the Americans; they go for the best box-office product, no matter who produces it.

Frank Joyce Able to Leave Bed For Walk

New York.—Frank Joyce was well enough yesterday to leave the Midtown Hospital for a short walk, and is expected to leave for Hollywood within a few weeks.

'Black Chamber' For Powell at MGM

William Powell's first starring picture on his new contract at Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer will be "Black Chamber," which has had the tentative title of "The Blonde Countess."

The picture is an adaptation of a book by Herbert O. Yardley, entitled "The American Black Chamber," which was the sobriquet of a department of the United States Secret Service during the war.

In addition to Powell, Myrna Loy and Charles Butterworth will be in the cast.

Paul Lukas Lead For 'Hat, Coat and Glove'

Paul Lukas is understood set for the part in Radio's "Hat, Coat and Glove," from which John Barrymore pulled out and which Adolphe Menjou declined.

The deal is a loan from Universal and Radio is to start work immediately on the production.

Beahan-Cohn Coming

New York.—Charles Beahan postponed his departure for Hollywood so that he might accompany his boss, Harry Cohn, who leaves on today's plane.

Receiver's Report Reveals Small Profits This Year As Against Heavy Losses In 1933

New York.—Radio-Keith-Orpheum and its subsidiaries are pulling out of the red and are seeing black figures on the balance sheet. The Irving Trust Company, equity receiver for the corporation, filed its third report yesterday with the Federal Court, showing a profit for the first quarter of this year, before deducting income taxes, of $498,131. This compares with a loss for the year 1933 of $4,384,064, and a loss for 1932 of $10,695,503.

It is the same story with regard to the subsidiaries. RKO-Radio Pictures and RKO-Pathe Pictures show a profit for the first quarter of 1934 of $308,602, compared with a loss of $603,293 for the corresponding period

General Motors Offers Winchell $2500 Weekly

New York.—General Motors has offered Walter Winchell 26 weeks on the air at $2500 a week, but he may turn it down and remain with Jergens on a 40-weeks contract for $2000 weekly.

Winchell is leaving for the coast Tuesday. Sidney Skolsky and Louis Sobol are starting West Friday.

New Deal For Leisen

Paramount has discarded Mitchell Leisen's old contract and has handed him a new deal which he takes up on his return from Honolulu in three weeks.

FWC Assets Will Be Sold Before July 10

New York.—It is probable that sales of the Fox West Coast assets will take place before July 10. The reorganization plan will probably be in effect some time in August.

This is all part of the plan that has been laid out, because the Chase National and Fox Film, as the principal creditors of Fox West Coast, would control any group taking over the assets at a sale.

Schenck Wants to Team Gable-Colbert Again

New York.—Darryl Zanuck's plan to team Clark Gable and Constance Bennett in the one picture for which he has signed Gable, was somewhat amended yesterday when Joseph Schenck started hunting for a story which would fit Gable and Claudette Colbert.

He wants to get Colbert for the picture in view of the great success of "It Happened One Night."

Depinet-Sisk East

Ned E. Depinet, Radio vice-president, and Robert F. Sisk, in charge of advertising for the company, left last night by plane on their return to New York. They were here two weeks, conferring on future pictures.

John Barrymore Ill

John Barrymore is in the Good Samaritan Hospital, seriously ill with an acute infection contracted while on his yacht. Dr. Sam Hirschfeld is attending him.

Lull at Radio Lot

With the completion yesterday of "Afterwards," Radio studios go into a temporary production lull. Only one short is scheduled for the stages today.

UNIVERSAL CHANGING ITS PRODUCTION SET-UP

A revised production set-up at Universal City, whereby serials and at least two groups of features will be made by independently financed producers for Universal release, will be officially disclosed at the Universal convention in New York, June 5.

Four serials are to be produced by Milton Gatzert, "The Red Rider," now in the making, with Buck Jones starring, being the first. The status of Henry McRae as Universal serial producer is to be determined today, probability being he will continue his past

Joan Bennett Goes to 'U' For Runyon Story

Universal yesterday signed Joan Bennett and borrowed Edward Arnold from B. P. Schulberg for the leads in "Million Dollar Ransom," the Damon Runyon story which Murray Roth will direct.

William Lipman scripted and Eph Asher is the associate producer. The Bennett and Arnold deals were negotiated by Schulberg, Feldman and Gurney.

THE LOW DOWN

Just remembered what a certain young well-known writer told us of his experiences with Von Sternberg while "Scarlet Empress" was still in the script stage. It's really a "believe it or not"—but here y're: Seems that Von wanted a "little extra writing" on the script, and asked this particular writer to do the job. He did it and turned it in. Then the director called him up, complimented him on his work and added: "I like your writing very much; I shall use several of the words!" (!) Which is exactly what he did—being particularly impressed with a phrase or two—and that's all of the writer's work which reached the screen. But here's the payoff: When the script was handed to the writer he noticed that his mimeographed copy was without punctuation of any kind—all the sentences running into each other. He asked Von Sternberg about it and also how he expected actors to interpret their roles properly from such a script. Von replied that he didn't want the actors to have any preconceived NOTIONS about how to read their lines! They were to learn the words, that's all—HE would tell them how to read them! And they shot Lincoln!

Someone standing on the sidelines of the set where Elissa Landi was working in "Count of Monte Cristo" the other day, heard the lady spouting French during the scene. And it was extraordinarily bad French. Knowing that Elissa knew much better, he asked her about it. He was informed that only one or two in the troupe could speak good French, and Director Rowland V. Lee didn't want just a little good French here and there—so they were all speaking bad French!

New York REVIEWS

"HE WAS HER MAN"

Warners prod.; director, Lloyd Bacon; writers, Niven Busch, Tom Buckingham, Robert Lord.

Strand Theatre

Mirror: Joan Blondell and James Cagney are such a plausible team of performers that any film they make can hold your interest. They succeed in making fair entertainment from this rather unsatisfactory story. Director Bacon has handled it with imagination.

Herald-Tribune: Mr. Cagney steadies the plot continually. That he carries the motion picture through some of its sensational interludes is something of a fact. Lloyd Bacon has directed the production and has done as proficient a job as one might ask for with the material at hand.

American: "He Was Her Man" is a satisfying picture of program variety, full of suspense and elevated above the average by the presence of its star. It is well cast and nicely directed. The entire cast does creditable work, with Cagney's characterization best.

News: Although the story lets Cagney down and Blondell is obviously unsuited to her role of the morose Rose, the picture is not without its excitement and moments of suspense.

Times: Mr. Cagney once more reveals himself to be a genuinely expert actor. Miss Blondell does well as Rose.

World-Telegram: Now and again it gives promise of stirring itself out of the doldrums, but it never quite comes to life. The cast is good—the production excellent. But at best "He Was Her Man" is only so-so underworld melodrama.

Sun: The Warners know how to make this sort of melodrama. They've kept both stars from overplaying their toughness, and they've mingled an element of tenderness, instead of hard-boiled comedy, along with the excitement.

Post: The tale lacks the virility of the early gangster pictures. It is interesting chiefly because of the playing of Cagney and Miss Blondell in the principal roles.

Journal: It is a combination of sentiment and underworld melodramatics. And the combination of moods extends to the players as well as to the plot. For while Cagney does his customary hard-boiled characterization during the first part of the story, the ending bows him out with self-sacrificial heroics.

Ray Rockett Joins Edington and Vincent

Edington and Vincent announced yesterday that Ray Rockett had become an associate of the firm in its agency business.

Rockett has been in the picture game for a long time, and was formerly production manager for First National.

last year. The entire 1933 loss was $1,290,685, after all charges, and the 1932 loss was $5,381,051.

The operations of the Radio City theatres for seven months ended March 31 gave the corporation a share amounting to $58,282. The RKO Vaudeville Exchange and the Vaudeville Collection Agency showed a quarter's profit of $9036.

The total claims that have been filed against RKO amount to $35,413,733, of which, claims aggregating $2,031,000 have been withdrawn. Special Master Thomas D. Thatcher has given hearings on claims, totaling $24,000,000, but so far has not rendered decisions on any.

The receivers report that prospects for increased admissions are not very bright, both because of probable lessened attendance and because of the deterring influence of the Federal tax.

Much New Blood For 'U' Writing List

Wholesale infusion of new writing blood is underway at Universal. Leopold Atlas, reporting at the studio today, is the 21st name on the active writing list.

A dozen others most recently enrolled by Leonard Spigelgass are John Balderston, Jean Bart, Forrest Halsey, Victor Herman, Sarah Y. Mason, William Lipman, Eugene Burton, Ralph Burton, Karen De Wolf, John Meehan, Jr., Gene Solow and Nat Ferber (the latter was last on the John McGraw story at MGM).

Previously, Universal added Jacques Deval, Barry Trivers, David Hertz and William Hurlbut to its literary staff.

The veterans among Universal's writers are now Gladys Unger, Clarence Marks, L. G. Blochman and Doris Anderson.

Lilian Bond to Stage

Lilian Bond will play the lead opposite Leslie Fenton in "Bitter Harvest," which will be produced by Melville Brown at the Hollywood Playhouse, May 28. Ralph Farnum handled the deal.

'VIRGIE WINTERS' EXCELLENT; 'LOVE CAPTIVE' PRETTY POOR

Fine Direction, Writing, Acting

"VIRGIE WINTERS"

(Radio)

Direction .....Alfred Santell
Original Story.....Louis Bromfield
Screen Play.....Jane Murfin
Photography .....Lucien Andriot
Cast: Ann Harding, John Boles, Helen Vinson, Betty Furness, Frank Albertson, Creighton Chaney, Sara Haden, Molly O'Day, Ben Alexander, Donald Crisp, Wesley Barry.

A wholly absorbing, moving story of the life and one great love of a small town milliner and what life and love and that small town did to her. It is completely box-office so far as universal appeal is concerned, but, more than that, it is a superb piece of picture-making that will delight those who look beneath the entertainment value in a film and appreciate the small, fine qualities and finesse that go to make that entertainment better than most.

The picture has all the same quality that went into the writing of Edgar Lee Master's "Spoon River Anthology." It is almost like a page out of that book for the beautiful simplicity and atmosphere of the small town life it describes. To Alfred Santell must be given the credit for having thought of all the little touches, seemingly unimportant in themselves, that go to make this such a perfect example of what can be done with an almost routine plot if care is observed in its setting and characterization.

Along with that is the grand adaptation that Jane Murfin has made from the Louis Bromfield short story. It must have been a difficult job to keep up the interest in this Virgie Winters because, under a number of other names, this heroine has made her appearance in many pictures in the last few seasons, but never so appealingly, nor so intelligently.

Virgie Winters' story is that of the faithful, loving mistress who must give up her man for the sake of his career. She has a child by him which he manages to adopt. Finally, as Virgie is about to reap her reward in marriage to this man, he is killed by his wife, and Virgie, thinking always of her child, takes the rap. In the end, however, she is pardoned because the wife confesses to the child on her deathbed and it is presumed that Virgie will live happily ever after in the sunshine of her daughter's love.

Ann Harding as Virgie Winters gives one of the best performances of her life and looks simply beautiful in the old-fashioned costumes she wears throughout most of the picture. John Boles again plays the role of the career-man and is still doing well by it. Betty Furness, as the daughter, definitely registers as a darned good little actress, and Helen Vinson, in the one big scene given her as the wife, walks away with plenty of honors. Donald Crisp shows up as an actor again in the part of Mike, the bartender, and is plenty good, as are Creighton Chaney, Sara Haden, Ben Alexander, Molly O'Day, Wesley Barry and Frank Albertson in small parts that all stand out for their excellence.

Lucien Andriot, by his photography, has contributed a great deal toward the atmospheric quality of the picture. For those scenes laid in the days of twenty-two years ago, his camera work gives the impression of an old tintype and, as the years go on, so does his photography.

It's really a great picture and the exhib who sells it as such will be more than repaid for his efforts.

Players Hampered By Muddled Story

"THE LOVE CAPTIVE"

(Universal)

Direction .....Max Marcin
Original .....Max Marcin
Continuity .....Karen de Wolf
Photography .....Gilbert Warrenton
Cast: Nils Asther, Gloria Stuart, Paul Kelly, Alan Dinehart, Renee Gadd, Virginia Kami, Russ Brown, John Wray, Robert Greig, Ellalee Ruby, Franklyn Ardell.

Universal has a weak sister in "The Love Captive," alias "The Humbug," unless it goes through the process of considerable retakes. Cutting won't help, for the fault is a major one.

Dealing with the highly incredible subject of hypnosis, the story has to fight for every bit of audience appeal. Then it commits the cardinal sin of confusing its audience. There is more than a little confusion as to which deserves the sympathy, the M.D. who charges the hypnotist with malpractice or the hypnotist who faces the charge of being a charlatan.

On the hypnotist's side of the controversy—and that's just what it is, a controversy—to his credit, there are the cures of a dope fiend, a habitual drunkard and a chap with the hiccoughs, three in all and all miraculous. To his discredit, there is a nameless charge brought against him by a former girl assistant, the conquest of the heroine, now his assistant, and another conquest of an attorney's wife. Hardly enough to justify his murder, however near to the perfect crime this murder is, for if we justified the murders of all doctors who have conquests —well, we wouldn't have many doctors left alive.

On the other side of the argument, there is the regular M.D. with nothing much against the hypnotist except that his girl has been stolen. So muddled is the writing of this role that even Paul Kelly, one of the finest actors on the screen today, can't do anything with it.

All of which leaves only one conclusion. The hypnotist must be brutalized—and in the early reels—if the picture is going to get anywhere with its audiences.

Nils Asther turns in a nice job as the hypnotist. His English is much improved. Gloria Stuart is beautiful as the heroine, although having precious little to do. Alan Dinehart scores as the attorney, one of the few characters completely understandable. Renee Gadd, a new foreign importation, is acceptable in her American debut. The others have scant opportunities.

Max Marcin's direction is halting, very definitely lacking in tempo. The film has no comedy excepting Robert Grieg's butler, but several unintentional laughs. Photography good enough.

Kruger-Erwin Cast

Otto Kruger and Stu Erwin were set by MGM yesterday for leading roles in support of Clark Gable and Joan Crawford in "Sacred and Profane Love."

Not that it MATTERS by Helen Gwynn

At last reports, "Mother Machree" had been sold to Fox for early production. Which is okay by us, but before the sale was made to Fox, that story had been optioned by a well-known independent producer. At the time that Mrs. Scott, the authoress, sold that option she was very anxious to have a certain actress and good friend of hers play the title role. In fact, the story had been written with this actress very much in mind. And the name of the actress was Mary Carr.

Well, sir, Mrs. Scott asked the independent producer if he would mind if she made a suggestion as to who should play the part and the producer said certainly not, to fire away. Whereupon Mrs. Scott mentioned Mary Carr. "Oh, no," said the producer. "We couldn't use her. You see, I bought the story because we have an actress under contract who just fits the part."

"And who is that?" asked Mrs. Scott.

"Vera Gordon!" came the answer.

There's one thing about writers—you just never know when you're talking to one. F'rinstance, Gilbert Roland, as you've probably never suspected, is a writer. Short stories are his forte and, from all reports and rumors, they're not only short stories, but they're good short stories. They're so good, in fact, that a publishing house in New York is definitely interested in putting them into a book and you may look forward to seeing Roland's name on the list of best sellers any season now.

Carl Brisson is slightly hurt and put out over the seeming neglect of one Greta Garbo. It seems that he feels that he's a Scandinavian and so is the glamorous Garbo and he's the first one to visit and join the film colony since Garbo's dramatic rise to fame, and he thinks it would be only fittin' and right if she should welcome him as a compatriot, if not as a friend of her youth. But Brisson forgets all the publicity he gave to the effect that he and Garbo were likethat at one time back in the old days. And publicity is not exactly a pass key to Garbo's house. Besides which, if he did kiss her once, why should he tell, unless he thought it was good publicity, and that should be welcome enough. . . . Marian Spitzer has thought up a brand new business for herself, just in case all else should fail. She's gonna cross homing pigeons with stool pigeons and do her own interior decorating.

'BRAIN-TRUSTER' MAY HELP ROSY ON FILM CODE

Washington.—While the report could not be verified, the Washington "grapevine' today carried the persistent rumor that President Roosevelt is seriously considering calling in a member of his celebrated "brain trust" to help Sol Rosenblatt unscramble some of the problems of the picture code.

The names of Raymond Moley and Rexford Guy Tugwell were mentioned as the most likely men to be called if the President decides Rosenblatt needs help. Moley was in session with the President yesterday for some time. Tugwell long ago made some pertinent suggestions regarding the picture industry, and is known to believe in complete government control of everything.

Representatives of the Hays office, stirred by the attacks upon the picture industry which both Gen. Johnson and Donald Richberg have declared is a monopoly, were running around in circles yesterday in an effort to avert the growing onslaught against the business. The fear is growing here among picture people that a drive is on in all parts of the country to have the government take over the same kind of control of the picture business as it did of the meat packing industry thirty years ago. Any way you look at it, the industry is faced by turmoil.

Glen Boles Signed to Term Deal by Warners

Glen Boles, 21-year-old Hollywood stock and radio juvenile, whose only picture work has been in the indie, "Quitters," and MGM's "Cellini," was signed by Warners yesterday for a term, and assigned to "Flirtation Walk," the next picture to go into production at the Burbank studio.

There's a possibility that Dick Powell, Ruby Keeler and Pat O'Brien, the featured trio, may take a jaunt to West Point to appear in background shots.

Dowling and Brownell On Boulder Dam Film

Pat Dowling and H. H. Brownell arose before daylight Sunday and set off in the direction of Boulder Dam to film material for an industrial picture.

Dowling and Brownell did a Boulder Dam industrial a few years ago for the International Harvester Corp.

Hamilton to Columbia

Finishing yesterday in "Two Heads on a Pillow" for Liberty, Neil Hamilton goes to Columbia to take a top spot in "Blind Date."

June Loses Tonsils

June Knight had her tonsils removed yesterday at the California Lutheran Hospital.

OPEN FORUM

Hollywood Reporter:

I think the article in the "Low-down" in regard to a film executive winning money at a gambling house is entirely unfair to the club.

For your personal and confidential information the executive was myself. It is a fact that I won the money and a fact that the club paid off one hundred cents on the dollar, so if you can, without mentioning my name, give the club the same boost as you gave them a rib.

If you knew these boys you would put yourself out to do them a good turn. When you meet a regular fellow give him a chance and that is what I can say about these boys.
